To the RIGHT HONOURABLE

Sir CRISP GASCOYNE, Knt.

LORD-MAYOR, of the CITY of LONDON.

My Lord,

It was your Lordſhip's peculiar Felicity, that your Fellow-Citizens had no ſooner conferred upon you the higheſt Honour which is in their Power to beſtow; but His Majeſty, rightly judging of your ſuperior Merits from this ſolemn Choice, imagined He could not do them a greater Pleaſure, than by giving you a Title ſuited to the Importance of your High Office: A Title, which has, indeed, been worn by almoſt all your Lordſhip's Predeceſſors, ever ſince the firſt Inſtitution of a Mayoralty, as a Diſtinction of Honour, which adds a Kind of Dignity to the Chief Magiſtrate of this Great City.

It is true, my Lord, the Honour of Knighthood has been refuſed, with a Kind of Diſdain, by ſome few of your Lordſhip's Predeceſſors; but for no other Reaſon (that I could ever learn) than becauſe they did not like the Hand that was to confer it: But this is ſo far from being your Lordſhip's Caſe, that you have neglected no Opportunity of convincing the World of your inviolable Attachment to His Majeſty's Perſon and Government; which His Majeſty has now graciouſly acknowledged by this Inſtance of his Royal Regard.

But, my Lord, it is not only the City of London, nor even His Majeſty, that have given you eſſential Tokens of Eſteem and Reſpect: Your Country, ſenſible of the Benefit you either procured or attempted for her, has not been backward in making you her moſt grateful Acknowledgments. It is well known, that your ſincere Regard for the Trade of this Kingdom has always animated you with a Zeal worthy of a Britiſh Merchant; particularly, when you ſtrenuouſly oppoſed a Scheme then on Foot (which was afterwards unhappily carried into Execution) to oblige Carriers to draw their Wheel-Carriages with a leſs Number of Horſes than had been cuſtomary: A Scheme, which was then judged, and Experience has ſince ſhewn, would lay a new Burden upon our

Trade

Trade and Manufactures, by increaſing the Expence of Land-Carriage; which, tho' prejudicial to the Country in general, yet would be moſt ſenſibly felt by the Merchants and Traders of this Metropolis, the Centre of Commerce. It was therefore your Lordſhip ſo vigorouſly eſpouſed a Cauſe, wherein the Intereſts of Trade in general were ſo nearly concerned; and tho' your Lordſhip did not meet with the Succeſs deſired, yet the Zeal of a Patriot, which you exerted on that Occaſion, met with the Applauſe it deſerved; and your Conduct in that Affair was ſo well approved of, that the Freeholders of the County of Eſſex determined, to give you a more ſubſtantial Teſtimony of their Gratitude, than their bare verbal Approbation, and accordingly choſe you VERDURER of Epping-Foreſt.

I COULD delightfully purſue this pleaſing Topic, and I make no Doubt but I ſhould have the Attention and Concurrence of all my Readers, were I to proceed to ſhew, how truly Elegance and Grandeur, Politeneſs and Buſineſs, Authority and Condeſcenſion, Goodneſs and Juſtice, are inſeparably united in your Lordſhip: But, as true Merit chuſes rather to be known by its benevolent Effects, than by popular Applauſe, how juſt ſoever, I ſhall lay a Reſtraint on my Inclination, rather than give your Lordſhip the leaſt Uneaſineſs or Offence.

THE Book, which I have the Honour to preſent to your Lordſhip, contains A Survey of LONDON and WESTMINSTER; wherein your Lordſhip will have a full and comprehenſive View of the Antiquity and continual Advances of this famous Metropolis to its preſent Grandeur, together with the Nature of its Government, the Increaſe of its Commerce from the ſmalleſt Beginnings, and the Privileges and Immunities of its Citizens. It is, indeed, but a new Edition of a Work that was publiſhed ſome Years ago, yet is allowed to be as good as any that was ever wrote upon the Subject; but being now become ſcarce, and out of Print, I imagine a Republication of it would be no diſagreeable Preſent, either to the Publick or to your Lordſhip.

A Deſcription of LONDON in General.

CHAP. I.

The Situation, Extent, Antiquity, Name, and Buildings of LONDON.

LONDON. LONDON is the Metropolis of Great Britain, the Seat of her Monarchs, the largeſt in Extent, the faireſt built, the moſt populous, and beſt inhabited City in Europe, or, perhaps, in the whole World; nor yields it to any in the Advantages of Trade and Commerce. It lies in 51 Degrees 30 Minutes of North Latitude, in the County of Middleſex, on a wholeſome Soil, mixt with Gravel and Sand, and is, the greateſt Part of it, built on an Hill with an eaſy Aſcent, no leſs pleaſantly than conveniently ſituated on the River Thames, at a Place where it is caſt into a Creſcent, or Half Moon, ſo that each Part may enjoy the Benefit of the River, and yet not be far diſtant from one another. The ſaid River divides the Cities of London and Weſtminſter from the Borough of Southwark; but there is a Communication between London and Southwark by a magnificent Stone Bridge, ſupported by nineteen Arches, called London-Bridge, with Houſes and Shops thereon, which, paſſing over it, make it appear more like a Street than a Bridge.

Its Situation.

LONDON-BRIDGE

THIS

THIS great City is about ſixty Miles diſtant from the Sea, and therefore not in Danger of being ſurprized by the Fleets of foreign Enemies; nor is it annoyed by the moiſt Vapours of the Sea; yet it is near enough to have Ships of the greateſt Burthen brought into its very Boſom, by the help of the Tide, every twelve Hours. On the North Side it is very much ſheltered from the cold Winds by Hampſtead, Highgate, and the riſing Grounds of Iſlington; but lies open to the more kindly Weſt.

IT was formerly thought to contribute much to the Preſervation of the healthy and good Air of the City, that nothing was burnt in it but Wood and Charcoal, even in Trades that uſed great Quantities of Firing; but, about the latter End of the Reign of Edward I. Brewers, Dyers, and other Artificers, beginning to uſe Sea-Coal, in, or near the City, ſeveral Prelates, Nobles, Commoners, and other Inhabitants of That, and the Borough of Southwark, Wapping, and Eaſt Smithfield, complained thereof, as a publick Nuſance, to the King, who prohibited the burning Sea-Coal by Proclamation. Which being diſobeyed by many, for their private Lucre, upon a ſecond Complaint he iſſued out a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, to enquire of all ſuch, who burned Sea-coal againſt his Proclamation, within the City, or Parts adjacent, and to puniſh them for the firſt Offence by large Fines; and for the ſecond, by demoliſhing their Furnaces, Kilns, &c. wherein they burnt the ſaid Coal.

Sea-Coal forbid to be uſed in the City by Edward I.

FOR this End alſo, Proviſion was formerly made againſt Stinks and annoying Smells, ariſing from killing Beaſts in the City; which was once thought to have occaſioned a grievous Plague therein, in the Reign of Edward III. who, to prevent the like Infection, ſent his Command, about the Year 1361, to the Mayor and Sheriffs, to ſuffer no Butcher to kill his Cattle nearer the City than Stratford, or Knightsbridge. This is not obſerved now, nor indeed ſeems it neceſſary ſince the new Building of London; for the Streets, Lanes, &c. being wider, the Air is not ſo much pent up, nor conſequently ſo liable to Infection as before; beſides, the Markets are now removed out of the Streets, made commodious, and have proper Methods taken to keep them clean, of which we ſhall ſpeak in another Place.

THE Extent of London from Eaſt to Weſt, that is, from Limehouſe to the End of Tothill-Street, Weſtminſter, is about ſeven Miles and a half; but its Breadth, from North to South, is not above two Miles and a half, even where it is broadeſt, as from one End of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, to the fartheſt End of Blackman-Street in Southwark.

The Extent of LONDON.

THE Author of a late Calculation ſays, London, upon a Medium, is ſeven Miles long, and one Mile and a Quarter broad, which make an Area of near nine Square Miles. How great an Improvement is this ſince the Time of Queen Elizabeth, if what Sir William Petty ſays be right, That when he wrote, about the Year 1616, it was then computed to be ſeven Times bigger than in her Reign?

AS to the Populouſneſs of the City, take the following Conjectures. James Howel, Eſq; who wrote an Hiſtory of London, ſaith, That in the Year 1636, King Charles I. ſent to the Lord Mayor to make a Scrutiny what Number of Papiſts and Strangers were in the City, and that Sir Edward Bromfield, then Mayor, took Occaſion from thence to make a Cenſe, or Computation, of the People, who were, Men, Women and Children, found to be 700,000, that lived only within the Bars of the Juriſdiction; and it was judged, he ſaid, by all probable Supputation, That London had more, by a third Part, when he publiſhed his Book, which was ſomewhat above twenty Years after. The City of Weſtminſter, and all the Suburbs without the Lord Mayor's Juriſdiction, and the Buildings contiguous, contained at leaſt as many more: So that taking altogether, he reckoned the Number of Souls might amount to above one Million and a half: But this Computation was very much too high.

Its Populouſneſs.

SIR William Petty before-mentioned, a Member of the Royal Society, obſerved, That there were Anno 1682, 84,000 tenanted Houſes in London; which, at eight Perſons in each, make 672,000; but he fixed it to a ſomewhat leſs Number, and believed there were about 670,000 Souls in London, at that Time.

BY London he meant the Houſes within the Walls, with the Liberties thereof; Weſtminſter, the Borough of Southwark, and ſo much of the Ground of Middleſex and Surrey as had Houſes built thereon contiguous to the reſt.

THE Author of the Preſent State of Great Britain, in the laſt Edition, publiſhed in the Year 1746, reckons there are about 124,000 Dwelling-Houſes in London; which Calculation we have Reaſon to believe is pretty exact, from ſeveral Enquiries we have made by different Methods; ſince when, the Buildings have increaſed pretty largely, but we cannot juſtly ſay how much. Now, according to Sir William Petty's Computation of eight to a Houſe, the whole Number of Inhabitants in London will amount to 992,000: And to prove whether or no Sir William's Computation was right, we made the following Experiment; we took the Number of Inhabitants in 150 Houſes, promiſcuouſly at three ſeveral Times, and always in different Places, and found the Produce to be 1200, within a very ſmall Number over or under, each Time; which is at the Rate of eight in a Houſe as aforeſaid; and if this Calculation anſwers in three Times 150 Houſes, taken in ſuch a Manner, we may ſuppoſe it will anſwer in any Number.

BY a Computation of the Burials and Chriſtenings in this City, we may be able to compare the Bigneſs and Populouſneſs of it with other great Cities in the World. As for Example, in the Year 1707, the Chriſtenings in the Imperial City Vienna, amounted to 3963, and the Burials to 4354; whereas the Chriſtening in London, the ſame Year, were 16,066, and the Burials 21,000.

TO add no more on this Head, the Account of Burials in the laſt Year, viz. from the 14th of December 1752 to the 12th of December 1753, (whereby may be computed the Number of Souls in London and Weſtminſter, as well as the Increaſe of them) was,

In the 97 Pariſhes within the Walls	1546
In the 17 Pariſhes without the Walls	4612
In the 22 Out-Pariſhes in Middleſex and Surrey	8915
In the 10 Pariſhes in the City and Suburbs of Weſtminſter	4203
Burials in all	19,276

AND this we may ſuppoſe a very moderate Year, ſince for ſeveral Years before, there died far greater Numbers.

LONDON and PARIS compared.

LONDON has been compared to Paris, now one of the moſt flouriſhing Cities in Europe, and is ſaid to exceed it in all the following Particulars. I. In the Number, Wealth and great Eſtates of the Inhabitants, the Number of their Servants, and Splendor of their Equipages. II. In the Wholeſomeneſs of the Air. III. In the more cleanly and convenient Way of Living. IV. In the Preference of the River Thames to the Seine, being both pleaſanter and more navigable, its Water wholeſomer, and for London-Bridge, to which Weſtminſter-Bridge is now added. V. in the Shipping and Foreign Trade; London therein exceeding both Paris and Roan. VI. In the Cheapneſs of all of all Sorts of Drink. VII. In the Goodneſs and Cheapneſs of Fewel. VIII. In the Magnificence of the Churches; no one at Paris being ſo large as St. Paul's, nor ſo beautiful as K. Henry the VIIth's Chapel. IX. In the Courts of Juſtice, the Inns of Court, and Chancery, and the Lawyers Chambers. And laſtly, In the Hoſpitals, ſo many and ſo richly endow'd. M. Paſchoud, in his Treatiſe on Geography, ſays, That Paris is, at moſt, but two Thirds as big as London; Amſterdam one Fourth; Rome and Venice one Fifth; Lions one Sixth; Toulouſe one Seventh; Rouen one Ninth; Dublin one Ninth; and Briſtol one Twelfth.

The Original of LONDON.

As to the Original and Antiquity of London, as the Roman Writers, to do Honour to the City of Rome, deduced the Original of That from the Gods, ſo Geffrey of Monmouth, the Welſh Hiſtorian would give the ſame Glory to the famous City of London, and reporteth, that Brute, who was lineally deſcended from Æneas, the Son of Venus, about the Year of the World 2855, and 1108 Years before the Nativity of Chriſt, did build this City near unto the River now called Thames, and named it Troynovant, or Trenovant. But herein, as Livy, the moſt famous Hiſtorian among the Romans, ſaith, Antiquity is pardonable, and hath an eſpecial Privilege, by interlacing divine Matters with human, to make the firſt Foundations of Cities more honourable, more ſacred, and as it were of greater Majeſty.

THIS Tradition, concerning the antient Foundation of the City, by Brute, was of ſuch Credit that it is aſſerted in an old Tract, preſerved in the Archives of the Chamber of London, which is tranſcribed into Liber Albus, and long before that by Horn, in his old Book of Laws and Cuſtoms, called Liber Horn. And a Copy of this Tract was taken out of the City Books by the Lord Mayor and Aldermens Special Order, and ſent to King Henry VI. in the Seventh Year of his Reign; which Copy yet remains among the Records of the Tower, in the following Words.

An old Tract aſſerting Brute to be the Founder.

Inter nobiles Urbes Orbis, &c. " Among the noble Cities of the World which Fame cries up, " the City of London, the only Seat of the Realm " of England, is the principal, which widely " ſpreads abroad the Rumour of its Name. It is " happy for the Wholeſomeneſs of the Air, for " the Chriſtian Religion, for its moſt worthy Li- " berty, and moſt antient Foundation. For, ac- " cording to the Credit of Chronicles, it is conſi- " derably older than Rome, being built by Brute, " after the Likeneſs of great Troy, before that " was built by Romulus and Remus. Whence " to this Day it uſeth and enjoyeth the antient " City of Troy's Liberties, Rights and Cuſtoms. " For it hath a Senatorial Dignity, with ſmaller " Magiſtrates. And it hath Annual Sheriffs in- " ſtead of Conſuls. For whoſoever repair thither, " of whatſoever Condition they be, whether Free " or Servants, they obtain there the Refuge of " Defence and Freedom. Almoſt all the Biſhops, " Abbots, and Nobles of England, are, as it " were, Citizens and Freemen of this City, having " their noble Inns here.

THESE and many more Matters of Remark, concerning this moſt noble City, remain in a very old Book, called Recordatorium Civitatis: And in the Book called Speculum.

GEFFREY of Monmouth ſaith, That King Lud about 1060 Years after, not only repaired this City, but enlarged the ſame with fair Buildings, Towers, and Walls, and, after his own Name, called it Caire-Lud, or Lud's-Town. And the ſtrong Gate, which he built in the Weſt Part of the City, he likewiſe called Ludgate; and that in Proceſs of Time, by a Coalition of the two Words, Lud's Town, and a ſoftening the Sound, it took the Name of LONDON; but Cambden and others will have it called Llongdin, a Britiſh Word, anſwering to the Saxon Word Sniptun [Shipton] that is a Town of Ships: And indeed none hath more Right to take that Name than this City, with Reſpect to its commodious Situation for Shipping on ſo fine and Navigable a River as the Thames, which ſwelling at certain Hours with the Ocean Tides, by a deep and ſafe Channel, is ſufficient to bring up Ships of the greateſt Burthen to her Sides, and thereby furniſheth her Inhabitants with Riches from every Part of the known World. The following are Cambden's Words, according to Biſhop Gibſon's Tranſlation.

" TACITUS, Ptolemy and Antoninus call it Cambden's Britannia, pag. 310, 311.
" Londinium and Longidinium; Ammianus, Lun-
" dinum and Auguſta; Stephanus, in his Book of " Cities, Λινδύνιον; our Britiſh Lundayn; the " old Saxons, Lunden-ceaſtep, Lunden-byniȝ,
" Lunden-þýc; Foreigners, Londra and Londres;
" our own Nation LONDON; the Fabulous
" Writers, Troja Nova, Dinas Belin, i. e. The " City of Belin, and Caer-Lud, from one King
" Luddus, whom they affirm to have given it both
" Being and Name; but as for thoſe new broach-
" ed Names and Originals, as alſo Eraſmus's
" Conjecture, that it came from Lindum, a City
" of Rhodes, I leave them to thoſe that are in" clinable to admire them. For my own Part,
" ſince Cæſar and Strabo have told me that the " antient Britons call'd ſuch Woods or Groves as
" they fenced with Trees they had cut down,
" Cities, or Towns, and ſince, I have been in" formed that in the Britiſh they call ſuch Places
" Llhwn; I am almoſt of this Opinion that Lon-
" don is, by Way of Eminence, ſimply called a " City, or a City in a Wood. But if that do not " hit, give me Leave, without the Charge of In-
" conſtancy, to gueſs once more, that it had its " Name from the ſame Original that it had its " Growth and Glory; I mean Ships, call'd by " Britiſh Llong; ſo that London is as much as to
" ſay, an Harbour, or City of Ships. For the Bri-
" tons term a City Dinas, which the Latins
" turn'd into Dinum: Upon which Account it is " called in one Place Longidinium; and in a Song
" of an antient Britiſh Bard Llongporth, i. e. a Nænia.
" Port or Harbour for Ships, and by the ſame
" Word, Bologne in France, in Ptolemy Geſſoria-
" cum Navale, is turn'd by the Britiſh Gloſſary,
" Bolung Long. For ſeveral Cities have had their " Names from Shipping, as Naupactus, Nau-
" ſtathmos, Nauplia, Navalia Auguſti, &c. None
" of which can lay better Claim to the Name
" of an Harbour than our LONDON.

THIS City was in no ſmall Repute, being built by the firſt Founder of the Britiſh Empire, and honoured with the Sepulchre of divers of their Kings, as Brute, Locrine, Cunodagius, and Gorbodus, Fathers of Ferrex and Porrex, who were the Laſt of the Line of Brute.

MULMUTIUS Dunwallo, Son of Cloton, Duke of Cornwall, having vanquiſhed his Competitors, and eſtabliſhed himſelf in the Throne, cauſed a Temple to be erected, called The Temple of Peace, on, or near the Place where Blackwell-Hall, or as ſome will have it, St. Paul's now ſtands. A Temple built to Peace by Mulmutius Dunwallo.

BELINUS, the Son of Dunwallo, built an Haven in Troynovant, with a Gate over it, which Place ſtill bears the Name of Beline's-gate, or Billingſgate; on this Gate was ſet a Brazen Veſſel that contained the Aſhes of his Body burnt after his Death. An Haven built by Belinus.

THE ſaid Belinus is ſuppoſed to have built the Tower of London, and to have appointed three chief Pontiffs to ſuperintend all Religious Affairs throughout the Kingdom; whereof one had his See in London, and the other two in York and Carleon: But, there being very little left upon Record, we cannot ſay more concerning theſe Britiſh

Etymology of the Word LONDON.

King LUD. tiſh Princes before King LUD, the eldeſt Son of Hely, who began his Reign about 69 Years before the Birth of Chriſt. He was a Prince much commended by Hiſtorians for his great Valour, noble Deeds, and Liberality; for amending the Laws of the Country; and for repairing this City, erecting therein many fair Buildings, and encompaſſing it with a Stone Wall. In the Weſt Part he built a ſtrong Gate, as was ſaid before, called Ludſgate, where are now ſtanding, in Niches, the Statues of this good King, and his two Sons, one on each Side of him, he having been buried near thereunto, after an honourable Reign, in a Temple of his own building.

LUD had two Sons, Androgeus and Theomantius, [or Temanticus,] who not being of a fit Age to govern, at their Father's Death, Caſſibelan their Uncle, ſeized on the Crown. It was about the eighth Year of his Reign that Julius Cæſar arrived in Britain, which he ſoon conquered; in what Manner he thus relates in his own Commentaries.

JULIUS CÆSAR arrives in BRITAIN.

" CÆSAR, having landed his Army, and " choſe a convenient Place to encamp in, enqui- " red of the Priſoners, where the Enemy was " lodged; and between Three and Four in the " Morning, having left 10 Cohorts and 300 Horſe, " under the Command of Q. Artius, to ſecure " the Navy, he marched towards the Britons; " being the leſs uneaſy for his Fleet, becauſe he " left them at Anchor on a ſmooth and open " Shore: He had not marched 12 Miles, before " he ſaw the Enemy, who, having poſted their " Horſe and Chariots on the Banks of the River, " gave us Battle, and endeavoured to oppoſe our " Paſſage, but were repulſed by our Cavalry, and " obliged to retire to the Woods, notwithſtand- " ing the Advantage of the Ground. Here they " had a Poſt well fortify'd, where Art and Na- " ture had equally play'd their Parts, a Barrica- " do which they had formerly built, during the " Times of their Civil Wars: All the Paſſages to " it were block'd up by Heaps of Trees, which " were cut down for that Purpoſe; they never " ventured out of this Place but in ſmall Parties, " and prevented the Romans from entering; but " the Soldiers of the Seventh Legion having caſt " themſelves into a Teſtudo, and thrown up a " Mount againſt their Works, took the Place, " and expelled them the Woods, without receiv- " ing many Wounds: But Cæſar would not per- " mit them to follow the Puſuit, becauſe he knew " not the Country; and the Day being already " far ſpent, he reſolved to beſtow the reſt of it " in fortifying his Camp.

Routs the BRITONS.

" THE next Morning early, Cæſar, having di- " vided his Army into three Battalions, ſent both " his Horſe and Foot to purſue the Enemy: They " had not travelled far, before they came within " Sight of the Britiſh Rear; at which Inſtant " there arrived a Party of Horſe from Q. Artius, " to acquaint Cæſar, that the Night before there " had happened a dreadful Storm, which had " ſhatter'd almoſt all his Navy, and caſt the " Ships upon the Shore, ſpight of their Anchors " and Cables; nor was all the Mariners and Pi- " lots were able to do, ſufficient to oppoſe the " Fury of the Wind, which had done the Fleet a " a conſiderable Damage.

A Storm ſhatters the Roman Fleet.

" UPON this Intelligence, Cæſar, recalling " his Legions and Cavalry from their intended " Journey, return'd to his Fleet, where he was an " Eye-Witneſs of the Misfortunes he had receive- " ed an Account of; for 40 Ships were entirely " loſt, and he ſaw the reſt could not be refitted, " without infinite Trouble: Wherefore, having " choſen ſome Carpenters from amongſt the Legi- " ons, and writ for others to Gaul, he ſent Labie- " nus Orders to build as many Ships as he could " with thoſe Legions he had there: And though " he found it would be a very troubleſome Buſi- " neſs, yet he thought it moſt convenient to have " the Fleet hawl'd up to Land, and incloſed " within the Fortifications of the Camp: To ef- " fect this Deſign, the Soldiers labour'd 10 Days " and Nights, without Intermiſſion; when having " drawn his Shipping to Shore, and ſtrongly forti- " fied his Camp, leaving the ſame Guard as for- " merly, he returned to the Place where he had " deſiſted from purſuing the Enemy. Here he " found far greater Numbers of the Britons aſ- " ſembled, than he left at his Return to the " Fleet.

CÆSAR refits his Navy and cauſes it to be haul'd up to dry Land.

" BY general Conſent the whole Management " of the War was left to the Care of Caſſivellau- " nus, whoſe Territories were divided by the " River Thames from the Sea Coaſts, and extend- " ed fourſcore Miles into the Iſland; for tho' he " had formerly made War on the Reſt of his " Country-Men, yet upon our Arrival they all " united, and pitched upon him as the fitteſt Per- " ſon to direct them at ſo important a Conjunc- " ture.

CASSIVELLAUNUS made Generaliſſimo of the BRITONS.

" THE Enemy's Horſe and Chariots, had a " ſharp Skirmiſh with our Men during their " March; but the Romans repulſing them from " all Sides, drove them into the Woods, and " having ſlain a great many, purſued the reſt ſo far, " till they loſt ſome of their own Party: The Bri- " tons not long after returning, whilſt the Romans, " who little expected them, were fortifying their " Camp, made a ſudden Sally out of the Woods, " and fell upon our advanced Guard; whereupon " Cæſar detach'd the two firſt Cohorts of his Le- " gions to their Aſſiſtance: Theſe Cohorts were " drawn up very near each other; but the Enemy, " whilſt our Men were ſurprized with their new " Way of Fighting, boldly broke through the " Midſt of them, and returned again without re- " ceiving any Loſs. Q. Labeo Durus loſt his " Life in this Action; but at laſt ſome freſh Co- " horts coming up to their Relief, the Britons " were repulſed.

They return.

And are again repulſed.

" THE Day after the Enemy lodged them- " ſelves in the Hills at a conſiderable Diſtance " from our Camp, but ſeldom appeared, not be- " ing ſo eager at Skirmiſhing with our Cavalry as " formerly; but about Noon, when Cæſar had " diſpatched three Legions, and all the Cavalry " under the Command of C. Trebonius to forage, " on a ſudden they aſſaulted our Foragers from all " Sides, falling in with the Legions and their " Standards; but the Romans returning their " Charge very briskly, beat them back again, nor " did our Cavalry deſiſt from the Purſuit till they " had entirely routed them; depending on the " Legions, who followed cloſe after to ſuſtain " them in Caſe of Neceſſity.

The BRITONS attack the ROMAN Foragers.

But are routed with conſiderable Loſs.

" AFTER this, Cæſar march'd his Army into " the Confines of Caſſivellaunus, towards the " Thames, which River is only fordable in one " Place, and that with great Difficulty: So ſoon " as he came thither he ſaw the Enemy's Forces " drawn up in a conſiderable Body on the oppoſite " Bank, which was fortified with ſharp Stakes, " the Britons had likewiſe driven many Piles of " the ſame Kind into the Bottom of the River, " whoſe Tops were covered, by the Water. " Cæſar having Intelligence of this from the Pri- " ſoners and Deſerters, ſent his Cavalry before, " commanding the Legions to follow cloſe after " them; and with ſuch Expedition did they per- " form his Orders, though the Water took them " up to the Neck, that the Enemy, not being " able to ſuſtain their Aſſault, forſook the Banks " and fled.

" Thus Caſſivellaunus, having loſt all Hopes " of Succeſs by a Battle, disbanded the greateſt " Part of his Forces, and retaining only about " 4000 Chariots, obſerved our Motions from

Time

" Time to Time, keeping himſelf at ſome Diſ-
" tance in the Woods, or ſuch Places where the " Romans had no Acceſs; from thoſe Countries Who disbands Part of his Army, and retires to the Woods. " he knew we deſigned to march to, he took " care to carry off the Cattle and Natives before-
" hand into the Woods; and whenever our Ca" valry ventured a little too far to lay the Coun" try Waſte, being well acquainted with all the " Roads and By-ways, he would detach a Party
" of his Chariots out of the Woods to attack us;
" nor could our Horſe engage them without great " Danger, which prevented our making ſuch Ex-
" curſions as we would have done otherwiſe.

" In the mean Time the Trinobantes, who " poſſeſs one of the moſt conſiderable Provinces in
" the Iſland, ſent Ambaſſadors to Cæſar, promi-
" ſing to deliver themſelves up to his Diſpoſal,
" and ſubmit to his Commands, deſiring withal
" that he would pleaſe to defend Mandubratius
" from the Oppreſſion of Caſſivellaunus, and ſend
" him to them for their King and Governor:
" This Manubratius was the Son of Imanuentius,
" who formerly poſſeſſing that Kingdom, was
" ſlain by Caſſivellaunus, and to avoid his Fa" ther's Fate had fled to Cæſar, who promiſed
" him Protection: Cæſar granted their Requeſt,
" but demanded forty Hoſtages from them, and " Corn for his Army; which Conditions they rea" dily performed.

" The Trinobantes thus protected, from their " Enemies, and ſecured by his Orders from be" ing plunder'd by his Soldiers, the Cenimagni,
" Segontiaci, Ancalites, Bibroci, and Caſſi ſub-
" mitted themſelves likewiſe by their Ambaſſa-
" dors to Cæſar. From theſe he had Intelligence
What the Britons called a Town. " that Caſſivellaunus's Town, which was fortified
" with Woods and Marſhes, and ſtored with " Plenty of Men and Cattle, was but a ſmall
" Diſtance from his Camp; for the Britons call a " thick Wood, ſurrounded with a Ditch and for" tified with a Rampier, a Town, which they re-
" tire to when they are apprehenſive of Incurſions
" from their Neighbours; thither he marched
" with his Legions, and found the Place well ſe-
" cured both by Art and Nature; however, he
" endeavoured to ſtorm it in two ſeveral Places,
" and the Enemy being no longer able to ſuſtain
" the Fury of the Aſſault, fled out at another " Part of the Wood; here we found vaſt Quanti" ties of Cattle, and many of the Britons, who " endeavoured to make their Eſcape, being over-
" taken, loſt their Lives.

" CASSIVELLAUNUS, in the mean
" Time, ſent Ambaſſadors to Kent, which lies
" towards the Sea Coaſt, and is governed by four " Kings, Cingetorix, Carnilius, Taximagulus,
" and Segonax, whom he commanded to attack
" our Camp, where the Navy was laid up, with " all the Forces they could raiſe: But as ſoon as " they arrived there, our Men made a Sally, kil" led ſeveral of them, took Lugotorix, one of their " chief Commanders, Priſoner, and returned ſafe
" again into their Trenches. Caſſivellaunus, up-
" on the News of this Defeat, reflecting on the " many Loſſes he had received, how his Country
" was laid Waſte, but above all that ſeveral Pro" vinces had already forſaken the general Alli" ance, ſent Ambaſſadors to treat of a Surren-
" der, who were introduced by Comius of Arras:
" Cæſar deſigning to quarter that Winter in Gaul,
" to pevent ſudden Inſurrections there, becauſe
" the Summer was already far ſpent, and the Re" mainder might eaſily be ſpun out by Delays, Cassivel-launus ſurrenders, and Cæsar impoſes a yearly Tribute on the Britons. " demanded Hoſtages, and appointed the yearly " Tribute which the Britons ſhould pay to the " People of Rome; not forgetting ſtrictly to pro-
" hibit any Injury being done to Mandubratius, or
" the Trinobantes.

" Having received the Hoſtages, he march-
" ed his Army back again to the Sea Shore,
" where he found his Fleet refitted, and cauſed it
" to be launched; he ſoon after ſet Sail, and ar-
" rived ſafe in Gaul.

The Trinobantes, mentioned by Cæſar, being the People of Eſſex and Middleſex are ſuppoſed by ſome to have taken their Name from the City Trenovant, from the Reſemblance there is in the Sound of thoſe two Words; but many other Authors, as well as Cæſar, do affirm that the Britons, before the Arrival of the Romans, had no Cities that were artificially built with Houſes, or ſtrongly walled with Stone.

Julius Agricola, the Roman Lieutenant, in the Time of Domitian, was the firſt, who, by exhorting the Britons publickly, and aſſiſting them privately, prevailed with them to build Houſes for themſelves, Temples to their Gods, and Courts for the Adminiſtration of Juſtice; to bring up the Children of their Noblemen in the Study of Letters and Humanity; and to apparel themſelves in the Faſhion of the Romans; whereas before they, for the moſt Part, went naked, and only painted their Bodies.

Notwithstanding what Geffrey of Monmouth, and other Writers have ſaid, it does not appear that our City of London was walled with Stone in the Beginning of the Roman Government here; for Anno Domini 296, when Alectus the Tyrant was ſlain in the Field, the Franks eaſily enter'd London, and had ſacked the ſame, if, at that very Inſtant, certain Bands of the Roman Soldiers had not been brought by the River Thames to its Relief, who ſlew thoſe Franks in every Street of the City: But there is no Doubt but that it was walled during the Time they were here, becauſe we find many Towns of leſs Note were ſo, as Richborough, or Rickborough-Ryptaceſter in the Iſle of Thanet, Sandwich in Kent, Verulamium near St. Alban's in Hertfordſhire, Cilceſter in Hampſhire, Wroxceſter in Shropſhire, Kenceſter in Herefordſhire, Ribcheſter, ſeven Miles above Preſton, on the Water of Ribble, Aldeburg, a Mile from Boroughbridge, on Watheling-ſtreet, on Ure River, and others.

Nor was any Thing wanting to the Glory of London, but the Name of a Free-City or Colony; but that was not for the Intereſt of the Romans; therefore they made her a Prefecture. Such were thoſe Cities where Marts were kept, and Juſtice adminiſter'd; and for their Magiſtates, they were annually ſent them from the Senate at Rome; for the Execution of their Laws, the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, the Collecting their Tributes and Taxes, &c. Tacitus, who, the firſt of all Authors calls it LONDINIUM, ſays, That, altho' no Colony of the Romans, yet it was moſt famous for the great Multitude of Merchants, for its Proviſions and Intercourſe, about 62 Years after Chriſt: At which Time, in that notable Revolt of the Britons from Nero, in which Seventy Thouſand Romans and their Confederates were ſlain, this City, Suetonius Paulinus, the Roman Lieutenant having abandoned it as not then fortified, with Verulam, near St. Alban's, and Maldon, all famous Places, were ranſacked and ſpoiled.

It has been a Queſtion among the Learned, in what State and Reputation London was in at the Time of the Romans. Cambden ſays, That it was of the Nature of a Prefecture, and not a Colony. The late Biſhop of Worceſter, Dr. Stillingfleet, in his Antiquities of London, is of another Opinion; and ſhews that there were ſeveral Sorts of Colonies. Firſt, Civil Colonies, that is, ſuch as conſiſted only of Roman Citizens. Secondly, Military Colonies; when the Veteran Soldiers were ſettled together by Way of a Colony. Such a Colony of Veterans was at Camalodunum, at York, at Cheſter, at Caerleon, &c. Thirdly, there were mixt Colonies, where Roman Citizens and Natives joined together: And, tho' without the Name, yet they they had the Privileges of a Colony. Of the laſt Sort he concluded LONDON to have been; which, in Tacitus's Time, was nobile Emporium, a Place of great Advantage in its Situation for Trade: And therefore apt to draw both Romans and Natives together. It had all the Encouragement that the Reſidence of the Roman Governor could give it, and that was ſufficient to make the City ſo great in a ſmall Time, that, altho' it was firſt built in Claudius's Reign, yet in Nero's it might be too large for Suetonius Paulinus to hazard his Army in defending it. For whereſover there was a new Province made, there was great Occaſion for ſuch an Emporium, or Place of Trading to be ſet up; the Citizens of Rome makeing mighty Improvements of their Eſtates, by ſending their Money into new Provinces.

Mr. OWEN, a learned Welſhman, in a Manuſcript called Vindiciæ Britanniæ, which Mr. Strype ſays he hath ſeen, proves, in Oppoſition to Biſhop Stillingfleet, that London was a great City before the Romans came hither; and vindicates therein our Britiſh Hiſtory, which ſpeaks of Caſſibelan's beſieging London, when the Trinobantes invited Cæſar over; and that his Landing had obliged him to raiſe the Siege. For this Purpoſe, he takes Notice of what Tacitus hath ſaid of this Place. Cognomento quidem Coloniæ non inſigne, &c.. "That it was not dignified indeed with "the Name of a Colony, but moſt famous for "Abundance of Merchants and Proviſions." Whence that Author obſerves, Firſt, That London was at that Time, about the fifth of Nero, renowned for all Manner of Proviſions and Neceſſaries for the Supplying an Army; and that it ſeemed, by Tacitus's Words, to have been the great Treaſury of the Riches of the Kingdom, as it is now. Secondly, That conſidering it abounded with Merchants, it ſeems to have been then what it is now, the chief Trading City of the Iſland.

Annal Lib. 14.

CÆSAR ſpeaks of the Britiſh Merchants in Gaul, who traded in Tin and Lead with the Phænicians and Greeks; they refined and tranſported it by the Iſle of Wight into Gaul, and thence on Horſeback, by Land, in thirty Days, or thereabouts, to Marſeilles. This Trade flouriſhed here long before the Romans knew the Iſland: Therefore, if Cities do riſe by Merchandize, London muſt be much more antient than the Time of Cæſar, and its Situation being advantageous for Trade, being the Centre of the Britiſh Merchandize, we may conclude it was the antient Emporium of the Britiſh Trade with the Gauls, Phænicians, and Greeks.

STILLINGFLEET ſays, That it grew into a City by the Romans trading into this Country: And why not as well by the Trade of the Greeks and Phænicians?

FROM what Tacitus ſays, London muſt have been a Place of Strength when Suetonius Paulinus, in his Return from Mona, i. e. Angleſey, marched with ſo much Reſolution through the Midſt of the Enemy's Country, to poſſeſs himſelf of it, with an Intention to make it the Seat of the War; but not finding there ſo conſiderable a Number of Roman Forces as he expected, he alter'd his Purpoſe, and choſe to preſerve the Reſt with the Loſs of one Town. This may ſerve for an Argument to prove the Bigneſs of London at that Time; for he had then about Ten Thouſand Men well armed, but that Number it ſeems were not ſufficient to defend it. Tacitus mentions it as a very pleaſant Place, and ſays, The Sweetneſs of the Place tempted ſome to ſtay behind, who were all cut off by Boadicia. And, indeed, there is no Reaſon to think the Romans built the City of London, where there was neither a Colony, nor a Municipium, as the Biſhop of Worceſter ſeems to allow. Beſides it doth not appear that they had built any Cities in Britain at that Time: Not even Camalodunum, which was a Roman Colony; nor Verulamium, a Free City, enjoying their own municipal Laws, by Conſent of the Romans. Nor is it probable, that, in ſo ſhort a Time, as from Julius Cæſar to Nero, in whoſe Reign Tacitus gives the former Account, London could become ſo famous for her Merchants and Proviſions. Neither do the Roman Hiſtories give any Account why Trinobantum ſhould in ſo few Years change its Name to that of London; but the Britiſh Hiſtory accounts for it, in what is ſaid of Lud, Brother to Caſſibelan, viz. That he renewed the Walls of it, and called it LUD-DIN, that is, the City of LUD, or Llwyd, which, eaſily changed into Lundin. The Biſhop of Worceſter does not petend to derive London from any Latin Word; a Preſumption that it is not of Roman Original. Ammianus Marcellinus, who flouriſhed Anno Domini 380, called it Vetuſtum Oppidum, An antient Town, and makes it the City of the Trinobantes; calling it Lundinum.

THE learned Welſhman, aforementioned, obſerveth the Antiquity of London by a Coin of the Emperor Claudius relating to Britain, which Cambden ſpeaks of: It had Britannicus on one Side, and on the Reverſe, METROPOLIS ETIMINII BA. LO.

CAMBDEN ſuppoſes Etiminii to be the ſame with Adminii. Adminius was a Son of Cunobelin, King of Camalodunum, who being baniſhed by his Father, fled to Caligula when he was making War upon the Ocean, as Suetonius writes: And that it is not unlikely that he might ingratiate himſelf with Britannicus, the Son of Claudius, or with Claudius himſelf, who was alſo ſtiled Britannicus; and ſo have been conſtituted King of London, as BA. LO. i. e. BASILEOS LONDINI, may import; for Cities were ſometimes beſtowed on the Britons by the Romans, as Camalodunum was upon Cunobelin; and ſome Cities upon Cogidunus.

YET after all that has been ſaid let us add what Doctor Woodward, a learned Antiquary, affirms: That Geffrey of Monmouth cannot be credited, who wrote that London was a City in the Britiſh Times, encompaſſed with Walls, and fortified with innumerable Towers; ſince the Britons in thoſe Days were barbarous and ſavage; and their Towns no other than Groves and Thickets, invironed only with an Hedge and a Ditch. Nor was there a Brick among them; nor, as far as the Romans at their Deſcent here could obſerve, had they ever gone about to raiſe one Stone upon another.

London not a Britiſh City.

WE ſhall now ſay ſomething of the Buildings of London, which are far more beautiful than they were antienly, when the Houſes were chiefly of Timber.

The BUILDINGS of LONDON.

IN Queen Elizabeth's Time there were ſtrict Proclamations againſt Inmates, and an Increaſe of new Buildings in the City; but to very little Effect. In the Beginning of King James the Firſt's Reign, Anno Domini 1605, a Proclamation was iſſued forth, forbidding all Increaſe of new Buildings within the City, and one Mile thereof; and alſo commanding all Perſons henceforwards to build their Forefronts and Windows, either of Brick or Stone; as well for Ornament, as becauſe all large and well-grown Woods were ſo much ſpent and waſted that Timber for Shipping grew ſcarce; but this likewiſe had little Effect. On the 10th of October 1607, Proclamation was again made to the ſame Purpoſe, and on the 16th of October ſome were cenſured in the Star-Chamber, for building contrary to the Tenor of the Proclamation. Again, by a Proclamation, Anno Domini 1614, all Commiſſioners were required to proceed with Strictneſs againſt all Offenders in this Sort: And from thence began the new Reformation in Building. The firſt Houſes of Note thus built, were were, an Houſe in the Strand, belonging to Col. Cecil; another near Draper's-Hall; a Goldſmith's Houſe in Cheapſide, over-againſt Sadler's-Hall; and a Leather-Seller's in St. Paul's Church-yard, near the North Gate, who was compelled thereto, after he had built his Houſe of Timber.

THE Conflagration which happened in the Beginning of September 1666, how dreadful ſoever it was to the Inhabitants of London at the then preſent Time, is thought, in its Conſequences, to have contributed both to the Health and Beauty of the City; to its Health, by giving Occaſion to enlarge the Streets, and make them more Airy; and to its Beauty, by the Houſes being afterwards rebuilt with Brick and Stone. It is very true, there were ſome fine Buildings in London before that Time, which are ſtill remaining, ſuch as the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, the Piazza's, and Church, of Covent-Garden, and others, the Works of that great Maſter Inigo Jones. And what Improvements may we not expect, when ſuch Encouragement is at preſent given to the Science of Architecture, as that one of the firſt Noblemen of Great Britain, to ſhew his Regard to the Memory of ſo fine a Genius, was lately at a large Expence to reſtore the Portico of Covent-Garden Church to its original Beauty, by removing ſome additional Works, which were thought very much to deform it; the ſame Nobleman has not a little added to the Ornaments of London by the Direction he has given in Buildings for himſelf and others.

THE fine Taſte that is ſhewn in ſome of the new Buildings about Groſvenor and Hanover Squares, new Broad-Street in the City, and other Places, not to mention Particulars, ſuch as the new Bank in Threadneedle-Street, &c. ſeems to promiſe fair for a Rivalſhip in this Art with the politeſt of our Neighbours.

CHAP. II.

The Antiquity of the WALL about the City. WALLS when firſt in Britain. The Maintenance and Reparation of the WALL of LONDON. The antient WALL near BISHOPSGATE deſcribed. And a Computation of the Quantity of Ground within the WALLS.

OUR Hiſtorians tell us, ſays Cambden, That Conſtantine the Great, at the Requeſt of Helena, his Mother, firſt walled London about with Hewn Stones and Britiſh Bricks, containing within the Compaſs of it about three Miles: Whereby the City was made a Square, but not Equilateral; being longer from Weſt to Eaſt, and from South to North narrower.

HOWEVER theſe Walls of Stone might be built, it is plain the Britons had but little Skill in Building with Stone, long after the Time of Conſtantine; for about the Year of Chriſt 399, when Arcadius and Honorius, the Sons of Theodoſius the Great, govern'd the Empire, and the laſt, who was Emperor of the Weſt, had received Britain, the City of Rome was invaded and deſtroyed by the Goths; after which the Romans left Britain, to defend their Territories that were nearer Home. Whereupon the Britons not able to ſecure themſelves againſt the Invaſions of their Enemies, were many Years together under the Oppreſſion of two moſt cruel Nations, the Scots and the Picts: And at length were forced to ſend their Ambaſſadors with Letters and Supplications to Rome, to implore Aid from thence, upon Promiſe of their continual Fealty, on Condition that the Romans would reſcue them out of the Hands of their Enemies. Whereupon the Romans ſent them a Legion, which, encountering with their Enemies, overthrew a great Number of them, and drove the reſt out of the Frontiers of the Country; having thus ſet the Britons at Liberty, they adviſed them to make a Wall between the two Seas, from Eaſt to Weſt, which might keep out their Enemies; and then they left them to themſelves; but the Britons wanting Maſons, built the Wall, not of Stone, as they were adviſed, but of Turf, which was of little or no Defence; and the Enemy, perceiving that the Roman Legion was return'd Home, immediately invaded the Borders, overcame the Country, and bore down all before them.

AMBASSADORS were again diſpatched to Rome, begging that the Romans would not ſuffer their miſerable Country to be utterly deſtroyed; whereupon they ſent another Legion, which coming on a ſudden upon the Enemy, made a great Slaughter among them, and chaced them back to their own Country. The Romans at their Departure, told the Britons plainly, that they were to expect no farther Aſſiſtance from the Emperor, who was wholly employed elſewhere. After this Declaration they adviſed them to inure themſelves to Arms, that they might be able to withſtand the continual Attacks of their Enemies; and conſidering their Weakneſs, exhorted them to repair the Wall of Severus, to ſerve them as a Barrier, offering to aſſiſt them in the Work. What could the Britons do in this Extremity? They had no other Method to take but that propoſed by the Romans; therefore went to work upon their Wall with all poſſible Diligence, and as ſoon as they had finiſhed it, the Romans took their laſt Farewel of Britain, never to return more. The End of the Romans Dominion over Britain is to be fixed to this Time, which was almoſt five hundred Years after their firſt Arrival, and about Anno Domini 434, according to Strype; but Rapin ſays, It was either in the Year 426 or 427, and Biſhop Stillingfleet in 418.

BEDE, l. 1. c. 12.

THIS Wall was built twelve Foot high, and eight Foot broad, in a ſtrait Line, from Eaſt to Weſt, as may be ſeen from the Ruins thereof, remaining in many Places to this Day. The Picts and Scots, who at this Time lived in a ſtrict Union together, began their Hoſtilities again with the Britons, when they heard of the Departure of the Romans; and the Wall of Severus, ſo lately repaired, could not on a freſh Attack be long defended by Britons, but little uſed to War. The Northern People made large Breaches in it in ſeveral Places, that it might be no Obſtacle to their future Incurſions into their Enemy's Country.

IN their great Diſtreſs the Britons agreed to chuſe a Monarch, as the only Expedient to ſave them from Deſtruction, and accordingly elected Vortigern; but he was by no means qualified to reſtore their Affairs, for being of a cruel and avaritious Temper, and addicted to many Vices, he drew the Hatred of the People upon him, and lived in continual Fear, both of the Enemies to the State, and his own Subjects; therefore for his own Security he propoſed to call in the Aſſiſtance of the Saxons, who, ſhortly after, arriving in Britain, were received as Friends; but having driven out the Scots and Picts, they turn'd their Arms againſt the Britons, and, driving ſome beyond the Seas, and others into the Mountains of Wales and Cornwal, they divided the Country into ſeveral Kingdoms among themſelves. Theſe Saxons were likewiſe ignorant in Architecture, till the Year of Chriſt 680, when, it is ſaid, that Bennet, Abbot of Wirral, Maſter to the venerable Bede, firſt brought Artificers in Stone, Painters, and Glaziers, into this Iſland, which till that Time, had in it no other than Wooden Buildings.

London burnt by the Danes, &c. repaired, and ſtrongly Walled.

THE City of London, having been deſtroyed and burnt by the Danes, and other Pagan Enemies, about Anno Domini 839, was repaired, and again made habitable, in the Year 886, by Alfred, King of the Weſt-Saxons, who committed the Government thereof to Ethelred, Earl of Mercia, unto whom he had before given his Daughter Ethelfled: And that this City was ſtrongly walled, may appear from divers Paſſages in antient Writers.

WILLIAM of Malmsbury ſaith, That about the Year of Chriſt 894, the Londoners ſhut up their Gates, and defended their King Ethelred, or Ætheldred, within their Walls againſt the Danes. That in 1016, in the Reign of Edmund Ironſide, Canute, the Dane, attempted to have won the City by Aſſault; but that the Citizens repulſed him, and drove him from their Walls. Alſo, that, in the Year 1052, Earl Godwin with his Navy ſailed up by the South End of the Bridge, along the Southern Side of the River; and ſo aſſailed the Walls. And William Fitz-Stephen, writing in the Reign of Henry II. hath theſe Words, The Wall is high and great, well tower'd on the North Side with due Diſtances between the Towers. On the South Side alſo, the City was walled and tower'd, but the Fiſh-abounding Thames, with his Ebbing and Flowing, hath long ſince ſubverted them.

THE City, ſaith the ſame Author, being far more in Length from Eaſt to Weſt, than in Breadth from South to North, and alſo narrower at both Ends than in the Middle, is therefore compaſſed with the Wall on the Land-Side in Form of a Bow, except where it dents in between Cripplegate and Alderſgate: But the Wall on the South Side, along by the River of Thames, was ſtrait as the String of a Bow, and furniſhed with Towers at due Diſtances one from another.

WHAT has been ſaid may ſerve for the Proof of a Wall, and the Form, as well as Antiquity of it. As to the Maintenance and repairing it, Roger of Wendover, Matthew Paris, and other Hiſtorians ſay, That in the Year 1215, the 6th of King John, the Barons entering the City by Ealdgate, firſt took Aſſurance of the Citizens, and then broke into the Houſes of the Jews, and plunder'd their Coffers, and afterwards repaired the Walls and Gates of the City with Stones, taken from the Jews demoliſhed Houſes. In the Year 1257, Henry the Third cauſed the Walls of London, which were greatly decayed, and deſtitute of Towers, and Towrets, to be repaired in a handſomer Manner than before, at the common Charge of the City. And in the Year 1282, King Edward I. having given Leave, ſome Years before, to Robert Kilwarby, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for the enlarging Black-Fryars Church, to break and take down a Part of the Wall of the City from Ludgate to the River Thames; he granted alſo to Henry Walleis, Mayor, and to the Citizens of London, toward making the Wall and Incloſure of the City, certain Tolls, or Cuſtoms, as appeareth by the Grant. This Wall was then to be made from Ludgate, Weſt to Fleet-Bridge, along behind the Houſes, and by the Water of the Fleet to the River Thames.

How the Wall was maintained and repaired.

IN the Year 1310. Edward II. commanded the Citizens to make up the Wall already began, and the Tower at the End of it, within the Water of Thames, near Black-Fryars. And there is a Record 10 Edward II. Anno Domini 1316, London de certis Conſuetudinibus, &c. de Rebus venalibus ibid. capiend. in Auxilium cujuſdam novæ Turris Muro Civitat. juxta Manſum Fratrum Predicatorum perficiend. i. e. Concerning certain Cuſtoms and Tolls to be taken in London of Things ſold there, for the Aid of finiſhing a certain new Tower on the City Wall, hard by the Manſion of the Friars Preachers. It was alſo granted by King Richard II. in the Tenth Year of his Reign, that a Toll ſhould be taken of Wares, ſold by Land or by Water, for Ten Years, towards repairing the Walls, and cleaning the Ditch about London.

THERE were Grants from ſeveral Kings, from Time to Time, for repairing theſe Walls and Ditches, as Need required. And the particular Tolls and Cuſtoms which were paid upon Proviſions and Commodities, brought to be bought and ſold, were called Murage, which none were exempted from, except the City of Wincheſter, and perhaps ſome few other Cities and Towns, which by a Compoſition with the City of London paid no Pontage, Murage and Pannage.

MR. STRYPE gives us Part of theſe Grants and Charters; The firſt is, That granted by Edward I. about the fourth Year of his Reign, Anno Domini 1276, which he ſays, he read in the Records of the Chamber of London.

The Toll granted by EDWARD I. for Murage.

THE ſame King in another Letter to the Mayor, Sheriffs and Citizens, enjoyned them to proceed to the ſaid Repairs: Which ran to this Effect.

The King's Letter to repair the Walls.

CUM Conceſſerimus, &c. " Whereas we have " granted you for Aid of the Work of the Walls " of our City, and the Cloſure of the ſame, " divers Cuſtoms of vendible Things, coming to " the ſaid City, to be taken for a certain Time; " we command you, that you cauſe to be finiſhed " the Wall of the ſaid City, now begun near the " Friars Preachers, and a certain good and " comely Tower at the Head of the ſaid Wall, " within the Water of the Thames, &c.

MANY ſuch Letters were iſſued out by the next King, Edward II. as in the Firſt, Second, Sixth, Eighth, and till the Twelfth Year of his Reign;

Reign; when, by long taking these Customs, there followed a great Inconvenience; which was, that Provisions were more sparingly brought to the City, for the Supply of Necessities. So that in that Year Letters came forth from the King, for not taking Custom of Things Saleable any more, because by that, Victualia non adducuntur, in Detrimentum Civitatis; as the Patent ran. But before this Year, these Kings, as well as others after them, granted Aids and Impositions upon several Commodities and Merchandizes brought into the City both by Land and Water, towards the Reparation of the City Walls, Forts, Ditches, &c.

The Letters of King Richard II. in the 10th Year of his Reign, which laid the like Custom upon Goods, Merchandizes and Packs brought into London, which was to continue for Ten Years, for Reparation of the said Walls, and Ditches, ran to this Purpose.

"REX dilectis Majori & Aldermannis, &c. "i. e. The King to his beloved Mayor and Al- "dermen, and the rest of the Citizens of Lon- "don, sendeth Health. Know ye, That, where- "as, as well the Walls, and other Forts [Affor- "ciamenta] of the said City, be old and weak, "and, for want of Repair, are fallen down in "some Places: As also, the Ditches of the same "City are exceedingly fill'd with Dirt, Dung- "hills, and other Filth, and with Grass growing "in the same, not only to the evident Danger "of the said City, and Inhabitants thereof, (and "chiefly at this present Time of War) but also "to the manifest Disgrace and Scandal of us and "the whole City, &c." And then the King grants the said Mayor and Aldermen a Power, which was to continue for ten Years, to take Customs of all Kind of Victuals and saleable Merchandizes brought to the City by Land or Water, coming within the Liberty, viz. For every Hundred of Wax, 4*d.* &c. and certain Duties were laid upon abundance of other Wares.

Yet this Murage was not apply'd so precisely to the Reparation of the Walls, but that the King, upon Occasion, might command some Part of it to other Uses: As once King Edward II. in the Sixth Year of his Reign, appointed the Reparation of Newgate to be made good from thence. Thus in a Record in the Tower, 6 Edward II. the Keeper of Newgate was appointed, by the King, to repair the Chamber and Enclosure of Newgate out of the Issues of Murage and Pannage; and a Mandate was given to the Mayor and Sheriffs for that Purpose. And in the same Record Mention is made of Stopping People that brought in Commodities, by Chains to be laid cross the Streets there, till the Customs appointed were paid.

1477. Ralph Joscelin, Mayor, in the Seventeenth of Edward IV. caused that Part of the Wall about the City between Aldgate and Aldersgate to be repaired; and Moorefields to be searched for Clay, of which Brick was made and burnt; he also caused Chalk to be brought out of Kent, and burnt into Lime, in the same Moorefields, for the better carrying on the Work.

Brick and Lime made in Moorefields to repair the Wall.

Several Companies also made and repaired Part of the Wall; the Skinners, to begin Eastward, made that Part of it betwixt Aldgate and Buries Marks, towards Bishopsgate; as might appear by their Arms fixed there, in Mr. Stow's Time, in three Places. The Mayor and his Company of the Drapers, made all that Part betwixt Bishopsgate and Alhallows Church in the same Wall; and Alhallows towards the Postern, called Mooregate. A great Part of the same Wall was repaired by the Executors of Sir John Crosby, Alderman; whose Arms were also fixed in two Places there. Other Companies repaired the rest of the Wall to the Postern of Cripplegate. The Goldsmiths repaired from Cripplegate towards Aldersgate, and the Work ceased.

That curious Antiquary the late Dr. Woodward of Gresham College, in his Remarks upon the antient and present State of London, hath given an ingenious Account of the Manner and Matter of these Walls, from some Observations he made upon the pulling down some old Houses, and digging the Foundations for new ones, in his Neighbourhood, near the Wall of Bishopsgate, in the Year 1707. The Foundation of the Wall there, he says, lay eight Feet beneath the present Surface; and from that almost up to ten Feet in Height; it was compiled of Rag-Stones with single Layers of Broad Tiles interposed, each Layer at two Feet Distance. To this Height the Workmanship was after the Roman Manner. And these were the Remains of the antient Wall, supposed to be built by Constantine the Great. In which it was very observable, that the Mortar was so very firm and hard, as is usual in Roman Works, that the Stone itself might as easily be broken as that.

It was thus far from the Foundation upwards, nine Feet in Thickness; and yet so vast a Strength and Bulk had not been able to secure it from being beat down, and almost levelled with the Ground.

The broad Tiles abovementioned were all of Roman Make. The Romans commonly used two Sorts of Tiles, Tegulæ Bipedales & Sesquipedales, i. e. Two Feet Tiles, and those of a Foot and a Half. What were in this Wall, were of the latter Sort. Each, according to English Measure, one Inch $\frac{3}{10}$ in Thickness, eleven Inches $\frac{6}{10}$ in Breadth, and seventeen Inches $\frac{4}{10}$ in Length.

The old Wall having been demolished, as was said before, was afterwards repaired, and carried up of the Thickness of the former underneath, to eight or nine Feet in Height; which was all apparently additional, and of a later Make than the lower Part. It is composed chiefly of Rag-Stone; only in the Sides were interposed a few Bricks uncertainly, and without any stated Method. On the Outside, the Stone was squared, and wrought into Layers of five Inches in Thickness; between these were alternately interposed two Course of Bricks of the same Form with those on the Inside. These were very large being of the Shape of the Modern; but eleven Inches in Length, and five in Breadth, and two and a half in Thickness. There was not one of the above-mentioned Tiles in all this Part, nor was the Mortar here near so hard as in the lower.

As the Fund and Ground within the City hath, by Rubbish, and the Ruins of Houses, been successively raised and heightened every Age, it was requisite the Wall without should rise likewise in Proportion; and by Reason thereof in Tract of Time, upon the before-mentioned additional Work, it was found needful to build the present City Wall. This is made of Brick of the Statutable Size, and the Model now in Use, and topped Battlement-ways with Copings of Stone. It is two Feet in Thickness, and six in Height; and is without doubt the same that was built in the Year 1477, in the Reign of Edward IV. Bishopsgate itself was built about two Years after. The Workmen lately employed there, sunk considerably lower than the Foundations of this Gate; and by that Means learned, they lay not so deep as those of the old City Wall by four or five Feet.

Mr. STRYPE says, There was an Order made of old, that every Tenement, situate near the Walls, ought to be sixteen Feet distant from them.

Through this Wall of London, there are several Gates and Posterns, between which there were antiently some small Bulwarks or Watch-Towers Towers diſperſed, but of no certain Diſtance one from the other, neither of equal Greatneſs, nor Shape. In all, there were about the Wall Fifteen, viz.

THE Circuit Wall of London, on the Land's Side, to wit, from the Tower of London in the Eaſt, unto Aldgate, was 82 Perches. From Aldgate to Biſhopſgate, 86 Perches. From Biſhopſgate in the North, to the Poſtern of Cripplegate, 162 Perches. From Cripplegate to Alderſgate, 75 Perches. From Alderſgate to Newgate, 66 Perches. From Newgate in the Weſt to Ludgate, 42 Perches. From Ludgate to Fleet-Bridge, 60 Perches. From Fleet-Bridge, South, to the River Thames, about 70 Perches. And ſo the Total of theſe Perches amounteth to 643; every Perch conſiſting of five Yards and an half: Which yield 3536 Yards and an half, or 10609 Feet and a half; making above two Engliſh Miles.

The more modern Dimenſion was as follows.

THAT is, 610 Poles or Perches, which make two Miles wanting 30 Perches.

THE Length of the Line from the Tower to the Fleet-Canal, taken along the Thames, from Eaſt to Weſt, is 5940 Feet, or 360 Poles or Perches, which make a Mile and 40 Poles. This added to the Circuit of the Wall, which as aforeſaid, is two Miles, wanting 30 Poles, makes in the whole three Miles and 10 Poles.

NOW if the City did lie in an orbicular or circular Form, (which of all Figures is the moſt capacious) it would contain 525 Acres of Ground. But it is not of that Form, but more Oval, being narrow at the Ends, and at the broadeſt Place not ſo much as half the Length; ſo that no ſuch Quantity of Ground can be expected. For, by the moſt accurate Survey that hath been taken, the ſuperficial Content of the Ground, within the Wall, doth not amount to above 380 Acres. Such is the Difference between regular and irregular Figures of the ſame Circumference, as is well known to any Perſon, but meanly converſant in the Menſuration of Geometrical Figures.

CHAP. III.

Of the old Town-Ditch without the Wall of the City. The Modern Improvement of FLEET-DITCH. Late Encroachments upon the Walls and Ditch. The Freedom without the Walls. The Line of Separation.

Ditch about London 200 Feet broad.

THE Ditch which encompaſſed the Wall of the City, was begun to be made by the Londoners, in the Year 1211, and finiſhed 1213, the 15th of King John, which, being 200 Feet broad, cauſed no ſmall Hinderance to the Canons of the Holy Trinity, whoſe Church ſtood near Aldgate; becauſe the ſaid Ditch paſſed through their Ground from the Tower to Biſhopſgate.

MR. STRYPE's Opinion is, from the Book Duntkorn, that the firſt Occaſion of making a Ditch about the City was this: William, Biſhop of Ely, Chancellor of England, in the Reign of King Richard I. made a great Ditch round about the Tower, for the better Defence of it againſt John, the King's Brother, the King being at that Time out of the Realm. Then did the City alſo begin a Ditch to encompaſs and ſtrengthen their Walls. This happened between the Years 1190 and 1193. But the Regiſter of Bermondſey writes, that the Ditch was begun October the 15th 1213, which was in the Reign of King John, who ſucceeded Richard. It ſeems the Citizens had deſiſted from the Work for ſome Time, and then began again and carried it on to Perfection.

THIS Ditch being originally made for the Defence of the City, was alſo a long Time together carefully cleanſed and maintained, as Need required; but was afterwards neglected, and forced either to a very narrow and filthy Channel, or altogether ſtopped up for Gardens to be planted, and Houſes to be built thereon.

IN the Year of Chriſt 1354, 28 Edward III. the Ditch of the City flowing over the Bank into the Tower-Ditch, the King commanded the ſaid Ditch to be cleanſed, and ſo ordered, that the Overflowing thereof ſhould not force ony Filth into the Tower-Ditch.

JOHN PHILPOT, Mayor of London, Anno 1379, cauſed this Ditch to be cleanſed, and every Houſe to pay five Pence, which was for a Day's Work, towards the Charges thereof. Richard II. in the 10th of his Reign, granted a Toll to be taken of Wares ſold by Water or by Land, for 10 Years, towards repairing the Wall, and cleanſing the Ditch.

THOMAS FAWCONER, Mayor, 1414, cauſed the Ditch to be cleanſed.

RALPH JOCELINE, Mayor, 1477, cauſed the whole Ditch to be caſt and cleanſed. And ſo from Time to Time it was cleanſed and otherwiſe reformed. Namely, in 1519, the 10th of Henry VIII. for Cleanſing and Scowering the common Ditch, between Aldgate, and the Poſtern next the Tower-Ditch, the Sum of 95*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* was laid out. The chief Ditcher had by the Day 7*d.* The ſecond Ditcher 6*d.* The other Ditchers ers 5*d.* and every Vagabond, (for ſo were they then termed) one Penny, and Meat and drink at the City's Charge. Mr. Stow ſays, in his Remembrance, The Moore-Ditch was cleanſed, when Sir William Hollies was Mayor, in the Year 1540; as, not long before, the Ditch had from the Tower of London to Aldgate.

It was again cleanſed in the Year 1549, Henry Amcotes, Mayor, at the Expence of the Companies. And again, 1569, the 11th of Queen Elizabeth, for cleanſing the ſaid Ditch between Aldgate and the Poſtern, and making a new Sewer and Wharf of Timber, from the Head of the Poſtern into the Town-Ditch, the Sum of 814*l.* 15*s.* 8*d.* was laid out. Before which Time the Ditch lay open, without either Wall or Pale; having therein great Store of very good Fiſh of divers Sorts. This Charge of cleanſing was ſoon after ſpared, and great Profit made by letting out the Banks, and the whole Spoil of the Ditch; though in the Year 1595, two Fifteenths were granted by a Common Council for the Reformation of this Ditch, and a ſmall Part of it, viz. between Biſhopſgate and the Poſtern called Mooregate, was cleanſed, and made ſomewhat broader than before; yet, filling again very faſt, by reaſon of over-raiſing the Ground near adjoining, it was nothing the better.

Sir LEONARD HALLIDAY, Mayor, Anno 1606, laboured much for a River to be brought on the North of the City into it, to cleanſe the Sewers and Ditches, and keep it wholeſome, ſweet, and clean. Sir John Watts, the next Mayor, ſeconded this good Endeavour of Halliday; and one Nicholas Leate, a worthy Citizen, was very painful, and induſtrious in furthering this Work: And the City had in the ſame Year, 1606, well cleanſed their Ditches and Common-Sewers; and Floodgates were made in Holborn-ditch and Fleet-ditch.

Fleet-Ditch made convenient for Barges.

Nothing of this Town-ditch remaineth, but that Part of it called Fleet-ditch; which, after the Fire of LONDON in 1666, by Order of the Mayor and Court of Aldermen, was cleaned, enlarged, and made deep enough for Barges to come up as far as Holborn-bridge, by the Help of the Tides. The Sides were built of Free-Stone, with Warehouſes on each Side, which ran under the Street, deſigned to be uſed for laying in of Coals and ſuch like Commodities, which would have proved an Advantage to the City, from the Revenue ariſing thereby, but that Project did not take. This Ditch was built and made by Sir Thomas Fitch, Bricklayer, who contracted with the City for a very conſiderable Sum and enriched himſelf thereby.

Sir Thomas Fitch the Undertaker.

On Monday the 26th of February, 1732-3, a Petition was preſented to the Houſe of Commons by the Sheriffs of LONDON, from the Lord Mayor, Alderman and Commons of the City of LONDON in Common-Council aſſembled, ſetting forth, that by an Act of Parliament, made in the 22d Year of the Reign of Charles II. intitled, An Additional Act for the Rebuilding of the City of LONDON, uniting of Pariſhes, and Rebuilding of the Cathedral and Parochial Churches within the ſaid City for the further Convenience of Trade, the Channel of Bridewell-Dock from the Channel of the River Thames to Holborn-Bridge, was directed to be ſunk to a ſufficient Level, whereby to make it Navigable, under ſuch Limitations as are preſcribed by the ſaid Act, and the Profits ariſing by the Navigation of the ſaid Channel were appropriated to the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of the ſaid City; that in Purſuance of the ſaid Act, the Channel was ſoon after made Navigable, from the Thames to Holborn-Bridge; but that the Profits ariſing by the Navigation thereof, have not anſwer'd the Charge of making the ſame Navigable; that Part of the ſaid Channel from Fleet-Bridge to Holborn-Bridge, inſtead of being uſeful to Trade, as was intended, is not only filled up with Mud, and become uſeleſs, but is now, and for ſome Years paſt has been a common Nuiſance, and that ſeveral Perſons have lately loſt their Lives by falling into the ſame; that the Expence of cleanſing and repairing the ſame, will be very great, and that a greater annual Charge will be required to keep the ſame in Repair, than the Profits ariſing therefrom will defray, and yet the ſame will never anſwer the Intent of the ſaid Act; and therefore praying, that a Bill may be brought in to repeal ſo much of the ſaid Act, as relates to the ſaid Channel; and to empower the Petitioners to fill up Part of the ſaid Channel from Fleet-Bridge to Holborn-Bridge, and to convert the Ground to ſuch Uſes, as they ſhall think fit and convenient.

Pursuant whereto, an Act ſoon paſſed to empower the City to fill up Part of the ſaid Channel, and accordingly the Work was begun early in March, in the Year 1734, and two ſpacious Arches of ten Feet high, ſix wide, as Common-Sewers, were finiſhed and levelled over by the Michaelmas following: After which the preſent Market-houſe, with other Conveniencies, together with a Clock, were ſoon erected, and the ſaid Place was, by the Name of the Fleet-market, opened on the Thirtieth of September, in the Year 1737; and which has not only proved of Utility to the Neighbourhood, but has undoubtedly improved the Revenue.

For the Completion of this Deſign, the Bridge at the End of Fleet-lane over this Channel was taken down, and the Materials thereof, which were of Stone, were, as then reported, ſold for two hundred Pounds.

When all the Town-ditch was filled up, except Fleet-ditch, there were made, inſtead thereof, large common Drains and Sewers to carry away the Waters from the Poſtern-gate, between the two Tower-hills, to Fleet-bridge, without Ludgate; and then many of the City-tenants, whoſe Ground butted upon the Wall on either Side made bold to treſpaſs upon the ſame Wall, and what was before the Ditch, by Building there or incloſing for Yards; notwithſtanding 16 Feet on either Side the Wall was, or ſhould have been reſerved for the City, for their Workmen or others to enter, view, and repair the ſaid Wall; but theſe Encroachments were ſo many that it was no eaſy Matter to find any Part of that Wall round the City, not thus encroached upon. Which being taken in Conſideration by the Committee appointed to let the City and Bridge-houſe Lands, and inſpect the ſame, they ordered a Survey of all the City-walls on both Sides, and of all Encroachments of what Kind ſoever, and by whom made.

Which Survey was accordingly taken by Mr. Leybourn, and fairly engroſſed in a Vellum-book, and delivered into the Magiſtrates in the Guild-hall, where it remaineth; In which Book are the Names, both of the City-tenants that occupied the ſame, and the Number of Feet by them encroached upon the ſaid Wall or Ditch, or within 16 Feet on either Side; ſo that whoſoever took a Leaſe of any of the City-lands, that abutt upon the Walls on either Side, might pay a Rent anſwerable to the Improvement that the ſaid Encroachments ſhould be thought worth. Notwithſtanding the many Encroachments, made by private Perſons, for their particular Conveniencies, there were many Places, on both Sides, of publick Uſe and Concern. As,

I. At a Place between the Tower-liberty and Aldgate, antiently called the Vineyard, were built a Row of Houſes with Stables and Hay-lofts adjoining, for the Reception of the Carmen belonging to the City.

II. A Church-yard belonging to the Church of St. Botolph without Biſhopſgate.

III. THE Pariſh-Church, Church-Yard, and Parſonage-Houſe of St. Alhallow's on the Wall.

IV. A Magnificent Structure, 540 Feet in Length, for an Hoſpital for Lunatics, called New Bethlehem, inſtead of the old Houſe for that Uſe, ſituated in a Street called Bethlehem; of which more hereafter.

V. THE City's Store-yard for laying up Timber, Stone, Gibbets, Pillories, Sledges, and ſuch like Things, for the Execution of Malefactors; and to receive ſuch Carts, Coaches, Horſes, &c. as have committed any Offence, or Abuſe, within the City or Liberties.

VI. THE Hall of the Lorimers Company.

VII. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Alphage.

VIII. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Giles's Cripplegate.

IX. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Olave, Silver-ſtreet.

X. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Botolph's Alderſgate.

XI. THE Church-yard belonging to Chriſt's Hoſpital, and the Yard, where the Boys play, which is ſtill called Town-ditch.

XII. THE Preſs-yard belonging to Newgate-Priſon.

XIII. THE Garden and Library, which belong to the College of Phyſicians in Warwick-lane.

XIV. JUSTICE-HALL, commonly called the Seſſions-houſe in the Old-baily, with the Garden behind it.

THE City being thus encompaſſed with a Wall on the Eaſt, North, and Weſt Parts, and the River Thames on the South Side, there is another Skirt of Ground without the Wall, and within the Liberty or Freedom of the City; and this is encompaſſed by an irregular Line, which ſeparates the Freedom from the County of Middleſex.

The Line of Separation which divides the Freedom from the County of Middleſex.

THIS Line begins at Temple-bar, where it abutts Weſtward, upon the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, which is without the ſaid Temple-bar, or Gate. From Temple-bar it extends itſelf by many Turnings, and Windings, through Part of Sheer-lane, Bell-yard, Chancery-lane, by the Roll's Liberty, &c. unto Holborn, almoſt againſt Gray's-Inn-Lane; where there is a Bar, that is, two Poſts with Rails, and a Chain to caſt over, as Occaſion ſerveth, upon any Emergency, as keeping out an Enemy, or the like.

FROM Holborn-Bars, it paſſeth, with many Turnings, by Brook-ſtreet, Furnival's-inn, Leather-lane, Hatton-garden, Ely-houſe, Field-lane, Chick-lane, to the Common-ſewer, where it returns Weſtward to Cow-croſs, and ſo to Smithfield-bars. From thence it runs by ſeveral Windings between Long-lane and Charter-houſe-lane, to Goſwell-ſtreet, and ſo up that Street, Northward, to the Bars.

FROM the Bars in Goſwell-ſtreet, where the Manor of Finsbury begins, it extendeth itſelf, by Windings, croſs Golden-lane, at the Poſts and Chain there ſet up, to the Poſts and Chain in White-croſs-ſtreet; and from thence to the Poſts and Chain in Grub-ſtreet; and from thence on through Rope-maker's-alley, to the Poſts and Chain in the Highway, from Mooregate; and from thence by the North Side of Moorefields, abutting upon Finsbury Manor, where it returns Northward up to Norton-falgate, and there meets the Bars in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; and from thence, Eaſtward into Spittle-fields; all abutting upon Norton-falgate.

FROM Norton-falgate, it returns Southward by Spittle-fields, and then South-Eaſt, by Wentworth-ſtreet, to the Bars in Whitechapel.

FROM Whitechapel-bars, it winds more Southerly, by the Little-minories, and Goodman's-fields: From whence it returns Weſtward to the Poſts and Chain in the Minories; and thence, more Weſterly, till it comes to London-wall; where it abutts upon the Tower Liberty, and there it ends.

The Length of the Line.

ALTHO' this Line in its ſeveral Turnings is of great Length, yet the Ground that is encloſed, between That and the Wall, is but narrow, ſo that the Content, in Acres, will not be anſwerable to the Circumambulation of it.

THE Length of the Line is 21,370 Feet, which is above four Miles; and yet the Ground comprehended betwixt the Line of the City-wall, and this Line of Separation is but 300 Acres.

THE GATES in the Wall of the City, were in antient Times, four, viz. Aldgate, for the Eaſt; Alderſgate for the North; Ludgate for the Weſt; and the Bridge-gate over the River Thames, for the South: But afterwards for the Eaſe of Citizens and Paſſengers, divers other Gates and Poſterns were made.

SINCE which Time was built Newgate, the Poſtern called Mooregate, a Poſtern from Chriſt's Hoſpital towards St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital in Smithfield, &c. Of every one of theſe Gates, and Poſterns in the Wall, and alſo of certain Water-Gates on the River Thames, ſeverally, ſomething ſhall be noted, as there is Authority to be found, or reaſonable Grounds of Conjecture.

The Firſt Gate Eaſtward.

Poſtern by the Tower.

THE Firſt was the Poſtern-gate, next the Tower of LONDON, which, by Part that remained in Mr. Stow's Time, ſeemed to have been a fair and ſtrong Arched Gate, partly built of of hard Stone of Kent, and partly of Stone brought from Caen in Normandy, ſince the Conqueſt, and Foundation of the High-Tower, and ſerved for Paſſengers on Foot out of the Eaſt, from thence through the City to Ludgate in the Weſt.

Ruin of this Gate.

THE Ruin of this Gate began in the Year 1190, the Second of Richard I. when William Longchamp, that Prince's great Favourite, who was Biſhop of Ely, and Chancellor of England, cauſed a Part of the City Wall, that is, from the ſaid Gate towards the River Thames to the White-Tower, to be broken down, to enlarge the ſaid Tower; which he then encompaſſed far wide about with an embattled Wall; the ſame that is now the outer Wall of the Tower. He alſo cauſed a broad and deep Ditch to be made without the Wall, intending to have brought the Thames to have flowed about it, which could not be done.

Embattled Wall about the Tower.

The Ditch made about the Tower.

The Poſtern falls down.

THE South-ſide of this Gate being thus looſened, and greatly weakened, by undermining the Foundation, at length fell down; that is, in the Year 1440, the 18th of Henry VI. and was never after re-edified; ſuch was the Negligence of the Citizens, which bred ſome Trouble to their Succeſſors, who ſuffered a weak, wooden Building to be there made, inhabited by Perſons of lewd Lives, oftentimes preſented by the Inqueſt of Portſoken Ward, but not reformed; whereas before that Time the ſaid Poſtern was as well eſteemed as the other Gates of the City, and was allotted to Men of good Credit. Among other in the 49th of Edward III. John Cobbe was admitted Cuſtos of the ſaid Poſtern, and all the Habitations thereof, for the Term of his Life, by William Walworth, then Mayor of LONDON, Anno 1374, being his firſt Mayoralty; for he was again Lord Mayor, Anno 1380. And John Credy, Eſq; in the 21ſt of Richard II. was admitted Cuſtos of the ſaid Poſtern, and Appurtenances, by Richard Whittington, Mayor, the Aldermen, and Commonalty.

NEAR the End of London-Wall, South, over-againſt the Tower, this Poſtern-Gate is now quite taken down, and in the Place thereof Poſts are ſet up to keep off Carts and Coaches, with a locked Rail, and narrow Paſſage, left for Foot Paſſengers.

The Poſtern Spring

JUST by, at the Bottom of ſome Stone Steps, is the excellent Poſtern-Spring, with an Iron Bowl and Chain, faſtened, to catch the Water in. Not only the ſaid Gate, but the Wall thereabouts, is quite taken away, for a good Space, and ſome Houſes built in the Place. The Wall here was about Six or Seven Feet in Breadth, and cemented together with irregular Pieces of Stone, like a Rock.

THERE is a Yard hard by, called George-Yard, built on each Side with Dwelling-Houſes, and is a Paſſage to Tower-Hill; where, after the Fire of LONDON, the Wall was beat down in Form of an Arch, through which Carts might paſs; but now, alſo, this Arch is demoliſhed, and the Wall taken away. Here a View may be taken of the Inſide, and of the Breadth of London-wall; which appears like a natural Rock, with the Stones ſo cemented in the Work, that nothing but the greateſt Violence, can ſeparate them. On the Weſt-ſide, about Fourteen or Fifteen Feet high, are ſeen ſeveral old Roman Bricks, put into the Work, between the Stones.

ALDGATE.

ALDGATE.

THE next Gate, in the Eaſt, is called Aldgate, from its Antiquity. This is one, and the Firſt of the Four principal Gates, and alſo one of the Seven double Gates, mentioned by Fitz-Stephen. It hath had two Pair of Gates, tho' now but one.

THERE have alſo been two Portcloſes; one of them remained till the new building the Gate, and the Place of letting down the other was to be ſeen. For the Antiquity of the Gate, it appears, by a Charter of King Edgar, to the Knights of Knighton-guild, that, in his Days, the ſaid Port was call'd Ealdgate, as you may read in the Ward of Portſoken. Alſo Queen Matilda, the Wife of Henry I. in the Eighth Year of his Reign, having founded the Priory of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, gave unto Norman, the firſt Prior, and the Canons, who devoutly ſerved GOD therein, the Port of Aldgate, and the Soke or Franchiſe thereunto belonging, with all Cuſtoms, as free as ſhe held the ſame. In which Charter ſhe nameth the Houſe of Chriſt-Church, and reporteth Aldgate to be of her Demain.

IN the Year 1215, according to Matthew Paris, in the Civil Wars between King John and his Barons, the Londoners aſſiſted the Barons Faction, who then beſieged Northampton, they came afterwards to Bedford Caſtle, where they were well received by William Beauchampe, Captain of the ſame; and having at that Time, ſecret Intelligence that they might enter the City of LONDON, they removed their Camp to Ware; from whence, in the Night, coming to London, they entered Aldgate; and, placing Guards at the Gates, diſpoſed of all Things in the City at their Pleaſure.

THEY ſpoiled the Fryers Houſes, and ſearched their Coffers; which being done, Robert Fitzwater, Jeffery Magnavile, Earl of Eſſex, and the Earl of Glouceſter, Chief Leaders of the Army, applied all Diligence to repair the Gates and Walls of the City, with the Stones taken from the Jews broken Houſes; and Aldgate, which had given them ſo eaſy an Admittance, being then the moſt ruinous, they repaired, or rather new built, after the Manner of the Normans, ſtrongly arched, with Bulwarks of Stone, brought from Caen in Normandy, and ſmall Brick, call'd Flanders Tile, was brought from thence, ſuch as was never uſed here before the Conqueſt.

IN the Year 1471, the 11th of Edward IV. Thomas, the Baſtard of Fawconbridge, having aſſembled a riotous Company of Seamen, and others, in Eſſex and Kent, came to LONDON, with a great Navy of Ships, near to the Tower; whereupon, the Mayor and Aldermen, by Conſent

V. THE City's Store-yard for laying up Timber, Stone, Gibbets, Pillories, Sledges, and ſuch like Things, for the Execution of Malefactors; and to receive ſuch Carts, Coaches, Horſes, &c. as have committed any Offence, or Abuſe, within the City or Liberties.

VI. THE Hall of the Lorimers Company.

VII. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Alphage.

VIII. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Giles's Cripplegate.

IX. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Olave, Silver-ſtreet.

X. THE Church-yard belonging to the Pariſh of St. Botolph's Alderſgate.

XI. THE Church-yard belonging to Chriſt's Hoſpital, and the Yard, where the Boys play, which is ſtill called Town-ditch.

XII. THE Preſs-yard belonging to Newgate-Priſon.

XIII. THE Garden and Library, which belong to the College of Phyſicians in Warwick-lane.

XIV. JUSTICE-HALL, commonly called the Seſſions-houſe in the Old-baily, with the Garden behind it.

THE City being thus encompaſſed with a Wall on the Eaſt, North, and Weſt Parts, and the River Thames on the South Side, there is another Skirt of Ground without the Wall, and within the Liberty or Freedom of the City; and this is encompaſſed by an irregular Line, which ſeparates the Freedom from the County of Middleſex.

The Line of Separation which divides the Freedom from the County of Middleſex.

THIS Line begins at Temple-bar, where it abutts Weſtward, upon the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, which is without the ſaid Temple-bar, or Gate. From Temple-bar it extends itſelf by many Turnings, and Windings, through Part of Sheer-lane, Bell-yard, Chancery-lane, by the Roll's Liberty, &c. unto Holborn, almoſt againſt Gray's-Inn-Lane; where there is a Bar, that is, two Poſts with Rails, and a Chain to caſt over, as Occaſion ſerveth, upon any Emergency, as keeping out an Enemy, or the like.

FROM Holborn-Bars, it paſſeth, with many Turnings, by Brook-ſtreet, Furnival's-inn, Leather-lane, Hatton-garden, Ely-houſe, Field-lane, Chick-lane, to the Common-ſewer, where it returns Weſtward to Cow-croſs, and ſo to Smithfield-bars. From thence it runs by ſeveral Windings between Long-lane and Charter-houſe-lane, to Goſwell-ſtreet, and ſo up that Street, Northward, to the Bars.

FROM the Bars in Goſwell-ſtreet, where the Manor of Finsbury begins, it extendeth itſelf, by Windings, croſs Golden-lane, at the Poſts and Chain there ſet up, to the Poſts and Chain in White-croſs-ſtreet; and from thence to the Poſts and Chain in Grub-ſtreet; and from thence on through Rope-maker's-alley, to the Poſts and Chain in the Highway, from Mooregate; and from thence by the North Side of Moorefields, abutting upon Finsbury Manor, where it returns Northward up to Norton-falgate, and there meets the Bars in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; and from thence, Eaſtward into Spittle-fields; all abutting upon Norton-falgate.

FROM Norton-falgate, it returns Southward by Spittle-fields, and then South-Eaſt, by Wentworth-ſtreet, to the Bars in Whitechapel.

FROM Whitechapel-bars, it winds more Southerly, by the Little-minories, and Goodman's-fields: From whence it returns Weſtward to the Poſts and Chain in the Minories; and thence, more Weſterly, till it comes to London-wall; where it abutts upon the Tower Liberty, and there it ends.

ALTHO' this Line in its ſeveral Turnings is of great Length, yet the Ground that is encloſed, between That and the Wall, is but narrow, ſo that the Content, in Acres, will not be anſwerable to the Circumambulation of it. The Length of the Line.

ALDGATE.

ALDGATE

THE next Gate, in the Eaſt, is called Aldgate, from its Antiquity. This is one, and the Firſt of the Four principal Gates, and alſo one of the Seven double Gates, mentioned by Fitz-Stephen. It hath had two Pair of Gates, tho' now but one.

THERE have alſo been two Portcloſes; one of them remained till the new building the Gate, and the Place of letting down the other was to be ſeen. For the Antiquity of the Gate, it appears, by a Charter of King Edgar, to the Knights of Knighton-guild, that, in his Days, the ſaid Port was call'd Ealdgate, as you may read in the Ward of Portſoken. Alſo Queen Matilda, the Wife of Henry I. in the Eighth Year of his Reign, having founded the Priory of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, gave unto Norman, the firſt Prior, and the Canons, who devoutly ſerved GOD therein, the Port of Aldgate, and the Soke or Franchiſe thereunto belonging, with all Cuſtoms, as free as ſhe held the ſame. In which Charter ſhe nameth the Houſe of Chriſt-Church, and reporteth Aldgate to be of her Demain.

IN the Year 1215, according to Matthew Paris, in the Civil Wars between King John and his Barons, the Londoners aſſiſted the Barons Faction, who then beſieged Northampton, they came afterwards to Bedford Caſtle, where they were well received by William Beauchampe, Captain of the ſame; and having at that Time, ſecret Intelligence that they might enter the City of LONDON, they removed their Camp to Ware; from whence, in the Night, coming to London, they entered Aldgate; and, placing Guards at the Gates, diſpoſed of all Things in the City at their Pleaſure.

THEY ſpoiled the Fryers Houſes, and ſearched their Coffers; which being done, Robert Fitz-water, Jeffery Magnavile, Earl of Eſſex, and the Earl of Glouceſter, Chief Leaders of the Army, applied all Diligence to repair the Gates and Walls of the City, with the Stones taken from the Jews broken Houſes; and Aldgate, which had given them ſo eaſy an Admittance, being then the moſt ruinous, they repaired, or rather new built, after the Manner of the Normans, ſtrongly arched, with Bulwarks of Stone, brought from Caen in Normandy, and ſmall Brick, call'd Flanders Tile, was brought from thence, ſuch as was never uſed here before the Conqueſt.

IN the Year 1471, the 11th of Edward IV. Thomas, the Baſtard of Fawconbridge, having aſſembled a riotous Company of Seamen, and others, in Eſſex and Kent, came to LONDON, with a great Navy of Ships, near to the Tower; whereupon, the Mayor and Aldermen, by Conſent ſent of a Common-Council, fortified all along the Thames Side, from Baynard's-caſtle to the Tower, with armed Men, Guns, and other Inſtruments of War, to reſiſt the Invaſion of the Mariners; whereby the Thames Side was ſafely preſerved, and kept by the Aldermen, and other Citizens, that aſſembled there in great Numbers. The Rebels being thus denied Paſſage through the City that Way, ſet upon, Aldgate, Biſhopſgate, Cripplegate, Alderſgate, London-bridge, and along the River Thames, ſhooting Arrows and Guns into the City, fired the Suburbs, and burned more than threeſcore Houſes. On Sunday, the Eleventh of May, Five Thouſand of them aſſaulting Aldgate, won the Bulwarks, and enter'd the City; but the Portcloſe being let down, ſuch as had enter'd were ſlain, and Robert Baſſet, Alderman of Aldgate Ward, with the Recorder, commanded, in the Name of GOD, the Portcloſe to be drawn up, which being done, they iſſued out, and with ſharp Shot, and fierce Fight, drove their Enemies back as far as St. Botolph's Church: By this Time, the Earl Rivers, and the Lieutenant of the Tower, were come with a freſh Company; which joining the other, diſcomfited the Rebels, and put them to Flight. Then the aforeſaid Robert Baſſet, with other Citizens, chaſed them as far as the Mile's-End; and from thence, ſome to Poplar, ſome to Stratford, ſlew many, and took many Priſoners. In the mean Time the Baſtard, having eſſayed other Places upon the Water-Side, to little Purpoſe, fled towards his Ships.

MR. STRYPE obſerves in this Place, That there was antiently, on the Wall, near Aldgate, a Turret, whereon was placed an Hermitage, which in the Reign of Edward I. was preſented to the King's Judges at an Inquiſition in the Tower, being built four Feet without the Turret in the King's Way: Hermitagium ſitum eſt in Turretto Muri Civitat. LOND. prope Aldgate; & edificatur 4 Ped. extra Turretum Muri predict. in Via Regia.

FROM this Gate towards Biſhopſgate, was a Paſſage, or Lane, between the Wall and the Priory of the Holy Trinity, about 13 Feet broad, which the Prior and Convent ſtopt up with a Wall of Earth, in the troubleſome Times of Henry III. who was angry with the City, and took away their Privileges. In the Beginning of the Reign of his Son Edward I. there was a Preſentment of this to the Judges Itinerant, by the Citizens, in which it was ſaid, That it had been ſo ſtopt up for Seven Years, ad Exheredationem Reg. & Leſionem Civitat. LONDON. i. e. To the Hurt of the City, and the diſinheriting the King: For ſo they called it, when the King's Highway was encroached upon.

ALDGATE taken down. THIS Gate, being very old and ruinous, was began to be taken down, Anno 1606, at which Time, in digging up the Foundation, divers antient Pieces of Roman Coin were found amongſt the Rubbiſh, two of which Mr. Martin Bond, a worthy Citizen, and one of the Surveyors of the Work, cauſed to be carved in Stone, according to their exact Form and Figure, and fixed on either Side of the Arch of the Gate without, Eaſtward, as they remain to this Day. The reſt were ſent for by the Lord Mayor, and Court of Aldermen, to the Guild-hall, where they are ſtill kept,

UPON the 10th of April, 1607, the aforeſaid Mr. Bond laid the firſt Foundation Stone of the new Gate, Northward. The Bottom of the Foundation of this Gate, being 16 Feet deep, and eight Feet broad, the whole was ſubſtantially finiſhed Anno 1609, in the Mayoralty of Sir Humphrey Weld Knt.

UPON this Gate were placed the following Ornaments, which are now taken away, nothing of that Sort remaining, except the two Medals before-mentioned.

Old Ornaments on the Gate. UPON the Top Eaſtward, a Golden Sphere, with a Vane on it.

ON the upper Battlement, two Figures of antient Soldiers, each holding a Stone Ball in his Hand.

BENEATH, in a large Square, was the Effigies of King James I. in gilt Armour, with a golden Lion, and a chained Unicorn, both Couchant, at his Feet; but this Square is now broke through, and a handſome Saſh Window made in it.

ON the Weſt Side of the Gate, was the Figure of Fortune curiouſly carved, and gilt with Gold, ſtanding on a Mund, or Globe, with a Sail ſpreading over her Head, and looking towards the City.

BENEATH this Figure, in a large Square, which is now likewiſe turned into a Saſh Window, were the King's Arms, with the Motto.

DIEU ET MON DROIT.

and a little below, VIVAT REX. Somewhat lower, to grace each Side of the Gate, were two Figures, one the Emblem of Peace, with a Dove on one Hand, and a gilt Wreath, or Garland, in the other. And on the other, or North-ſide, was the Figure of Charity, with a Child at her Breaſt, and another in her Hand.

OVER the Arch of the Gate, theſe two Inſcriptions fairly engraven, are ſtill legible:

Senatus Populuſque Londinenſes.
Fecit 1609.

And underneath,

HUMFREY WELD, Mayor.

BEFORE the Year 1734, at the South-Eaſt Angle of this Gate there was a Conduit, but it having been diſuſed for many Years, two Houſes were erected in lieu of it, and a Poſtern made in the South End of the Gate the ſame Year for the Convenience of Foot Paſſengers. The Apartments over this Gate are appropriated to the Uſe of one of the Lord Mayor's Carvers, who is alſo one of the Serjeants of the Chamber for the Time being.

BISHOPSGATE.

BISHOPS-GATE.

THE next Gate, towards the North, was called Biſhopſgate, being built, as may be ſuppoſed, by ſome Biſhop of LONDON. Mr. Strype ſays, perhaps, by Erkenwald, Son of King Offa, and Biſhop of LONDON, whom Hiſtorians mention as the Founder of two religious Houſes, one at Chertſey in Surrey, and another at Berking, in Eſſex, where he died, Anno 685. And who, by Reaſon of his Munificence and good Deſerts, was very dear to the Londoners; and being Canonized, his Shrine at St Paul's very much honoured. And there having been the Effigies of two Biſhops upon this Gate, as Erkenwald might be be the Founder of it, ſo he would give the next Honour, that is, for the Reparation of it, to Biſhop William, the Norman, who was Biſhop of LONDON in William the Conqueror's Time, and a great Benefactor to the City, by procuring from the King all their Privileges, as amply as they had before enjoy'd them, and by other good Deeds: But however it is uncertain who was the Founder.

THIS Gate was firſt built for the Convenience of Paſſengers towards the Eaſt, and by North; as into Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeſhire, &c. The Travellers into which Parts, before the Building this Gate, were forced, paſſing out at Aldgate, to go Eaſt, till they came to Mile-End, and then to turn on the Left to Blethenhall-Green, (now called Bednal-Green) to Cambridge-Heath and ſo North, or Eaſt and by North, as their Journey lay. If they took not this Way by the Eaſt, out at Aldgate, then they muſt take their Way by North out of Alderſgate, through Alderſgate-Street, and Goſwel-Street, towards Iſlington; and by a Croſs of Stone, on the Right Hand, ſet up for a Mark by the North-End of Golden-Lane, to turn Eaſtward through a long Street, called to this Day Old-Street, to another Croſs ſtanding by Sewers-Ditch, (or Shoreditch) Church, and then again North towards Tottenham, Enfield, Waltham, Ware, &c.

THE oldeſt Note, that Mr. Stow ſays, he read of this Biſhopſgate, was, That William Blund, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, in the Year 1210, ſold to Serle Mercer, and William Almaine, Procurators, or Wardens of London-Bridge, all his Land, with the Garden, in the Pariſh of St. Botolph without Biſhopſgate, between the Land of Richard Caſiarin, towards the North, and the Land of Robert Criſpie, towards the South, and the Highway called Bearward's-Lane, on the Eaſt, &c.

THE next was a Charter, dated in the Year 1235, which, as Walter Brune, Citizen of LONDON, and Roſia, his Wife, had founded the Priory, or new Hoſpital of our Bleſſed Lady, ſince called St. Mary Spittle, without Biſhopſgate, confirmed the ſame, to the Honour of GOD and our Bleſſed Lady, for Canons Regular, the 19th of Henry III.

ALSO in the Year 1247, Simon Fitz-Mary, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, in the 29th of Henry III. founded the Hoſpital of St. Mary, called Bethlem, without Biſhopſgate. So much for the Antiquity of this Gate.

NEXT for the Repairing it: Henry III. confirmed to the Merchants of the Haunſe, who had a Houſe in the City, called Guildhalla Theutonicorum, certain Liberties and Privileges: Edward I. alſo confirmed the ſame; in the Tenth Year of whoſe Reign it was found, that the ſaid Merchants ought by Right to repair the ſaid Gate, called Biſhopſgate; and in the ſame Reign they were preſented, by ſome of the Wards, to the Judges Itinerant, ſitting at the Tower, for the Neglect of it, in theſe Words, Quod Teutonici non ſuſtentent Biſhopſgate, quam bene ſuſtentare deberent; pro qua Liberi ſunt in Civitate, ad Dampnum Civitat, i. e. That the Dutch do not maintain Biſhopſgate ſo well as they ought to do, to the Damage of the City; altho' they are made free of it on that Account.

Biſhopſgate repaired by the Merchants of the Haunſe.

UPON this Preſentment, Gerard Marbod, Alderman of the Haunſe, and others then remaining in the City of LONDON, for themſelves, and the reſt of the Merchants of the ſaid Haunſe, granted 210 Marks, Sterling, to the Mayor and Citizens; and covenanted that they, and their Succeſſors, ſhould, from Time to Time, repair the ſaid Gate.

Rebuilt by the ſaid Merchants.

In the Year 1479, in the Reign of Edward IV. this Gate was again beautifully built by the ſaid Haunſe Merchants.

IN in the Year 1551, theſe Haunſe Merchants had prepared Stone for the Purpoſe, and cauſed a new Gate to be framed, in order to be ſet up: But, at that Time, their Liberties, through Suit of our Engliſh Merchants, were ſeized into the King's Hand, ſo that a Stop was put to that Work; and the old Gate remained till the Year 1731, when it was quite taken down; but in order, as it was ſaid, to erect another handſome and regular Piece of Architecture, without Lodgings, like thoſe of Rome and Paris.

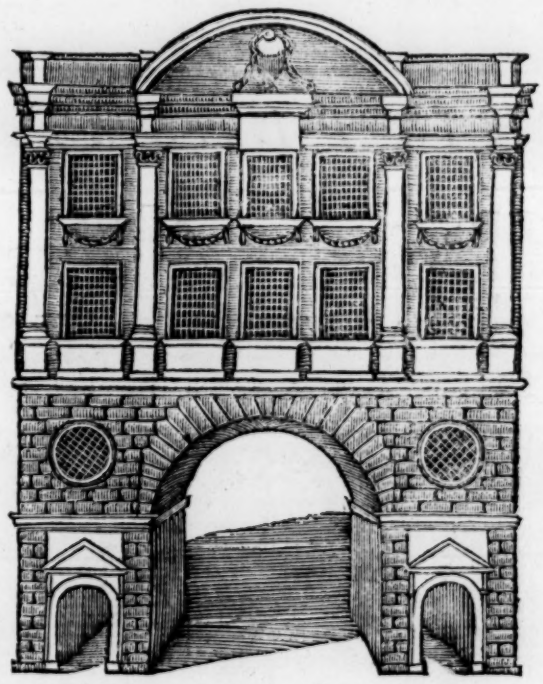
Taken down, Anno 1731.

THE Rooms that were over the old Gate, were allotted to one of the Lord Mayor's Carvers; who is alſo one of the Serjeants of the Chamber, for the Time being.

MOOREGATE.



THOMAS FALCONER, Mayor, about the Year 1415, the Third of Henry V. cauſed the Wall of the City to be broken near Coleman-ſtreet, and there built a Poſtern, now called Mooregate, upon the Moore-ſide, where no Gate had been before. This was made for the Conveniency of the Citizens to paſs that Way on Cauſeways; for this Place was, at that Time, a Marſh. This Poſtern was re-edified by William Hampton, Fiſhmonger, Mayor, in the Year 1472. And in the Year 1511, the Third of Henry VII. Roger Achely, Mayor, cauſed Dikes and Bridges to be made, and the Ground to be levelled, and made more commodious for Paſſage. Since which Time it had been raiſed ſo much, when Mr. Stow wrote, that the Dikes and Bridges were quite cover'd; and he was of Opinion, that if it had been raiſed even with the Battlements of the City Wall, it would have been little the dryer, ſuch, ſays he, is the mooriſh Nature of the Ground; but we ſee what an Alteration has been made for the better: For theſe Fields, before, an unhealthful Place, in the Mayoralty of Sir Leonard Halliday, were turn'd into pleaſant Walks, ſet with Trees, compaſſed with Brick Walls, and made convenient, by Sewers under Ground, for the Conveyance of the Water, which coſt the City Five Thouſand Pounds, or thereabouts.

Moorefields a Marſh.

Planted with Trees in the Mayoralty of of Sir Leonard Halliday, Anno 1606.

THE lower Part of them has been new gravell'd and rail'd, in a very ſtrong and handſome Manner, and the Plantations there, which are like ſo many Gardens in the Four Quarters, were not finiſhed till the preſent Year, in the Mayoralty of John Barber, Eſq;

New planted in the Mayoralty of John Barber, Eſq; Anno 1733.

THIS Gate being very old, was in the Year 1672, pulled down, and a new one of Stone was erected, having a lofty Arch, the City intending to have had a Hay-Market in Little-Mooreſields, but that Deſign did not take Effect. However, the Gate is built with Poſterns on each Side of the Arch, for Foot Paſſengers, being a great Thoroughfare. The Rooms, which, as in the other Gates, did belong to one of the City Officers, have, of late, been made Uſe of by a Perſon who keeps a Coffee-Houſe.

A new Stone Gate erected.

A Poſtern made into Moorefields.

ABOUT the Year 1636, the City Wall between Biſhopſgate and Mooregate, was broken down, over againſt Wincheſter-ſtreet, and a Poſtern Gate made there for Foot Paſſengers.

Another Poſtern made.

ALSO in the Year 1655, another Place in the Wall was broken down over-againſt the North End of Aldermanbury; and a Poſtern made with double Gates, for a Paſſage into Fore-ſtreet.

A Third Poſtern made.

AND ſoon after, another was made, near the North End of Baſinſhaw-ſtreet, leading alſo into Fore-ſtreet.

CRIPPLEGATE.

THE next is, the Poſtern of Cripplegate, ſo called long before the Conqueſt. For in the Hiſtory of Edmund, King of the Eaſt Angles, Written by Abbas Floriacenſis, and by Burchard, ſome Time Secretary to Offa, King of Mercia; and ſince that, by John Lidgate, Monk of Bury, it is ſaid, that in the Year 1010, the Danes ſpoiling the Kingdom of the Eaſt Angles, Alwyne, Biſhop of Helmeham, cauſed the Body of King Edmund the Martyr, to be brought from Bedriſworth, now called Bury St. Edmund's, through the Kingdom of the Eaſt Saxons, and ſo to LONDON, in at Cripplegate; a Place ſo called from Cripples begging there. At which Gate, it was pretended, the Body entring, wrought Miracles, and made ſome of the Lame to walk upright, praiſing GOD. The Body of King Edmund reſted for the Space of three Years in the Pariſh Church of St. Gregory, near the Cathedral of St. Paul. Moreover, the Charter of William the Conqueror confirming the Foundation of the College in LONDON, call'd St. Martin the Great, hath in it theſe Words: I do give and graunt unto the ſame Church, and Canons, ſerving GOD therein, all the Lands, and the Moore without the Poſtern, which is called Creplegate, on either Part of the Poſtern. Beſides this, Alfune built the Pariſh Church of St. Giles, near a Gate of the City, called Porta Contractorum, or Crippleſgate, about the Year 1090.

Cripplegate once a Priſon.

THIS Poſtern was ſome Time a Priſon, to which ſuch Citizens, and others, as were arreſted for Debt, or common Treſpaſſes, were committed, as they are now to the Compters. This appeareth by a Writ of Edward I. in theſe Words: Rex Vic. London ſalutem. Ex gravi querela B. capt. & detent. in priſona noſtra de Crippleſgate pro x. l. quas coram Radulpho de Sandwico, tunc Cuſtod. Civitatis noſtræ LONDON, & I. de Blackwell Civis recognit. debit. &c.

New built, Anno 1244.

THIS Gate was new built by the Brewers of LONDON, in the Year 1244, as ſaith Fabian's Manuſcript.

Built again, Anno 1491.

EDMUND SHAW, Goldſmith, Mayor in the Year 1483, left, by his laſt Will, Four Hundred Marks, which, with the old Stuff of the Gate, call'd Cripplegate, was to build the ſaid Gate a-new; which was accordingly perform'd in the Year 1491.

Repaired, Anno 1663.

CRIPPLEGATE was again repaired, and hath this Inſcripton upon it, ſhewing the Time when. " This Gate was repaired and beautified, " and the Foot Poſtern new made, at the Charge " of the City of LONDON, the 15th Year of the " Reign of our Sovereign Lord King Charles II. " and in the Mayoralty of Sir John Robinſon, " Knight and Baronet, Lieutenant of the Tower " of LONDON, and Alderman of this Ward; " Anno Dom. 1663.

THE Rooms over this Gate are ſet a-part for the Water-Bailiff of the City.

ALDERSGATE.

THE next Gate, is Alderſgate; ſo called from its Antiquity, being one of the Four Firſt Gates of the City, and ſerving for the Northern, as Aldgate for the Eaſtern Parts. Theſe, being both very old Gates, are, for Difference ſake, called, one Aldgate, and the other Alderſgate; meaning the Old and the Older Gate.

ALDERSGATE.

The Old Gate.

THIS Gate was antiently, at divers Times, increas'd with Buildings; namely, on the Southſide, a great Frame of Timber was ſet up, containing many large Rooms and Lodgings; and on the Eaſt Side was the Addition of one large Building of Timber, with one large Floor, paved with Stone, or Tile, and a Well therein, curbed with Stone, of a great Depth, and riſing, into the ſaid Room, two Stories high from the Ground. John Day, a famous Printer, dwelling in this Gate, alſo built much upon the Wall of the City, towards the Pariſh Church of St. Anne: But the Gate being very old, and ruinous, and in Danger of falling, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council, order'd it to be taken down, and re-built in a beautiful Manner. Towards this Building, Mr. William Parker, Citizen and Merchant-Taylor, gave a Thouſand Pounds, which Money was paid by his Executor into the Chamber of LONDON, and diſtributed according to the Directions left in his Will; viz. Two Hundred Pounds at the taking down the firſt Tile, which was upon the laſt Day of March, 1617; Two Hundred Pounds more at the laying the Firſt Stone, which was done by the Right Worſhipful Sir William Craven, Knight and Alderman, on Monday the 26th Day of May following; Two Hundred Pounds more when the Building ſhould be one Yard above Ground; another Two Hundred Pounds, when it ſhould be arched over the Gate; and the laſt Two Hundred Pounds, when the Work ſhould be compleatly finiſhed. Mr. Richard Fox, Citizen and Clothworker, a moſt painful and induſtrious Perſon, had the Direction, Ordering, and Over-ſeeing of the ſaid Work.

Ornaments on Alderſgate.

The Ornaments on the Out-ſide of this Gate, are, Firſt, on the North, in a large Square, over the Arch, the Figure of King James I. on Horſeback, whoſe Triumphant Entry into the City of LONDON, was at this Gate, when he came from Scotland, to take Poſſeſſion of the Engliſh Throne, on the Death of that truly glorious Princeſs Queen Elizabeth; and over the aforeſaid Figure, are the Arms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, quartered. On the other Side are two Effigies, viz. on the Eaſt Side the Prophet Jeremiah, with this Text, Chap. xvii. 23. Then ſhall enter into the Gates of this City, Kings and Princes, ſitting upon the Throne of David, riding in Chariots, and on Horſes, they and their Princes, the Men of Judah, and the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem; and this City ſhall remain for ever.

ON the Weſt Side of him, is the Prophet Samuel, with this Text, 1 Samuel, Chap. xii. 1. And Samuel ſaid unto all Iſrael, Behold, I have hearkened unto your Voice, in all that you ſaid unto me, and have made a King over you.

ON the South Side is the Effigies of King James I. ſitting in a Chair of State, in his Royal Robes.

THIS Gate was very much damaged in the Fire of LONDON; but was repaired and beautified at the ſole Charge of the City, in the Year 1670, Sir Samuel Stirling, Knight, being Mayor.

THE Rooms over this Gate, and the Poſtern for Foot Paſſengers, are ſet a-part for the Dwelling of the Common-Cryer of the City, for the Time being.

The POSTERN out of CHRIST'S-HOSPITAL.

THERE is alſo a Poſtern-Gate made out of the Wall, on the North Side of the diſſolved Cloiſter of Fryers Minors, commonly called, from their Habit, Grey Fryers, now Chriſt's-Church and Hoſpital.

THIS Poſtern was made in the Sixth Year of Edward VI. to paſs from the ſaid Hoſpital of Chriſt's-Church, to the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield; and Leave was given to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, to break down ſo much of the City Wall as ſhould ſuffice to make the ſaid Paſſage, by Virtue of an Act of Common-Council, made the firſt of Auguſt, Anno 6 Edward VI. in the Mayoralty of Sir Richard Dobbes, Knight.

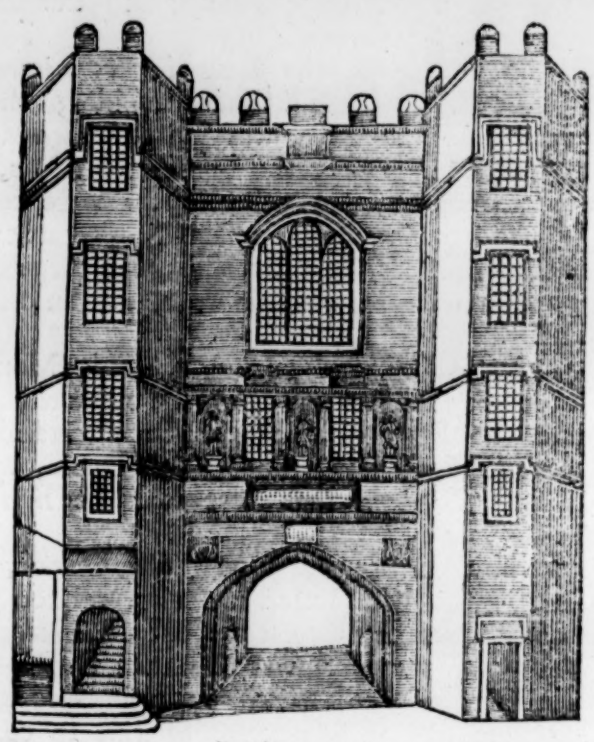
NEWGATE.



NEWGATE.

THE next Gate, on the Weſt and by North, is called Newgate, it being later built than the reſt, and is the Fifth principal Gate of the City: It was Firſt erected about the Reign of Henry I. or Stephen, upon this Occaſion. The Cathedral Church of St. Paul being burnt about the Year 1086, in the Reign of William the Conqueror, Mauritius, then Biſhop of London, did not repair the old Church, as ſome have ſuppoſed, but began the Foundation of a new Work, ſuch as Men, at that Time, imagined would never have been performed, it was to them ſo wonderful, for Heighth, Length, and Breadth; alſo, as it was raiſed on Arches, or Vaults, a Kind of Workmanſhip brought in by the Normans, and never before known to the Engliſh Artificers. After Mauritius, Richard Beaumore did wonderfully advance the Work of the ſaid Church, purchaſing the large Street and Lanes round about, wherein many Lay-Men uſed to dwell, which Grounds he began to encompaſs about with a ſtrong Wall and Gates.

St. Paul's Church burnt, and re-built in the Reign of William the Conqueror.

BY this Increaſe of the Church Territory, but more by incloſing Ground for ſo large a Cœmitery, or Church-yard, the high and large Street from Aldgate in the Eaſt, to Ludgate in the Weſt, was, in this Place, ſo croſſed, and ſtopt up, that the Carriages through the City Weſtward, was forced to paſs without the ſaid Church-yard Wall on the North Side, through Pater-Noſter-Row, and then South down Ave-Mary-Lane; and again Weſt through Bowyer-Row to Ludgate; or elſe, out of Cheapſide, or Watling-Street, to turn South, through the Old-Change, then Weſt thro' Carter-Lane; again North up Creed-Lane, and then South to Ludgate. This Paſſage, having ſo many Turnings, was troubleſome and dangerous both to Horſe and Man; to remedy which, a New Gate was made, and ſo called, by which Men and Cattle, with all Manner of Carriages, might paſs more directly, as before, from Aldgate through Cheapſide, by St. Paul's, on the North Side, through, what was then called, St. Nicholas Shambles, and Newgate-Market, to Newgate; and from thence to any Part Weſtward, over Holborn-Bridge, or, turning without the Gate, into Smithfield, and through Iſlington, to any Part North and by Weſt.

Newgate firſt built.

THIS Gate hath for a long Time been a Jail, or Priſon, for Felons, and other Offenders, as appeareth by Records in the Reign of King John, and other Kings; among which there is one teſtifying, that in the Year 1218, the Third of King Henry III. the King wrote unto the Sheriffs of LONDON,

A Priſon.

Repaired by King Henry III.

LONDON, commanding them to repair the Jail of Newgate for the ſafe-keeping his Priſoners, promiſing, that the Charges laid out ſhould be allowed them upon their Account in the Exchequer.

IN the Year 1241, the Jews of Norwich were hang'd for Circumciſing a Chriſtian Child; their Houſe, called the Thor, was pulled down and deſtroyed; and Aaron, the Son of Abraham, a Jew at LONDON, and other Jews were conſtrained to pay Twenty Thouſand Marks, at two Terms in the Year, or elſe to be kept perpetual Priſoners in Newgate at LONDON, and in other Priſons.

MATTHEW PARIS ſays, This Money was raiſed on the Jews to defray the extraordinary Charge the King had been at, in entertaining Thomas, Earl of Savoy, the Queen's Uncle, who came into England that Year to make him a Viſit.

IN the Year 1255, One John Offrem, a Priſoner, who had killed a Prior, related to the Queen, making his Eſcape out of Newgate, the King [Henry III.] was ſo much diſpleaſed at the City of LONDON, on that Account, that he ſent for the Mayor and Sheriffs to come before him to anſwer for it. The Mayor laid the Fault upon the Sheriffs, to whom the Cuſtody of the Priſoners within the City belonged; the Mayor therefore returned Home, but the Sheriffs remained Priſoners, for a Month or more, in the Tower, where the King then kept his Court; notwithſtanding the Blame chiefly reſted on the Biſhop's Officers, for tho' the Sheriffs had given Leave to impriſon the Offender in the Jail of Newgate, yet they were to ſee him ſafely kept: However, the King demanded a Fine of 3000 Marks of the City.

The Sheriffs of LONDON Priſoners in the Tower for the Eſcape of a Priſoner out of Newgate

The King's Chancellor, Priſoner in Newgate.

IN the Year 1326, Robert Baldocke, the King's Chancellor, was put into Newgate, in the Third Year of Edward III.

IN the Year 1327, Sir John Poultney gave Four Marks a Year for the Relief of Priſoners in Newgate.

IN the Year 1385, William Walworth gave ſomewhat to relieve the Priſoners in Newgate, as many others have done ſince.

IN the Year 1414, The Jailers of Newgate and Ludgate died, and Priſoners in Newgate to the Number of 64.

Newgate new built, Anno 1422.

IN the Year 1422, The Firſt of Henry VI. Leave was given to John Coventre, Jenken Carpenter, and William Grove, Executors to Richard Whittington, to re-edify the Jail of Newgate, which they did with what he had left for that Purpoſe.

THOMAS KNOWLES, Grocer, ſometime Mayor of LONDON, by Licence of Reynold, Prior of St. Bartholomew's in Smithfield, and alſo of John Wakering, Maſter of the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew, and his Brethren, conveyed the Waſte of Water, at the Ciſtern near the common Fountain, and Chapel of St. Nicholas, ſituate by the ſaid Hoſpital, to the Jails of Newgate and Ludgate, for the Relief of the Priſoners.

Water conveyed to Newgate and Ludgate.

ON the Tueſday after Palm-Sunday, in the Year 1431, all the Priſoners of Ludgate were conveyed to Newgate, by Walter Chartſey, and Robert Large, Sheriffs of LONDON; and on the 13th of April, the ſame Sheriff, through the falſe Suggeſtions of John Kingeſell, Jailer of Newgate, led from thence 18 Freemen to the Compters, pinioned as if they had been Felons: But on the 16th of June, Ludgate was again appointed for Freemen, Priſoners for Debt, and the ſame Day the ſaid Freemen enter'd by Appointment of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commons; and by them Henry Deane, Taylor, was made Keeper of Ludgate.

IN the Year 1457, a great Fray was in the North Country, between Sir Thomas Percy, Lord Egremond, and the Earl of Salisbury's Sons, in which many were maimed and ſlain; but in the End the Lord Egremond being taken, was by the King's Council found to be very much in fault, and therefore condemned in great Sums of Money, to be paid to the Earl of Salisbury, and in the mean Time committed to Newgate. Not long after, the Lord Egremond and his Brother, Sir Richard Percy, broke out of Newgate in the Night, and went to the King; the other Priſoners took the Leads of the Gate, and defended it a long while againſt the Sheriffs, and all their Officers, inſomuch that they were forced to call more Aid of the Citizens, whereby, at laſt, they ſubdued them, and laid them in Irons.

THE Eaſt Side of this Gate was began to be repaired in the Year 1630, Sir James Campbell, Kt. being Mayor; and finiſhed the Year following, in the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Drury, Baronet.

THIS Gate is the Common Jail for the County of Middleſex, and was wholly deſtroyed in the Fire of LONDON, Anno 1666; but now rebuilt far more ſtrong, and convenient for that Purpoſe: It hath a Poſtern on the North Side for Foot Paſſengers.

MR. ROBERT DOW, Merchant-Taylor, who died Anno 1612, appointed the Sexton, or Bellman of St. Sepulchre's to pronounce ſolemnly two Exhortations to the Perſons condemned; for which, and for ringing the Paſſing Bell, as they are carried in the Cart by the ſaid Church, he left 26 s. 8 d. yearly for ever.

The EXHORTATION to be pronounced to the condemned Priſoners in Newgate, the Night before their Execution.

" You Priſoners that are within,
" Who for Wickedneſs and Sin,

" After many Mercies ſhewn you, are now appointed to die To-morrow in the Forencon: " Give Ear, and underſtand, that To-morrow " Morning the greateſt Bell of St. Sepulchre's " ſhall toll for you, in Form and Manner of a " Paſſing Bell, as uſed to be tolled for thoſe that " are at the Point of Death, to the End, that all " godly People hearing that Bell, and knowing " it is for you, going to your Deaths, may be ſtirred up heartily, to pray to GOD to beſtow his " Grace and Mercy upon you, whilſt you live; " I beſeech you, for Jeſus Chriſt, his Sake, to " keep this Night in Watching and Prayer, for " the Salvation of your own Souls, while there is " yet Time and Place for Mercy: As knowing " To-morrow you muſt appear before the Judg- " ment-Seat of your Creator, there to give an " Account of all Things done in this Life, and " to ſuffer eternal Torments for your Sins committed " againſt him, unleſs upon your hearty and unfeigned Repentance, you find Mercy, through " the Merits, Death, and Paſſion of your only " Mediator and Advocate, Jeſus Chriſt, who now " ſits at the Right Hand of GOD, to make Interceſſion for as many of you, as penitently return to him.

The ADMONITION to be pronounced to the condemned Criminals, as they paſs by St. Sepulchre's Church-Wall to Execution.

The ADMONITION to the Criminals paſſing to Execution.

" ALL good People, pray heartily unto GOD " for theſe poor Sinners, who are now going to " their Death, for whom this great Bell doth toll.

" YOU, that are condemned to die, repent " with lamentable Tears: Ask Mercy of the " Lord, for the Salvation of your own Souls, " through the Merits, Death, and Paſſion of

" Jeſus

" Jeſus Chriſt, who now ſits at the Right Hand " of GOD, to make Interceſſion for as many of " you as penitently return unto him.

Lord have Mercy upon You.
Chriſt have Mercy upon You.
Lord have Mercy upon You.
Chriſt have Mercy upon You.

THE EXHORTATION pronounced in Newgate is never uſed to Murderers; as may be obſerved in the Caſe of Sarah Malcolm, executed in Fleetſtreet, March 7, 1732-3, for the Murder of Mrs, Lydia Duncombe, and her two Maids, Elizabeth Harriſon and Anne Price, in the Temple, who hearing it made to ſome Criminals that were executed two Days before her, deſir'd it might be repeated the Night before ſhe died; but was told, that it was not allowed in Caſes of Murder.

Ornaments on Newgate.

THE Ornaments on this Gate are, on the Weſt Side, three Ranges of Pilaſters, and their Entablatures, of the Tuſcan Order; over the loweſt, is a circular Pediment, and above that, the King's Arms; the other Intercolumns are four Niches, repleniſhed with as many Stone Figures, well carved in full Proportion, one of which repreſenting Liberty, has carved on her Hat, the Word LIBERTAS, and the Figure of a Cat lying at her Feet, alluding to a noted Story of the former Founder of this Gate, Sir Richard Whittington, who is ſaid to have made the Firſt Step to his good Fortune, by the Aſſiſtance of a Cat.

THE Eaſt Side is adorned likewiſe with a Range of Pilaſters, and in three Niches are the Figures of Juſtice, Mercy, and Truth, with this Inſcription under them:

THIS Part of Newgate was begun to be repaired in the Mayoralty of Sir James Campbell, Knight, Anno 1630, and finiſhed in the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Drury, Baronet, April, Anno 1631; and being damnified by the Fire of LONDON, was again repaired in the Mayoralty of Sir George Waterman, Ann. Dom. 1672.

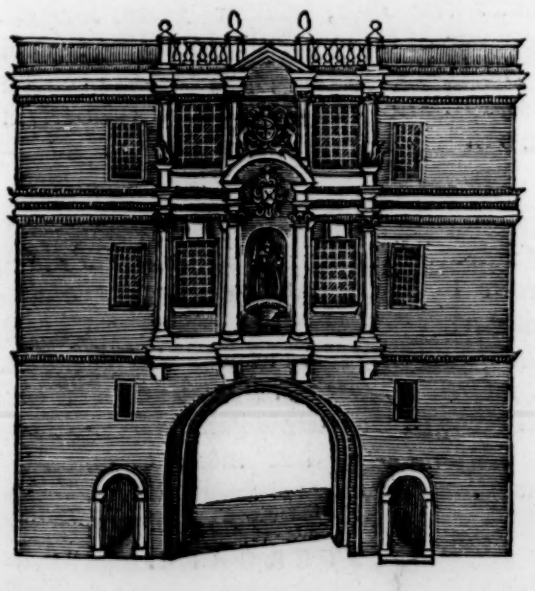
LUDGATE.

LUDGATE.



THE Sixth principal Gate, is, in the Weſt, called Ludgate, being firſt built, as Geffrey of Monmouth ſaith, by King Lud, a Briton, about the Year of Chriſt 66. This Gate is ſuppoſed to be one of the moſt antient; and as Aldgate was built for the Eaſt, ſo was Ludgate for the Weſt.

Ludgate rebuilt.

IN the Year 1215, the 17th of King John, the Barons of the Realm being in Arms againſt the King, enter'd the City, and ſpoiled the Jews Houſes; which being done, Robert Fitzwater, and Geffrey de magna Villa, Earl of Eſſex, and the Earl of Glouceſter, chief Leaders of the Army, applied all Diligence to repair the Gates and Walls of the City, as has been ſaid before, with the Stones of the Jews demoliſhed Houſes: And at that Time rebuilt Ludgate, as, in the Year 1586, when the ſame Gate was taken down to be new built, appeared by a Stone, found in the Wall, which was ſuppoſed to be taken from a Jew's Houſe, having the following Words engraved on it in Hebrew Characters, יצחק: הו מצבהר משה בודרבו, Hæc eſt Statio Rabbi Moſes, Filii inſignis Rabbi Iſaac; i. e. This is the Station or Ward of Rabbi Moſes, the Son of the honourable Rabbi Isaac.

Inſtitut. Part. III. Page 203.

MY Lord Coke takes Notice of this Antiquity; but makes the Date of it older than above, namely, before the 23d of Henry II. Anno 1177; and will not have it to be an Inſcription upon an Houſe, but an Epitaph upon ſome Jew's Grave: And ſhews, from Hovenden, that, before the 23*d* of Henry II. all the Jews were buried within the City of London; but in that Year the King gave them Licence to have a Burying-Place in any City in England, but without the Walls, where they could purchaſe a fit Piece of Ground for that Purpoſe. The Hiſtorian's Words are, Prius enim omnes Judæi Mortui Londonia ferebantur ſepeliendi; but this may be interpreted, that the dead Jews were carried from LONDON to be buried, as well as in LONDON, and perhaps better, that is, at a greater Diſtance, but now they had the Favour to be buried nearer, even in the Suburbs: But be this as it will, that learned Judge was undoubtedly miſtaken in the Hebrew Word מצב, which always ſignifies a Station, as Stow has tranſlated it.

Ludgate repaired.

IN the Year 1260, Ludgate was repaired, and adorned with the Images of Lud, and other Kings, as appeareth by Letters Patents of Licence given to the Citizens of LONDON, to take up Stone for making thoſe Images, dated the 25th of Henry III. Theſe had their Heads ſmitten off, and were otherwiſe much abuſed, in the Reign of Edward the Sixth, by unadviſed Perſons, and ſuch who judged every Image to be an Idol. In the Reign of Queen Mary they were again repaired, and had new Heads ſet to their old Bodies.

New built. Anno 1586.

IN the Year 1586, the 28th of Queen Elizabeth, the Gate, being very much decayed, was quite taken down, and newly and beautifully built, with the Images of Lud and others, on the Eaſt Side, and That of her Majeſty Queen Elizabeth on the Weſt. All which was done at the common Charge of the Citizens, amounting to 1500 l. or upwards.

A Free Priſon.

THIS Gate was made a Free-Priſon, in the Year 1378, the Firſt of Richard II. Nicholas Brembar, being Mayor. The ſame was confirm'd in the Year 1382, John Northampton, Mayor, by a Common-Council in the Guildhall. In which it was ordained, that all Freemen of the City, ſhould, for Debt, Treſpaſſes, Accompts, and Contempts, be impriſoned in Ludgate; and for Treaſons, Felonies, and other criminal Matters, committed to Newgate.

IN the Year 1439, the 10th of King Henry VI. John Wells, being Mayor, a Court of Common-Council eſtabliſhed Ordinances, as William Standon and Robert Chicheley, late Mayors, had done before, concerning the Guard and Government of Ludgate, and other Priſons.

AND in the Year 1463, the Third of Edward IV. Matthew Philip, being Mayor, certain Articles, for the Relief of the Priſoners, were eſtabliſhed in Common-Council, at the Requeſt of Agnes Forſter, the Widow of Stephen Forſter, Fiſhmonger, ſometime Mayor. Imprimis, That the new Works then lately edified by the late Dame Agnes, for the enlarging of the Priſon of Ludgate, from thenceforth ſhould be had and taken as a Part and Parcel of the ſaid Priſon of Ludgate, ſo that both the old and new Work of Ludgate aforeſaid be one Priſon, Jail, Keeping, and Charge for evermore.

THE Quadrant built of Stone by Stephen Forſter, and Agnes, his Wife, contains a large Walking-Place, the Ground 38 Feet and an half in Length, beſides the Thickneſs of the Walls, which are at leaſt 6 Feet. There is a Room of the ſame Size over it for Lodgings, and above that, Leads, for the Priſoners to walk upon, and have the Benefit of the Air. The following Inſcription was formerly engraved in Copper, and fixed in the ſaid Quadrant.

Devout Souls that paſs this Way,
For Stephen Forſter, late Mayor,
Heartily pray,
And Dame Agnes, his Spouſe,
To GOD conſecrate,
That of Pity, this Houſe made
For Londoners in Ludgate.
So that for Lodging and Water,
Priſoners here nought pay,
As their Keepers ſhall all anſwer
At dreadful Dooms-Day.

THIS, and another, with his Arms, being Three broad Arrow-Heads, taken down with the old Gate, Mr. Stow cauſed to be fixed over the Entry of the ſaid Quadrant; but the Verſes, which, indeed, are none of the beſt, even for that Time of Day, being turned inward to the Wall, the like, in Effect, is engraven outward in Proſe, declaring him to be a Fiſhmonger; for ſome on ſo ſlight Grounds, as a Maiden's Head in a Glaſs Window there, had falſely made him a Mercer, who had begged at Ludgate.

ALL the Inſide of this Gate, which was of Timber, was conſumed in the Fire, Anno 1666, and the Stone very much damag'd; but has been ſince built up very ſubſtantially; and hath a convenient Chapel for divine Service; and beautifully repaired. On the Eaſt Side, in three Niches, are ſtill remaining the Effigies of King Lud and his two Sons. And on the Weſt Side, that of Queen Elizabeth, with the Arms of England and France quarter'd over her.

NEXT this, there was a Breach in the Wall of the City, and a Bridge of Timber, where now there is one of Stone, over Fleet-Ditch, right againſt Bridewell.

BESIDES the ſeveral Land-Gates and Poſterns through the Wall, there were ſeveral Watergates.

Water-Gates.

WATERGATES.

MANY of theſe Water-Gates, on the Banks of the River Thames, being purchaſed by private Men, are put to private Uſes, and the old Names of them forgotten; but of the reſt take what followeth:

Black-Fryars. THE Black-Fryars is a free landing Place for all Perſons; where is now a very handſome Set of Stone Stairs, twelve Foot wide, finiſhed in the Mayoralty of Humphry Parſons, Eſq; It is at theſe Stairs, that the Lord Mayor lands every Year on the 29th of October, when he returns from being ſworn at Weſtminſter, attended by the Aldermen, in the City Barge, and ſeveral of the Livery Companies in their reſpective Barges.

Puddle-Wharf THE next, from the Weſt towards the Eaſt, was Puddle-Wharf, ſo called from one Puddle, who kept a Wharf on the Weſt Side of it.

Paul's-Wharf. THE next, Paul's-Wharf, alſo a free landing Place.

Broken-Wharf. THEN Broken-Wharf, and ſome others: But the very principal Watergate of the City was Queen-hith.

QUEEN-HITH,

CALLED Ripa Reginæ, the Queen's Bank; which is a common Strand, or Landing-Place, and much reſorted to by Barges and Lighters, which bring Goods from the Weſtern Parts of the Kingdom; as Corn, Wood, &c. here being a very good Meal-Market kept Weekly. This Place is alſo a great Reſort of the Weſtern Watermen, and is ſtill equal with, but, formerly, far exceeded, Billingſgate, as will be ſhewn in Queen-hith Ward.

DOWNGATE. Downgate.

THE next was Downgate, ſo called, as may be ſuppoſed, from the Steepneſs of the Deſcent from St. John's Church, Walbrook, to the River Thames, whereby the Water in the Channel there, hath ſo ſwift a Courſe, that in the Year 1571, on the 4th of September, after a great Shower of Rain, a Lad of Eighteen Years of Age, going to leap over the Channel, was taken by the Feet, and carried by the Violence of that narrow Stream, towards the Thames, with ſuch Swiftneſs, that no Man could reſcue, or ſtop him, till he came againſt a Cart-Wheel that ſtood in the Watergate; before which Time he was quite drowned. A Lad of Eighteen drowned in the Channel at Downgate.

THIS was ſome Time a large Watergate, frequented by Ships and other Veſſels, like Queen-hith, and was a Part thereof, as doth appear by an Inquiſition made in the 28th Year of Henry III. wherein was found, That as well Corn as Fiſh, and all other Things coming from the Port of Downgate, were to be order'd after the Cuſtoms of the Queen-hith, for the King's Uſe. As alſo that the Corn arriving between the Gate of the Guild-Hall of the Merchants of Cullen, viz. the Still-Yard, which is Eaſt from Downgate; and the Houſe then appertaining to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Weſt from Baynard's-Caſtle, was to be meaſured by the Meaſure, and Meaſurer of the Queen's Soke, or Queenhith. Alſo in the 19th of Edward III. it is ſaid, That Cuſtoms were then to be paid for Ships and other Veſſels reſting at Downgate, as if they rode at Queen-hith.

WOLFSGATE. Wolfsgate, in the Ropary.

THE next after Downgate, was antiently called Wolfsgate, in the Ropary, in the Pariſh of Alhallows the Leſs, in later Times Wolfs-lane; but now out of Uſe; for the lower Part was built on by the Earl of Shrewsbury, and the other ſtopt up, and built on by the Chamberlain of LONDON.

EBGATE. Ebgate.

THE next, Ebgate, ſo called of old Time, as appeareth by the Records of many Tenements adjoining thereto. It ſtood near the Church of St. Laurence Pountney, but was within the Pariſh of St. Martin Ordegare. In the Room of this Gate there is now a narrow Paſſage to the Thames, called Ebgate-Lane, but more commonly the Old-Swan.

OISTERGATE. Oiſtergate.

AT the Bridge-Foot, was a Watergate, called Oiſtergate, from the Oiſters commonly to be ſold there, it being the chief Market for them, and other Shell-Fiſh. In which Place now ſtandeth an Engine for Water to ſerve the City.

BRIDGEGATE. Bridgegate.

THE next was the Bridgegate, ſo called from London-Bridge, whereon it ſtood. This was One of the Four Firſt, and principal Gates of the City, and was ſo long before the Conqueſt, when there was only a Bridge of Timber over the Thames, and is the Seventh and Laſt principal Gate mentioned by W. Fitz-Stephen; but being weakly made, when the Bridge was built with Stone, it was oftentimes in Neceſſity of being being repaired. This Gate, with the Tower upon it, in the Year 1436, fell down, and two of the fartheſt Arches Southward, but no one was hurt thereby. Several large Sums of Money were given to repair it by divers wealthy Citizens; namely, Robert Large, ſometime Mayor, gave a Hundred Marks; Stephen Forſter, 20 l. Sir John Crosby, Alderman, 100 l. &c.

The Bridge-gate burnt.

IN the Year 1471, the Kentiſh Mariners, under the Conduct of Baſtard Fauconbridge, burnt the ſaid Gate, and Thirteen Houſes on the Bridge, beſides the Beer-Houſes in St. Catherine's, and many other in the Suburbs.

BOTOLPHS-GATE.

BOTOLPHSGATE.

THE next was Botolphſgate, ſo called from the Pariſh Church of St. Botolph, adjoining to it. This Gate was given, or confirmed, by William the Conqueror, to the Monks of Weſtminſter, in theſe Words:

"Will. Rex Angliæ, &c. William, King of "England, ſendeth Greeting to the Sheriffs, "and all his Miniſters; as alſo to all his loving "Subjects, French, and Engliſh, of LONDON. "Know ye, that I have granted to GOD, and "St. Peter of Weſtminſter, and to the Abbot "Vitalis, the Gift, which Almundus, of the "Port of St. Botolph, gave them, when he was "there made Monk; that is to ſay, his Lord's "Court, with the Houſes, and one Wharf, "which is at the Head of London-Bridge, and "all other his Lands, which he had in the "ſame City, in ſuch Sort, as King Edward "more beneficially, and amply, granted the "ſame. And I Will, and Command, that they "ſhall enjoy the ſame well and quietly, and "honourably, with Sake and Soke, &c.

BILLINGSGATE.

THE next, Billingſgate, is now uſed as an eſpecial Port, or Harbour, for ſmall Ships and Boats, and more frequented than Queen-hith. What Geffrey of Monmouth, that fabulous Hiſtorian, ſays of Belin, a Britiſh King's Building this Gate, has been before related; but after what has been ſaid by other Writers, concerning Walls and Gates, Mr. Stow is of Opinion, it could not be ſo antient, but that it took its Name from ſome later Owner, named, perhaps, Beling; as Somer's Key, Smart's Key, Freſh Wharf, and others, took their Names from their Owners.

OF this Gate, more will be ſaid in Billingſgate Ward.

Other WATERGATES.

THERE was another Watergate on the Weſt Side Wool-Wharf, or Cuſtomer's Key, commonly called the Water-Gate, being at the South End of Water-Lane.

ANOTHER, by the Bulwark of the Tower, which was the laſt and fartheſt Watergate, Eaſtward on the River Thames, ſo far as the City of LONDON extendeth within the Walls: Both theſe laſt named Water-Gates, were within the Tower Ward.

BESIDES theſe common Watergates, were ſeveral private Wharfs and Keys all along from Eaſt to Weſt, on the Banks of the River Thames, which will be ſpoke of in the Wards adjoining to the ſaid River.

FOR the better keeping theſe Gates, in the Night Time, it was appointed in the Year 1258. by King Henry III. in the Forty Second Year of his Reign, that the Ports of England ſhould be ſtrongly kept, and that the Gates of London ſhould be repaired, and diligently watched in the Night Time, for Fear of French Deceits: Whereof theſe Verſes were written:

Per noctem Portæ clauduntur Londoniarum,
Mœnia ne fortè Fraus frangat Francigenarum.

CHAP. V.

Of the Antient and Preſent State of LONDON, as to Water.

TILL the Time of the Norman Conqueſt, and Two hundred Years after, beſides the famous River Thames, on the South Part, the City of LONDON was water'd with the River of the Wells, as it was then called, on the Weſt; with a Water called Walbrook, running through the midſt of it, into the Thames; and with a fourth Water, or Bourn, which ran within Langborn Ward, watering that Part in the Eaſt. In the Weſt Suburbs was alſo another great Water, called Old-born, which fell into the River of Wells.

Fountains. Wells.

THERE were three principal Fountains, or Wells, in the other Suburbs; viz. Holy-Well, Clement's-Well, and Clark's-Well; near the laſt were divers other Wells, as Skinner's-Well, Fag's-Well, Tode-Well, Loder's-Well, and Lad-Well: All which, having the Fall of their Over-flowings, into the aforeſaid River, much increaſed its Stream, and in that Place gave it the Name of Wells.

Pools.

THERE was a Pool in Weſt-Smithfield, called, in ſome Records, Horſe-Pool; and another near the Pariſh-Church of St. Giles's, without Cripplegate. Beſides all theſe, there were divers Wells and Springs in every Street and Lane of the City, which ſerved it with ſweet and freſh Water; but they being decay'd, other Means have been found out to ſupply the Want of them; as will be ſhewed: But, firſt of the afore-named Rivers, and other Waters.

THAMES.

THAMES, the moſt famous River in the Iſland of Great-Britain, ariſes firſt in a ſmall Spring in the Pariſh of Cubberly, in Glouceſterſhire; afterwards joining the Iſis, near Dorcheſter in Oxfordſhire, and, ſtill increaſing, paſſeth by the Univerſity of Oxford; and ſo on, in an extream quiet Courſe, to LONDON, and thence breaketh into the French Ocean by main Tides; which, twice in four and twenty Hours Space, do ebb and flow more than Sixty Miles in Length, to the great Conveniency of Travellers; and by which all Kinds of Merchandize are eaſily conveyed to LONDON, the chief Store-Houſe, and Staple, of all Commodities, within this Realm. There were, in Mr. Stow's Time, not to mention great Ships, and other Veſſels of Burthen, above two thouſand Wherries, and ſmall Boats, pertaining to the Cities of LONDON and Weſtminſter, and Borough of Southwark, whereby, he ſays, three thouſand poor Men, at leaſt, were ſet on Work, and maintained; but this is far ſhort of what are now employed, employed, the Number of Boats and Wherries on the Thames, within the Lord Mayor's Juriſdiction, being at this Time 5854, and of Lighters and Barges above 1000. And here it is to be noted that all the Boats, Lighters, &c. belonging to the ſame Perſon, have all the ſame Numbers.

THAT the River of the Wells in the Weſt Part of the City, was ſo called in old Time, may be proved from a Charter, granted by William the Conqueror, to the College of St. Martin Le Grand in LONDON, in which are theſe Words. I do give and grant to the ſame Church, all the Land, and the Moore without the Poſtern, which is called Cripplegate, on either Part of the Poſtern; that is to ſay, from the North Corner of the Wall (as the River of the Wells, there near running, departeth the ſame Moore from the Wall) unto the running Water, which entereth the City. This Water hath ſince that Time been called Turnmill-Brook, yet was alſo at that Time called the River of the Wells, which Name continued till the Reign of Edward I. for in a Book of Parliament Records in the Tower, it appeareth, that a Parliament being holden at Carliſle, in the Year 1307, the 35th of Edward I. Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, complained, that whereas, in Times paſt, the Courſe of Water, running at LONDON under Oldborn-Bridge, and Fleet-Bridge, into the Thames, had been of ſuch Breadth and Depth, that Ten or Twelve Ships, Navies at once, with Merchandizes, were wont to come to the aforeſaid Bridge of Fleet, and ſome of them unto Oldborn-Bridge; now the ſame Courſe, by Filth of the Tanners, and ſuch others, was ſore decayed; alſo by raiſing of Wharfs, but eſpecially by a Diverſion of the Water made by them of the New-Temple, for their Mills ſtanding without Baynard's-Caſtle, in the Firſt Year of King John, and by divers other Impediments: So as the ſaid Ships could not enter as they were wont, and as they ought. Wherefore he deſired, that the Mayor of LONDON, with the Sheriffs, and other diſcreet Aldermen, might be appointed to view the Courſe of the ſaid Water; and that by the Oaths of good Men, all the aforeſaid Hindrances might be removed, and it to be made as it was wont of old. Whereupon Roger Le Brabazon, the Conſtable of the Tower, with the Mayor and Sheriffs, were aſſigned to take with them honeſt and diſcreet Men, and to make diligent Search and Enquiry, how the ſaid River was in old Time, and that they leave nothing that may hurt or ſtop it, but keep it in the ſame Eſtate that it was wont to be.

The River of the Wells cleanſed.

WHEREUPON the ſaid River was at that Time cleanſed, the Mills removed, and other Things done for the Preſervation of the Courſe thereof; but was never brought to its old Breadth and Depth, upon which the Name of River ceaſed, and it was afterwards called a Brook; namely, Turnmill or Tremill-Brook, becauſe divers Mills were erected upon it, as appeareth by a Regiſter Book, containing the Foundation of the Priory of Clerkenwel, and Donation of the Lands thereunto belonging; and by divers other Records.

Called Turnmill-Brook.

THIS Brook was afterwards oftentimes cleanſed, and the laſt Time, to any Effect, was in the Year 1502, the Seventeenth of Henry VII. the whole Courſe of Fleet-Dike, as it was then called, was ſcowred down to the Thames. So that Boats with Fiſh and Fewel were rowed to Fleet-Bridge and Oldborn-Bridge, as they were wont, which was a great Conveniency to all the Inhabitants in that Part of the City.

Afterwards Fleet-Dike.

IN the Year 1589, a Fifteenth was granted by a Common-Council of the City, for cleanſing this Brook, or Dike; and the Money collected, amounting to a Thouſand Marks, was employed therein; but to no Purpoſe: It was intended, by drawing ſeveral Springs about Hampſtead-Heath, into one Head, or Courſe, not only to ſupply the City with freſh Water, where it was wanted, but alſo to ſcower the Channel of the ſaid Brook into the River Thames; but by continual Encroachments made on the Banks, and Soilage caſt into the Stream, it ſoon became worſe choaked up than it was before.

THE Running-Water, as it is called by William the Conqueror, in his Charter afore-mentioned, which entered the City, before there was any Ditch between Biſhopſgate, and where Mooregate now ſtandeth, was truly called Walbrook, from the Wall which it entered, and not from Gualo, as ſome have ſuppoſed. It ran through the City, with ſeveral Windings, from the North towards the South, into the River Thames; and had divers Bridges over it, along the Streets and Lanes through which it paſſed. It is ſaid, in an old Book, entitled, The Cuſtoms of LONDON, That the Prior of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, ought to make over Walbrook, in the Ward of Breadſtreet, againſt the Stone Wall of the City, that Bridge which is next the Church of All-Saints, at the Wall. Alſo, That the Prior of the new Hoſpital, St. Mary Spittle, without Biſhopſgate, ought to make the middle Part of another Bridge, next the ſaid Bridge, towards the North; and that in the 28th of Edward I. it was, by Inquiſition, found before the Mayor of LONDON, that the Pariſh of St. Stephen, upon Walbrook, ought of Right to ſcower the Courſe of the ſaid Brook; and the Sheriffs were therefore commanded to ſee that the Pariſhioners did ſo. In the Year 1300, the Keepers of thoſe Bridges, were William Jordan, and John de Bever. Walbrook.

THIS Water-Courſe having divers Bridges, was afterwards vaulted over with Brick, and paved level with the Streets and Lanes, through which it paſſed; and ſince that, Houſes being built thereon, was hid under Ground, and hardly known.

LANGBORN Water, ſo called from the Length thereof, was a great Stream of Water, breaking out of the Ground in Fenchurch-Street, which ran down with a ſwift Current, Weſt, through that Street, croſs Graſs-Street, as it was then called, and down Lombard-Street, to the Weſt End of St. Mary Woolnoth's Church, and then turning its Courſe South, down Shareborne-Lane, ſo named from Shareing or dividing the Borne, it brake into ſeveral Rills into the River Thames. From this Borne, that Ward took its Name, and is to this Day called Langborne Ward. This Borne has alſo been long ſince ſtopt up at the Head, and the reſt of the Courſe filled up, and paved over, ſo that no Sign thereof remaineth more than the Names aforeſaid. Langborn. Sherborn-Lane.

Oldborn, or Holborn, was a Water, iſſuing out about the Place where the Bars now ſtand, which ran down the whole Street to Holborn-Bridge, and into the River of the Wells or Turnmill-Brook. This Borne has been likewiſe long ſince ſtopp'd at the Head; but the Street ſtill retains the ſame Name. Oldborn, or Holborn.

THERE were in the Suburbs near LONDON, Northward, ſeveral Wells, ſweet, wholeſome, and clear, among which the moſt famous were, Holy-Well, and Clark's-Well; which ſaith, Fitz-Stephen, were frequented by Scholars and Youths of the City, in Summer Evenings, when they walked forth to take the Air.

THE

Holywell. THE Firſt, viz. Holywell was in a Place, which is ſtill called Holywell-Street; tho' better known at preſent by the Name of the Back-Side of St. Clement's.

Clement's-well. THE Fountain call'd St. Clement's Well, North of the Pariſh Church of St. Clement's, and near an Inn of Chancery, called Clement's-Inn, was, in Stow's Time, fair and curbed Square with hard Stone, always kept clean for common Uſe, and never wanted Water.

Clerken-well. THE Third was called Clerk's-well, or Clerkenwell, not far from the Weſt End of Clerkenwell Church; which Church took its Name from the Well, as the Well did from the Pariſh Clerks of LONDON, who uſed to aſſemble there, yearly, to act ſome Play, or Hiſtory, taken from Holy Scripture. In the Year 1390, the 14th of Richard II. the Pariſh Clerks of LONDON, played Interludes at Skinner's-well, near Clerk's-well, which continued for three Days, the King, Queen, and many of the Nobility being preſent. Alſo, in the Year 1409, the 14th of Henry IV. they acted a Play at the Skinner's-well, which laſted Eight Days, and was of Matter from the Creation of the World; there were moſt Part of the Nobility and Gentry of England to ſee the ſame.

Skinner's-well. THERE were many other ſmaller Wells near the Clerk's-well, namely Skinner's-well, ſo called, becauſe the Skinners of LONDON, did act there, yearly, Plays from the Holy Scripture; inſtead of which, they had afterwards Wreſtlings, chiefly at Bartholomew-Tide.

Smaller Wells. THERE were alſo Fag's-well, near Smithfield, by the Charter-Houſe, Tode-well, Loder's-well, and Rad-well, all decayed, and ſo filled up, that the Places, where they were, are not now to be diſcerned.

Dame-Annis-the-Clear. NORTH of Holywell, was another, called Dame-Annis-the-Clear; and not far from that, Perilous Pond. but ſomewhat Weſt, another clear Water, called Perilous Pond, becauſe divers Youth, who went to ſwim therein, were drowned.

Horſepool. THERE was a great Water in Smithfield, which, becauſe the Inhabitants in that Part of the City did there water their Horſes, was called Horſepool. The Springs being ſtopp'd, the remaining Part, which was but foul, was incloſed with Brick, and called Smithfield-Pond; but after the Fire of LONDON, was quite filled up.

Pool without Cripplegate. THE Pool near St. Giles's Church, without Cripplegate, was a large Water; for in the Year 1244, Anne of Lodbury was drowned therein; this was ſtopp'd up, but the Spring preſerved, and was cooped about with Stone, by the Executors of Richard Whittington.

THE River of the Wells, the running Water of Walbrook the afore-mentioned Bourns, and other freſh Waters about the City, being, in Proceſs of Time, by Encroachments for Buildings, and other Ways, utterly decayed, and the Number of Citizens very much increaſed, they were forced to ſeek for new Supplies; whereof ſome Anno 1236. were granted to them, and their Succeſſors, at the Requeſt of Henry III. in the 21ſt Year of his Reign, by one Gilbert Sandford, with Liberty to convey Water from the Town of Tyburn, by Pipes of Lead, into the City.

Great Conduit in Weſt-Cheap. THE firſt Ciſtern of Lead, caſtellated with Stone, in the City of LONDON, was called the Great Conduit in Weſt-Cheap, and was begun to be built in the Year 1285, in the Mayoralty of Henry Wales.

Tun in Cornhill. THE Tun in Cornhill was ciſtern'd in the Year 1401, in the Mayoralty of John Chadworth.

The Boſſe of Billingſgate, and others. THE Boſſes of Water at Billingſgate, Paul's Wharf, and St. Giles's Church, without Cripplegate, were made about the Year 1423.

Standard in Weſt-Cheap. WATER was procured for the Standard in Weſt-Cheap, about the Year 1431; which Standard was re-built by the Executors of John Wells, as ſhall be ſhewn in another Place.

Newgate and Ludgate. WATER was conveyed to the Jails of Newgate and Ludgate in the Year 1432.

Money given to repair the Conduits. JOHN POPE, Citizen, and Barber, gave, by his Will, dated May the 11th 1437, a Tenement, which by Right deſcended to him, to the Lord Mayor, Chamberlain, and Commonalty of LONDON, for ever, for the Uſe and Reparation of the Great Conduit, and the other Conduits in the City.

KING HENRY VI. in the Year 1442, granted Licence to John Hatherly, Mayor, to take up two hundred Fodder of Lead to build Conduits, a common Granary, and a new Croſs in Weſt-Cheap, for the Honour of the City.

Little Conduit in Weſt-Cheap. THE Conduit in Weſt-Cheap, by Paul's-Gate, commonly called the Little Conduit, was built about the Year 1442, one thouſand Marks being granted by Common-Council, for building that, and repairing other Conduits. It was alſo began to be repaired after the Fire of LONDON, but not finiſhed.

Aldermanbury Conduit. THE Conduit in Aldermanbury, and the Standard in Fleet-ſtreet, were made and finiſhed by the Executors of Sir William Eaſtfield, in the Year 1471. A Ciſtern was alſo made to the Standard in Fleet-ſtreet, one at Fleet-bridge, and another without Cripplegate, in the Year 1478.

THE Conduit in Gras-ſtreet, 1491.

THE Conduit at Holborn-Croſs, about 1498.

THE little Conduit by Stock's-Market, about 1500.

THE Conduit at Biſhopſgate, about 1513.

THE Conduit at Aldgate without, about 1535; the Water whereof came from Hackney.

THE Conduit in Lothbury, and in Coleman-ſtreet, near the Church, about 1546.

THE Conduit of Thames Water at Dowgate, 1568.

THAT at Holborn Croſs was again new made by Mr. William Lamb, in the Year 1577, and thence called Lamb's Conduit.

THESE Conduits us'd in former Times to be viſited, and particularly on the 18th of September 1562, as Mr. Strype ſays, from a Manuſcript in his Poſſeſſion, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and many worſhipful Perſons, rode to the Conduit Heads to ſee them, according to the old Cuſtom; then they went and hunted a Hare before Dinner, and killed her; and thence went to Dinner at the Head of the Conduit, where a great Number were handſomely entertained by the Chamberlain. After Dinner, they went to Hunt the Fox; there was a great Cry for a Mile, and, at length the Hounds killed him at the End of St. G[illegible]s's, with great hollowing and blowing of Horns at his Death; and thence the Lord Mayor, with all his Company, rode thro' LONDON, to his Place in Lombard-ſtreet.

ALSO from the River Thames many Citizens did ſupply themſelves with Water for their Family Uſes, fetching it by Lanes that led to the Water-ſide in divers Wards of the City: But, in Time, many of theſe Lanes were ſtopt up by thoſe who dwelt thereabouts, for their own Gain, for they would not ſuffer any one to paſs without paying a Duty. This became ſo great a Grievance, that the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, in the 17th of Edward III. receiving Complaints thereof, an Inquiſition was made, and divers Perſons being ſworn to made diligent Enquiry into it, they brought in Preſentments of the Annoyances and Stoppages in the ſeveral Wards.

Thames-Water conveyed into Houſes, by an Engine made, Anno 1582.

Bridge, made by Peter Morrice, a Dutchman, in Queen Elizabeth's Days, in the Year 1582, for the Service of the City on the Eaſt Part thereof. It is done by a Mill, and was the Firſt Water-Work that was made to ſupply the City with Thames-Water. This Water-mill furniſhed the neighbouring Parts of the City only, at firſt, as far as Gracechurch-Street,

THIS Peter Morrice having ſhewn the Mayor and Aldermen an Experiment of his Skill in raiſing Water, by throwing it over St. Magnus's Steeple, which had never been ſeen in England before, was granted by the City, a Leaſe for Five Hundred Years, of the Uſe of the Thames-Water, and the Place where his Mills ſtood, and one of the Arches of London-Bridge, paying Ten Shillings yearly into the Chamber of LONDON, as an Acknowledgment; and two Years after they let him another Arch of the Bridge for Five Hundred Years. This procur'd him a conſiderable Eſtate, and continued in his Family till the Year 1701, when the Owner finding that the New-River undermin'd him, and impair'd his Profits, ſold his Right and Title to Richard Soams, Citizen and Goldſmith of LONDON, for the Sum of 38,000 l. but Soams foreſeeing that he ſhould have Occaſion for another Arch for more Water, Morrice, the better to enable him to go through this great Bargain, petitioned the City for it. Whereupon ſeveral Committees were appointed to examine, whether granting the Fourth Arch (for the Third belonged to a Wharfinger) would not incommode, and be a Stoppage to the River; who bringing in their Report, that it would be no Damage to let the Fourth Arch for this Uſe, it was granted to Morrice, and he added his whole Intereſt in this Grant, as well as his former, to Soams's Bargain.

THE ſaid Soams took a new Leaſe of the City, at 20 Shillings a Year, and 300 Pounds Fine, for ſo many of the Five Hundred Years, ganted to Morrice, as were unexpired. After which he divided the Property of this Leaſe into 300 Shares, and made it a Company; the Price of each Share being ſet at 500 Pounds.

THE Conduits of Thames-Water, near the Pariſh-Church of St. Mary Magdalen, and St. Nicholas Coleabby, near Old Fiſh-Street, were made in the Year 1583.

ANOTHER new Forcier was made near Broken-Wharf, to convey Thames-Water into Houſes in Weſt-Cheap, about St. Paul's, Fleet-ſtreet, &c. by an Engliſh Gentleman, named Bevis Bulman, in the Year 1594.

ANOTHER Conduit was built at Alderſgate, without the Gate, in the Year 1610, and Thames-Water conveyed unto it in Pipes of Wood and Stone, by an Engliſh Gentleman, named Thomas Hayes.

New-River began.

BESIDES all theſe, the famous New-River, brought from Chadwell and Amwell, by the Coſt and Charge of Sir Hugh Middleton, Knight and Baronet, Citizen and Goldſmith of LONDON, deſerveth to be had in eſpecial Remembrance.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, by an Act of Parliament, granted a Liberty to the Citizens of LONDON, to cut and convey a River from any Part of Middleſex, or Hertfordſhire, to the City of LONDON, with a Limitation of Ten Years Time for the Performance thereof: King James I. alſo granted the like Act, but without any limited Time, for the ſame Purpoſe: And when all elſe refuſed, Mr. (afterwards Sir Hugh) Middleton, undertook to bring his intended River from Chadwell and Amwell, near Ware in Hertfordſhire, to the North Side of LONDON, near Iſlington, where he built a large Ciſtern to receive it.

THE Work began on the 20th of February 1608, and in Five Years Space was fully accompliſhed, after great Art, Pains, and Induſtry had been beſtowed in the Paſſage of it, on Account of the Grounds not being all of the like Nature, ſome being owzy and very muddy, others again ſtiff, craggy, and ſtony.

THE Depth of the Trench, in ſome Places, was full Thirty Feet, if not more; whereas in others, it required great Art to mount it over a Valley in a Trough, between two Hills, and the Trough all the while borne up by wooden Arches; ſome of them fixed in the Ground very deep, and riſing above Twenty-three Feet in Heighth. The Channel is narrow, but runs, in a winding Courſe, 60 Miles before it reaches this City, and has 800 Bridges over it.

BEING brought to the intended Ciſtern, but the Water not yet let into it, on Michaelmas-Day, Anno 1613, the Day, on which Sir Thomas Middleton, Knight, Brother to Mr. Hugh Middleton, was choſen Lord-Mayor for the Year enſuing; Sir John Swinerton, the Lord-Mayor, at that Time, accompanied by the Lord-Mayor Elect, Sir Henry Mountague, Recorder of LONDON, and many of the worthy Aldermen, rode to ſee the Ciſtern, and the firſt Iſſuing of the River thereinto; which was performed in the Manner following. Compleated, Anno 1613.

A Company of Labourers, to the Number of Sixty, or more, well cloathed, and wearing Green-Caps, all alike, carrying Spades, Shovels and Pickaxes, marched after Drums twice or thrice about the Ciſtern, and then preſented themſelves before the Mount, where the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and the reſt of the Company ſtood; and one in Behalf of the Reſt, delivered a Speech in Verſe, concluding with theſe Lines,

> Now, for the Fruits; then flow forth precious Spring,
> So long, and dearly ſought for, and now bring > Comfort to all that love thee: Loudly ſing,
> And with thy Chryſtal Murmurs ſtrook together,
> Bid all thy true Well-Wiſhers welcome hither.

AT theſe Words, the Floodgate flew open, and the Stream ran ſwiftly into the Ciſtern, with Drums and Trumpets ſounding, and Guns firing in a triumphant Manner.

SIR HUGH MIDDLETON, with the Aſſiſtance of King James I. and the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, is ſuppoſed to have expended Five hundred thouſand Pounds in bringing this Work to Town: But ſo poorly did it anſwer at firſt, that the Projector was almoſt ruined by it, whereupon the King, who was intitled to a Moiety of the Profits, relinquiſhed his Share, reſerving only 500 Pounds per Ann. out of it: And for above Thirty Years, there were not divided but Five Pounds odd Money to each of the Shares, which are Seventy-two in Number; and are now reckoned to be worth between 4 and 5000 Pounds each.

THE New-River-Company ſupplies, at this Time, above 30,000 Houſes with Water, for they have more than that Number of Tenants, ſeveral of which pay for many Houſes. Their Ciſtern at Iſlington was the laſt Year, viz. 1732, began to be alter'd in a very commodious Manner, as well as the Pipes, through which the Water paſſed into the Streets of LONDON; the old ones, being of Wood, were found to be very inconvenient, by interſecting, and lying upon one another; ſo that when there was Occaſion to mend any one of the lower lower Tire, ſeveral that lay upon them were for a-while render'd as uſeleſs as thoſe; but they are now made all of Lead, and laid Level with each other. This laſt Work, which is compleatly finiſhed, has been more than Ten Thouſand Pounds Expence to the Proprietors.

BEFORE this New-River was brought to Perfection, there was a Propoſal made by one Ruſſel, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, to bring Uxbridge-River to the North Side of LONDON; which Project was again revived in the Year 1641, but rejected by Parliament; and ſomething of the ſame Kind was attempted in his late Majeſty King George the Firſt's Reign, which met with the ſame Fate.

York-Buildings Water-Works.

THE next to the New-River-Water, are the Water-Works of the York-Buildings Company, firſt ſet up in the Reign of King Charles II. which ſupply a great Part of the City of Weſtminſter. Their Engine for raiſing Water by Fire, tho' a moſt ingenious Invention, is now entirely laid aſide, it not being to be work'd, but at a greater Expence than it would anſwer; but the Notice that is taken of it by a very curious Foreign Traveller, Monſ. De la Motraye, in his Third Volume of Travels, we ſhall give our Readers in his own Words, becauſe they do Honour to our Country.

"AFTER ſtaying full Twelve Months at "the Hague, I went to LONDON, on ſome "Buſineſs, where I always met with new Im- "provements made, either in Literature, Ma- "thematicks or Mechanicks, which raiſed my "Admiration; the Engliſh Genius and Ambition "conſtantly aggrandizing, embelliſhing and ren- "dering that City flouriſhing, has brought all "Arts and Sciences to a higher Degree of Per- "fection, than any other Nation whatſoever; "and ſeeing, that there were not a ſufficient "Number of Hydraulick Machines on the Banks "of the River Thames, to ſupply this large City, "which is the Richeſt and moſt Populous of all "Europe, with Water, invented one more, by "which one Element is made ſubſervient to the "Inhabitants by another, which is wonderfully "performed by the Force of Fire. This En- "gine is placed on the Banks of the Thames, "and diſtributes the Water through the Pipes "which are for that Purpoſe, and conveys it in "a commodious Manner into all the Kitchens "and Brewhouſes of LONDON; thus re- "ſembling the Function of the Veins and Arte- "ries of a human Body, through which the Blood "circulates.

"THE Inhabitants, beſides the Advantage "of having Plenty of Water in their Houſes, "at a very cheap Rate, and no Trouble, can, "by the Means of Fire-Plugs and Engines, of "the Engliſh Invention, have Water enough "to extinguiſh any Fire that ſhould happen "in any Part of the Town. This new Ma- "chine is placed at an equal Diſtance from the "Water-Engine at London-Bridge, and that at "Chelſea.

Chelſea Water-works, Anno 1721.

THE next moſt conſiderable Water-Works are thoſe of Chelſea, eſtabliſhed, by Act of Parliament, in the Year 1721. Theſe ſupply a great Number of Houſes in Weſtminſter, and the new Buildings by Hanover-Square, and have a moſt noble Reſervoir, for that Purpoſe, in Hyde-Park.

THERE are ſome others of leſs Conſequence, ſuch as Merchand's Water-works, which ſupply ſome Part of the Strand, St. Martin's-Lane, and Long-Acre:

Hampſtead, Shadwell, Mill-Bank, St. Saviour's, and Broken-Wharf; theſe laſt are bought in by the New-River-Company.

A Part of Weſtminſter was likewiſe ſupplied, not long ſince, by Hyde-Park-Water, but that is now converted into what is called the Serpentine River.

BESIDES theſe Waters brought into the City from abroad, it affords abundance of excellent Springs within itſelf; the Waters whereof are much commended: Particularly, the Pump at St. Martin's Outwitch Church, the Corner of Threadneedle-ſtreet; the Pump near St. Antholin's Church, in Watling-ſtreet; the Pump in St. Paul's-Church-Yard; the Pump in Chriſt's-Hoſpital: At all which Places are Iron Diſhes, chained, for the Uſe of every one who is willing to drink thereof.

AS there were ſeveral Benefactors to the Conduits afore-mentioned, Mr. Stow hath recorded their Names; and we ſhall likewiſe give them to our Readers, thinking it Pity that ſuch Munificence ſhould be buried in Oblivion.

Benefactors towards the Water-Conduits.

IN the Year 1236, certain foreign Merchants of Amiens, Corby, and Nele, for Privileges which they enjoyed in this City, gave a hundred Pounds towards the Charges of conveying Water from the Town of Tyburn.

SIR William Eaſtfield, Mayor 1438, convey'd Water from Tyburn to Fleet-ſtreet, where he began a Conduit, and to Aldermanbury; and from Hightory to Cripplegate.

Robert Large, Mayor 1439, gave to the new Water-Conduits forty Marks, and towards vaulting over Walbrook, near the Pariſh Church of St. Margaret's in Lothbury, two hundred Marks.

William Buck, Taylor, in the Year 1494, towards repairing Conduits, gave a hundred Marks.

DAME Thomaſin, Widow, late Wife to Sir John Percival, Merchant Taylor, Mayor in the Year 1498, gave to the Conduit in Holborn, twenty Marks.

Richard Shore, one of the Sheriffs 1505, gave to the Conduit in Holborn, ten Pounds.

David Woodroofe, Sheriff 1554, gave towards the Conduit at Biſhopſgate, twenty Pounds.

Bernard Randulph, Common-Serjeant of the City 1583, gave to the Water Conduits, nine hundred Pounds.

SINCE the City, by other Means, is ſo plentifully ſupply'd with Water, many of the Conduits have been taken down, becauſe, ſtanding in the midſt of the principal Streets, they were a Hinderance to the Paſſage of Coaches, Carts, and other Carriages.

THOSE taken away, with their Ciſterns, are,

THE great Conduit, called the Tun in Cornhill.
THE Standard in Fleet-ſtreet.
THE great Conduit in Gracechurch-ſtreet.
THE ſmall Conduit in Stock's-Market.
THE Conduit at Dowgate.

AND the Standard, and all the Conduits in Cheapſide. In the Room of the laſt of theſe that was taken away, there was a Petition deliver'd in the Year 1732, to the Court of Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City, for Leave Leave to ſet up an Equeſtrian Statue to the Memory of King William III. but rejected.

SOME Conduits there are ſtill remaining, tho' very little uſed; for what with the ſeveral Springs, the Thames, and New River Waters, there is not a Street in LONDON, but one, or other, of theſe Waters run through it in Pipes under Ground, which either is, or may be, convey'd into every Houſe; ſo that there is not a City in the World ſo well ſerv'd with Water.

THERE are alſo very good Mineral Waters at Pancras, at Iſlington, and under the Garden-wall of Powis-Houſe, on the Backſide of Ormond-ſtreet, which are ſaid to be of great Phyſical Virtue.

CHAP. VI.

Of the RIVER THAMES.

The THAMES. THE famous River of Thames, yielding by Forciers, Conduits, and other Means of Conveyance ſuch ineſtimable Benefit to LONDON, deſerveth to be particularly deſcribed.

THIS River receives its Name from two others, Thame and Iſis, which unite their Streams a little below Dorcheſter in Oxfordſhire. Iſis, the moſt conſiderable Branch, riſes at a Place, called Cubberly, in the Plains of Cotſwold in Glouceſterſhire, where it is ſometimes named Iſis, or the Ouſe; and, by ſome, ignorantly called Thames, even there. It ſoon becomes a conſiderable Stream, and taking its Courſe Eaſtward, receives, a little below Creklade, the Cirne, or Churne, from which the Town of Cirenceſter in Glouceſterſhire takes its Name; from thence it runs North Eaſt, to Lechlade, where, after receiving an infinite Number of ſmall Streams, it unites with the Colne, and here begins to be Navigable; carrying Veſſels of forty or fifty Tons.

Navigable at Lechdale.

IT continues its Courſe almoſt North Eaſt to Oxford, ſuppoſed, by ſome to be called Ouſeford, from this River, which here meeteth the Charwell. From Oxford it runs almoſt South to Abington, and from thence to Dorcheſter, and ſo on to Thame in Oxfordſhire; where, joining a River of that Name, it loſes that of Iſis, or Ouſe, and is called Thameſis all along as it paſſeth. From Thame it goes to Wallingford in Berkſhire, and ſo to Reading in the ſame County; which, in Time paſt, from the Number of Bridges there, was called Pontium. It receives here the River Kenet, which cometh from the Hills that lie Weſt of Marlborough in Wiltſhire; then the Thetis, commonly called the Tide, that cometh from Thetisford. It haſteth thence to Sudlington, otherwiſe called Maidenhead, in Berkſhire, and ſo to Windſor, Eton, and thence to Chertſey in Surrey, where Erkenwald, Biſhop of LONDON, ſome time built a Religious Houſe.

FROM Chertſey it goes directly to Stanes; and receiving another Stream, called the Cole, paſſeth by Weybridge, where Guilford River falleth into it; thence to Shepperton, Walton upon Thames, Sunbury, Hampton Town and Court; Kingſton, called Kingſton upon Thames; Twickenham, Shene, Iſleworth, Sion-houſe, Brentford, or Bregetford, where it meeteth with the Brane, or Brene, another Brook deſcending from Edgeworth. From Brentford, it paſſeth by Mortlake, Putney, and Fulham, where there is a very handſome Bridge, lately built over it, but of this more hereafter; thence by Hammerſmith, Batterſea, Chelſea, and Lambeth, to LONDON.

THIS famous River being thus brought to LONDON, goeth on a-pace to meet the Ocean: The firſt Water it receives is the Brome on Kent Side, Weſt of Greenwich, whoſe Head is Bromis, in Bromley Pariſh; and going thence to Lewiſham, it taketh in a Water from the Eaſt. The next it meets withal is on the Eſſex Side, almoſt againſt Woolwich, and this is the Lee, or Ley. And being paſt that, the Darwent alſo meeteth it on Kent Side, two Miles, and more, below Erith, it riſing at Tunbridge.

THE next River that falleth into the Thames, is Weſt of the Wanie Iſles, a Rill of no great Fame, nor long Courſe; for riſing about Coringham, it runneth not many Miles Eaſt and South, till it falls into the Mouth of this River, which is now deſcribed; and which, laſt of all, cometh to the Medway, a notable River, watering all the South, and South Weſt Parts of Kent.

THE Length of the River Thames, from its Source to the Fall thereof, into the Sea, is at leaſt an Hundred and Eighty Miles; and as it is in its Courſe the longeſt of the three famous Rivers of this Iſle, ſo is it no ways inferior to them in the Abundance of all Kinds of Fiſh, viz. Salmons, Barbels, Trouts, Chevins, Perches, Smelts, Breams, Roches, Daces, Gudgeons, Flounders, Shrimps, Eels, &c. And tho' it ſeems oftentimes to be defrauded, as it were, by the inſatiable Avarice of Fiſhermen, yet is there no Complaint of Want.

Stored with Plenty of Fiſh.

THIS River floweth and filleth all her Channels, twice in every Four and Twenty Hours, which Ebbing and Flowing holdeth on for the Space of 70 Miles within the main Land. It is commonly ſaid, that the Stream or Tide is always higheſt at LONDON, when the Moon exactly toucheth the North Eaſt, and South, or Weſt Points of the Heavens; but this will be ſhewn to be an Error. Theſe Tides alſo differ in their Times, each comeing 24 Minutes later than the other, which wanteth but 12 of a whole Hour in the 24. We likewiſe ſee daily that each Tide is not of equal Heighth and Greatneſs; for at the Full and Change of the Moon, we have the greateſt Floods, and, ſuch is their extraordinary Courſe, that as they diminiſh from their Changes and Fulls unto the firſt and laſt Quarters, ſo afterwards they increaſe again until they come to the Full and Change.

Ebbeth and floweth every twelve Hours, for the Length of ſeventy Miles.

They riſe ſo high ſometimes, when the Wind is at North, or North Eaſt, which bringeth in the Water with more Vehemence, that the Thames overfloweth its Banks near LONDON; which happens eſpecially in the Fulls and Changes of January and February. This Order of Flowing is moſt conſtant, except ſome rough Winds out of the Weſt, or South-Weſt, do keep back, and check check the Stream in its Entrance; as the Eaſt and North-Eaſt haſten its coming in; or ſome extraordinary Accident puts by the uſual Courſe of the Northern Seas, which fill the ſaid River by their natural Return and Flowing.

How often ſoever the Courſe of the Stream happens to be thus diſturbed, yet at two ſeveral Times of the Moon, the Waters return to their natural Courſe and Limits of Time exactly. Polydore Virgil ſaith, That this River is ſeldom increaſed, or rather never overfloweth its Banks, by Land-Floods; but herein he is greatly miſtaken, for the more the River is put by its right Courſe, the more the Water muſt of Neceſſity ſwell with the white Waters, which run down from the Land; becauſe the Paſſage cannot be ſo ſwift and ready in the Winding, as in the ſtrait Courſe.

The Land Floods alſo very much ſtain the Fineneſs of the Stream, which is otherwiſe very clear of itſelf, and next unto the Water of the Sea, which is as much more ſubtle and pure than any other, as great Rivers are in Compariſon to ſmall Brooks; although Ariſtotle will have the Salt-water to be the moſt groſs, becauſe a Ship will bear a greater Burthen on the Sea, than on freſh Water, and an Egg ſinks in this, that ſwimmeth in the other: But this may be eaſily anſwered by the Quantity of Space, and Abundance of Waters in the Sea, whereby it becometh of more Force to ſuſtain ſuch Veſſels as are committed to it, and to which the greateſt Rivers are in no Degree comparable.

Now as to the Flux and Reflux of the River Thames, it is a received Opinion, but vulgar Error, that it is High Water at LONDON when the Moon is either upon the South Eaſt, or North Weſt Point of the Heavens; but this general Rule holds only true under the Poles, where the Equinoctial and Horizon are the ſame: And it ſuppoſeth alſo, that the Departure of the Moon from the Sun to be at all Times equal; in both which Reſpects the Rule is defective.

For at LONDON, (which lies in 51 Degrees 30 Minutes of North Latitude) where a South Weſt or North Eaſt Moon makes a full Sea, or High Water, and that is at three of the Clock, which is true, when the Moon is in either of the Equinoctial Signs, Aries, or Libra, or near them, and has no Latitude; yet in the ſame Place when the Moon is in Cancer, having five Degrees of North Latitude, it will be 30 Minutes after ten of the Clock before the Moon will be at North Eaſt, that ſhould be there at Nine of the Clock, by the vulgar Rule, which is an Hour and a half too late: And the ſame Day ſhe will be South Weſt at half an Hour after One, which is an Hour and a half too ſoon.

To correct this Error, and prove the true Time of High Water at London-Bridge, will be beſt performed by knowing the Day of the New or Full Moon, which every Almanack will ſhew; for upon the Day of the New or Full Moon, it will be High Water at London-Bridge, at three of the Clock, and every Day after at ſuch Hours and Minutes as may be ſeen in the following Table.

EXPLANATION of the TABLE.

Reckon how many Days are paſt ſince the laſt New or Full Moon, then look for that Number in the firſt Column of this Table, and right againſt it, in the ſecond, you have the Hour and Minute that it will be High Water at London-Bridge that Day. As for Example, If you look for five Days after the New or Full Moon, right againſt it ſtands ſix Hours and 30 Minutes; and at that Time it will be High Water at London-Bridge: But it muſt be obſerved, that there is a conſiderable Difference between the Spring Tides, and the Neap Tides, in reſpect to Time; for the Neap Tides will be ſometimes an Hour or more ſooner than what is ſhewn in this Table.

There are three Things very remarkable in this River, viz. its Spring Tides, its Overflowing its Banks, and its ſtrange Shifting of Tides at ſome Times. The Spring Tides are higher than ordinary, and happen about every Full or Change of the Moon. The great French Philoſopher, Des Cartes, endeavours to account for this, ſaying, from the Theorique of the Moon, that ſhe moves ſo in her Eliptical Orb about the Earth, that at her Full and Change ſhe comes nearer to the Earth, and in each Quarter goes further from it. Whence, from this Hypotheſis, greater Tides muſt be at the Full and Change, and Neap or Low Tides at the Quarters; which is indeed for the moſt Part true; for without doubt the Moon's Nearneſs at the Full and Change, is the Cauſe of the Spring Tides, as her Diſtance at the Quarters makes the Neap Tides. Spring Tides.

But there is another Thing conſiderable (ſays another Philoſopher, Childrey,) in the Buſineſs which Des Cartes doth not conſider, or it may be, did not know; that is, That the Spring Tides, in our River Thames, come not juſt upon the Full or Change, but two or three Days after, and the like doth the Neap Tides after the Quarters; which is againſt his Hypotheſis. Therefore, to untie this Knot, it may be conceived, that the Cauſe why the Spring Tides are at the higheſt two or three Days after the Full and Change, and not on the very Day, is the ſame with that, why the ſharpeſt pinching Time of Winter comes not juſt in the ſhorteſt Day, when the Sun is at the loweſt with us, but in January, and about four or five Weeks after: Why alſo the coldeſt Time of the Night is not at Midnight, but about Break of Day. Why the hotteſt Time in the Summer is in July, four or five Weeks after the Solſtice; and why the hotteſt Time of the Day is not juſt at Noon, but about two or three of the Clock in the Afternoon.

Overflowing of the Thames.

THE Thames overflowing its Banks proceeds from ſeveral Cauſes. Firſt, from great Rains, by which the freſh Waters raiſe up the River, and going down to the Sea, are ſtopt by the Floods, whence they muſt needs ſwell above their uſual Height. There was a notable Example of this in the Year 1555, when by reaſon of exceſſive Rains that had fallen, all St. George's Fields, in Southwark, the Palace-Yard, and even Weſtminſter-Hall, were overflowed.

Secondly, Inundations of the Thames may be occaſioned by boiſterous North-weſt Winds, which, generally, not only cauſe very great Tides at the Mouth of the Thames, but on the Coaſts of Holland, Flanders, Picardy, and the Shoars of England oppoſite to them: Becauſe that Wind doth blow with equal Force, in the Tide of Flood, at each End of this Iſland, both Weſtwards and Northwards.

Thirdly, There is another Cauſe of greater Tides and Inundations in the Thames, not commonly taken Notice of, which is the Moon's being in her Perigeon, or in that Part of her Orb that is neareſt to the Earth; for if the Spring Tides are made by her coming nearer the Earth at her Full and Change, and her withdrawing farther from the Earth at her Quarters, occaſions the Neap Tides, it muſt follow, that if to the Proximiority which the Moon hath to the Earth, by moving in her Eliptis, there be added that Proximiority which ſhe hath in her Eccentrick, or oppoſite Angles, ſhe ſhould operate ſo much the more extraordinarily upon the Sea, and make the higher Spring Tides at ſuch Full and Change. And, on the contrary, that when ſhe is eſtranged from us by a double Elongation of the Quarter in her Eliptis, and of her Auge in her Eccentrick, ſhe ſhould operate ſo much the more weakly there than ordinarily, and to that Quarter make a ſlack Neap Tide.

Strange Shiftings of the Tides.

IN the Thames, there are, at ſome Times, ſtrange Shiftings of the Tides, which, by ſome, are looked upon as Prodigies, becauſe they happen but ſeldom; yet they are known to proceed from a natural Cauſe, as well as other common Effects. Several of theſe Shiftings have been taken Notice of by Hiſtorians.

I. ON the 12th of October 1411, the Thames flowed thrice in one Day.

II. ON the 17th of September 1550, the Thames flowed and ebbed three Times in nine Hours below the Bridge.

III. ON the 26th of January 1564, at Night, there were two Tides in two Hours at London-Bridge; and likewiſe the next Day there were two in the Morning, and two at Night: And on Sunday the 28th of the ſame Month, two Tides in the Morning, and at Night but one, as it uſed to be, and ſo continued.

IV. ON the 6th of November 1574, in the Morning, there happened two great Tides, the firſt in Courſe, and the other within an Hour after, which overflowed the Marſhes at Lambeth, and many Vaults and Cellars adjoining.

V. ON the 19th of February 1608, when it ſhould have been dead low Water at the Bridge, it was high, and preſently ebbed almoſt half an Hour to a Foot Depth; and then, on a ſudden, flowed almoſt two Feet higher than it did before, and then ebbed again, until it came near to its right Courſe; ſo that the next Flood began almoſt as it ſhould have done: All which happened before twelve of the Clock at Noon, the Weather being indifferent calm.

VI. ON the 6th of February 1609, there was a ſtrange Shifting of the Tides, but the Time is not mentioned.

VII. ON the 3d of January 1622, in the Morning, the Thames ſhifted four Tides in five Hours, two Floods and two Ebbs, and then kept its right Courſe.

VIII. ON the 2d of February 1653, the Thames ebbed and flowed thrice in ſix Hours; and the like Shifting of Tides was obſerved in the maritime Places in Kent, at the ſame Time.

IX. ON the 3d of October 1654, the Thames ebbed and flowed twice in three Hours.

X. ON the 1ſt of November 1660, the Thames ebbed and flowed three Times, between ten of the Clock at Night, and five the next Morning.

IF theſe Shiftings are examined, it will be found that in all of them the Tides were very ſlack, and, in a manner, at the very Neapneſs; and that in all of them, except two, thoſe in 1574, and 1656, the Moon was in Apogæo, about three or four Days before the Shifting, to make them, if poſſible, more ſlack and neap. By the Examples in 1654, and 1660, it looks as if the Cauſe of the Shifting of the Tides, is only the Over-bearing of their Courſe, when at the ſlack, by a North Weſt Wind, which is the moſt powerful Adverſary they can have upon the Engliſh Coaſt; for if a ſlow Ebb be encounter'd full in the Teeth, what can follow but a Return of the Tide? And if the North-weſt Wind, either abates its Fierceneſs, or ſhifts into ſome other Quarter, as the South-weſt, or North-eaſt, for ſome ſhort Time, and then either Return to its former Point, or reſume its former Force, and does thus once, twice, or thrice, (which is uſual at Sea, though its Wanderings are not ſo ſenſible at Land) it may be eaſily believed, ſeeing ſo plain a Reaſon for it, that there will be a Playing of the Tide to and fro, and ſeveral Floods and Ebbs ſucceeding one another in a few Hours. Perhaps this Shifting of the Tides, is the more taken Notice of in the Thames, becauſe of its gentle Ebb to the Sea; yet this is the more eaſily turned, whereas a River of a rapid Current, would prevail over theſe Irregularities.

The Extent of the Lord Mayor, and City's Juriſdiction on the Thames.

THE next Thing to be mentioned of the River Thames, is the Extent of the Lord Mayor's, and City's Juriſdiction thereon, which begins at a Place called Colnie-Ditch, a little above the Bridge of Staines, Weſtward, where is a Stone erected, with the City Arms carved thereon, and called the London-Mark-Stone; from hence it comes to London-Bridge, and from thence reaches to a certain Place called Yendal, otherwiſe Yenland, or Yenleet, and the Waters of Medway. This Authority and Juriſdiction, belongs to the Lord Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, by divers Grants, Charters, and Confirmations, made by the Kings and Queens of England, and by divers Acts of Parliament; and not only the Water of Thames, with the Fiſh therein, belong to the City, but the Soil and Ground under it; being given to them by former Kings, as appearrs from a Writing in Queen Elizabeth's Days, found, as Mr. Strype ſays, among the Manuſcripts of the Lord Treaſurer Burghley, proving the Sea Lands, and Salt Shores, to be the Queen's Property; wherein are theſe Words:

" Alſo for Proof of the Prince's Intereſt in Ri" vers flowing from the Sea, the Thames, and " Conſervation thereof, was not only given to the " City of LONDON; but, by their eſpecial
" Suit, the King gave therewithal the Ground
" and Soil under the ſame: Whereupon, if any
" that hath a Houſe or Land adjoining, do make
" a Strand, Stairs, or ſuch like, they pay forth-
" with a Rent to the City of LONDON,

" how

" how high ſoever they be above the Low-water " Mark. Such is the Prince's Intereſt in all " Rivers that ebb and flow.

NEVERTHELESS, there have been ſome Conteſts betwixt the Lord Mayor, and the Lord High Admiral of England, about it; but after a fair and judicial Trial, in open Court, the Diſpute was determined in Favour of the City; and the Lord Mayor, for the Time being, was adjudged to be Conſervator of the Thames, within the Bounds and Limits aforeſaid, and to have abſolute Power of inflicting Puniſhments for all unlawful Fiſhings, either by Fiſhermen, or others, and for all Abuſe of his Authority: But as his other great Employments with-hold him from attending on this important Buſineſs, ſo much as the urgent Neceſſity of it requires, he hath a Deputy, or Subſtitute, called the Water Bailiff of LONDON, who, under his Authority, and by Virtue of his more abſolute Power, doth continually ſearch, overſee, and puniſh all Offenders, who dare infringe thoſe Rights belonging to ſo famous a River, or make Spoil of what was intended for general Benefit. There were alſo ſome Controverſies about the Rivers Thames and Medway; but all Differences were abſolutely concluded, Anno 1613, Sir John Swinnerton being then Lord Mayor, and Thomas Sparrey, Eſq; his Deputy in that Office.

The Lord Mayor Conſervator of the Thames.

The Water Bailiff, his Deputy.

Tinkermen ſuppreſt.

AND whereas there was a Company of Fiſhermen, called Tinkermen, who with unlawful Nets, and other Devices, made an infinite Deſtruction of the young Brood or Fry of Fiſh, to feed their Hogs; by the diligent and extraordinary Care and Coſt of the Lord Mayor, and the reſt of the Citizens, and by the Vigilance of his Water Bailiff, they were many Years ago ſuppreſt, and a regular and orderly Manner of Fiſhing brought into Uſe, that ſuch Havock may not for the future be made of the young Fry; as alſo ſundry other Abuſes, by unlawful Fiſhing, and ſome annoying Timber in Tilbury Hope, below Graveſend, dangerous to Paſſengers, and deſtructive to the young Brood of Fiſh, and to Fiſhermen's Nets, were, for the general Benefit, reformed. They likewiſe took Care to clear and cleanſe the River Weſtward, of about ſeventy nine Stops, or Hatches, conſiſting of divers great Stakes, and Piles, erected by Fiſhermen for their private Lucre, and ſtanding dangerouſly for Paſſengers; but none of theſe are now left, except ſuch as ſtand out of the paſſable high Stream, that can prejudice none. The like Courſe was kept in the Time of Henry IV. and Henry VIII. There is alſo a watchful Eye that no Carrion, nor dead Carcaſſes be thrown into the River, to pollute, or infect the Stream.

To all theſe Intents and Purpoſes, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, with their Under-Officers, meet eight Times a Year in the four Counties of Middleſex, Surrey, Kent, and Eſſex, and have a judicial Sitting, for Maintenance of the Rights and Privileges of the River; at which Times they have Power to impannel Juries upon Oath, to make Inquiſition after all Offences committed upon the River, within the Extent of their Juriſdiction; and as the Verdict given by the Jury, makes it appear, they proceed to the Puniſhment of the Tranſgreſſors, according to the Nature of the Offence; whereof it may not be improper to give this memorable Inſtance.

A Progreſs of the Lord Mayor to Graveſend, &c. to keep Courts.

SIR John Jolles, Knight, Lord Mayor of the City of LONDON, and Conſervator of the River Thames, and Waters of Medway, aſſiſted and accompanied by five of the Aldermen, one of the Sheriffs, and the Common Serjeant of the City, (in the Abſence of the Recorder,) and attended by the Sub-conſervator, or Water Bailiff, with fifty other Officers and Servants, took their Barges, on Wedneſday the 3d of July, 1616, at Billingſgate, and in a few Hours arrived at Graveſend in Kent, where a Seſſion for Conſervacy of the ſaid River, was kept before the ſaid Lord Mayor, and his Aſſiſtants. At which Time, and Place, a Jury of Freeholders of the ſaid County, being ſworn to enquire of all Offences committed in any Part of that River within the ſaid County, the Common Serjeant delivered them a Charge to this Effect:

" THAT foraſmuch as there had not been " any Seſſion of Conſervacy, in many Years paſt, " kept by any Lord Mayor of LONDON in " that Place, it was probable, that they could " not be well informed, neither of the Lord " Mayor's Juriſdiction and Power, to reform " Annoyances and Offences there, nor of the " Nature of the Service by them to be perform- " ed in the Courſe of their Enquiry: And there- " fore he thought it fit to make known unto " them both the one and the other. And here- " upon he ſhewed them, that the Juriſdiction " of the City of LONDON in the River of " Thames, from Staines Bridge Weſtward, unto " the Points of the River next the Sea Eaſtward, " appeared to belong to the City, in Manner " and Form as followeth; both in Point of " Right, and in Point of Uſage: And then went " over his Arguments.

The Juriſdiction of the City of LONDON, in the River Thames, by Preſcription.

I. FIRST, in Point of Right by Preſcription, as appeareth by an antient Book, called Dunthorne, That Civitatis Fundationis, Ædificationis, et Conſtructionis, Cauſa erat Thameſis Fluvius. Quorum vero, Civitatis et Fluminis Gubernationem, tam Duces, Majores, Cuſtodes, Vicecomites, Aldermanni, et Magnates Civitatis Memoratæ hucuſque obtinuerunt et habuerunt: i.e. The River Thames was the Cauſe of the firſt Founding and Building the City. The Government of which, both City and River, as well the Chiefs, the Mayors, the Keepers, the Sheriffs, the Aldermen, and eminent Men of the ſaid City, hitherto have obtained and held. Whence he inferr'd, that the Government of the River hath belonged to the City Time out of Mind.

IN 21 Henry III. Jordan Coventrie, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, was, by the Mayor and Aldermen, ſent to remove certain Kiddels, that annoyed the Rivers of Thames and Medway, who, ultra Yenland verſus Mare, did take divers Perſons that were Offenders, and impriſoned them; whereupon Complaint being made to King Henry III. he took the Matter ill at the firſt, and ſent for the Lord Mayor and Citizens to Kennington: And upon hearing of the Matter, the City's Juriſdiction on the River was ſet forth and allowed, and the Complainants convicted, and every one of them amerced at 10*l.* and the Amercements adjudged to the City; and their Nets were afterwards burned, by Judgment given by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen in the Huſtings.

IN 37 Henry III. eodem Anno, ante Pentecoſtem, Vicecomites LONDON, quia Aqua Thameſiæ pertinet ad LONDON, per præceptum dict. Dom. Regis, deriverunt omnes alios Gurgites à LONDON, uſq; Mare.

IN 1 Richard II. Writs were directed to the Sheriffs of Kent and Eſſex, reciting the City's Title, with Command, not to ſuffer the Citizens of LONDON to be moleſted, contrary to the Liberties formerly granted and allowed to them.

By Allowance in Eyre.

II. SECONDLY, In Point of Right by Allowance in Eyre, in 41 Henry III. before Hugh Bigot, being Juſtice Itinerant, the Sheriff, and Citizens of LONDON, were called in Queſtion, for their Juriſdiction exerciſed on the Thames. Before whom it was found by a Jury in Southwark, Quod nullus aliquid Juris habet habet in Thameſia, uſque ad novum Gurgitem, niſi Cives LONDON. i. e. That none had any Right and Title in the Thames, as far the new Whirlpool, but the Citizens of LONDON.

IN 14 Edward II. Lib. Antiq. Regum 156. The Conſtable of the Tower was indicted by divers Wards of LONDON, before the Juſtice in Eyre at the Tower. De munerib. et Recep. conc. pro Kiddellis in Thameſiis: Concerning Kiddels ſet in the Thames, which, it ſeems, the Conſtable had received Conſideration for. Et Conſtabularius ad Kiddellos reſpondet, quod Juſtic. non habent Juriſdictionem extra LONDON, placitum, inde cognoſcere, cum prædicti Kiddelli ſunt in aliis Comitatibus; et Juſtic. dixerunt, Aqua Thameſiæ pertinet ad Civitatem LONDON, uſque Mare, et ſi velit reſpondeat. The Sum of which Words ſeems to be this, That the Conſtable anſwer'd, as to the Kiddels, that the Juſtices had not Juriſdiction out of LONDON, and that the aforeſaid Kiddels, were in other Counties: But the Juſtices ſaid, That the Water of the Thames, as far as the Sea, belonged to the City of LONDON, and if he pleaſed, he might bring in his Anſwer; who then pleaded not Guilty.

By CHARTERS.

III. THIRDLY, by Charters.

Charter of King Rich. I.

IN 8 Richard I. Dominus Richardus, Filius Regis Henrici II. conceſſit, et firmiter præcepit, ut omnes Kiddelli qui ſunt in Thameſia, amoveantur, ubicunq; fuerint in Thameſia. That is, Our Lord, Richard the King, Son of Henry II. hath granted, and firmly commanded, That all the Kiddels that are in the Thames be taken away, whereſoever they are in the Thames.

Charter of King John.

IN 1 Johann. Rex conceſſit et firmiter præcepit, ut omnes Kiddelli, qui ſunt in Thameſia, vel in Medway, amoveantur, et ne cæteri Kiddelli alicubi ponantur in Thameſia, vel in Medway, ſuper Forf. x. l. Sterlingorum: That is, the King hath granted and firmly commanded, That all the Kiddels that are in the Thames, or the Medway, be taken away, and that no other Kiddels be placed in the Thames, or the Medway, upon Pain of Forfeiture of x l. Sterling.

Charter of King Henry III.

HE then urged the famous Charter of King Henry III. which ran thus: Henry, by the Grace of God, Kyng of England, Lord of Ireland, Duke of Normandy, and Aquitain, and Earl of Anjou; Unto all Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, Barons, Juſtices, Sheriffs, Stewards, Miniſters, and to all Bailiffs, and to all his true Men, greeting. Wetyth wel, That for the Wele of our Soule, and the Helthe of the Soule of Kynge Johan, oure Fader, and the Soules of our Antceſſours; and alſo for the common Profyt of our Cite of LONDON, and of al oure Realme, We have graunted, and ſtedfaſtly commaunded, that al the Weris that ben in Thamys, or in Medwey by Medwey, where that ever they be in Thamys, or in Medwey, be done awaye. And that from hens forwarde no Weres be ſett in Thamys, nor in Medwey, upon Forfeitour of x l.

ALSO We clayme quyte to oure Citezens of LONDON, al that the Conſtables of our Tour of LONDON, was wont to take of the ſame Weres. Wherefore We wyll, and ſtedfaſtly commaund that no Conſtable of Tour ony Tyme from hens forward ony Thing axe, or ony Graunte do to ony of the ſame Cite, by Encheſon of the ſame Weres. It is knowne in owe to us, and (by) our trewe Men do us to underſtonde, that moſt Prayenge and laſte Profyt myght falle to the ſame Cite, and to al the Realme, by Encheſon of the ſame Weres, which we make for ever firme and ſtable to the ſame Cite, as the Chartour of our Lord, Kyng Johan, our Fader, with our Barons of LONDON thereof have reaſonably wytneſſith. Witnes, Euſtas of LONDON, Peter of Wyncheſter, Joklyn of Bath, Rychard of Salysbury, Biſhops: Hubert of Brough, Erle of Kent, our Juſtice Gylbart of Clare, Erle of Glouceſter, and Hertford; Fitz-Nicol, Rychard of Argentin, our Styward. Gyve by the Hande of our worſhypful Fader, Rauf, Biſhop of Chycheſter, our Chauncelar, at Weſtminſter, the 18*th Day of* Feverell, the Yere of our Regne xi.

THE following is an Extract out of the Charter of LONDON, granted to the City by King Richard II. the ſixth and ſeventh Articles.

Charter of King Rich. II.

IN the lxviiith Article alſo, are theſe Words, And that the ſame Citezens remeve and do away al the Weres in Thamys and Medwey; and that they have the Puniſhmentis thereof longing to us.

LIKEWISE in the lxxiiid Article are theſe Words: And that the Conſtable of the Tower of LONDON make no Preſes by Lond, nor by Water, of Vitayle or ony other Thynges whatſoever they ben, of Men of the forſaid Cite, nor of non other; coming to the Cite, or going out. Nor he ſhall not areſten, be ony maner Way, Shipes nor Botes bryngyng or ledyng Vitayles, or other Marchandyſes to the Cite, or for (fro) the Cite forſaid.

BESIDES theſe he produced, to the aforeſaid Purpoſe, others in this King's Reign, and that of Edward III.

MR. Stripe likewiſe mentions a Record, 2 Edward III. allowing the City's Liberty; whereby alſo the Sheriffs of all the Counties, on which the Thames waſheth, were commanded not to hinder or interrupt the City of LONDON in removing and taking the Kiddels.

By Acts of Parliament.

IV. FOURTHLY, this Juriſdiction belongs to the City, by Acts of Parliament.

WILL. II. Cap. 47. An. 13. Lib. I. No Salmons to be taken from the Nativity of our Lady unto St. Martin's-day, in all Points: Nor any to be taken in Mill-pools, from the midſt of April until Midſummer. The Offence puniſhable, I. by burning the Nets and Engines. II. Impriſonment for a Quarter of a Year. III. For a whole Year.

THE 13 Richard II. Cap. 19. confirms the other; and reſtrains the taking of young Salmons in many Waters, from the midſt of April until Midſummer, upon the ſame Pain.

NONE within that Time to uſe any Nets, called Stalkers, nor any other Engines, by which the Fry may be deſtroyed; upon the ſame Pain.

HE urged likewiſe, 17 Richard II. Cap. 9. and 11 Henry VII. Cap. 15.

IN the fourth Year of the ſaid King's Reign (Henry VII.) an Act of Parliament was made, whereby the Mayor of LONDON was to have the Rule of the River Thames, from Stanes-Bridge to the Water of Yenland.

Killing or taking the young Fry forbid.

IN 1 Elizabeth, Cap. 17. None ſhall with any manner of Net, Weel, Butcayning, Kepper, Lymecreel, Raw Fag-net, Troll-net, Trim-net, Scaleboat, Webliſter, Stutlamete, or with any other Device or Engines, made of Cheare, Woolbine, Canvas; or ſhall, of any heeling Nets, or Trimbleboat, or any Device, Engine, Cautels, Ways or Means whatſoever, heretofore made or deviſed, or hereafter to be made or deviſed, take and kill any young Brood, Spawn, or Fry of Eels, Salmon, Pyke, or Pyckerel, or of any other Fiſh in any Floodgate, Pipe, or the Tail of any Mill, Wear, Weare, or in any Straits, Streams, Brooks, Rivers, Salt or Freſh.

Likewiſe taking Fiſh out of Seaſon: Secondly, None ſhall take and kill any Salmons or Trouts, not being in Seaſon; being Kepper Salmons, or Kepper Trouts, or Shedder Salmons, or Shedder Trouts.

Or not of due Length. Thirdly, None ſhall take and kill any Pyke, or Pyckerel, not being in Length ten Inches Fiſh, or more; nor any Trout, not being eight Inches; nor any Barbel, not being twelve Inches, and more.

What Nets are to be uſed. Fourthly, None to fiſh with any Nets, Trammels, Keep, Weare, Helme Creele, or by any other Engine, Device, Ways or Means, but only with Net or Trammel, whereof every Meſh, or Maſh, ſhall be two Inches and an half broad; Angling excepted.

A Proviſo. That this ſhall not extend to Smelts, Roches, Minoes, Bulheads, Gudgeons, or Eels, in Places where the ſame have been uſed to be taken.

The Penalty. The Offenders to loſe, for every Offence, 20 s. and the Fiſh, and alſo the unlawful Nets, Engines, and Inſtruments.

The Mayor of LONDON (inter alia) ſhall have full Power and Authority by this Act, to enquire of all Offences committed contrary to this Act, by the Oaths of twelve Men, or more; and to hear and determine all and every the ſame.

The Pains and Forfeitures to be to the Uſe of every ſuch Perſon or Perſons, (being no Body Politick nor Corporate, or Head of the ſame) before whom ſuch Conviction ſhall be had; and to the Uſe of every Body Politick and Corporate, that heretofore have lawfully had any Fines, &c. upon ſuch Conviction.

Right by Inquiſition. Fifthly, He proceeds to aſſert the City's Right to the Conſervation of the Thames, and the Waters of Medway, by Inquiſition, whereof theſe were two; one taken at Raynham in Eſſex, the other at Graveſend in Kent, before Sir Willam Cambridge, Grocer, then Lord Mayor of LONDON, 9 Henry V. where it was preſented, "That whereas, by the antient "Ordinances of LONDON, the Meſhes of "Nets ſhould be two Inches in the Fore-part, "and one Inch in the Hinder-part, and it being "found that the Offences, according to the "ſaid Inquiſitions, are contra Libertates & Conſuetudines Civitatis; it was adjudged, that "the Nets ſhould be burned, according to the "antient Cuſtom in that Behalf provided.

By Decree. Sixthly, He goes on further to prove this Right belong'd to the City by Decrees.

In 8 Henry IV. the Mayor, and Aldermen of LONDON, did exhibit their humble Petition to the King's Council, reciting, "That, "Time out of Mind, they have had the Con"ſervation and Correction of the River of "Thames, and of all Trinckes, Nets, and o"ther Gins, whatſoever, in the Rivers of "Thames, and Medway, placed, and have uſed "to make a Sub-Conſervator under them; and "complained, that Alexander Bonner, then Sub"Conſervator, having done his Duty in removing "Kiddels, was evil entreated by the Owners, "the ſame Owners dwelling in Erith, Bratri"ſerry, Barking, Woolwich, and other Places "in the Counties of Kent and Eſſex." And upon hearing of the Matter in Camera Stellata, i. e. the Star-Chamber, they were found Guilty, and conſtrained to ſubmit themſelves to the Lord Mayor, and ordered always to bring their Nets to the Lord Mayor, before they ſhould uſe them. And that the Kiddels then taken, ſhould be at the Diſpoſition of the Lord Mayor; and the Offenders made their Submiſſion accordingly.

By Letters Patents. Seventhly, He proved, by Letters Patent, that a Grant was made by King Edward IV. to the Earl of Pembroke, for Building a Weare in the River of Thames, which Grant was cancelled, at the Requeſt of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, upon ſhewing their Right, for that it was contrary to their antient Liberties; at which Time the City's Title to the then Conſervacy of the Rivers of Thames and Medway, was at large ſet forth, and is recited to have been ſhewn to the Lord Chancellor, and to the Earl, and his Council, and was afterwards allowed, and the Patent thereupon cancelled.

By Proclamation. Eighthly, He re-inforceth the Right of the City by Proclamations, whereof one was made in the Reign of Henry VIII. in the 34th Year of his Reign, in which it is affirmed, that the Lord Mayor, and his Predeceſſors, have had, by divers Grants of the Kings of England, and by Acts of Parliament, and have alſo long enjoyed, the Conſervacy of Thames, without Interruption, or Impediment of the ſaid King Henry VIII. or any of his Subjects: And by the ſame Proclamation it was commanded, That none ſhould reſiſt, deny, or impugn the Lord Mayor, or his Deputy, in doing or executing any thing, for the Conſervacy of the River, and of the Fiſh and Fry within the ſame.

By Report. Ninthly, By Report. For in the Controverſy betwixt the Lord High Admiral and the Lord Mayor, for meaſuring Coals, and other Things, upon the Thames, it then fell into Debate, to whom the Conſervacy of the ſaid River did belong; which Cauſe was referred by Queen Elizabeth's Council of State, Anno 1597, to the Attorney and Sollicitor-General, who jointly certified, among other Things, that the Conſervacy of the River Thames, did, and ought to belong to the City of LONDON.

By Quo Warranto. Tenthly, By Quo Warranto. For in the 3d Jacobi Regis, à Quo Warranto, being brought againſt the City in the Exchequer, to know by what Title they claimed the Conſervacy of the River of Thames, and of the Waters of Medway; the City made their Title to the ſame by antient Preſcription, and Judgment was given for them.

And all this ſpoken for Proof of the City's Right.

By Uſage. He went on next, to confirm the Right of the City by Proof of Uſage; ſhewing, that the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, have, Time out of Mind, made Ordinances, concerning the good Government of the River Thames, for the Times and Manner of Fiſhing below London-Bridge, Eaſtward, to be obſerved upon Pains. And it appeareth, That from Time to Time, from the Time of King Henry III. and ſo downward, the Lord Mayor hath removed Kiddels, Weares, Trinkes, and other unlawful Engines, and hath reformed the Diſorders of ſuch as have offended in the River Thames, and puniſhed Offenders, ſometimes by Impriſonment, ſometimes by Fine, and by burning their unlawful Nets.

By Writs and Precepts. The Right of the City appears alſo by Writs and Precepts; for in the 9th of Henry V. Precepts were iſſued under the Teſte of the Lord Mayor, to the Sheriffs of Kent and Eſſex, for the Returning Juries before the Lord Mayor, to enquire of Offences done in the River Thames.

By Accompts. By Accompts in the Office of the Chamberlains of LONDON, from the 17th of Richard II. to the 11th of Elizabethæ Reginæ, it appeareth, That the Water-Bailiff of LONDON hath made Search for unlawful Nets in the Waters of Thames and Medway.

By Commiſſions. In the 9th of Henry V. Commiſſion was given to the Lord Mayor, to put in Execution the Acts of Parliament, made for the Conſervacy of the Waters of Thames and Medway, and to enquire of all Offences, made, or done, in the ſaid Waters, and to puniſh the Delinquents for the ſame.

A like Commiſſion in the 3d of Hen. VI.

A like Commiſſion in the 1ſt of Eliz.

A like Commiſſion in the 1ſt of Jac.

AND all theſe, or the like Commiſſions, in this Caſe, were, and are directed to the Lord Mayor for the Time being.

By continual Claim.

The City's Right confirm'd by King James I.

IN the Letters Patents granted by King James I. in the third Year of his Reign, the City's Title to the Conſervacy of the River Thames, and Waters of Medway, is recited, and ſet down at large; and as the City had been interrupted in that Office, to take away all Controverſy in this Behalf, and to remove all Doubt, the King did by thoſe Letters Patents, Grant, Ratify, and Confirm, to the City of LONDON, the Conſervacy of the ſaid River Thames, and Waters of Medway.

The Office of Conſervator.

THE Office of Conſervator of ſo noble a River, is of great Extent; for he is to preſerve the Currency of the Stream, and the Banks on both Sides: For, by the Laws, all Navigable Rivers are the High Streams of the King, for the Paſſage of Ships, Boats, &c. as the High-Way is Via Regia, for the People to paſs by.

HE is likewiſe to preſerve the Fiſh and Fry, within the ſame; to enquire after any Fiſhermen, or others, who uſe any unlawful Nets, or Engines; or Fiſh at prohibited Seaſons.

AND to prevent the Erection of any Weares, Kiddels, or Engines, and the Driving in of any Poſts, Piles, or Stakes, which may in any Sort hinder the Stream, or Navigation; and to pull them up, if already done, and puniſh the Offenders: Alſo to prevent all Incroachments upon the River, and the Banks thereof, and to enquire of all Bridges, Flood-Gates, Mill-Dams, and ſuch like Annoyances, and if any have caſt any Soil, Duſt, Rubbiſh, or other Filth into it.

THE following are two Acts, one of Parliament, the other of Common-Council, for preſerving its Banks, and preventing Breaches.

Mills erected on the Thames, by the Bridge to grind Corn.

ABOUT the Year 1588, certain Mills were erected upon the River Thames, near the Bridge, to grind Corn for the better ſupplying of the City, which had for ſome Years paſt ſuffered very much, by reaſon of Dearth, and Scarcity of Corn, and that encreaſed greatly for ſome Number of Miles about the City, on Account of the Difficulty of grinding Corn for the Relief of the Poor. Therefore, in the Month of March, 1588, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City, petitioned the Queen, that they might erect four Corn-Mills on the River Thames, under two Roofs near the Bridge, in ſuch Places where it ſhould breed no Annoyance. Whereupon ſeveral of the Council, viz. the Lord Chancellor Hatton, the Earl of Leiceſter, Charles Howard, Baron of Effingham, Sir Francis Knollys, Sir Francis Walſingham, ſent their Letter, April 1, 1588, from the Court at Greenwich to Mr. Rookesby, Maſter of St. Catharine's, Mr. Fanſhaw, Mr. Peter Osborn, Remembrancer of the Exchequer, with this Order, That they ſhould call before them, ſuch as the Mayor and City ſhould appoint to manage the Cauſe, likewiſe ſome of the principal Officers of the Navy, and Maſters of the Trinity-Houſe; and to adviſe them to conſult together, whether the Erection of theſe Mills might be beneficial or inconvenient; and in what Sort and Place it ſhould be thought neceſſary they ſhould be ſet up. That being by them adviſed, the Queen might be moved to grant their Requeſt, if it ſhould be found behoofeful for the City, and not hurtful to the River Thames. The three aboveſaid, at length, returned this Certificate to the Council: That by the Certificate of the principal Officers of the Navy, and the chief Maſters of the Trinity-Houſe, and the eight Maſters and Overſeers of the River, and other the Aſſiſtants of the Company of Watermen, as alſo by their own View and adviſed Conſideration, it was found, That the erecting of the ſaid Mills would not be hurtful, nor prejudicial, to the Thames any Way: And alſo would work Benefit, and no Inconvenience, ſo far forth as hitherto they could ſee and perceive.

The CERTIFICATE of the Maſters and Aſſiſtants of the Trinity-Houſe, was as followeth.

" WHEREAS it hath pleaſed the Lords " of her Majeſty's moſt Honourable " Privy-Council, to direct their Let- " ter to the Worſhipful Mr. Rookesby, Maſter of " St. Catharine's, Mr. Fanſhaw, Mr. Osborn, " Commiſſioners for the Building of certain Mills on " the South Side of Thames, upon the Starlings " above the Bridge: And the Commiſſioners above- " named have ſent for us, the Maſter and Aſſiſtants " of the Trinity-Houſe of Deptforth-Strond in " Kent, that we ſhould make the Survey, whether " the Erecting and Building of thoſe Mills might " be prejudicial or hurtful to the ſaid River. " We whoſe Names are here under-written, with " others, have taken a View of the ſaid Place, " and do find, as far as we can judge and foreſee, " it will not be hurtful, nor prejudicial, to the ſaid " River in any Way. April 4. 1588. IN former Times there ſeems to have been ſeveral Mills upon the Thames; one of which, below Bridge, on Southwark Side, belonged to the Monks of Rocheſter: But theſe are now almoſt all taken away, as every Thing is that may annoy this noble River, which from the Wealth it brings in from all Parts of the World, and the great Convenience of it to the Inhabitants of theſe Cities may be ſaid to be the Radical Moiſture of LONDON; the Advantages of it were very well hinted at in an ingenious Repartee made by the Lord Mayor to King James I. who being diſpleaſed that the City would not lend him a Sum of Money, told the Mayor, and Aldermen, that he would remove his Court, with all the Records of the Tower, and the Courts of Weſtminſter-Hall to another Place, with ſome other Expreſſions, to the like Purpoſe. The Lord Mayor calmly heard all, and at laſt anſwered, Your Majeſty hath Power to do what you pleaſe, and your City of LONDON will obey accordingly; but ſhe humbly deſires that when your Majeſty ſhall remove your Courts, you will pleaſe to leave the Thames behind you her Reign, and another Grant from K. Charles II. are entitled to the Soil, Gravel, and Sand of the River Thames, with the ſole Right of ſupplying all Ships and Veſſels with Ballaſt, at the Rates of 9 d. per Ton, to be paid by all Ships employed in the Coal Trade; 12 d. per Ton, by all other Britiſh Ships; and 1 s. 4 d. per Ton by Foreign Ships; for which Purpoſe they conſtantly employ ſixty Ballaſt Lighters, and 120 Men in their Service, with an Allowance of 4 d. per Ton to the Ballaſt Men, and 2 d. per Ton to the Owners of the Ballaſt Lighters, and apply the Reſidue of the Money received for Ballaſt, after the Charges of Management are paid, to the Maintenance of 93 Alms-houſes, and a great Number of Out-Penſioners, who are poor decayed Seamen, their Widows and Orphans.

Rates paid for Ballaſt.

THE Ballaſt Men before-mentioned, not content with the antient Prices allowed to them, but pretending that the Deepneſs of the River has made their Work more difficult, and the Dearneſs of Proviſions, an Increaſe of Wages neceſſary, and perceiving that the Knowledge of the Buſineſs, in which they are employed, is confined to themſelves, have lately combined together, and inſiſted on 3 d. per Ton more, which they have actually demanded and received to their own Uſe from ſeveral Maſters and Commanders of Ships in Diſobedience to the Orders of the Maſter, Wardens, &c. of the Trinity-Houſe, who, notwithſtanding the Subſcription of the Maſters and Owners of Ships to advance the Prices of Ballaſt, were not warranted to increaſe the accuſtomed Rates, and therefore could not allow greater Wages to the Ballaſt Men, without ſtarving the Poor; and therefore, that the Trade of the Nation might not ſuffer for want of Ballaſt, and the Obſtructions of the River, they petitioned the Parliament in this preſent Seſſion, (1733) for Leave to bring in a Bill, which has already paſt the Houſe of Commons, to empower them to receive larger Prices for Ballaſt, and to make farther Allowance for raiſing and delivering the ſame, and to compel the Ballaſt Men to deliver due Tonnage of Ballaſt to all Maſters of Ships, and ſubject them to proper Regulation and Government.

Rates of Ballaſt raiſed by Act of Parliament, 1733.

WE ſhall next treat of ſome Affairs concerning the Company of Watermen, for the River Thames.

Rules and Orders relating to the Company of Watermen.

BY a Stat. 2 and 3 Phil. and Mar. it was enacted, That at the firſt Court of Aldermen in LONDON, next after the firſt of March, out of the Watermen, betwixt Graveſend and Windſor, eight Overſeers are to be choſen, to keep Order among the reſt.

THAT two Watermen ſhall not carry any, but where one of them hath exerciſed that Profeſſion two Years before that Time, and hath been allowed by the greater Part of the Overſeers, under the known Seal, on Pain to be committed to one of the Compters, by the ſaid Overſeers for a Month, or a leſs Time, as the Offence ſhall deſerve.

THAT no ſingle Man, that is no Houſholder, nor retained as an Apprentice, or as a Servant, for one Year, at leaſt, ſhall exerciſe that Profeſſion betwixt the Places aforeſaid, on Pain of like Puniſhment.

THE Lord Mayor, and Aldermen of LONDON, and the Juſtices of Peace, within the Counties adjoining to the River Thames, upon Complaint of any two of the Overſeers, or of any Waterman's Maſter, have Power, not only to hear and determine any Offence committed againſt this Act, and to enlarge any Waterman unjuſtly puniſhed by the ſaid Overſeers, but likewiſe to puniſh the Overſeers themſelves, in Caſe they unjuſtly puniſh any Perſon, by Colour of this Act.

ALSO, A Wherry, that is not twelve Feet and a half long, and four Feet and a half broad in the Midſhip, and ſufficient to carry two Perſons, on one Side right, ſhall be forfeited; and the King ſhall have one Moiety, and the Informer the other.

AGAIN, That Waterman that withdraws himſelf in Time of Preſſing, (it being proved by two Witneſſes, before the ſaid Mayor, Aldermen, or Juſtices, and two of the ſaid Overſeers) ſhall ſuffer a Fortnight's Impriſonment; and ſhall be prohibited to Row any more upon the Thames, for a Year and a Day after.

ALSO, The Overſeers ſhall not only call the Watermen before them, and direct them, and Regiſter their Names, but likewiſe examine their Boats before they be launched, whether they have due Proportion and Goodneſs, according to this Act; and if the Overſeers refuſe, or neglect their Office, they ſhall forfeit 5 l. between the King and Informer.

ALSO, The Court of Aldermen ſhall Aſſeſs the Fares of Watermen, which being ſubſcribed by two of the Privy-Council, (at leaſt) ſhall be ſet up in Guild-hall, Weſtminſter-hall, &c. and the Waterman that takes more, than according to the Fare ſo aſſeſſed, ſhall, for every ſuch Offence, ſuffer half a Year's Impriſonment, and forfeit 40 s. to be divided as before.

AND by the 1 Jac. I. 16. No Waterman ſhall retain any Servant, or Apprentice, unleſs he himſelf hath been an Apprentice to a Waterman by the Space of five Years before, and not an Apprentice under the Age of eighteen Years, or for leſs Time than ſeven Years, in Pain to forfeit for every ſuch Offence 10 l. to be divided between the King and Proſecutor.

BUT this Act ſhall not reſtrain Watermens Sons, of convenient Growth and Strength, and formerly trained up in Rowing; but that they be allowed to ſerve as Apprentices, and to carry Paſſengers from Place to Place, at the Age of ſixteen Years.

ALSO, That eight Overſeers ſhall Yearly, upon the firſt Day of March, and the firſt Day of September, cauſe openly to be read in the Common-hall, all their Orders, made, or to be made, in Pain that every of them, for every ſuch Default, ſhall forfeit twenty Nobles, to be divided betwixt the King and the Proſecutor.

THE Lord Mayor, for the Time being, may cauſe any Perſon, inhabiting within LONDON, or the Liberties, to be ſummoned to appear before his Lordſhip, upon the Complaint of any Citizen; and for Non-appearance, may grant his Warant to bring ſuch Perſon before him; and hath Power to hear and determine Differences between Party and Party.

IF any Apprentice, or other Perſon, ſhall be carried aboard of Ship, or there detained againſt his Will, the Lord Mayor may ſend his Warrant by his Water Bailiff, and compel the Captain, or Commander, of the Veſſel, to releaſe ſuch Perſon.

BY a late Statute made Anno 11 and 12 Will. III. Cap. 21. For the better Ordering and Governing the Watermen, Wherrymen, and Lightermen, on the River Thames between Graveſend and Windſor, it is enacted, That all Laws in Force touching Watermen and Wherrymen, not thereby altered, or repealed, ſhall be duly put in Execution, under the Penalties therein contained. And that every Lighterman, or Owner, Keeper, or Worker of any Lighter, or other large Craft on the Thames, between Graveſend and Windſor, ſhall be taken to be of the Society, or Company, of Wherrymen and Lightermen, which Wherrymen, Watermen, and Lightermen, are, by the ſaid Act, made a Society, or Company.

AND all ſuch Lightermen, on the River Thames (except Trinity-men, Fiſhermen, Ballaſtmen, Weſtern Barges, and Mill-boats, Chalk Hoys, Faggot and Wood Lighters, and other Craft carrying the ſame) ſhall be regiſter'd in a Book kept by the Company of Watermen and Lightermen, and be liable to the Rules of the ſaid Company.

THAT the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen ſhall yearly elect eight of the beſt Watermen, and three of the beſt Lightermen, at the firſt Court of Aldermen, next after the firſt Day of June, to be Overſeers, and Rulers of the ſaid Wherrymen, &c. who are to maintain good Orders amongſt them, and to cauſe the Names of the Lightermen to be regiſter'd at their Hall, after the 29th Day of June 1700, then coming.

THAT the ſaid Rulers and Aſſiſtants were on the firſt Court Day after the firſt Day of June then next, and ſo yearly, to appoint Watermen of the principal Towns and Stairs between Graveſend and Windſor, to chooſe their Aſſiſtants, not exceeding Sixty, nor leſs than Forty Watermen. And the Lightermen, the firſt of June, then next, and ſo yearly, are to chooſe nine Lightermen, who with the Watermen ſhall be Aſſiſtants of the ſaid Company, for preſerving good Government amongſt them, who on the firſt Day of July yearly, ſhall preſent to the Court of Aldermen, five Watermen, and two Lightermen to be Auditors of the ſaid Company, for auditing the Accompts of the Rulers, &c. And Perſons elected Rulers, Aſſiſtants, or Auditors, refuſing, and not well exerciſing their Places, ſhall forfet 5 l.

THE ſaid Rulers, Auditors, and Aſſiſtants may make Rules with Penalties, for the good Government of their Society, which, firſt approved by the Court of Aldermen, and after, by the Lord Chief Juſtice of either Bench, ſhall be binding.

THAT the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of LONDON, and the Juſtices of Peace, in the Shires next adjoining to the Thames, between Graveſend and Windſor, in their ſeveral Juriſdictions, upon Complaint of the Overſeers and Rulers, ſhall hear and determine Offences, contrary to this Act, and levy the Penalties by Diſtreſs.

THAT Perſons owning, or working any Lighter or Flat Boat, for unlading Goods and Merchandizes from Ships, &c. and regiſtring themſelves and Servants in the ſaid Company's Books, by the 29th of September 1700, were thereby declared Lightermen, and none but ſuch regiſter'd Perſons (beſides free Watermen, then after to be regiſter'd as Lightermen, and ſuch as had ſerved their Time to Lightermen) ſhall keep or work any Lighters under Penalty of 5 l. per Week.

THAT none (except Trinity-men) ſhall row or ply on the ſaid River, &c. in Boats, &c. for carrying Paſſengers for Profit, but ſuch as have ſerved their Time, or are Servants or Apprentices to Watermen, and all the Penalties of this Act ſhall be paid to the ſaid Rulers and Overſeers, for the Uſe of the Poor and Decayed of the ſaid Society.

THAT the Owners, &c. of any Keys, betwixt Hermitage-Bridge and London-Bridge, may uſe their own Lighters, as heretofore, imploying therein qualified Watermen, or Lightermen; and Woodmongers may keep, and work Lighters by themſelves, and Servants for carrying their own Goods only.

THAT Perſons keeping Lay-ſtalls, may carry the Soil as heretofore, and Gardeners may bring to the Markets of LONDON, &c. their Fruit, Herbs, Roots, &c. and carry Soil in their Boats, by their own Servants, as heretofore.

AND that Offences againſt this Act ſhall be proſecuted within 30 Days, and that Perſons proſecuted for any thing done in Purſuance thereof, may plead the General Iſſue, or vouch this Act in Juſtification, and if a Verdict paſs for the Defendant, &c. he ſhall have double Coſts. And that Offenders puniſhed by this Act, ſhall not incurr the Penalty of any other for the ſame Offence.

THAT after the firſt Day of June then next, the ſaid Rulers and Overſeers, Auditors, and Aſſiſtants, on their Court-Days, might appoint Forty Watermen, to ply on every Lord's-Day, between Vauxhall and Limehouſe, for carrying Paſſengers croſs the River at a Penny each, which Watermen ſhall account next Day for the Money to the Rulers, &c. who are to pay them for their Labour, and apply the Overplus to the poor decayed Watermen and Lightermen of the Company, and their Widows.

AND the Waterman neglecting every Monday to pay the whole, ſo earned and received, ſhall forfeit 40 s.

BUT this Act is not to impeach the Right of Charles, late Duke of Richmond and Lenox, Lord of the Manor of Graveſend, his Heirs, Executors, &c. for holding there the Court of the Water-courſe, for the better Government of Barges, Boats, &c. ferrying from Graveſend to LONDON, or of the Perſons owning or working of the ſame, nor prejudice any Liberties, &c. of the Mayor, Jurats, &c. of Graveſend and Milton in Kent, touching the Paſſage, or Ferry, thence to LONDON, or the Government thereof.

NOR to hinder the Watermen of St. Margaret's, Weſtminſter, from plying croſs the Thames from Weſtminſter-Bridge to Stand-Gate, and from the Horſe-ferry to Lambeth-Bridge, on the Lord's Day by Turns, as of late the Monies earned thereby, being applied to the poor decayed Watermen, and their Widows of the ſaid Pariſh of St. Margaret's. And any two Juſtices of the Peace may call the Watermen ſo Working to Account, and cauſe the Monies by them earned to be applied as aforeſaid, which Watermen of St. Margaret's, ſhall chooſe two Stewards and a Clerk, on the 23d of April yearly, and ſhall at a Meeting of their Society, appoint the Watermen, ſo to work in their Turns on the Lord's Day.

E. KNIGHT, Clerk.

HAVING now done with the Laws and Orders made for the Preſervation of this River, and the well governing thoſe who are employed upon it. We come next to a Deſcription of the Pleaſant Towns and Buildings, which are ſeated on the Banks of it, and whatever elſe is worthy Notice, on either Side, in Kent, Eſſex, Middleſex, and Surrey: Beginning, as the Lord Mayor's Juriſdiction does, at Graveſend in Kent, and Tilbury-Fort in Eſſex.

Graveſend.

I. Graveſend, in Kent, being the common landing Place for Strangers and Sea Men, in their Paſſage to LONDON, and the ready Road for France, is well inhabited, and much reſorted to, having a great Number of Inns, Taverns, and other Houſes of Entertainment: Its Markets are on Wedneſdays and Saturdays, which are well furniſhed with Proviſions. It is a Mayor Town, and about 20 Miles from LONDON; the greateſt Part of it was conſumed by Fire in the Year 1727; but was ſoon rebuilt.

AT this Place a Centinel is conſtantly ſet to watch all Ships that paſs, which are obliged to be cleared here, altho' already cleared in the Port of LONDON; upon ſeeing any Ship come down the River, he fires a Gun that ſhe may come to, if ſhe refuſes on the firſt Firing, it is repeated twice more, and if ſhe goes on, he gives a Signal to Tilbury-Fort, which fires a Cannon upon her: Every Ship that does not call, incurs a Penalty.

Tilbury Fort.

II. THE Block-Houſes, called Tilbury-Fort, are, one near Graveſend, in Kent, and the other oppoſite to it, near a ſmall Town, called Tilbury, in Eſſex, which is famous for Queen Elizabeth's going thither to review her Forces, after the Defeat of the Spaniſh Armado, on St. James's Day, in the Year 1588. Theſe Forts are well ſtored with Ammunition and Guns, continually mounted and loaded, ſo that no Ship or Veſſel can come in, or go out, of the River, without their Permiſſion. That on the Eſſex Side is the largeſt, and moſt open, to command Veſſels; and here is always kept a Garriſon of Soldiers for its Security, with a good Tract of Ground walled in.

Greenhith.

III. Greenhith, on the Kentiſh Side, is chiefly noted for its Chalk-Pits; many Hoys and ſmall Veſſels being employed to carry to LONDON, and other Places, the Chalk of which Lime, ſo uſeful in Building, is made.

Grayes.

IV. Grayes, is an indifferent Market-Town, but of ſome Account for Calves and Poultry. A little more Weſtward is a Place called Stone-neſs, which is at the Entrance into that Part of the River called Long-Reach.

Stone-neſs.

Long-Reach.

Dartford-Creek.

V. Dartford-Creek, ſo called from the Town of Dartford, not far from it. This is a handſome, well inhabited Town, being the high Road from LONDON to Rocheſter, Maidſtone, Canterbury, and Dover. By the Help of this Creek, which falleth into the Thames, Corn, and other Commodities are eaſily tranſported from thence to LONDON, which makes its Market, which is on Saturdays, very much reſorted to.

Crayfordneſs.

VI. About a Mile Weſt of Dartford Creek, is Crayfordneſs.

Erith.

VII. Erith is the next Town, which is of no great Account: Over-againſt it, on the Eſſex Side, is a Place called Cold-Harbour.

Cold-Harbour.

Raynham Creek.

Dagenham Creek and Breach.

VIII. Raynham Creek is on the Eſſex Side; as is alſo Dagenham Creek, where not long ſince, was a great Breach, which overflowed ſeveral hundred Acres of Land, and was for a long Time endeavour'd to be ſtopt in vain, the Works, when they had gone a little Way towards it, being frequently blown up by the Tides; till at length it was undertaken and well performed by Capt. Perry. About a Mile and an half more Weſt, is the Halfway-Tree, on the Eſſex Side, and oppoſite to it, in Kent, the Halfway-Houſe, ſo called being ſeated in the Mid-way between LONDON and Graveſend.

Halfway Tree.

Halfway Houſe.

Barking-Creek.

IX. Barking-Creek is next, and two Miles farther, on the ſame Side is a Houſe, ſtanding by itſelf, called the Devil's Houſe.

Devil's Houſe.

Woolwich.

X. Woolwich is the next Town on the Kentiſh Side, it lies low, and is not reckoned very healthy; but, on Account of the Dock, and Royal Navy, is well inhabited, eſpecially by thoſe, who have their Dependence thereon. In this Dock our beſt Ships of War have been built.

Ham-Creek.

XI. Over-againſt Woolwich, on the Eſſex Side, is Ham-Creek.

The River Lee.

ABOUT two Miles more Weſtward, the River Lee, or Ley, which parts the Counties of Eſſex and and Middleſex, falls into the Thames. This pleaſant and uſeful River, which is the largeſt in the County of Hertford, flows along from Hertford and Ware, and ſo by the Counties of Eſſex and Middleſex; waſhing Low-Layton, on the Eaſt, a Village which takes its Name from it, and then by Temple-Mill, Old Ford, and Stratford, Le Bow to the Thames.

Its being brought to LONDON, endeavoured to be prevented.

AN Act of Parliament was made in the Year 1571, the 13th of Queen Elizabeth, for a Cut to be made in this River to bring it to LONDON; but it was not made navigable till the Year 1580, by cleanſing and repairing it as far as Ware, by Order from the Queen, and the Lords of her Council. Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; who poſſeſſed the Manor of Ware-Park, was a great Inſtrument in bringing this to bear, for the more convenient Conveyance of his Goods, &c. to and from LONDON, as well as for the Good of the Publick.

THE Malſters and Farmers, in the Pariſh of Enfield and the Parts thereabouts were very much diſpleas'd at this; becauſe the Carriage of Malt and other Grain by Water to LONDON made them cheaper than could be affored by thoſe who brought them by Land Carriage, and was therefore a Diminution of their Profits. Whereupon the Country People made Cuts in the River to let out the Water, that it might not have Depth enough to bear Barges, hoping thereby to prevent their Paſſage by that River. A Lock at Waltham was attempted to be burnt, of which Complaint being made to the Lord Burghley, he ſent his Letters, on the 1ſt of September 1581, to Sir Henry Cock, Knight, Mr. Fanſhaw, and Mr. Baſh, Gentlemen in thoſe Parts, to enquire into theſe Diſorders committed in the River Lee; and afterwards a Commiſſion of Sewers was iſſued out to ſeveral Gentelmen to examine into theſe Abuſes: And it was found, as appears by a Certificate ſent to the Lord Treaſurer, and the Lord Hunſdon, that a Bank or Place in Enfield-Marſh, call'd the Pipler was twice broken up with Spades and Shovels to let the Water run out of the high Stream in the Night Time. This River Bank was again cut to let out the Water, at another Place in Enfield, called Lotherſey Gate. Another Bank or Jutte, newly made at Suſternford, for narrowing the Water, for the better Paſſage of Boats, was cut up in the Night Time. The Lady Wroth's Old Lock, the Bank there, being firm Ground, was cut up; and being ſtopt divers Times, was broken up again in the Night, commonly by the Men of Enfield. Waltham Lock was attempted to be ſet on fire with Brimſtone, Roſin, and Straw in the Night. A New Bank or Jutte made at Odeyſhelp, at Haliſield-Marſh in Cheſhunt, was alſo cut or broken in the Night.

OTHER Obſtructions have at ſeveral Times been attempted to be made in this River; but as the City are by that, chiefly ſupplied with Bread-Corn and Malt, the Magiſtrates of LONDON have taken eſpecial Care to preſerve the Paſſage of it free.

Iſle of Dogs.

THE next Place to be noted on the Thames is the Iſle of Dogs; a low Marſhy Ground, ſo called, as it is reported, from a Waterman's murdering a Man in this Place who had a Dog with him, which would not leave his Maſter till conſtrained by Hunger to ſwim over to Greenwich, and doing this frequently, it was obſerv'd by the Watermen plying there, who following the Dog, by that Means, diſcover'd the Body of the murder'd Man. Soon after the Dog ſwimming over to Greenwich, ſnarled at a Waterman, who ſat there, and would not be beaten off, which the other Watermen perceiving, and knowing of the Murder, they apprehended this ſtrange Waterman, who confeſs'd the Fact, and was condemned and executed for it.

Greenwich.

XII. OVER-AGAINST the Iſle of Dogs, is Greenwich, a pleaſant Town, well inhabited, and once graced with a ſtately Palace, whoſe Foundation was laid by Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter; out of the Ruins of which, King Charles the Second began a fine Building of Free Stone, but for ſome Reaſons diſcontinued it, and King William the Third, founded an Hoſpital there, for the Encouragement of Seamen, by making Proviſion for them when by Age, Wounds, or other Accidents, they are diſabled from farther Service at Sea, and not in a Condition to maintain themſelves. As alſo for the Widows or Children of ſuch diſabled Seamen and others, that happen to be ſlain or drowned in the King's Service.

Greenwich Hoſpital.

IN Order to which, his Majeſty granted a Parcel of Ground in this Place, containing near nine Acres, with the Royal Palace erected thereon by King Charles the Second, which alone coſt that King 36,000 l. and tho' King William was then engag'd in an expenſive War with France, yet his Majeſty was pleas'd to grant 2000 l. a Year, payable out of the Exchequer towards the re-edifying, perfecting and endowing this Hoſpital, relying for the reſt upon the voluntary Aſſiſtance and Contribution of his well-diſpos'd Subjects. For the receiving of which, as well as for the conſtituting and eſtabliſhing the Foundation of this Hoſpital, and the Framing of Rules and Statutes for the Government thereof, his Majeſty did alſo appoint Commiſſioners. This Commiſſion was renewed and enlarg'd by Queen Anne.

The Park.

JOINING to this Palace, is a ſmall, but pleaſant Park, which was deſigned by M. Le Notre, the famous Frenchman, who plann'd likewiſe St. James's Park. Upon a Hill, about half a Mile from the Houſe, is the Royal Obſervatory, from whence there is a moſt delightful Proſpect; it is inhabited by the Aſtronomical Profeſſor Dr. Edmund Halley.

Deptford.

XIII. The next Town is Deptford, the upper and lower Parts taken together make it very large: The Upper is the beſt inhabited on Account of his Majeſty's Dock and Store-houſes, for Building and Equipping Ships for the Royal Navy; there is likewiſe another Yard for Building Merchant Ships. This Town parts the Counties of Kent and Surrey.

Blackwall.

XIV. The next Place we come to is Blackwall, on the Middleſex Side; where there is a very ſpacious Dock and Yard, for Building and Rigging Ships, belonging to Sir Henry Johnſon.

Limehouſe.

XV. Limehouſe is a populous Place on the ſame Side, where is built a very large new Church, being one of the Fifty, to be erected by Act of Parliament, made in the Reign of Queen Anne.

Rotherhith.

XVI. ON the other Side, in Surrey, is Rotherhith, a populous Place, alſo chiefly inhabited by ſuch, whoſe Dependence is on the Sea.

NEAR this Place is Cuckold's-Point, where there is always a large Pair of Horns fixed to a Pole, the Reaſon of which, neither Mr. Stow, nor any one elſe, has accounted for.

HAVING paſſed through the Bridge, by LONDON, Weſtminſter, Southwark, and Lambeth Palace, which will be more particularly deſcribed, we come next to Vaux-Hall, a Place noted for its Gardens, a great Reſort for young People of Pleaſure in the Summer Seaſon, and made very famous lately, by a new Kind of Entertainment introduced there, after the Italian Manner, called a Ridotto al' Freſco, which is a Midnight Maſquerade in the open Air.

Vauxhall.

XVII. THE next Place is called the Neat-Houſes, chiefly inhabited by Gardeners, who ſupply a great Part of the Town with Kitchen Garden Stuff.

The Neat-Houſes.

XVIII. The next is Chelſea College, a Royal Hoſpital, for the Entertainment of diſabled, or ſuperannuated Officers and Soldiers, which was founded by King Charles II. carry'd on by his Brother, King James II, and perfected by King William III. More of this will be ſaid in the Chapter of Colleges and Hoſpitals. Joining to it, is a Houſe belonging to the Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, firſt Lord of the Treaſury, and Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Chelſea.

THE Town of Chelſea is not large, but has ſeveral well built Houſes in it, and Seats of Noblemen; as the Palace of the Biſhop of Wincheſter; a Houſe belonging to the Duke of Beaufort, and another to the Duke of Ancaſter.

XIX. Batterſea, almoſt over-againſt Chelſea, is a pretty good Town; where are likewiſe many Gardeners, who ſerve LONDON and Weſtminſter with Garden-Stuff. The principal Houſe in this Town, is the Seat of the Right Honourable Walter, Lord Viſcount St. John of Batterſea.

Batterſea.

XX. Putney, alſo ſeated on the Surrey Side, has ſeveral large and good Houſes in it.

Putney.

XXI. Fulham, is on the Middleſex Side; a pretty large Town, with ſome good Houſes in it. Between theſe two laſt mentioned Towns, is a Bridge over the Thames, which was begun to be built, and finiſhed in the Year 1729.

Fulham.

THE Plan of this Undertaking, after ſeveral others had been rejected, was drawn by Mr. Cheſelden, a Gentleman, who in his Profeſſion of Chirurgery, has raiſed his Name to the higheſt Degree of Reputation, and by the Directions he gave in this ſtrong, uſeful, and curious Piece of Architecture, has in a great Meaſure, ſhewn the Affinity there is amongſt the Sciences.

The New Bridge.

UPON the aforeſaid Plan, Mr. Phillips executed the Work, which is, beſides the Brick-Work at each End, 789 Feet long; the largeſt Opening for the Paſſage of Veſſels, is in the Middle, 30 Feet wide; at convenient Diſtances, are two more, 25 Feet wide; and two more, nearer the Shoars, 20 Feet wide; all the reſt are 15 and 10 Feet alternately: Thoſe of 15 are open alſo for the Paſſage of Boats; but thoſe of 10 Feet are only for the Water, which has never any Fall, as at London-Bridge.

THE Width of this Bridge, for the Paſſage of Carriages, is 24 Feet; and oppoſite to each other, at 10 Feet Diſtance, are Works, which look like Baſtions, well braced to each Row of Piles, and which ſerve as Butrices to the Bridge below, and above make Triangular Receſſes for the Paſſengers, as Coaches, Waggons, &c. go by. From this Mechaniſm it happens, that the Rails need none of thoſe Supports called Spandrels, which are always uſed in Wooden-Bridges; and all theſe Advantages ariſe without increaſing the Expence.

ON Putney Side, there is a Terras of 16 Feet, encloſed from the Water by a Wall; and to prevent the Earth from ſhoving it out, there are Arches turned horizontally; a Contrivance effectual for that End, though never uſed before, by which Means this Wall, though the Tide riſes 12 Feet againſt it, has never bent or ſtarted, and can at any Time be taken down, or repaired, without any Inconvenience, either to the Terras or Paſſage.

THE Money for bulding this Bridge, was raiſed by Subſcription, and anſwers ſo well, that the Subſcribers have, at preſent, Nine per Cent. at leaſt for their Money, which is paid them by a Duty called Pontage, ſettled by Act of Parliament. Every Coach and ſix Horſes, that go over it, paying 2 s. Every Coach and Four, 1 s. 6 d. Coach and Two 1 s. Every Waggon, having four Horſes, 1 s. 6 d. Leſs than Four, 1 s. Every Horſe 2 d. and Foot Paſſenger 1 d. on Sundays; and an Half-penny on other Days; this Difference is made, that ſome Satisfaction may be given to the Ferry, which uſed to be there on Sundays. To burn or pull down this Bridge, is Felony, Stat. 19 Geo. I. Cap. 36.

WE are informed that an accurate Account of the Mechaniſm of every Part of it, with Cuts, will ſpeedily be publiſhed by the ingenious Gentleman who deſigned the Plan of it; to which we refer our Readers.

Kingſton.

XXXI. We come next to Kingſton, in Surrey, which is joined to Kingſtonwick in Middleſex, by a Wooden Bridge, that brings great Advantage to the Town; for the conveying Corn, &c. to its Market, very conſiderable for Grain, Poultry, and all Sorts of Proviſions, and is much reſorted unto every Saturday, by Mealmen and Higlers. The Town is large, and well inhabited. It is an antient Corporation, governed by Bailiffs, &c. and enjoyeth large Immunities, being the uſual Place, where one of the Aſſizes for the County is held, and where the Juſtices keep one of their Quarter Seſſions. This Town is of Note, for being the Place, where, upon a Stage in the open Market-place, was ſet the Chair, in which Athelſtan, Ethelred, and Edwin were crowned Kings, and received their Imperial Sceptres; and from thence it is ſaid this Town took its Name of Kingſton, being before called Moreford.

Concerning Locks and Weirs.

TO go farther up this River, we ſhall mention ſomething of the Locks and Wears not ſpoken of before. In the Year 1579, there were 23 Locks, 16 Mills, 16 Flood-gates, and ſeven Wears on this River, between Maidenhead and Oxford. One John Biſhop complained of this to the Lord Treaſurer Burleigh: To whom he ſhewed how by theſe Stoppages of the Water, ſeveral Perſons, to the Number of 15 or 16, had been drowned, and their Goods loſt, in four Years, who all belonged to Barges and Veſſels that uſed the River.

Complaint againſt them.

NOTWITHSTANDING which Complaint, about the Year 1584, or 1585, there were above 70 Locks and Wears. The before-mentioned John Biſhop made Complaint again hereof, to the Lord Treaſurer; and in October 1585, petitioned the Queen, in the Names of the Widows and Fatherleſs Children, whoſe Husbands and Parents had been loſt by theſe Means, ſetting forth, the great Miſchief that was done to her loving Subjects, by the great Number of dangerous Locks Wears, Mills, and Flood-gates, unlawfully erected, and made in, and upon many Places of the River, contrary to the Statutes againſt the ſame, neceſſarily provided. He prayed her Majeſty to command, that this Complaint and a Proof thereof, contained in Writing, and thereunto annexed, might be diligently heard, and examined; and ſuch Order taken as the Neceſſity of the Caſe required. He ſpake of ten Kings who made good Laws againſt theſe Stoppages of the Water in the Thames, viz. Henry III. Edward III. Richard II. Henry IV. Henry V. Henry VI. Edward IV. Henry VII. Henry VIII. Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth.

Reaſons for maintaining them.

THE Perſons concerned in theſe Locks, &c. gave in a Note by way of Petition, to the ſaid Lord Treaſurer, the very Day after this Complaint, ſhewing the Reaſons for maintaining them upon the River; with the Cauſes of the Danger thereof, and ſome Account of the Perſons who were drowned there.

FIRST, That they were of as great Antiquity as the Towns and Villages whereunto they joined, and had as antient Evidence to be ſhewn for them, as any Man hath for any Land he held within the Realm. That they were of great Neceſſity for the Paſſage of Barges, and eſpecially at low Water; for as then, for want of Water, when they lay on the Ground, they had no Help but by ſhutting the ſaid Locks, to ſend down Flaſhes of Water to ſet them on Float, which might otherwiſe lie ſtill for a long Time. That within the Banks and Wears belonging to the Mills, infinite Loads of Chalk and other Rubbiſh were contained, which if they ſhould be looſened, would choak up the Paſſage of the River. That notwithwithſtanding divers and ſundry Laws heretofore made for the Furtherance and Paſſage of Ships, Barges, and other Veſſels; yet were the ſaid Mills, Locks, and Wears within the River of Thames never impeached, as Things repugnant to Law, or offenſive to the Commonwealth, until ſuch Time as one Biſhop began his outrageous Attempts therein. It was alſo to be underſtood, that the Mills, Locks, and Wears within the River, amounting in the whole to the Number of ſeventy or thereabouts, were for part of the Queen's Inheritance: And for the Reſidue, the Inheritance of divers others of her Subjects, the Queen having only a Way, or Paſſage, for her People through the ſaid Locks, and that Marlow Lock, particularly, was well maintained, or better, than ever it was in any Age paſt. And that it was obtained from the Qneen in the Tenth Year of her Reign, and that the ſame was now as well and carefully uſed as ever it was; and ſo fully proved by ſundry Depoſitions, remaining of Record in her Majeſty's Court of Star-Chamber; beſides ſundry other Depoſitions taken before the Commiſſioners of Sewers, as alſo by the ſeveral Decrees made in the Queen's ſaid Court of Star-Chamber.

Secondly, As for the Cauſes why the Paſſage through theſe Locks, were become ſomewhat more perilous than heretofore they were; That the Barges were now of greater Burthen than ever they uſed to be; that they laded them without any Meaſure; that they were in time paſt, wont to unlade Part of their Lading beneath the Lock, when they were to come up, and take it in again above; and namely, when they brought up but ſeven or eight Loads, whereas now of 20 Loads they commonly would not unlade any thing; that they entertain'd People of no Skill, and ſuch as many of them, uſed not that Foreſight that was proper; that many times they would travel up and down ſo late and ſo early, that they could not ſee what they did; that they commonly ſpared neither Sabbath Day or others; beſides much ill Demeanor too long to be recited; and in fine, that there was more likelyhood of Peril in theſe Days than heretofore, in that the Number of Barges within the Time of Memory, were encreas'd from the Number of ten or twelve, to that of fourſcore, or thereabouts.

Laſtly, As to the Perſons drowned at Marlow-Lock within theſe eight Years: One was drowned by manifeſt Negligence, partly by the Barges being over charged with a greater Burthen than ſhould have been: And alſo, that it wanted Waſh-boards on the Sides, as all other Barges commonly had for their Defence; another in Truth was drowned, but not at the Lock; another kill'd by his own Negligence and Folly; another came up the ſaid Lock in the Winter ſo late, as he could not diſcern what he did. That it was no Wonder if they now and then break a Cable, being many Times made of ill Stuff; and their Barges ſo great, and ſo unmeaſurably laden, that in all Ages paſt, ſome now and then, had, by Negligence of Watermen, periſhed, at the ſaid Lock, which next to the Providence of Almighty God, was by the good Foreſight and Proviſion of the Paſſengers chiefly to be avoided, and could not otherwiſe be provided for.

AT another Time, when the like Complaint was made againſt theſe Mills, Locks, and Wears, theſe Things were ſaid and proved, for the Maintenance of them. Firſt, That they were erected and made, and ſo have continued for many hundred Years, without any Challenge, or Interruption. That the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, whereof the laſt was made in the 12 Edw. IV. that relate to the Reformation of Locks and Wears, extend only to ſuch as then were erected, to the Diſturbance of Barges, and other Veſſels. Whereas, at that Time, there was no common Paſſage for Barges, at Marlow, or Byſham, as it was upon ſtrong Preſumption thought. That it was further to be moſt manifeſtly proved, that within the Memory of ſuch as were then living, there was not above the Number of four Barges that paſſed ſo far into the River Thames, as Marlow, or Byſham; and that ſuch as then paſſed, were not above half the Burthen of ſuch as now commonly paſs by the ſaid River; being near about the Number of threeſcore. That it was moſt certain and true, that ſuch inconſiderate People, and namely of the ſaid Bargemen, as wiſhed, or deſired, the Decay, or pulling down the Locks and Wears, deſired therein but their own great Hinderance, or rather undoing; conſidering, that without them, they could not paſs; and that many Times, and eſpecially at low Waters, they were forced to deſire the ſhutting of the ſaid Locks, that Water might be conveyed to remove their Barges, when they were ſet on Ground. That if the ſaid Wears ſhould be pulled down, there were ſuch Quantities of Chalk, and other Rubbiſh therein, as that by the looſing thereof ſuch Hills would grow in many Places, as that a ſmall Boat, in divers Places of the Thames, would hardly paſs. That in Caſe the ſaid Paſſage ſhould be diſturbed, it would not only tend to the great Let and Hinderance of the Queen's Proviſions, and of her City of LONDON, but alſo of divers her Subjects and People. That if any Diſorder were herein, the ſame were to be reformed by the ordinary Proceedings of the Queen's Majeſty's Laws, and not otherwiſe.

AND ſo much for the River Thames.

LONDON-BRIDGE. The antient and preſent State thereof: And of other Bridges in the City.

THE original Foundation of this Bridge over the Thames, commonly called London-Bridge, by the Report of Bartholomew Linſted, the laſt Prior of St. Mary-Overy's Church in Southwark, was this: A Ferry being kept in the Place where now the Bridge is built, the Ferryman and his Wife dying, left the Ferry to their only Daughter, a Maid, named Mary; who, with the Goods left by her Parents, and the Profits of the ſaid Ferry, built a Houſe of Siſters, in the Place where the Eaſt Part of St. Mary-Overy's Church, above the Choir, now ſtands, and where ſhe herſelf lies buried; unto which Houſe ſhe gave the Over-ſight and Profits of the Ferry: But afterwards, that Houſe of Siſters being converted into a College of Prieſts, the Prieſts built the Bridge of Timber, and, from Time to Time, kept the ſame in good Repair; till at length, conſidering the great Charge of Repairing there was, by the Aſſiſtance of the Citizens of LONDON, and others, a Bridge built with Arches of Stone.

The Antiquity of the Timber Bridge.

THE Antiquity of the Timber Bridge is very uncertain; but William of Malmſbury writes, which ſhews it to have been very antient, That, in the Year of our Lord 994, when Sweyn, King of Denmark, beſieged the City of LONDON, both by Land and by Water, the Citizens defended themſelves, and Ethelred their King, ſo manfully, that Part of the Enemy were ſlain in Battle, and Part of them drowned in the River Thames, in their haſty Flight, by not taking Heed of the Bridge.

IN the Year 1016, Canute the Dane, came, with a great Navy, up to LONDON, and cauſed a Trench to be caſt on the South-ſide of Thames, through which his Ships were towed to the Weſt of the Bridge; and then with a deep Trench, and ſtrait Siege, he encompaſſed the City about.

EARL Godwin alſo, in the Year 1052, with a great Navy, took his Courſe up the River Thames, and, finding none offer to reſiſt him on the Bridge, ſailed up by the South-ſide of the ſaid River.

WILLIAM the Conqueror alſo, about the Year 1067, in his Charter to the Church of St. Peter's Weſtminſter, confirmed to the Monks ſerving GOD there, a Gate in LONDON, called Botolph's-Gate, with a Wharf, which was at the Head of London-Bridge.

IT is likewiſe related, that in the Year 1114, the 14th of Henry I. the Thames was ſo dried up, that between the Tower of LONDON and the Bridge, not only Men on Horſeback waded over it, but great Numbers of Men, Women, and Children, on Foot.

IN the Year 1122, the 22d of Henry I. Thomas Arden gave to the Monks of Bermondſey, and the Church of St. George in Southwark, five Shillings yearly Rent, out of the Land appertaining to London-Bridge.

THERE is a Charter under Seal, to the Effect following:

" HENRY, King of England, to " Ralph, Biſhop of Chicheſter, and all the " Miniſters of Suſſex, ſendeth Greeting. " Know ye, &c. That I command, by my Kingly " Authority, that the Manor called Alceſton, " which my Father gave, with other Lands, to " the Abbey of Battel, be free and quiet from " Shires and Hundreds, and all other Cuſtoms " of earthly Servitude, as my Father held the " ſame, moſt freely and quietly; and namely, " from the Work of London-Bridge, and the " Work of the Caſtle at Pevenſey. And this I " command upon my Forfeiture. Witneſs, Wil- " liam de Sontlearche, at Berry.

IN the Year 1136, the 1ſt of King Stephen, a Fire began in the Houſe of one Aileward, near London-ſtone, which conſumed Eaſt to Aldgate, and Weſt to St. Erkenwald's Shrine in St. Paul's Church. The Bridge of Timber over the River Thames was alſo burnt, &c. but afterwards repaired: For Fitz Stephen ſays, That in the Reign of King Stephen, and of Henry II. when Paſtimes were ſhewed on the River Thames, Men ſtood in great Numbers on the Bridge, Wharfs, and Houſes, to behold them.

IN the Year 1163, the ſame Bridge was not only repaired, but new made of Timber, as before, by Peter of Colechurch, Prieſt and Chaplain.

The Stone Bridge begun.

ABOUT the Year 1176, the Stone Bridge over the River Thames, at LONDON, was began to be founded by the aforeſaid Peter of Colechurch, near the Bridge of Timber, but ſomewhat more towards the Weſt; for Botolph Wharf was, in the Conqueror's Time, at the Head of London-Bridge. The King aſſiſted this Work; a Cardinal then being Legate here: And Richard, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, gave one thouſand Marks towards the Foundation. The Courſe of the River (for the Time) was turned another Way about, by a Trench caſt for that Purpoſe, beginning (as it is ſuppoſed) Eaſt about Rotherhith, and ending in the Weſt about Patrickſey, now called Batterſea. This Work having been thirty three Years in building, was, in the Year 1209, finiſhed by the worthy Merchants of LONDON, Serle Mercer, William Almaine, and Benedict Botewrite, principal Maſters of that Work; for Peter of Colechurch died four Years before it was finiſhed, and was buried, in the Chapel built on the ſame Bridge, in the Year 1205.

KING John, in the 7th Year of his Reign, which was in the Year 1205, granted the Cuſtody of London-Bridge to Fryar Weſt.

THE ſame King gave certain void Places in LONDON, to build on; the Profits thereof to remain towards the Charges of Building and Repairing the ſame Bridge. A Maſon being Maſter Workman of the Bridge, built from the Foundation, the large Chapel on that Bridge, at his own proper Charges; which Chapel was dedicated to St. Thomas à Becket, and was then endowed for two Prieſts, four Clerks, &c. beſides Chanteries, ſince founded for John Hatfield, and others: So that in the 23d Year of Henry VI. there were four Chaplains in the ſaid Chapel. After the finiſhing this Chapel, which was the firſt Building upon thoſe Arches, ſundry Houſes, at Times, were erected; and many charitable Men gave Lands, Tenements, or Sums of Money, towards ſupporting them. All which was noted in a Table remaining in the Chapel, till the ſame was turned to a Dwelling-houſe, and then removed to the Bridge Houſe.

One Part of the Revenues of London-Bridge, is a large Quantity of Ground, very improveable, ſituated at Eglingſgate, in the Pariſh of St. Olave's Southwark, near the Thames.

Bridge-Houſe Land at Eglinſgate.

THIS Bridge, in leſs than ſeventy Years after it was firſt finiſhed, became ruinous, and for the Reparation of the ſame, two Ways were made uſe of, one by collecting Alms from well-diſpoſed People, throughout the Kingdom; and the other by laying certain Cuſtoms and Taxes upon Goods and Proviſions, that were brought into the City to be ſold.

IN the 9th of Edward I. Anno Dom. 1280, London-Bridge being in a ruinous Condition, the King gave Licence, de colligend. piis devotorum Subſidiis per totum Regnum; i. e. For gathering the godly Aids of devout People throughout the Kingdom; Pro Reparatione ejuſd. quod minatur ruinam; i. e. For Repairing London-Bridge, threaten'd with Ruin.

THERE are Letters Patent of the ſaid King Edward I. now extant in the Tower Records, exciting all his People to this Work of Charity, to this Effect:

Rex omnibus Ballivis, & Fidelibus ſuis ad quos, &c. Salutem. Dolentibus nobis, &c. That is,

The King, to all his Bailiffs, and Liege Subjects, to whom theſe Preſents ſhall come, greeting.

King Edward I. his Letters Patents, to excite a Contribution to London-Bridge.

"IT hath been lately notified to us, and "grieved us, that London-Bridge is in ſo "ruinous a Condition; to the Repair of "which, unleſs ſpeedy Remedy be put, not "only the ſudden Fall of the Bridge, but alſo "the Deſtruction of innumerable People dwell-"ing on it, may ſuddenly be feared; and that "the Work which may now be helped by ſome "before it fall, may, for Want of Aid, come to "the Expence of a Damage not to be repaired. "Wherefore We, who are bound to take Care of, "and more gently to provide for both the pub-"lick and the private Commodities, and with "Affection to embrace thoſe, whom We per-"ceive to depend upon ſuch Benefits, and them "to defend with Royal Safeguard: We com-"mand and require you, That when the Keep-"ers of the ſaid coſtly Work of the Bridge afore-"ſaid, or their Meſſenger, ſhall happen to come "to you, (being a Thing We take into our "Eſpecial Protection and Defence) to collect "every where, throughout our Realm, Aids to "the ſaid Work, from pious Devotion, friendly "to admit them at the Contemplation of GOD, "and in Regard of Charity, and for Shew of "Devotion on this Behalf: Not bringing on "them, or permitting to be brought, Wrongs, "Moleſtations, Loſs, Hindrance, or Grievance. "And if any Damage be done them, ye make "them Amends without Delay. And when ye "ſhall be required by the preſent Keepers, or "their Meſſengers, to keep the Reparation of "the ſaid Bridge, ye will humbly contribute "ſomewhat of your Goods to the ſaid Work, ac-"cording to your Abilities. And let each of you "endeavour to out-run the other in ſuch great "Works of Charity; for which ye muſt needs "merit from GOD, and gain Thanks of Us. In "Witneſs whereof, &c. Witneſs the King at "Walſingham, the 8th Day of January.

AND there were other Letters Patents to Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Rectors, and all other Miniſters of the Church, commanding them, "That when the Keepers of that coſtly "Work of the Bridge aforeſaid, or their Meſſen-"gers (whom the King took into his ſpecial Pro-"tection) ſhould come to gather, every where "through their Dioceſes, Rectories, &c. or to "any of their Juriſdictions, for the ſaid Work, "the pious Aids of the Devout, to admit them "in the Contemplation of GOD, &c. And to "permit them to excite the People there with "pious Perſuaſions, and charitably to call for "the Helps of their Alms to repair the aforeſaid "Bridge.

AND becauſe theſe voluntary Alms and charitable Benevolences, were not like to bring in the whole Charge of the Buſineſs; therefore, the next Year, viz. 10 Edward I. Anno 1281, the ſame King iſſued out other Letters Patents, for taking Cuſtoms of all Commodities for the ſame in LONDON, and that for a certain Term of Years, which ran thus:

Rex Majori ſuo LONDON. Cum nuper, propter ſubitam, &c.

"WHEN lately, by reaſon of the ſudden "Ruin of London-Bridge, We com-"manded, That aſſociating to you "Two or Three of the diſcreeter and more "loyal Men of the foreſaid City, ye ſhould take, "until our Parliament after Eaſter next paſt, "for the Supply of the Reparation of the fore-"ſaid Bridge, a certain Cuſtom, as in theſe Let-"ters Patents, which We have cauſed to "be made from that Time to you, more fully is "contained: We, willing that the taking "of ſuch Cuſtom be continued longer, command "you, That from the Feaſt of St. Margaret "the Virgin next coming, unto the End of three "Years next following compleated, ye take the "under-written Cuſtom of the foreſaid Bridge: "To wit, of every Man on Foot, bringing Mer-"chandize, or other Things ſaleable, and paſſing "over the ſaid Bridge, and betaking himſelf to "other Parts, one Farthing; of every Horſeman "paſſing that Bridge, and betaking himſelf to "other Parts, as aforeſaid, with Merchandize, "or other ſaleable Things, one Penny; of e-"very ſaleable Pack, carried and paſſing over "the Bridge, one Half-penny. Nor will We in "the mean Time, that any thing be taken there "on this Occaſion, but in the Subſidy of the "Reparation of the Bridge: But the Term of "three Years being compleated, let the foreſaid "Cuſtom ceaſe, and be void, &c. Witneſs, the "the King at Cheſter, the 6th Day of July.

KING Edward I. in the ſame Year, ſent to the Mayor, with two or three of the diſcreeter, and more loyal Citizens, joined with him, to lay a Cuſtom during the ſame Term, for the Reparation of the Bridge, upon every Man that paſſed the Thames, on either Side of the Bridge, from LONDON to Southwark, and from Southwark to LONDON, one Farthing; and of every Horſe ſo paſſing, a Penny; and of every Pack ſo paſſing thereon, one Half-penny.

THE like Impoſition and Cuſtom were continued, for the Repairing this Bridge, in 27 and 30 of this King Edward I.

IN the 14th of Edward II. Anno 1323, there was likewiſe Need again of Letters Patents, for gathering Alms and Aids, as before, for the Reparation of the Bridge; and Meſſengers were ſent into all Parts of England, for that Purpoſe. And the King alſo ſent his Letters to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and other Miniſters of the Church, as before.

KING Henry III. in the 54th Year of his Reign, Anno 1269, granted the Cuſtody of the Bridge Bridge to the Queen his Conſort, with the Liberties, and all other Things belonging thereunto, for the Term of ſix Years.

SOME Pieces of Ground near Wolcherch, were granted by Edward I. for the aforeſaid Bridge; and in the ſame King's Reign, Roger Eſſex bequeathed a Tenement in the Pariſh of Alhallows in Honey-Lane, for the Uſe of the Bridge. Edward III. alſo granted the Mayor and City, a Place, or Piece of Ground, near the Houſe of Fryars Minors, or Grey Fryars, for the Reparation of the Bridge.

THE Jurats of one of the Wards of LONDON, in an Inquiſition taken by the Judges Itinerants at the Tower, in the Reign of King Edward I. preſented, That the Cuſtody of the Bridge, and the Soke thereof, was in the Queen's Hands, they knew not by what Warrant; the Soke thereof had been before in the Hands of the Mayor and Commonalty of the City; but had now remained in the Hands of the King's Mother, ever ſince the Battle of Eveſham.

London-Bridge wreſted from the City.

THIS was the fortunate Battle, fought by King Henry III. in which he beat Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leiceſter, and the Barons. The Citizens of LONDON, who held with them, ſoon felt the King's Wrath, by having this Bridge, and the Liberty of it, wreſted from them; as they had ſome Time before, when he eſtabliſhed a new Fair in Weſtminſter, which laſted for fifteen Days, during all which Time, he obliged them to ſhut up their Shops; and afterwards, to give them freſh Marks of his Diſpleaſure, kept his Chriſtmas in the City, and compell'd the Citizens to preſent him with large New-Year's-Gifts. Shortly after, he demanded another Supply of Money, and in ſpite of their Endeavours to the contrary, conſtrained them to give him two thouſand Pounds Sterling.

THE Jurats above-mentioned, preſented the Bridge alſo, on Account of its not being well kept.

IN the Reign of the ſame King Edward I. there was another Preſentment; wherein it was ſaid, That London-Bridge was always wont to be in the Hands of the Citizens, but was not ſo at that Time: Et neſciunt quo Warranto. And tho' the King had ſeized the Liberties of the City into his Hands, yet the Citizens, by theſe Words, ſeemed to ſtand upon their Rights and Privileges.

THE Jurats of another Ward in LONDON, made the ſame Preſentment to the Judges Itinerants, then ſitting at the Tower, in theſe Words, Dicunt, quod Cuſtodia Pontis, &c. They ſay, that the Cuſtody of the Bridge of LONDON, which is wont to belong to the City, is alienated by the Lady Queen Mother of Edward our King; and the Keepers of the ſaid Bridge, appointed by the ſaid Lady Queen, parum apponunt in Emendatione & Suſtentatione, &c. lay out but little in the amending and ſuſtaining of the ſaid Bridge: Whence Danger, which GOD forbid, may lightly ariſe, very much to the Damage of the King and the City.

THE Rents and Revenues of the Bridge, and the Duties and Cuſtoms belonging to it, were, without doubt, very conſiderable; but all now came to the Queen, and ſhe ſubſtituted under her, other Keepers, which the City uſed to do; and theſe Men made the beſt of their Time, by making what Gains they could, and neglected the neceſſary Repairs of the Bridge, which the City complained of, and preſented.

Legacies for the Repair of the Bridge.

John Feckenham, Citizen, by his Will, dated the 11th of May 1436, bequeathed to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of LONDON, a Tenement, with a Shop and Garden, in the Pariſh of St. Auguſtin Pappey, between the Tenement and Lands of the Bridge of the City of LONDON, on the Eaſt, &c. to have to the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, ad uſum & ſuſtentationem operis Pontis prædict. in perpetuum. On Condition, that the Chaplains of the Chapel of St. Thomas the Martyr, on the Bridge, do perpetually recommend his Soul in their Prayers, and alſo the Souls of the late Lord Richard II. King of England, Edward Boteler, Knight, and the Lady Anne his Wife, Richard Storme, and Alice his Wife, and the Soul of Joan, the ſaid Feckenham's Wife.

ALSO John Edwards, by his Will, dated the 8th of November 1442, gave to John Hatherle, Mayor of the City of LONDON, and to John Herſt, and Thomas Cook, Maſters of the Work of the Bridge of LONDON, for ever, his Tenement, with a Garden, in the Pariſh of St. Botolph Aldgate, towards maintaining and repairing the ſaid Bridge.

A terrible Accident on London-Bridge.

ABOUT four Years after the firſt Building this Stone Bridge, a terrible Accident happened thereon, viz. on the 10th of July 1212, ſeveral Houſes in the Borough of Southwark, and the Church of our Lady of the Canons there, being on Fire, and an exceeding great Multitude of People paſſing over the Bridge, to aſſiſt in extinguiſhing, or elſe to gaze at the ſame, all on a ſudden, ſeveral Houſes at the North End were likewiſe ſet on Fire, by the vehement blowing of the South Wind from thoſe that were burning on that Side. The People who were paſſing over the Bridge, would have returned, but were pent up between the two Fires, and expected nothing but preſent Death, which indeed followed; for ſeveral Ships and Veſſels coming to aid them, the unadviſed Multitude ruſhed ſo haſtily therein, that they were immediately ſunk, and almoſt all drowned. It was ſaid that, thro' the Fire and the Wreck, above three thouſand Perſons were deſtroyed, whoſe Bodies were found, many of them half burnt, beſides thoſe that were wholly burnt, and never diſcovered.

Five Arches broke down.

ABOUT the Year 1282, through a great Froſt and deep Snow, five Arches of London-Bridge were broke down and carried away.

IN the Year 1289, the Bridge was ſo much decayed, that Paſſengers were afraid to paſs over it, and therefore a great Collection was made by all Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons for the Repair of it; as alſo in the Year 1381, Sir John Britain being Cuſtos of LONDON.

A Juſting on London-Bridge.

IN the Year 1395, on St. George's Day, there was a great Juſting on London-Bridge, between David Earl of Craford of Scotland, and the Lord Wells of England; in which the Lord Wells was, at the third Courſe, born out of his Saddle. The Bridge, at that Time, was only coped on each Side, and not repleniſhed with Houſes, as at preſent.

Nine Perſons crowded to Death on London-Bridge.

ON the 13th of November, the Year following, the young Queen Iſabel, commonly called the Little, for ſhe was but eight Years old, was carried from Kennington, through Southwark, to the Tower of LONDON, and ſuch Multitudes of People went to ſee her, that on London-Bridge, nine Perſons were crowded to Death, of whom the Prior of Tiptre in Eſſex was one.

IN the Year 1426, John Reinwell being Mayor, was began to be built the Tower on London-Bridge, at the North End of the Draw-Bridge, which was then eaſily and readily to be drawn up, as well for the Paſſage of Ships to Queen-hith, as for the Reſiſtance of any foreign Force.

THE other Tower, that was over the Gate at the South End, will be ſpoken of in another Place.

IN

Jack Cade put to Flight on London-Bridge.

IN the Year 1450, Jack Cade, and other Rebels of Kent, were overcame by the Citizens of LONDON, on this Bridge, and put to Flight.

An Account of Jack Cade's Rebellion.

THIS Jack Cade was an Iriſhman, who, at the Inſtigation of the Duke of York, aſſumed the Name of John Mortimer, of the Houſe of March, and raiſed a great Inſurrection in Kent, upon Pretence of reforming the Government. Whereupon, the King, [Henry VI.] aſſembling a Body of fifteen thouſand Men, headed them himſelf, and marched againſt the Rebels. Upon his Approach, Cade, as if he had been afraid, retired, and lay in Ambuſh in a Wood near Sevenoak, not queſtioning but the King would follow him: But Henry, imagining the Rebels were diſperſed, returned to LONDON, being contented with ſending after them a Detachment of his Army, commanded by Sir Humphrey Stafford. This Detachment falling into the Ambuſh, were cut in Pieces.

Rapin, Page 575.

AT the ſame Time Cade began his March towards LONDON, whilſt the King, and the whole Court, retired haſtily to Kenelworth Caſtle, leaving a Garriſon in the Tower. Cade's Succeſs againſt Stafford increaſed his Army with Multitudes, who flocked from all Parts to join him. The City of LONDON, either through Fear, or ſome other Motive, opened her Gates to the Rebels, and Cade entered, as it were, in Triumph, at the Head of his Troops: But he prohibited, under ſevere Penalties, the offering any Injury to the Inhabitants. Next Day, being informed, that the Lord Say, High Treaſurer, was in the City, he ordered him to be apprehended and beheaded. Towards the Evening, he retired to Southwark, on the other Side of the Thames, and continued thus, for ſome Days, to enter the City in the Morning, and to go out again at Night, on Purpoſe to take from the Citizens all Occaſion of Fear.

Cade's Soldiers and the Londoners, lived, at firſt, very friendly together; but, at laſt, the Soldiers committing ſome Riot in the City, when they would have entered, according to Cuſtom, in the Morning, they found the Bridge-Gate ſhut againſt them. Whereupon a Battle enſued between them and the Citizens, which laſted all Day, and ended at the Approach of Night, by a Ceſſation of Arms till the Morrow. Mean while, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Chancellor, who had taken Refuge in the Tower, obſerving by their Spies, and the Proceedings of the Rebels, that their Hearts began to fail them, inſtantly drew up a general Pardon, put the Great Seal to it, and cauſed it to be proclaimed in the Night in Southwark. The Pardon produced ſo ſudden and ſurpriſing Effect, that before it was Day, Cade found himſelf deſerted by his Followers, and forced to fly all alone, and conceal himſelf in Suſſex. But the King promiſing by Proclamation, a thouſand Marks to any Perſon that ſhould bring him dead or alive, he was ſlain in his Retreat by Alexander Iden, a Gentleman of Kent, who brought his Body to LONDON. The Pardon under the Great Seal did not prevent the Execution of many of his Accomplices. Thus ended this dangerous Rebellion, which might have been attended with worſe Conſequences, had it been conducted by a more experienced Leader.

Baſtard of Fawconbridge burnt all the Houſes on the Bridge.

TO return to the Bridge. In the Year 1471, Thomas, the Baſtard of Fawconbridge, beſieged London-Bridge, burnt the Gate, and all the Houſes to the Draw-Bridge, being at that Time thirteen in Number.

An Houſe on London-Bridge fell down.

IN the Year 1481, an Houſe, called the Common-Stage on London-Bridge, fell down into the Thames, by which five Men were drowned.

ON the 3d of February, in the Year 1553, the firſt of Queen Mary, Sir Thomas Wyat and the Kentiſh Men, who were riſen on Account of the Queen's intended Marriage with Philip of Spain, marched to Dartford, and from thence towards LONDON, upon which the Draw-Bridge was cut down, and the Bridge Gates ſhut. Wyat and his People enter'd Southwark, where they lay till the 6th of February, but could get no Entrance by the Bridge, which was well defended by the Citizens, and ſo was forced to go round by Kingſton.

Sir Thomas Wyat ſtopt at London-Bridge.

The Dimenſions of the Bridge.

THE Bridge of LONDON over the River Thames, is 1200 Feet long, conſiſts of 19 Arches made of ſquared Stone, 60 Feet high, 30 Feet broad, and 21 Feet diſtant from each other; on both Sides, Houſes are built, which make it look like a continued Street. There was antiently, as before-mentioned, a Chapel on the Eaſt Side, which is now converted into a Houſe, and called the Chapel-Houſe to this Day. At the North End of the Draw-Bridge, is a Houſe called the Non-ſuch Houſe, ſaid to be framed in Holland, and here placed, and that when finiſhed, it had no Nail in it, but was all pinn'd together with wooden Pegs. It is now inhabited by Mr. Bray, a Stationer, on one Side of the Way, and Mr. Weſt, a Dry-Salter, on the other. Over the Arch on the South Side, are the Arms of Queen Elizabeth, and two Dials, ſet up in the Mayoralty of Sir Patience Ward, 1681, with this Motto over them:

TIME and TIDE ſtay for None.

All the Houſes upon the Bridge rebuilt.

ON each Side, between the Houſes are left three Vacancies, oppoſite to each other, two with Stone Walls, upon which are Iron Rails, that People paſſing along may take a View of the River Eaſt and Weſt, and may alſo ſtep out of the Way of Carts and Coaches, the Paſſage being formerly very narrow, and the Floors of the Houſes that lay croſs the Street, being low, they not only render'd thoſe Places dark, but likewiſe obſtructed the free Paſſage of Carts, if they were loaded any way high, and Coaches, ſo that they could not paſs by one another, which oftentimes occaſioned great Stops upon the Bridge, and was a great Hinderance to Paſſengers. To prevent which Inconveniences, and for the Eaſe of Paſſengers, as well as to add Beauty and Magnificence to this noble Structure, in the Year 1685, all the old Houſes upon the Bridge, from one End to the other, except that ſtately Building joining to the Draw-Bridge, were pulled down, and the Street enlarged from 12 to 20 Feet wide, and the Arch of the Non-ſuch Houſe, by the Draw-Bridge, was made two Stories high, as were alſo the other Arches croſs the Street; and then the Houſes were all new built in a regular and uniform Manner.

In Memory of this noble Work, upon the North Side of the high Arch of the aforeſaid Houſe, was ſet up the following Inſcription in Letters of Gold.

Anno MDCLXXXV. et primo Jacobi II. Regis.

This Street was opened and enlarged from 12, to the Width of 20 Feet.

Sir James Smith, Knight, Lord Mayor.

The three Navigable Locks.

The Rock-Lock.

THE three Vacancies before-mentioned, are over three Arches of the Bridge, which are wider than the reſt, and are called the navigable Locks; one of theſe near the Gate is called the Rock Lock, it being commonly reported, that there is a Rock growing under the Water there; but we have been aſſured by a Perſon of great Veracity, as well as Curioſity, that a Friend of his, in the Year

Year 1715, when the Tide was ſo kept back that many People walk'd over the River, went near enough to examine into this, and found it to be Stones joined together with Cement and Iron in ſome Places; and therefore ſuppoſed it was Part of an Arch that had formerly been broken down, and never ſince removed.

THE ſecond is called the Draw-bridge Lock, and the third, near the Chapel, St. Mary's Lock. There is a Fourth between St. Magnus's Church and the firſt Vacancy, called the King's Lock.

London-Bridge ſeveral Times burnt.

BESIDES the Fire, before ſpoken of, in the Year 1212, there have been other great Fires on this Bridge. On the 13th of February 1632, between the Hours of Eleven and Twelve at Night, a terrible Fire happened, which began in the Houſe of one Briggs, a Needlemaker, near St. Magnus's Church, by the Careleſneſs of a Maid-Servant, who ſat a Tub of hot Aſhes under a Pair of Stairs. Before Eight o'Clock the next Morning all the Buildings were conſumed from the North End of the Bridge to the firſt Vacancy, on both Sides, containing 42 Houſes; Water being very ſcarce, the Thames being almoſt frozen over.

AFTER this Fire, the North End of the Bridge lay unbuilt for many Years, and had only Deal-boards ſet up to prevent People falling into the Thames. Many of which being often blown down by high Winds, made it very dangerous to paſs that Way in the Night.

ABOUT the Year 1645, this began to be re-built, but lay unfiniſhed, till the Year 1666, when by the general Conflagration of LONDON, on the 2d of September, all the new Buildings were again conſumed, but ſome of the old Houſes, built in the Reign of King John, remained unhurt.

THE Violence of this Fire, and the Fall of the Buildings, at the North End, did ſo batter and weaken the Stone-Work, upon which they ſtood, that the Repairing the Stone Piers, and Arches, before they could be ſtrong enough to build upon, amounted to 1500*l.* which was all paid out of the Bridge Rents.

THE laſt Fire that happened there, was, on the 8th of September, in the Year 1725, in the Mayoralty of Sir George Mertins, Knt. It began at the Houſe of a Bruſhmaker near St. Olave's-Street, thro' the Careleſneſs of a Servant, and burnt all the Houſes on that Side the Way, as far as the Gate, and ſome on the other.

THIS occaſioned the Gate to be taken down, and new built, in the Year 1728, in a handſomer Manner than before, having two Poſterns for Foot-Paſſengers, whereas to the old Gate there was but one.

This Gate was widen'd from 11 to 18 Feet, in the Mayoralty of Sir Edward Becher, Knight.

S. P. Q. L.

AND over that are the King's-Arms.

IN the Year 1722, in the Mayoralty of Sir Gerrard Conyers, to preſerve the Paſſage of the Bridge free, the following Order was publiſhed by the Court of Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council.

"THIS Court being very ſenſible of the "great Inconveniences and Miſchiefs "which happen, by the diſorderly "Leading and Driving of Carrs, Carts, Coaches, "and other Carriages over London-Bridge, where-"by the Common Paſſage there is much obſtruct-"ed, doth ſtraightly Order and Enjoin (purſuant "to ſeveral former Orders made by this Court for "Prevention of thoſe Miſchiefs) That three ſuffi-"cient and able Perſons be appointed, and con-"ſtantly maintained; One by the Governors of "Chriſt's-Hoſpital, One by the Inhabitants of the "Ward of Bridge-within, and the Other by the "Bridge-Maſters; which three Perſons are to "give their diligent and daily Attendance at "each End of the Bridge, and by all good Means "to hinder and prevent the ſaid Inconveniences, "and for that Purpoſe to direct and take Care, "That all Carts, Coaches, and other Carriages "coming out of Southwark into this City, do "keep all along on the Weſt Side of the ſaid "Bridge, and all Carts, Coaches, and other "Carriages going out of this City, do keep all "along on the Eaſt Side of the ſaid Bridge, and "that no Carman be ſuffered to ſtand a-croſs the "ſaid Bridge to load or unload, and that they "ſhall apprehend all ſuch who ſhall be Refrac-"tory, or offend herein, and carry them before "ſome of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace for "this City and Liberties, to be dealt with ac-"cording to Law. And further, to prevent the "aforeſaid Obſtructions, it is ordered, That the "Collector of the Tolls upon the ſaid Bridge, "ſhall take Care that the ſaid Duties be collect-"ed without making a Stay of the Carts for "which the ſame is to be paid. And that none "may plead Ignorance hereof, It is further or-"dered, That this Order be forthwith Printed, "and publiſhed in the moſt publick Places on "the ſaid Bridge, and within this City, and the "Borough of Southwark, for the better Obſer-"vation hereof.

IN the ſame Year, in the Mayoralty of the ſaid Sir Gerrard Conyers, viz. on the 12th of May 1722, The old Draw-Bridge was taken up, and a new one began to be laid; on which Account an Order was publiſhed to give Notice to all People to avoid the Place till the ſame was finiſhed, which was in five Days Time: And it is remarkable, that on that very Day fifty Years, viz. on the 12th of May 1672, in the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Hanſon, the laſt Draw-Bridge had been laid down.

A new Draw-Bridge laid.

FOR the better keeping this Bridge in Repair, there are a Comptroller, two Bridge-Maſters, whoſe Names, this Year (1723) are Webb and Lunn, and Officers under them, and many Years 3000*l.* have been laid out thereon, which is defrayed out of the Ground Rents of the Houſes on the Bridge, Fines, Benefactions, Tolls, &c.

The following Tolls are taken on the Bridge.

For every Cart or Waggon with ſhod Wheels	00	00	4
For a Dray with five Barrels	00	00	1
For each Pipe or Butt	00	00	1
For a Ton of any Goods	00	00	2
For any Thing leſs than a Ton	00	00	1

THE two Officers, called Bridge-Maſters, are choſen, or continued every Year, by the Citizens aſſembled, in their Common Hall, upon an Election, if there are two Candidates, and one require the Polls to be number'd, the Mayor is oblig'd to allow it. One Turner brought his Action on the Caſe againſt Sir Samuel Sterling, Lord Mayor, in the Year 1669, for refuſing to number the Polls, and diſcharging the Court, ſo that he loſt the Profits, and Judgment was given for the Plaintiff.

To conclude this Article of London-Bridge, we ſhall preſent our Readers with the following Verſes upon it, wrote in the Time of Mr. Stow.

" This Bridge of Wonders is the Paramount.

Of other BRIDGES in the City.

There were antiently divers Bridges over ſeveral Rivers, Bourns, and Brooks which ran thro' many Streets and Places of the City; of which ſome are yet remaining; but the reſt were taken down, as any River or Brook was ſtopt up.

Fleet-Bridge. Fleet-Bridge, in the Weſt, without Ludgate, was, in Mr. Stow's Time, a Bridge of Stone, coped on each Side with Iron Pikes. On the Weſt, towards the South, were alſo Lanthorns, for Lights to be placed in the Winter Nights, for the Convenience of Paſſengers. Under this Bridge ran the Water once called, The River of the Wells, afterwards Turn-Mill-Brook, and then Fleet-Dike, becauſe it ran by the Fleet, and, at one Time about it. Since the Re-building LONDON, it is made the Breadth of the Street, for the Convenience of Coaches and Carts. The Sides are raiſed above Breaſt high; and upon two Peers, on each Side, are carved the City Arms and Supporters. Under this Bridge runs the Canal, as it is now called; over which there are likewiſe two other Bridges of Free-Stone; that on the South of Fleet-Bridge, is oppoſite to Bridewell; and that on the North, is over-againſt the End of Fleet-Lane, near the Fleet Priſon.

THERE is nothing more neceſſary to be ſaid of this Bridge in this Place; for of the Water Courſe that was antiently here, and of that Part of it which is propoſed to be fill'd up by the City, for which an Act of Parliament was paſs'd in the preſent Seſſion, [1733] we have already ſpoken.

Holborn-Bridge. Holborn, or Old-Bourn Bridge, was ſo called from a Bourn, that in old Times, ran down Holborn-Hill into the River of the Wells.

Cow-Bridge. Cowbridge was ſomewhat more North, over the ſame Water, near Cowbridge-ſtreet, or Cow-Lane.

THERE were alſo divers Bridges over the Town Ditch, viz. without Aldgate, Biſhopſgate, Mooregate, Cripplegate, Alderſgate, the Poſtern of Chriſt's Hoſpital, Newgate, and Ludgate; and one other over the River of the Wells, or Fleet-Dike, between the Precinct of the Black-Fryars, and Bridewell.

THERE were alſo, in old Times, divers Bridges in many Places, over the Water of Walbrook; every Perſon who had Lands on either Side the ſaid Brook, being obliged to vault, or bridge, and mend the ſame as far as their Lands extended. And in the 11th of Edward III. the Inhabitants upon the Courſe of the Brook, were obliged to pile, or wall the Sides of it. One of the Bridges over Walbrook was called Horſeſhoe Bridge, near the Church of St. John Baptiſt, now called St. John Baptiſt near Dowgate.

OF all theſe Bridges there are but four remaining, and theſe are all over the Canal; viz. Bridewell-Bridge, Fleet-Lane-Bridge, and Holborn-Bridge.

Of the Antient TOWERS, and CASTLES, that have been in and about the City of LONDON.

The TOWER on London-Bridge.

The Tower at the North End of the Draw-Bridge.

THE next Tower to that of LONDON (which will be treated of in a Chapter by itſelf) was the Tower on London-Bridge, at the North End of the Draw-Bridge, which was began to be built in the Year 1426: John Reinwell, Mayor of LONDON, laid one of the firſt Corner Stones in the Foundation of it. The other three were laid by the Sheriffs and Bridge-Maſters. Upon every one of theſe four Stones was ingraved, in fair Roman Letters, the Word IHESUS; which Stones Mr. Stow afterwards ſaw depoſited in the Bridge Store-Houſe, when this Tower was new built of Timber.

THIS Gate and Tower was at firſt ſtrongly built of Stone, and ſo continued till the Year 1577, when, being much decayed, it was began to be pull'd down, and the Traitors Heads thereon, were removed, and ſet on the Tower over the Gate at the Bridge-Foot, towards Southwark. When it was thus pulled down, a new Foundation was drawn, and Sir John Langley, Lord Mayor, laid the firſt Stone, in the Preſence of the Sheriffs and Bridge-Maſters. In the Year 1579, this new Tower was finiſhed, a beautiful and chargeable Piece of Work, all above the Bridge being of Timber. This is the Non-ſuch Houſe, ſpoken of in the laſt Chapter.

The TOWER on the South of London-Bridge.

The Tower at the South End of London-Bridge.

THERE was another Tower on London-Bridge, over the Gate, at the South End, towards Southwark. This Gate, with the Tower thereon, and two Arches of the Bridge, fell down in the Year 1436; but no Man, as it happened, was Hurt thereby. Towards Re-building it, many liberal Citizens gave large Sums of Money.

BAYNARD'S-CASTLE.

Baynard's-Caſtle.

William Fitz-Stephen ſaith, In the Weſt Part of this City were two moſt ſtrong Caſtles; and Gervaſius Tilbury, in the Reign of Henry II. ſaith, Two Caſtles were built, with Walls and Ramparts, whereof one was in Right of Poſſeſſion Baynard's; the other the Barons of Mountfitchet. The firſt of theſe Caſtles, Banking on the River Thames, was called Baynard's-Caſtle, from Baynard, a Nobleman, who came in with William the Conqueror, and then built it. He died in the Reign of William Rufus; after whoſe Deceaſe Geffrey Baynard ſucceeded; and then William Baynard, in the Year 1111, who, by Forfeiture for Felony, loſt his Barony of Little-Dunmow, and King Henry gave it wholly to Robert Fitz-Richard, the Son of Gilbert Earl of Clare, and to his Heirs, together with the Honour of Baynard's-Caſtle. This Robert married Maude de Sent-Licio, Lady of Bradham, and dying in the Year 1134, was buried at St. Need's, by Richard Earl of Clare. Walter, his Son, ſucceeded him, and married Matilda de Becham, after whoſe Deceaſe, he married Matilda, the Daughter and Co-heir of Richard de Lucy, on whom he begat Robert, and others. He died in the Year 1198, and was buried at Dunmow; to him ſucceeded Robert Fitz-Water, a valiant Knight.

ABOUT the Year 1213, there aroſe a great Contention betwixt King John and his Barons, on Account of Matilda, called The Fair, a Daughter of the aforeſaid Robert Fitz-Water, whom the King unlawfully loved, but could not obtain; whereupon, and for other Cauſes of the like Sort, there enſued a War throughout the Realm. The Barons being received into LONDON, did great Damage to the King; but in the End, the King did not only baniſh the ſaid Fitz-Water, among others, out of the Realm, but alſo cauſed his Caſtle, called Baynard's-Caſtle, and his other Houſes, to be demoliſhed. After this a Meſſenger was ſent to Matilda the Fair, about the King's Suit, but ſhe not conſenting to it, was poiſoned. Robert Fitz-Water being then gone, with others, into France, and ſome went into Scotland.

IN the Year 1214, King John being in France with a great Army, a Truce was made between the two Kings of England and France, for five Years. There being a River, or Arm of the Sea, between the two Armies, a Knight among the Engliſh called out to thoſe on the other Side, to Challenge any one among them to come and take a Juſt or two with him; whereupon, without any Delay, Robert Fitz-Water, who was on the French Side, ferried over, and got on Horſe-back, without any one to help him, and ſhewed himſelf ready to the Face of this Challenger, whom at the firſt Courſe he ſtruck ſo violently with his great Spear, that Horſe and Man fell to the Ground; and when his Spear was broken, he went back again to the King of France. King John ſeeing this, cry'd out, By God's Tooth, his uſual Oath, he were a King indeed, who had ſuch a Knight. The Friends of Robert, hearing theſe Words, kneeled down, and ſaid, O King! He is your Knight: It is Robert Fitz-Water. Whereupon, he was ſent for the next Day, and reſtored to the King's Favour; by which Means a Peace was concluded, Fitz-Water was reſtored to his Eſtates, and had Leave given him to repair his Caſtle of Baynard, and other Caſtles.

IN the Year 1216, the firſt of Henry III. the Caſtle of Hertford, being delivered to Lewis the French King, and the Barons of England, Robert Fitz-Water deſired to have it, becauſe the Keeping thereof did antiently of Right belong to him; but was anſwered by Lewis, "That "Engliſhmen were not worthy to have ſuch Places "in Keeping, becauſe they betray'd their own "Lord, &c.

THIS Robert died in the Year 1234, and was buried at Dunmow, and Walter his Son ſucceeded him. This Barony of Baynard, was in the Ward of King Henry, during the Non-age of another Robert-Fitz-Water, who in the Year 1289, married Ælianor, Daughter and Heir to the Earl of Ferrers.

ON

ON the 12th of March, 1303, the ſaid Robert Fitz-Water, did acknowledge his Service to the City for his Caſtle of Baynard, before Sir John Blunt, Mayor of LONDON; and ſwore upon the Evangeliſts, That he would be true to the Liberties thereof, and maintain the ſame to his Power, and keep the Counſel of the ſame, &c.

The RIGHTS that belonged to Robert Fitz-Water, Chaſtilian and Banner-Bearer of LONDON, Lord of Wodeham, were theſe:

Robert Fitz-Water Chaſtilian and Banner-Bearer of LONDON.

THE ſaid Robert and his Heirs, ought to be, and are chief Banners of LONDON, in Fee for the Chaſtiliary, which he and his Anceſtors had by Caſtle-Baynard, in the ſaid City. In Time of War, the ſaid Robert and his Heirs ought to ſerve the City, in Manner as followeth; that is,

THE ſaid Robert ought to come, he being the Twentieth Man of Arms on Horſeback, covered with Cloth, or Armour, unto the great Weſt Door of St. Paul, with his Banner diſplayed before him of his Arms. And when he is come to the ſaid Door, mounted and apparelled, as before is ſaid, the Mayor, with his Aldermen and Sheriffs, armed in their Arms, ſhall come out of the ſaid Church of St. Paul unto the ſaid Door, with a Banner in his Hand all on Foot, which Banner ſhall be Gules, the Image of St. Paul, Gold; the Face, Hands, Feet, and Sword, of Silver. And as ſoon as the ſaid Robert ſhall ſee the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs come on Foot out of the Church, armed with ſuch a Banner, he ſhall alight from his Horſe, and ſalute the Mayor, and ſay to him, Sir Mayor, I am come to do my Service which I owe to the City.

The Banner of St. Paul.

AND the Mayor and Aldermen ſhall anſwer;

WE give to you, as to our Banneret of Fee in this City, the Banner of this City to bear and govern, to the Honour and Profit of this City, to your Power.

AND the ſaid Robert and his Heirs ſhall receive the Banner in his Hands, and go on Foot out of the Gate, with the Banner in his Hands; and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, ſhall follow to the Door, and ſhall bring a Horſe to the ſaid Robert, worth 20 l. which Horſe ſhall be ſaddled with a Saddle of the Arms of the ſaid Robert, and ſhall be covered with Sindals of the ſaid Arms.

ALSO they ſhall preſent to him 20 l. Sterling, and deliver it to the Chamberlain of the ſaid Robert, for his Expences that Day. Then the ſaid Robert ſhall mount upon the Horſe which the Mayor preſented to him, with the Banner in his Hand: And as ſoon as he is up, he ſhall ſay to the Mayor, That he muſt cauſe a Marſhal to be choſen for the Hoſt, one of the City; which being done, the ſaid Robert ſhall command the Mayor and Burgeſſes of the City, to warn the Commons to aſſemble, and all go under the Banner of St. Paul; and the ſaid Robert ſhall bear it himſelf to Aldgate, and there the ſaid Robert and Mayor ſhall deliver the ſaid Banner of St. Paul, to whom they think proper. And if they are to go out of the City, then the ſaid Robert ought to chooſe two out of every Ward, the moſt ſage Perſons, to look to the Keeping of the City, after they are gone out. And this Counſel ſhall be taken in the Priory of the Trinity near Aldgate. And before every Town or Caſtle, which the Hoſt of LONDON ſhall beſiege, if the Siege continue a whole Year, the ſaid Robert ſhall have, for every Siege, of the Commonalty of LONDON, one hundred Shillings, and no more.

THESE were the Rights that Robert Fitz-Water had in Time of War. The Rights belonging to him and his Heirs, in the City of LONDON, in Time of Peace, were as follow:

THAT is to ſay, the ſaid Robert Fitz-Water had a Soke or Ward in the City, where was a Wall of the Canonry of St. Paul, which led down, by a Brewhouſe of St. Paul, to the Thames, and ſo to the Side of the Mill, which was in the Water coming down from Fleet-Bridge, and went by London-Wall, betwixt the Fryars Preachers and Ludgate, and ſo returned by the Houſe of the ſaid Friars, to the ſaid Wall of the Canonry of St. Paul; that is, all the Pariſh of St. Andrew, which was in the Gift of his Anceſtors, by the ſaid Seniority: And ſo the ſaid Robert had appendant unto the ſaid Soke, all the Things underwritten.

THAT he ought to have a Sokeman, and to place what Sokeman he will, ſo he be of the Sokemanry, or the ſame Ward; and if any of the Sokemanry be impleaded in the Guildhall, of any Thing that toucheth not the Body of the Mayor that for the Time is, or that toucheth the Body of no Sheriff, it is not lawful for the Sokeman of the Sokemanry of the ſaid Robert Fitz-Water, to demand a Court of the ſaid Robert; and the Mayor and his Citizens of LONDON ought to grant him to have a Court; and in his Court he ought to bring his Judgments, as it is aſſented and agreed upon in the Guildhall, that ſhall be given him.

IF any therefore be taken in his Sokemanry, he ought to have his Stocks and Impriſonment in his Soken; and he ſhall be brought from thence to the Guildhall, before the Mayor, and there they ſhall provide him his Judgment that ought to be given of him: But his Judgment ſhall not be publiſhed 'till he come into the Court of the ſaid Robert, and in his Liberty.

AND the Judgment ſhall be ſuch, that if he have deſerved Death by Treaſon, he to be tied to a Poſt in the Thames at a good Wharf, where Boats are faſten'd, two Ebbings and two Flowings of the Water.

AND if he be condemned for a common Thief, he ought to be led to the Elms, and there ſuffer his Judgment as other Thieves. And ſo the ſaid Robert and his Heirs hath Honour, that he holdeth a great Franchiſe within the City, that the Mayor of the City, and Citizens, are bound to do him of Right; that is to ſay, That when the Mayor will hold a great Council, he ought to call the ſaid Robert and his Heirs, to be with him in Council of the City; and the ſaid Robert ought to be ſworn to be of Council with the City, againſt all People, ſaving the King and his Heirs. And when the ſaid Robert cometh to the Huſtings of the Guildhall of the City, the Mayor, or his Lieutenant, ought to riſe againſt him, and ſet him down near unto him, and ſo long as he is in the Guildhall, all the Judgments ought to be given by his Mouth, according to the Record of the Recorders of the ſaid Guildhall. And ſo many Waifes as come ſo long as he is there, he ought to give them to the Bailiffs of the Town, or to whom he will, by the Council of the Mayor of the City.

THIS Robert died in the Year 1305, leaving Iſſue, Walter Fitz-Robert, who had Iſſue, Robert Fitz-Water, to whom the Citizens of LONDON, in the Year 1320, acknowledged the Right which they ow'd to him and his Heirs, for the Caſtle-Baynard. He died in the Year 1325, and was ſucceeded by Robert Fitz-Robert, Fitz-Water, &c. but how the Honour of Baynard's-Caſtle, with the Appurtenances, fell from the the Poſſeſſion of the Fitz-Waters, Mr. Stow can give no Account.

Baynard's-Caſtle burnt, and rebuilt by Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter.

In the Year 1428, the ſeventh of Henry VI. a great Fire happening at Baynard's-Caſtle, it was new built by Humphrey Duke of Glouceſter; and after his Attainder and Death, in the Year 1446, it came into the Hands of Henry VI. and from him to Richard Duke of York, who, in the Year 1457, lodged there in his own Houſe.

Rapin. Page 587.

On the 28th of February, in the Year 1460, the Earls of March and of Warwick, with a great Number of Men, tho' but few of Note, entered the City of LONDON, where they were joyfully received by the Citizens; and upon the 3d of March, the Earl of Warwick muſter'd his Men in St. John's Field, in the midſt of Throngs of People, whom ordering to be caſt into a Ring about him, he read aloud the Agreement between the King and the late Duke of York, with the Act of Parliament by which it was confirmed. That done, he told the People, Henry had notoriouſly violated this Agreement, and ſo forfeited, according to the Act of Parliament, his Right to the Crown: Then raiſing his Voice, he asked the People, who ſtood round him, Whether they would have Henry of Lancaſter for King? The whole Multitude crying out, No, No; He asked, Whether according to that Settlement, they would have Edward, Son of the late Duke of York, to reign over them? To which all the People anſwer'd with Acclamations, expreſſing their Conſent. Upon this, certain Captains were appointed to carry the Relation of what had been done to the ſaid Edward Earl of March, then lodged at his Caſtle of Baynard, where a great Council was called of all the Biſhops, Lords, Gentlemen, and Magiſtrates, in and about LONDON. Edward being preſent in the Aſſembly, ſet forth his Title to the Crown, as well by Birth, as by the aforeſaid Agreement, and deſired it might be adjudged to him. It would have been great Boldneſs to diſpute his Pretenſions at ſuch a Juncture. So, with one Conſent, the Aſſembly declared, that Henry of Lancaſter having forfeited his Right of enjoying the Crown, during Life, by Breach of the ſolemn Agreement made with the Duke of York, and ratified by the Parliament, it was devolved to Edward, eldeſt Son of the Duke of York. Upon this Declaration, the Crown was offered the Earl; he thanked God and them for his Election, but ſhewed ſome Diffidence in himſelf to take upon him ſo great a Charge, till by the Exhortation of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of Exeter, and certain Noblemen, he yielded to their Requeſt. And the next Day he went to St. Paul's in Proceſſion, made an Offering, and had Te Deum ſung. Then was he in great State conveyed to Weſtminſter, and there in the great Hall ſet in the King's Seat, with St. Edward's Scepter in his Hand.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury having asked the People, whether they would have Edward Earl of March for King; the People anſwer'd with loud Acclamations. Then the King took the Homage of the Lords that were preſent, and the Ceremony concluded with ſinging Te Deum. Edward was afterwards conducted with great Solemnity to the Biſhop's Palace, where Henry uſed to lodge, when he was within the Walls of the City: And the next Day, being the 5th of March, he was proclaimed in LONDON, and the neighbouring Towns, by the Name of Edward IV.

In the ſeventh Year of King Edward's Reign, many Men were arreſted for Treaſon ſurmiſed againſt them, for which ſeveral were put to Death, and others eſcaped by paying large Sums of Money. Among the reſt, Sir Thomas Cooke, Sir John Plummer, Knights, Humphrey Heyward, and other Aldermen of LONDON, were arreſted and charged with Treaſon, whereof they were acquitted, but loſt their Goods to the King, to the Value of 40,000 Marks, or more, as ſome have written. And for Example, Sir Thomas Cooke, a little before Lord Mayor of LONDON, was impeached of High-Treaſon, by one Hawkins, for which he was committed to the Tower, his Houſe in LONDON was ſeized on by the Lord Rivers, and his Lady and Servants turned out of it; the Cauſe being thus:

Hawkins afore-named came, upon a Time, to the ſaid Sir Thomas Cooke, requeſting him to lend him a thouſand Marks upon good Security; to which he anſwer'd, that he would firſt know for whom the Money was borrowed. Underſtanding afterwards, that it was for Queen Margaret, he anſwer'd, That he had no current Goods that he could diſpoſe of without great Loſs, and therefore deſired Hawkins to preſs him no farther about it; yet the ſaid Hawkins at length requeſted but one hundred Pounds, but went away without one Penny, and never came after to ask him for any.

Two or three Years after, Hawkins was committed to the Tower, and brought to the Brake or Rack, commonly called the Duke of Exeter's Daughter, becauſe that Duke was the Inventor of it. By Means of which Pain he revealed many Things, and among the reſt, the Motion which he had made to Sir Thomas Cooke; upon which Account the ſaid Sir Thomas was troubled, as before related, and indicted of Treaſon. After which a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer was held in the Guildhall, where ſat the Lord Mayor, the Duke of Clarence, the Earl of Warwick, the Lord Rivers, Sir John Fogge, with other of the King's Council.

To this Place was the ſaid Sir Thomas brought and arraigned upon Life and Death, where he was acquitted of the Indictment, and ſent to the Compter in Bread-Street, and from thence to the King's-Bench. Being thus acquitted, his Wife got Poſſeſſion again of his Houſe, which ſhe found in a very ſad Plight; for the Servants of Sir John Fogge, and the Lord Rivers, had made Havock of what they pleaſed. Alſo at his Seat at Giddy-Hall in Eſſex, others had deſtroyed the Deer in his Park, his Conies and Fiſh, and not ſpared even his Braſs, Pewter, Bedding, and whatever could be carried away, for which, not one Penny could be got again in Recompence, nor could Sir Thomas himſelf be diſcharged till he had paid 8000 l. to the King, and 800 l. to the Queen. And becauſe Sir John Markham, Knt. then Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, had determined ſomewhat againſt the King's Pleaſure, that Sir Thomas Cooke's Offence was not Treaſon, but Miſpriſion of Treaſon, which was not puniſhable by Death, but only by a Fine at the King's Pleaſure, the Lord Rivers and the Dutcheſs of Bedford, his Wife, procured him to be turned out of his Office.

Richard III. took upon him the Title of King in Baynard's-Caſtle.

Edward IV. being dead, leaving his eldeſt Son Edward, and his ſecond Son Richard, both Infants, Richard Duke of Glouceſter, then Protector, began to plot for the Crown; and, as it were, by the Election of the Commons in the Guildhall of LONDON, took upon him the Title of King in this Baynard's-Caſtle.

Henry

☞ In the foregoing Sheet, Page 50, in the laſt Line but one of the ſecond Column, after Bridewell-Bridge, read Fleet-Bridge.

Henry VII. about the Year 1487, the 31ſt of his Reign, repaired, or rather new built, this Houſe, not imbattelled, or ſo ſtrongly fortified like a Caſtle; but far more beautiful and commodious, fit for the Entertainment of any Prince. In the ſeventh Year of his Reign, he and his Queen, were lodged there, and came from thence to St. Paul's Church, where they made their Offering, dined in the Biſhop's Palace, and ſo returned.

IN the 18th Year of his Reign, he was lodged there, and the Ambaſſadors from the King of the Romans, were brought thither to an Audience, and from thence the King went to St. Paul's, and was there ſworn to the King of the Romans, as the ſaid King had ſworn to him.

IN the 20th Year of his Reign, he, with the Knights of the Garter, in all their Habits of the Order, rode from the Tower of LONDON, through the City, to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, and there heard Even-Song; and from thence rode to Baynard's-Caſtle, where the King lodged, and the next Day, in the ſame Habits, they rode again to St. Paul's in Proceſſion, heard Divine Service, offered, and returned. The ſame Year the King of Caſtile was lodged there.

THIS Caſtle came afterwards to the Earls of Pembroke.

ON the 19th of July, in the Year 1553, the Council, being partly moved by the Right of the Lady Mary, and conſidering that moſt of the Realm was inclined to her Side, changed their Opinion, with reſpect to the Lady Jane Grey, newly proclaimed Queen; and aſſembling themſelves at Baynard's-Caſtle, conſulted with the Earl of Pembroke, the Earl of Shrewsbury, and Sir John Maſon, Clerk of the Council; and ſending for the Lord Mayor, rode to the Croſs in Cheapſide, where Garter, King at Arms, with Trumpets ſounding, proclaimed the Lady Mary, Daughter to King Henry VIII. and Queen Catherine, Queen of England, &c.

THIS Baynard's-Caſtle, as alſo that of Mountfitchet, near adjoining, have been long ſince pulled down, and converted into Timber-Yards, Wood-Wharfs, and private Buildings.

TOWER of Mountfiquit, or Mountfichet.

The next Tower, or Caſtle, banking alſo on the River Thames, was called Mountfiquit's-Caſtle, belonging to a Nobleman, the Baron of Mountfichet, the firſt Builder of it, who came over with William the Conqueror, and was ſirnamed, Le Sire Mountfitchet. This Caſtle he built in a Place not far diſtant from Baynard's-Caſtle, towards the Weſt. This ſame William Mountfitchet, lived in the Reign of Henry I. and was Witneſs to a Charter then granted to the City, for the Sheriffs of LONDON. Richard Mountfiquit lived in the Reign of King John; and in the Year 1213, was baniſhed, by that King, into France, when, perhaps, he cauſed his Caſtle, among thoſe of other Barons, to be demoliſhed. This, after his Return, might be again built; for the total Deſtruction of it was about the Year 1276, when Robert Kilwarby, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, began there the Foundation of the Houſe of the Fryars Preachers Church, commonly called the Black-Fryars, as appeareth by a Charter, dated the 10th of June, in the 4th of Edward I. remaining in the Records of the Tower; wherein it is declared, That Gregory de Rockeſley, Mayor of LONDON, and the Barons of the ſame City, granted, and gave unto the ſaid Archbiſhop Robert, two Lanes, or Ways, next the Street of Baynard's-Caſtle, and the Tower of Mountfiquit, to be applied for the enlarging the ſaid Church and Place, in theſe Words:

" Gregory Rockeſley, Lord Mayor, and the " Barons of LONDON, granted, and gave " to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Robert Kil- " warby, two Lanes, or Ways, lying next to the " Street of Baynard's-Caſtle, and the Tower of " Mountfiquit, or Mountfichet, to be deſtroyed. " In the which Place, the ſaid Robert builded " the late new Church of the Black-Fryars, with " the reſt of the Stones that were left of the " ſaid Tower: For, the beſt and choice Stones, " the Biſhop of LONDON had obtained of " King William the Conqueror, to re-edify the " upper Part of St. Paul's Church, which was " then (by Chance of Fire) decayed.

THE Charter of King Edward II. before-mentioned, ran thus:

EDWARDUS, Dei Gratia, &c. Omnibus, &c.

" EDWARD, Son of King Edward, &c. " To all, &c. Whereas Gregory de " Rockeſley, our Mayor of LONDON, " and the other Barons of the ſaid City, at our " Inſtance, have commonly, and unanimouſly, " granted to the Venerable Father, Robert, Arch- " biſhop of Canterbury, and his Aſſigns, two " Lanes contiguous to his Place of Caſtle-Bay- " nard, and the Tower of Montfichet, to be " ſtopt up for the enlarging of the foreſaid Place, " and to encloſe them; while yet he ſhall aſſign " a like Way to them, and as convenient for the " Commonalty of the ſaid City. And We, un- " derſtanding by the foreſaid Mayor, and Barons " of the ſaid City, that the ſaid Archbiſhop " hath already prepared a better Way, and more " convenient for the ſaid Commonalty, than the " foreſaid Lanes were: We, to the ſaid Arch- " biſhop, and his Aſſigns, for Us and Our " Heirs, as much as in Us is, do grant, ratify, " and confirm, the foreſaid Grant. So that Our " ſaid Barons of LONDON, by Occaſion " of their foreſaid Grant, nor the Archbiſhop, " nor his Aſſigns, on Account of the ſaid chang- " ing of the Ways, be accuſed or moleſted for " Time to come, before our Juſtices Itinerants " at the Tower of LONDON, upon Cauſe " of Purpreſture made of the foreſaid Lanes. " In Teſtimony whereof, &c. Witneſs myſelf " at Weſtminſter, the 10th Day of June, Anno " 1311, in the Fourth Year of Our Reign.

The TOWER on the Thames.

THERE was a Third Tower ſituated on the River Thames, near the ſaid Black-Fryars Church, on the Weſt Part of it, built at the Citizens Charge; but by Licence and Command of Edward I. and Edward II. as appeareth by their Grants. By the latter, [King Edward II.] in the 10th Year of his Reign, an Impoſition was granted towards the Building a new Tower on the Wall, near the Fryars Preachers, which ſtood for two hundred Years; and was, at laſt, taken down by the Command of Sir John Shaa, Mayor of LONDON, in the Year 1502. That this Tower was a large and magnificent Building, we may gather from the following Letter from Edward I. to the City:

" WHEREAS we have granted you for " Aid of the Work of the Walls of " our City, and the Cloſure of the " ſame, divers Cuſtoms of vendible Things, " coming to the ſaid City, to be taken for a cer- " tain Time, We command you, That you cauſe

" to

" to be finiſhed the Wall of the ſaid City, now " begun near the Manſion of the Fryars Preachers, " and a certain good and comely Tower at the " Head of the ſaid Wall within the Water of " Thames there. Wherein We may be received, " and tarry with Honour, to our Eaſe and Satis- " faction in our Comings there; out of the Pence " taken, and to be taken of the ſaid Cuſtoms, " &c. Witneſs myſelf at Weſtminſter, the 8th " Day of July 1276.

A Tower in the Weſt Part of the City.

Another Tower, or Caſtle, there was alſo in the Weſt Part of the City, appertaining to the King; for in the Year 1087, the 20th of William I. the City of LONDON, with St. Paul's Church, being burned, Mauritius, then Biſhop of LONDON, afterwards began the Foundation of a new Church; to forward which Work, King William gave the choice Stones of this Caſtle, ſtanding near the Bank of the River Thames, at the Weſt End of the City. After Mauritius, his Succeſſor Richard, purchaſed the Streets about Paul's Church, encompaſſing the ſame with a Wall of Stone, and Gates. King Henry I. gave to this Richard, ſo much of the Moat, or Wall of the Caſtle, on the Thames Side to the South, as ſhould be needful to make the ſaid Wall of the Church-Yard, and ſo much more as ſhould ſuffice to make a Way without the Wall on the North-ſide.

This Tower or Caſtle, thus deſtroyed, ſeems to have been in the Place where Bridewell now ſtands: For, notwithſtanding the Deſtruction of the ſaid Caſtle, or Tower, the Houſe remained ſo large that many Kings long after lodged therein, and kept their Courts. In the ninth Year of Henry III. the Courts of Law and Juſtice were kept in the King's Houſe, whereſoever he lodged, and not elſewhere: And of the Kings being lodged, and keeping their Law-Courts in this Place, might be ſhewn from many Authorities on Record; but for a plain Proof, this one may ſuffice: Hæc eſt finalis Concordia, facta in Curia Dom. Regis apud Sanct. Brigid. Lond. à Die Sancti Michaelis, in 15 Dies, Anno Regni Johannis Septimo; coram G. Fil. Petri, Euſtacio de Fauconberg, Johanne de Geſtlinge, Osbart Filio Hervey, Walter de Criſping, Juſticiar. & aliis Baronibus Domini Regis.

King's Houſe near St. Bride's.

Moreover, Matthew Paris ſaith, That about the Year 1210, King John, in the twelfth Year of his Reign, ſummoned a Parliament at St. Bride's in London, where he exacted of the Clergy, and religious Perſons, the Sum of 100,000 l. beſides which, the white Monks were compelled to cancel their Privileges, and to pay 40,000 l. to the King, &c. This Houſe near St. Bride's being left, and not at all uſed by the Kings, fell to Ruin, inſomuch, that the very Platform lay waſte, and became a Lay-Stall for Filth and Rubbiſh; only a very good Well remained there.

A great Part of this Ground, in the Weſt, was afterwards given to a Biſhop of Salisbury; the other Part, toward the Eaſt, remained waſte, 'till King Henry VIII. built a ſtately and beautiful Houſe thereon, giving it the Name of Bridewell, from the Pariſh, and the Well there. This Houſe he built on purpoſe to entertain the Emperor Charles V. in, who in the Year 1522, came into this City.

Bridewell built by King Henry VIII.

The Tower of Barbican.

On the Weſt Side the City, near Redcroſs-Street, there was a Tower, commonly called Barbican, or Burhkenning; for this being built a good Height, and on riſing Ground, was formerly uſed as a Watch-Tower for the City; from whence a Man might view all the City towards the South, and ſee alſo into Kent, Suſſex, and Surrey, and every other Way, Eaſt, North, and Weſt.

Other Watch-Towers.

There were of old Time ſome other Watch-Towers, in and about the City, all which were repaired, and others new built, by Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Glouceſter, in the Reign of Henry III. when the Barons were in Arms, and held the City againſt the King: But the Barons being reconciled to his Favour, in the Year 1267, he cauſed all their Burhkennings, Watch-Towers, and Bulwarks, made and repaired by the ſaid Earl, to be pulled down, and the Ditches to be fill'd up; and then was this Burhkenning, among the reſt, demoliſhed; and altho' the Ditch near it, called Hounſditch, was ſtopt up, yet the Street, for a long Time, was called Hounſditch, but now has the Name of Barbican. The Ground on which this Burhkenning, or Watch-Tower ſtood, King Edward III. in the Year 1336, and the tenth of his Reign, gave to Robert Efford, or Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, by the Name of the Manor of Baſe-Court, in the Pariſh of St. Giles's without Cripplegate, LONDON, commonly called the Barbican.

Tower-Royal.

Tower-Royal was antiently the King's Houſe, King Stephen being there lodged, but afterwards called the Queen's Wardrobe. The Princeſs, Mother to King Richard II. in the fourth Year of his Reign, was lodged there, being forced to fly from the Tower of LONDON, when the Rebels poſſeſſed it. On the 15th of June, ſaith Froſard, Wat Tyler being ſlain, the King went to this Princeſs, his Mother, then lodged in the Tower-Royal, called the Queen's Wardrobe, where he tarried two Days and two Nights. Which Tower (ſaith the Record of Edward III. the 36th Year) was in the Pariſh of St. Michael de Pater-noſter, &c.

In the Year 1386, King Richard, with Queen Anne, his Wife, kept their Chriſtmas at Eltham, to which Place Lion, King of Armenia, came to him, under Pretence of making Peace between the Kings of England and France. Whatever the Occaſion was of his coming hither, he found his Account in it; for, beſides innumerable Gifts which he received from the King and the Nobility, the King, when he lay in this Tower-Royal, at the Queen's Wardrobe in LONDON, granted to him by Charter, 1000 l. a Year, during his Life. He being, as he affirmed, chaced out of his Kingdom by the Tartars. What elſe concerns this Tower will be related, when we come to Vintry Ward, in which it ſtood.

Serne's-Tower.

Serne's-Tower, in Bucklersbury, was another Caſtle or Palace of the Kings of England, which King Edward III. in the 18th Year of his Reign, appointed his Exchange of Monies to be kept in; and in the 32d, he gave the ſaid Tower to his free Chapel of St. Stephen's at Weſtminſter.

CHAP. IX.

Of the TOWER of LONDON.

The Tower of LONDON.

WILLIAM Fitz-Stephen ſaith, "The "City of LONDON hath in the Eaſt a "very great and moſt ſtrong Palatine "Tower, whoſe Turrets and Walls do riſe "from a deep Foundation; the Mortar thereof "being tempered with the Blood of Beaſts, &c.

Its Situation.

IT is ſituated upon a large Plot of Ground, called the Tower Liberty, which contains both the Tower-Hills, the Greater and the Leſs, and Part of Eaſt-Smithfield, Roſemary-Lane, Well-Cloſe, &c.

IT is encompaſſed with a deep Ditch, in ſome Places 120 Feet Broad, ſupplied with Water out of the Thames, which is its Southern Boundary. Over this Ditch it hath two Bridges, one for Carts and Coaches, by the Lyon's-Tower; the other for Foot Paſſengers, over a Draw-Bridge on the South Side: Beſides theſe, it hath a Paſſage, or Cut, out of the Thames, which is called Traytor's-Bridge; becauſe, formerly, all Perſons committed to the Tower for Treaſon, were brought this Way into it, by Boat.

THE Compaſs about the Tower, on the Outſide of the Ditch, is 3156 Feet; and the Quantity of the Ground comprehended within the Walls and Ditch, is twelve Acres, and ſome Rods. The whole, with its Liberty aforeſaid, contains ſomewhat above twenty-ſix Acres of Ground.

The Tower, how within the City.
Coke Inſtit. P. 4.

WHEREAS the Tower is ſaid to be within the City of LONDON, "It is, ſaith Lord "Coke, thus to be underſtood: That the antient "Wall of LONDON, the Menſion whereof "yet appeareth, extended through the Tower; "and all that which is environed by the ſaid "Wall, that is, on the Weſt Part of it, is with-"in the City, that is to ſay, in the Pariſh of "Alhallow's Barking, within the Tower Ward. "And the reſt of the Tower on the Eaſt Side of the "antient Wall, is in the County of Middleſex. "This, upon Enquiry, was found 13 Jacob. "Regis, in the Caſe of Sir Thomas Overbury, "who was poiſoned in a Chamber in the Tower, "on the Weſt Side of the old Wall; and there-"fore Weſton, the principal Murtherer, was "tried before Commiſſioners of Oyer and Termi-"ner in LONDON; and ſo was Sir Gervas "Elwayes, Lieutenant of the Tower, as Acceſ-"ſary.

The Tower Liberties.

THERE is a certain Extent of Ground bordering upon the Tower, to which is annexed the peculiar Liberty of being ſubject to no Juriſdiction but that of the Tower it ſelf. This, being upon the Confines of the City, hath oftentimes occaſioned great Diſputes between the Tower Officers, and the Mayor and City of LONDON; as in the 6th of Edward IV. in the 1ſt of Queen Elizabeth; and alſo in the Year 1585, as will be ſhewn more at large in the Chapter of Tower-ſtreet Ward, beſides what followeth.

IN Eaſt-Smithfield, at the End of Hog-Lane, a Gibbet being ſet up, in the Year 1580, for the Execution of one R. Dod, for the Murther of one Mrs. Skinner, in her own Houſe thereabouts; and the Sheriff having brought the Malefactor to be hanged, Sir Owen Hopton, then Lieutenant of the Tower, commanded the Sheriffs Officers back again to the Weſt Side of a Croſs that ſtood there, which ſeems to have been the Boundary of the Tower Liberties; and then taking the Sheriff and the Malefactor into an Houſe, after ſome Stay they all departed; the Gibbet was taken down, and the Malefactor carried to Tyburn in the Afternoon, and there executed.

IN the Year 1589, one John Cox, a Limeman, attempted to build a Wharf in the Thames, at the Watergate, ſituated about the Weſt End of the Tower-Wharf, and had ſet up his Frame. This Place was ſaid to be within the Liberties of the City of LONDON; but he had the Countenance of an Officer of the Tower, as he pretended. This Building, by narrowing the Paſſage in that Place to the River Thames, would have been a great Inconvenience to many of her Majeſty's Subjects; whereupon Sir Richard Martin, Lord Mayor, gave Orders to put a Stop to it, which Cox would not obey; but when one from the Lord Mayor commanded him to forbear, he lifted up his Staff to ſtrike him, and ſtill proceeded. Upon which, the Mayor complained to the Lord Treaſurer, deſiring that Cox might be commanded to take away his Frame, and leave off his Work. And withal he beſeeched his Lordſhip, That whereas many Times before, Variances had ariſen between the City and the Officers of the Tower, about Encroachments upon the common Soil within the Liberties of the City, which ſome Perſons, with regard to their private Profit, had ſuppoſed to appertain to the Officers of the Tower; and had therefore procured Grants from ſome Officers unto themſelves, and by that Means raiſed Contention between the City and the Lieutenant of the Tower; he humbly beſeeched his Lordſhip to extend his Favour ſo far to the City, that the Titles on each Side might be examined into, that all Occaſions of Controverſy between the City and Lieutenant, and other the Queen's Officers of the Tower, might be put an End to.

ABOUT the ſame Time, a dangerous Quarrel happened, concerning the ſaid Liberties of the Tower. On a Sunday, the Apprentices of LONDON took Occaſion to make an Inſurrection, and held their Rendezvous near, or within the Liberties. Thither the Lord Mayor, the Sheriffs, and their Attendants came to them to quell the Tumult, and in the Hurly-Burly, came, it ſeems, within the Liberties; whereat ſome of the People of the Tower were moved, as at an Infringement on their Liberties, and began to reſiſt the Mayor and his Attendants: But of this, as an Affront offer'd to him and the City, he complained to the Queen and Council againſt the Lieutenant Sir Michael Blount, who, in his own Vindication, gave the following Account of what he had done, viz. That as ſoon as he was advertiſed of the Tumult, being in his Lodging in the Tower, he went out of the Gate, in his Doublet, Hoſe and Slippers, with only a little Walking-Staff in his Hand, and, by a civil Meſſage, ſent only by one Man, acquainted the Lord Mayor that his Entering within the Liberties bred Offence, and deſired him to remember the Freedom of the Place. That he neither by Word, Meſſage, or any Action, commanded or conſented to any Violence, being offered to the Lord

Lord Mayor, or Sheriffs, or any of their Company; but did his Endeavour to appeaſe the Tumult, in a peaceable Manner. That he put his own Life in Danger, by going to ſuppreſs the Diſorder, and both reſtrain'd his own, and her Majeſty's Servants, from offering any Violence; and, with his own Hands, drew them, and held them, within the Gates of the Tower. That the Meſſenger he ſent to the Lord Mayor, in a courteous Manner, was aſſaulted, and ill uſed; and, that what Violence was offered, came from the Lord Mayor's Company. All which he was ready to aver and prove, before the Lords of her Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy Council.

THE Buſineſs of ſettling the Bounds between the City and the Tower, was not determined in the Year 1591; altho' the Lord Treaſurer had given Promiſe, that there ſhould ſpeedily be iſſued forth a Commiſſion for that Purpoſe. This Sir William Webb, Mayor, by Letter, earneſtly intreated him to, ſaying, It might otherwiſe be a Cauſe of Trouble and Diſſention hereafter, when the Officers of both Places ſhould have Occaſion to viſit their ſaid Bounds, according to Order. In this Letter, the Lord Treaſurer wrote, with his own Hand, the Names of the Perſons to whom the aboveſaid Commiſſion ſhould be directed, viz. the Queen's two Chief Juſtices, Chief Baron Forteſcue, and the Maſter of St. Catharine's.

IN the Mayoralty of Sir John Spenſer, in the Year 1595, the Affair was not adjuſted: For certain Apprentices, in the Month of June, riſing again in a tumultuous Manner in ſeveral Parts of the City, and chiefly taking their Shelter here, the Mayor, with the Sword-Bearer, and other Officers, came to ſuppreſs them; but the Lieutenant's Men hurt the Sword-Bearer, and pulled down his Sword, although the Lieutenant was preſent: Of which he complained to the Lord Treaſurer.

THE Bounds in Diſpute, were at Little-Tower-Hill, the Poſtern, and Eaſt-Smithfield, on one Side; and on the other, the Extent of Tower-Hill, and towards Barking Church. The Particulars of which will appear, by a Paper in the Tower, entitled, Points of Controverſy between the City and Lieutenant of the Tower, and other Officers there, as yet, remaining undecided.

I. IT is ſaid for the City, That the Poſtern Gate in the End of London-Wall, near the Tower of LONDON, is the City's: And that the Houſes built upon, and near unto the ſaid Wall and Poſtern, are the City's, and were all built by the City; and that the City had, and ought to have, the Profit and Juriſdiction thereof: Wherein the City is diſturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

II. THAT all the void Ground within the Poſtern-Gate of London-Wall, near the Tower of LONDON, viz. the whole Hill, and Ground where the Scaffold ſtandeth for the Execution of Traitors, and where the Sheriffs of LONDON receive Priſoners from the Tower to be executed, (from which Place the Bound-Stone is removed, by Mr. Lieutenant's Command) with the Water-Gate, and the Gardens under London-Wall, and certain Houſes and Sheds built upon the Soil there, are the City's, and within the Liberties and Freedom of the City of LONDON, and within the Pariſh of Alhallows Barking, in the Ward of the Tower of LONDON; and ſo, Time out of Mind, have been, and of Right ought to be. And that the City hath had, and ought to have, the Juriſdiction thereof: Wherein they are likewiſe diſturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

III. THAT the whole Ground and Soil, called the Tower-Hill, without the Poſtern-Gate, being Parcel of Eaſt-Smithfield, is the City's, and within the Liberties, Suburbs, and Freedom of the City: And that the City hath had, and ought to have, the Profits and Juriſdiction thereof. Wherein they are likewiſe diſturbed by Mr. Lieutenant.

IV. WHERE Mr. Lieutenant holdeth Plea in the Court of the Tower, for all Matters of Debt, Treſpaſſes, &c. be the ſame never ſo great, the Truth is, that that Court is only a Court Baron, and no Court of Record: And no Plea ought there to be holden for any other Matter, than may ordinarily be holden in the Court Baron at the Common Law.

V. THERE be Exactions unjuſtly required and taken of Victuallers, bringing Victuals, Fuel, and other Things by Water to the City; which are taken by the Officers of the Tower, in the Name of Prizage, directly contrary to the Liberties of the City, granted by her Majeſty's Progenitors, and confirmed by her Majeſty.

VI. THERE be Exactions unjuſtly required and taken at the common Watergate, near the Tower, of Citizens, and others, bringing Joiners Ware, and other Stuff, over the Water, from Southwark, and other Places; which was ever wont to be free, and no ſuch Exactions uſed to be taken there.

VII. THERE be other Exactions alſo demanded and taken of Poor, and others, for drying of Cloaths, whitning of Cloths, and ſuch like, both within and without LONDON Walls; which was alſo wont to be free, and no ſuch Exactions uſed to be taken.

THERE is another Paper, entitled,

A brief Note, or Abſtract of Proofs, on the Part of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, touching the Differences between the Lieutenant and them.

I. CONCERNING the Poſtern. It appears by divers Accounts, beginning Anno 32 Edward I. and ſo continuing till Anno 7 Henry VIII. That the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, did repair the Poſtern, and provided Locks and Keys for it, and ſcowred the Ditch there, to their great Charge. That it was called ſometime Poſterna apud Turrem; ſometimes juxta Turrem, and ſometime the Poſtern in the Tower Ditch.

THAT they appointed Keepers of it, [the Poſtern-Gate] as all other Gates of the City; and in Time of Danger, appointed Men to guard it: And they ſometimes gave Charge to theſe Keepers, that they ſuffered not Leprous Perſons to enter into it; viz. 5 Edward II. and 19 Edward III.

IN the 29th of Henry VIII. there was made a Preſentment by the Wardmote Inqueſt of LONDON, That the Dwellers there, were common Bawds; and that they lodged ſuſpicious Perſons; uſing theſe Words, The Poſtern within our Ward.

THE Lieutenant of the Tower, in Anſwer to this, ſaid, That the Citizens had a Poſtern, but it was not this now in Queſtion, but a Poſtern in another Place further to the North in London-Wall. To which the City replied, That by all Proofs, the Poſtern which the City had, muſt be a Place of Building and Habitation: But the ſuppoſed Place never was but a Bulwark of Stone; which ſome few Years paſt was taken down, as was teſtified by Witneſſes. Again, the Poſtern which the City had, muſt be a Place of common Paſſage in and out of the City; which the ſuppoſed Poſtern never was, nor ever could be; for it it was an Entry into the Bulwark now decayed; and the great Tower-Ditch lieth along to it, which could be no Paſſage, nor ever was, by Bridge, or otherwiſe.

ALSO, it muſt be at the Tower Ditch, as the Evidence doth plainly appear; which the ſuppoſed Place is not.

MOREOVER, Mr. Lieutenant did make no Proof for the Poſtern, but only ſince King Edward the IVth's Time; and that only a Proof of Poſſeſſion, viz. that they have Leaſed it, and held it ever ſince. Whereas, indeed, the Controverſy hath been as old between the City and them, at the leaſt; and therefore their Poſſeſſion, no quiet Poſſeſſion. And ſo great and old an Adverſary as the Lieutenant of the Tower being in Poſſeſſion, is not eaſily gotten out, eſpecially ſhadowing himſelf under Colour of defending the Queen's Right.

II. TOUCHING the Soil of the Tower-Hill, both within and without the Poſtern.

THAT it was proved in the City's Behalf from Time to Time, that they have mended the Way on the Hill within the Poſtern, and erected, and mended the Scaffold, Gallows, and the Gibbets thereon. And when ſome other Perſons, Anno 8. Edward 4. erected Gallows there, the King, by his Proclamation diſclaimed it, and commanded it ſhould be taken in Derogation of the Franchiſes, Liberties, and Privileges of the City. That it was not till the 6th of Edward IV. they did leaſe Gardens here, and received Rents for the ſame. That in that Year of King Edward IV. they granted the Queen certain Grounds at Tower-Hill near the Poſtern, to build a Chapel on, and from thence the Rents of the City's Gardens ceaſed, and the Queen's Majeſty holdeth the Grounds to this Day.

THAT Preſentments have been made before the Coroner of LONDON, touching the Death of Men on Tower-Hill, and in the Tower-Ditch, named in each Place in ſome Pariſh in LONDON.

THAT the Pariſhioners of Barking in the Tower-Ward, LONDON, had uſed in their Perambulation to compaſs the Tower-Hill within the Poſtern.

THAT the Sheriffs of LONDON have uſually received Priſoners out of the Tower, at a Stone near Outergate or Bulwark, to which Place the Liberties of the City reached; but by Order of ſome of the Lieutenants of the Tower, that Stone was taken away.

THAT touching the Tower-Hill without the Poſtern, it appeared in 19 Edward II. That the City was at Charge to make a Ditch there at the Poſtern. That in 13 Richard II. the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens, ſold to the Abbot of Grace's, (which is at the fartheſt Part of the ſaid Tower-Hill toward the Eaſt) two waſte Pieces of Ground, lying on Tower-Hill, on the Weſt Part of the Abbey. That divers antient Preſentments had been made within LONDON, of Encroachments committed in that Place, in 21 Henry VII. and in 21 and 22 Henry VIII. That the Watering-Place at the End of the Tower-Ditch, next to the Poſtern, was defective for Want of Rails; and the Reparation belonged to the Chamber of LONDON. It appeared by antient Accounts, that the Tower-Ditch, without the Poſtern, and certain Vaults and Sewers, near the Poſtern, were cleanſed at the Charge of the City. And that at this Day, (when the Controverſy was on Foot, which was in Queen Elizabeth's Reign,) and Time out of Mind, the City held and leaſed out divers Gardens, lying upon the Poſtern, where Houſes were then newly built.

III. TOUCHING the Watergate. In 3 Edw. IV. It was, by Act of Common-Council, appointed to be one of the Places whereRuſh-Boats ſhould be brought for Sale of Ruſhes.

THE ſame Watergate, and the Places near joining to it, had from Time to Time been paved at the Charge of the City.

THE better to underſtand the Pleas on both Sides, here followeth,

The Lieutenant of the Tower his Anſwer to the City's Breviate.

THAT the City by their firſt Article challenged a Poſtern ſituated, as in their own Records is ſpecified, ſometimes juxta, ſometimes prope, ſometimes apud Turrim, which proves, that the Precinct of the Tower Liberty ſhould extend to the Poſtern; but aſſigned no certain Place where the ſaid Poſtern was ſeated.

THAT the ſecond and third Articles made nothing to their Titles. For that they made no direct Proof where that Poſtern ſtood, other than the Poſtern deſcribed in their antient Map; which is moſt probable the Poſtern, whereunto they did make their Challenge. Their Preſentment in Wardmote can give them no Title to the Queen's Soil.

IT is not confeſſed, that the City had a Poſtern near the Poſtern now in Queſtion; and it is abſolutely denied, that any Poſtern ſhould be a common Paſſage, but in the right of Nature ought to be a ſmall Sally only, to view the outward Part of the Wall, and the Ditch, or for ſome privy Way of Paſſage along the Ditch in Time of Danger.

TO all their Allegations it is reply'd, That their Proofs, being only out of their own Manuſcripts, and Memorials, are not of Force ſufficient to diſinherit any Subject of his juſt Poſſeſſion and Title, much leſs her Majeſty.

AS for the Mark-Stone, where the Sheriff uſed to receive the Priſoners, which they would infer to be the City Boundary, it was no Bound Stone, but a looſe Stone. And the Boundaries of LONDON had always the City Arms, or other Mark ſet on them, which this had not, neither could have, being ſo ſmall.

THEIR fee'd Chronicler, Mr. Stow, in ſetting out the Boundaries of the Liberty of Cree-Church, within Aldgate, lately ſold, by the Lord Thomas Howard, to the City, doth abuttal it thus, viz. From Aldgate unto the Gate of the Bailiffs of the Tower, called Congate, and all the Lane, called Chick-Lane, &c. By this, it appeareth, that the Tower had a Poſtern, and a Gate next unto Eaſt-Smithfield, which can be no other but the Tower-Poſtern, now in her Majeſty's Poſſeſſion.

IN 9 Edward II. the Mayor of LONDON, John Giſors, and Citizens, ſubmit themſelves to the King's Pleaſure, for breaking down the King's Mud Wall, over-againſt the outward Part of the King's Tower. And in the 10th Year of the ſaid King, they paid a Fine of a thouſand Marks for the Offence, and repaired the Wall.

FOR Herbage of the Place, without the Tower, there was anſwer'd unto the King, upon an Account in 16 Edward II. for one Year 3 s. 6 d. And in 29 Edward II. pro Herbagio unius Placæ extra Poſternam veteram, v. Sol. i. e. For Herbage of a Place without the old Poſtern, 5 s.

De Siccatione Pellium in Eaſt-Smithfield, nichil hoc Anno de eo quod propter Perturbationem Hominum Civitatis commotam, nichil inde levari potuerit, i. e. Concerning drying Pells in Eaſt-Smithfield, nothing this Year, for nothing could be levied thence, by reaſon of a Diſturbance raiſed by the Citizens.

Anno 20 Edward. II. uſque ad Annum primum Edward. III. xi li.

De

De Herbagio Placæ extra Poſternam, ſeu de Pellibus ſiccandis ſuper Placeas in East-Smithfield, extra Portam ejuſdem Turris, non reſpond. Temp. Prædict.

Anno 2 Edward. III. xi li.

THE free Chapel of St. Mary Grace's, is abutalled by Record to lie next the Tower of LONDON, 25 Edward III. 36 Henry III.

THE King granted to the Abbot of St. Mary Grace's, juxta Turrim, all his Tenements in the Pariſh of St. Botolph's without Aldgate, between the Place called Tower-Hill, and Eaſt-Smithfield on the North Part, and a green Place of the King's Land there on the South Part, 36 Edw. III.

THE King granted to the Maſter, Brothers and Chaplain, and Siſters of St. Catherine's, that they for ever ſhould have one Fair upon Tower-Hill, over-againſt the Abbot of Grace's, upon the King's Ground, in all Places thereof; 20 Henry VI.

IT was preſented by the Inqueſt, ſworn before Sir Anthony Kyngeſton, Knight, High Conſtable of the Tower, that the King's Ground and Liberty of the Tower, did begin at the Watergate next the Ram's-Head in Petty Wales, and ſo ſtretched North unto a Mud Wall, called Pyke's Garden, now being Rafe Johnſon's, on this Side the Crutched Fryars, and ſo ſtrait Eaſt unto the Wall of LONDON, with nine Gardens above the Poſtern, and above the Broken Tower, right unto the midſt of Hog-Lane End, and ſo ſtrait unto the Thames; and then ſix Feet without the Stairs at the Eaſt Gate of the Tower, towards St. Catharine's, 27 Henry VIII.

BY all which it appears, that the Precinct of the Tower, begins at the Tower Dock, and extends unto the End of Tower-ſtreet, and ſo is deſcribed to lie juxta Barking Church on the Weſt Side, juxta Crutched Fryars on the North, juxta St. Mary Grace's and St. Catharine's on the Eaſt; juxta can have no other Conſtruction, but Conjunctim, ſo as there cannot be any Thing Interpoſitum, i. e. Put between: And therefore LONDON is ſecluded to have any Soil of Liberty between Barking Church, and Crutched Fryars, St. Mary Grace's, and St. Catharine's.

WE are now to look within the Tower, which is a Pariſh of itſelf, and the Church is called St. Peter's ad Vincula, within the Tower. It is ſaid ſome Time to be the Rectory, ſome Time the Chapelry of St. Peter's. The Bounds of this Pariſh are the whole Compaſs of the Tower, and ſome Ground without, as Little Tower-Hill, which was therefore called the King's Soil of Little Tower-Hill, joining to which was a Place called the King's Waſte of Roſemary-Lane, or Hog-Lane: But theſe Boundaries have been an old Controverſy between the Magiſtrates of the City and the Officers of the Tower.

St. Peter's Church in the Tower.

THIS Church is ſituate at the North Weſt Angle of Northumberland Walk, at the End of the new Armoury, and fronting the Parade; its Walls are built of bolder and ſquared Stone, and its Roof ſupported by Arches and Columns of the Gothick Order; the Floor is paved with Stone, and there are two Iſles.

THE Eaſt End, and more than half down the Sides, is wainſcotted, and the Pillars caſed with Oak about eight Feet high; it is alſo pewed, and the Pulpit and Altar-piece are all of the ſame Wood, the latter is about 14 Feet high, with a Corniſh and Pediment, but the Decalogue is not there depenciled, tho' the Tables are arched, as thoſe uſually for the Commandments, and placed under a Cherub between two Feſtoons, &c. The Roof is ceiled with Timber. The Dimenſions are, Length 66 Feet, Breadth 54, Altitude about 24.

THE Living is a Rectory in the Gift of the King, valued at about 60 l. per Annum; the preſent Incumbent is the Reverend Mr. Hawkins, paid by the King, as Miniſter of the Tower Garriſon, rated in the King's Books 18 l. 3 s. 4 d. There is no Lecture, nor Organ, Prayers are Wedneſdays, Fridays, and Holidays, about eleven. The Rector hereof has no Inſtitution and Induction, and the Living is exempt from Archiepiſcopal Juriſdiction.

THE antient Tithes and Benefits belonging to the Rector of this Church, appears in Part by an old Record, 8 Henry V. Pro Joanne Salmonby Rectore Capelle in Turre, &c. whereby is granted to him 60 s. Rent, and the Appurtenances in Candlewick-ſtreet, LONDON, for and towards his Subſiſtance 38 s. 8 d. for that Tenement on Tower-Hill and Little Wales, 58 s. per Annum; from the Hoſpital of St. Catharine's 10 Marks per Annum, paid by the Conſtable of the Tower; and 20 s. per Annum of his good Will; 13 s. per Annum from the Maſter of the Mint; and of every Artificer and Stipendiary a certain Tithe out of their Wages and Stipends. This Church is commonly called St. Peter's in the Tower, and antiently called The Free Chapel of St. Peter's in the Tower. The Incumbent of it was called the Rector of St. Peter's. Several Chaplains alſo belonged to it, to perform ſacred Offices. All which were preſented by the King.

THUS in 21 Edw. IV. the Rectory was granted to William Fitz Herbert, Clerk, by Patent for Term of his Life. King Edward III. ſeems to have been the Founder. For it appears by the Tower Records, that in the 28th of his Reign, for the Rector and three Chaplains, there appointed by the King, he granted certain Rents, at a certain Cuſtom of Stabotes or Stallotes, which were a kind of Fiſher Boats. And two Years after, to wit, in the 30th of his Reign, he added two Chaplains more. And for the Maintenance of the Rector, and five Chaplains of this St. Peter's, there were granted by the King certain Allowances to be paid for ſome Tenements in LONDON, and at Tower-Hill and Petty Wales. And moreover, Fees of the Conſtable, and of the Officers, and of the Moneyers. And in the 36th of the ſame King Edward the Founder, he granted a Chaplainſhip. Conceſſ. Tho. de O. unam perpetuam Capellaniam ſive Cantariam, i. e. To Thomas de O. one perpetual Chaplainſhip, or Chantry in the Chapel there. And laſtly, there is, 27 Henry VI. a Confirmation of the King's Grants and Donations to the Rector here.

THIS Church, no doubt, was formerly very large and ſpacious, ſince the Kings ſometimes went thither themſelves to their Devotions. In Henry III's Time, here were two Stalls for the King and Queen: And it had two Chancels belonging to it. The Chancel of St. Peter, and the Chancel of St. Mary. It was adorned alſo with St. Mary and her Shrine, and with the Images of St. Peter, St. Nicholas, and St. Catharine. There is a Letter mandatory from the King to the Keeper of the Tower Works, in the 25th Henry III. Anno 1241, for the Repair, and farther adorning this Church; which runs thus:

" Rex eiſdem [Cuſtodibus Operationis

HERE is a Monument erected to the Memory of him and his Wife, which ſtood formerly in the Middle of the Church; but hath been removed to the Side, againſt the North Wall. His Figure is in Armour; and hath a Collar gilded, which ſeems to be a Collar of SS about his Neck, and a Roſe hanging before. Upon the Edges of the Stone, the Figure lies upon, is this Inſcription. Jacent Corpora Richardi Cholmondeley Militis, & Dominæ Eliſabethæ Conjugis ſuæ. Qui ---- Quorum omnibus Deus propitietur. Amen.

Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex, who, from a Blackſmith's Son at Putney, came to be a great Favourite of King Henry VIII. but at laſt loſt his Head on Tower-Hill, and was here buried, Anno 1540.

ON the North Side of the Altar of this Church, is a very ſtately Monument, with Columns and Entablement of the Corinthian Order, in Memory of Sir Richard and Sir Michael Blount, both ſucceſſively Lieutenants of the Tower. Sir Richard died the 11th of Auguſt, 1564; and Dame Mary, Wife of Sir Michael Blount, one of the Co-heirs of Thomas Moor of Biſſiter, died December the 22d, 1592.

THERE is on the Pavement, an engraven Stone for Cobham Doves, of Dover, Mariner, the 20th of Auguſt, 1608.

ON the South Side of the Chancel is a Marble Monument in Memory of Sir Allen Apſley, Knt. fourteen Years Lieutenant of the Tower, and one and twenty Victualler of the Royal Navy. He died the 24th of May, 1630.

CLOSE by this are the Buſto's of a Man and a Woman, and the Figures of two very young Children, cumbant on their Left-Side, adorned with the Figures of two Cupids cut in Marble, but with no Inſcription.

ON the Pavement is a Stone for John Agges, Yeoman, Warder of the Tower 33 Years: Died the 20th of January, 1640.

AND one for Talbot Edwards, late Keeper of his Majeſty's Regalia; 30th of September 1674. Aged 80.

ON the North Side of the Church is a neat black and white Marble Monument, adorned with two Chambers of Cannon, inſtead of Columns, lumns, adorn'd with the Figure of a Ship under Sail, done in Baſſo Relievo; alſo a Cherub, Cartouches, &c. with this Inſcription done in Gold Letters on Black Marble.

After that he betook himſelf to " his Majeſty's Fleet, where he ſerv'd at Sea " till the late unhappy Rebellion, and during " that Rebellion, in his Majeſty's Service by " Land; after whoſe Death he voluntarily fol- " lowed the Command of Prince Rupert, for " the Space of fifteen Years, both in his Expe- " dition at Sea, and in the Wars of Germany, " till his now Majeſty's happy Reſtoration; " ſince which Time, he commanded ſome of " his Majeſty's Ships in the firſt War againſt " the Dutch: And in Recompence of his faith- " ful Service, his Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed " to elect him Maſter-Gunner of England. In " which Capacity he departed this Life, (which " he led ſingle) the laſt Day of April, Anno " Dom. 1677. in the 28th Year of his Majeſty's " Reign. Aged 74 Years.

Against a Pillar fronting Southward, is a great white Marble Monument, enriched with Trophy Work, an Urn, Cherub, and Palm Branches, with this Inſcription:

Under the Communion-Table lies the Body of James Scott, Duke of Monmouth, Natural Son to King Charles II. who ſome, indeed, pretend was married to the Duke's Mother, altho' the King declared the contrary in the Publick Gazette.

This unfortunate Gentleman coming over from Holland in a hoſtile Manner, and levying War againſt King James II. loſt his Head for the ſame on Tower-Hill, on July the 15th 1685, the very next Day after his being brought to Town, having been routed and taken at the Battle of Sedgmore.

Also within the Altar Rails, was buried George Lord Jefferies, Baron of Wem, Lord Chancellor of England, who, when he was Lord Chief Juſtice, being ſent into the Weſt, with a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, to try and judge thoſe who had been concerned in the Rebellion againſt King James II. condemned and executed ſuch Numbers of Men, that he made it his Boaſt, " That he had hanged more Men, " than all the Judges of England ſince William " the Conqueror.

After the Revolution, being committed Priſoner to the Tower, he died there, as ſome will have it, of Grief, at the latter End of the Year 1688.

At the North Eaſt Angle of the Church, a Monument of white Marble, with his Buſto, is erected for William Bridges, Eſq; on which is this Inſcription;

" He died October 30, 1714, and lies buried at " the Eaſt End of this Chapel.

In the Pavement in the South Iſle is a Stone with this Inſcription:

Near that, another with the following Inſcription:

" Here lieth the Bodies of Elizabeth and " Hannah, Daughters of John and Elizabeth " Jones, of the Tower. They departed this " Life, Elizabeth on the 6th of Auguſt 1704; " and Hannah on the 31ſt of January 1706: As " alſo the Body of Mr. John Briſtow, who de- " parted this Life the 30th of November 1718.

How ſoon alas! for in his early Bloom,
In Prime of Life he meets an earthly Tomb;
As by the Number of his Days appears,
Which reach'd but juſt to one and twenty Years.
O! where's that ſtubborn Soul that can forbear,
Hearing this Loſs, and not let fall a Tear?

NEAR the Communion-Table is a Stone, thus inſcribed,

" HERE lies the Body of Mr. Edward Silveſter, eldeſt Son of Mr. Thomas and Mrs. Sarah Silveſter, who departed this Life, the 12th of October, 1718, in the 28th Year of his Age.

" ALSO the Body of Thomas Silveſter, the youngeſt Son of Thomas and Sarah Silveſter, who departed this Life, the 27th Day of May, 1727, in the 28th Year of his Age.

A little lower in the South Iſle, on a white Marble Stone in the Pavement, is this Inſcription.

" HERE lies Catharine, the beloved Wife of the Honourable Colonel Williamſon, Deputy-Lieutenant of the Tower, who lived eſteem'd, and died lamented by all who knew her, March the 25th, 1729.

IN the ſame Iſle, a whole Family lies buried under a Stone with this Inſcription.

" To the Memory of Elizabeth, Wife of James Whittaker, who died September the 11th 1731, aged 39; and of William, their ſecond, and Thomas, their third Son. And to the Memory of James Whittaker, eldeſt Son of the ſaid James and Elizabeth, who died April the 7th, 1732, aged 9.

Memor eſto brevis ævi.

" AND to the Memory of James Whittaker, Gent. Husband of the aboveſaid Elizabeth, and Father of the ſaid Children, who died December the 4th, 1732, aged 39.

See how the Juſt, the Virtuous, and the Strong,
The Beautiful, the Innocent, the Young,
Here, in promiſcuous Duſt, together lie,
Reflect on this, depart, and learn to die.

THE laſt Perſon mention'd on this Grave-Stone died of the Bite of a Mad Dog.

St. John's Chapel in the Tower.

BESIDES the Chapel or Church of St. Peter, there was formerly another Chapel, in the White Tower, for the more private Uſe of the Kings and Queens when they reſided in the Tower. This aſcends by a great many Steps; it is dark and venerable for the Pillars, which are very antique. The Uſe it is at preſent put to, is for repoſiting the old Records; but in antient Times, when it was uſed, as a Chapel, Care was taken for the Repairs thereof, as was for that of St. Peter's. And King Henry III. the ſame Day that he order'd the Repairs of the latter, did the ſame for this Chapel of St. John, for that was the Saint it was dedicated to; as appears by this Record.

Rex Cuſtodibus Operationis Turris LONDON. Sal. precipimus vobis, &c. Wherein, after Command given for amending the Leaden Gutters, and doing other Things needful for the Great Tower, he proceeded to require them alſo to take Care of the Repair, and Adorning of the Chapel there.

" DEALBARI etiam faciatis totam Capellam Sancti Johannis Evangeliſtæ, in eadem Turri. Et fieri faciatis in eadem Capella tres Feneſtras vitreas, unam Scil. ex Parte Boreali cum quadam Mariola tenente Puerum ſuum, reliquam in Parte Auſtrali (cum Imagine) de Trinitate; & tertiam de Sancto Johanne Apoſtolo & Evangeliſta in eadem Parte Auſtrali. Et depingi faciatis Patibulum & Trabem ultra Altare ejuſdem Capel. benè & bonis Coloribus. Et fieri faciatis & depingi duas Imagines pulchras, ubi melius & decentius fieri poſſint in eadem Capell. unam de Sancto Edwardo tenente anulum, et donante et tendente Sancto Johan. Evangeliſta, &c.

THAT is, " And that ye cauſe the whole Chapel of St. John Evangeliſt in the ſaid Tower to be whited. And that ye cauſe three Glaſs Windows in the ſame Chapel to be made; to wit, one on the North Side, with a certain Little Mary holding her Child; the other on the South Part, with the Image of the Trinity, and the third of St. John the Apoſtle and Evangeliſt on the ſame South Part; and that ye cauſe the Croſs and the Beam (i. e. the Rood) beyond the Altar of the ſame Chapel, to be painted well, and with good Colours. And that ye cauſe to be made and painted two fair Images, where more conveniently and decently they may be done in the ſame Chapel, one of St. Edward holding a Ring, and giving and reaching it out to St. John Evangeliſt, &c.

DENOTING thereby, perhaps, that King to be Founder of the Chapel; and this the Ceremony in thoſe Days of dedicating holy Places to the Saints.

Of the GOVERNOR and Principal OFFICERS of the Tower.

Conſtable of the Tower.

THE Chief Officer of the Tower of LONDON is called the Conſtable, which is a Poſt of high Honour as well as great Truſt. Othowerus was the firſt Conſtable, in the Reign of King Stephen; and Acolivillus, Otto, Godfrey Magnaville, Earl of Eſſex, his Succeſſors in the ſame Reign.

Henry Fitz-Aucher, and Othou, were Conſtables of the Tower in the Reign of Henry III. but an exact Liſt of all the Perſons, who have enjoyed this high Truſt is not to be come at; however, the five following are mentioned in a Patent of King Richard II. granted to Sir Thomas Murrieux, viz. John Darcy, John de Beauchamp, Robert le Morle, Richard la Vache, and Alan de Buxhil. John Holland, Duke of Exeter, was Conſtable of the Tower, in the Reigns of King Henry V. and King Henry VI.

IN the firſt Year of the Reign of Richard III. Robert Brackenbury, Eſq; was conſtituted Conſtable of the Tower, for his Life; but an extraordinary Command was once iſſued out from the King to him, to ſurrender up the Keys of the Tower (which was in Effect to give up all his Power) to Sir James Tyrrel, only for the Space of a Night, for the ordering of ſome ſpecial Matters there. Which was in Truth, to murther the two young Princes, Edward and Richard. Which the ſaid Conſtable, being privately dealt with about the Buſineſs, honourably declined. But Tyrrel, a Man of a more profligate Conſcience, undertook; and for that Purpoſe was in a ſort Conſtable of the Tower for that black Night. To this Knight the the King was very bountiful, and conferred on him many Lands and Offices, if they could but have made his Mind eaſy under the Weight of his Guilt.

Brackenbury, altho' he had the Conſtableſhip for Life, was, notwithſtanding, diſcharged in the Year 1585, the 1ſt of Henry VII. and a Nobleman, viz. the Earl of Oxford, ſucceeded him in that honourable Employment.

Sir Thomas Lovel was Conſtable under the Reign of Henry VIII. and afterwards, when Anna Bullen was committed to the Tower, Sir Anthony Kyngeſton was Conſtable.

In the Reign of King Edward VI. Sir John Gage, Knight, was Conſtable, a Man of great Quality, ſometime Comptroller of the Houſhold to King Henry VIII. afterwards a Privy Counſellor to the ſame Prince. In the Month of October 1552, were Articles and Ordinances eſtabliſhed by the King's Majeſty for Sir John Gage, Conſtable of the Tower, and Sir Edward Warner, Lieutenant, and the Yeomen of the Guard, with others appointed to give Attendance in the Tower of LONDON, for the ſure keeping of the ſame, to be obſerved and kept upon Pains therein limited; but towards the latter End of that Reign he was diſcharged, by the Intereſt of the great Duke of Northumberland, who then govern'd all things; and Clinton, Earl of Lincoln, Lord Admiral, towards the very Concluſion of King Edward's Life, was placed there politickly by the ſaid Duke, as Conſtable, ſuppoſing him his aſſured Friend and Creature, the better to bring to bear the Pretenſions of Lady Jane Grey to the Crown, who was married to the Duke's Son: But he was deceived, for that Earl ſoon turned to the Lady Mary's Intereſts, and made his former Miſtreſs, Queen Jane, his Priſoner. And when Queen Mary came to the Throne, ſhe replaced Sir John Gage.

Anno 1552, May the 28th, a Patent was granted to Sir Edward Bray, Knight, of the Conſtableſhip of the Tower, in Reverſion, after the Death of Gage, with the Annual Fee of 100 l. durante Vita.

Privileges of the Conſtable.

The Conſtable had many great Privileges due to him from the Ships of the Merchants of LONDON, viz. from every Ship laden with Wines coming into the Port of LONDON, one Flagon of Wine before the Maſt, and another behind it. From every Boat laden with Oyſters, Muſcles, or Cockles, one Maund. From every Boat laden with Ruſhes, an Armfull. Every Ship, Barge, Boat, or other Veſſel, belong'd to him, that was ſtraying upon the Banks of the Thames, between Graveſend and London-Bridge, if no Perſon was found in the ſame. Every Swan, or Cygnet, which came, or returned, upon the ſaid Banks in ſwimming, from the ſaid Bridge to Graveſend. Every Beaſt, that by Misfortune, fell into the Water of the Thames, ſwimming between the aforeſaid Bounds, without the Protection of any, &c.

Upon certain Liberties and Franchiſes being granted by King Richard II. to the Citizens, they refuſed to allow theſe Duties to the Conſtable: Whereupon, Sir Thomas Murrieux, Conſtable, petitioned the ſaid King, who iſſued out his Proclamation, that the before-mention'd Privileges of the Conſtable ſhould be in Force, notwithſtanding any thing granted to the City; and this was ratified by Parliament, as appears by the following Inſtrument.

Convenit cum Recordo.

This was a ſecond Inſtrument granted to Sir Thomas Murrieux, to ratify his Privileges, as Conſtable of the Tower, in Conſequence of a Petition from him to the King and Parliament, upon their being diſputed by the City. The former Grant of King Richard II. was three Years before; that is, in the ſixth Year of his Reign; directed to the Mayor and Commons of the City, to this Effect in Engliſh:

" RICHARD, by the Grace of God,
" King of England and France, and Lord of " Ireland, to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LON-" DON, ſendeth Greeting. Foraſmuch as we " have underſtood, that the Conſtables of our " Tower of LONDON, Time out of Mind,
" even to the Time now laſt paſt; and in parti" cular John Darcy, John de Beauchamp, Ro- " bert le Morle, Richard la Vache, and Alan de
" Buxhil, heretofore Conſtables of the ſaid
" Tower, have had the Cuſtoms, Pence, and " Profits under-written, by Right belonging to
" the aforeſaid Tower, and in quiet Manner
" taken them by themſelves, or their Servants:
" To wit, of every Boat laden with Ruſhes
" brought to the aforeſaid City, ſuch a Quantity
" of Ruſhes to be laid upon Tower-Wharf, as " may be contained within a Man's Arms. Of " every Boat accuſtomed to bring Oyſters, Muſ-
" cles, and Cockles, to the aforeſaid City, one
" Maund, thence to be brought and laid upon
" the ſaid Wharf. From every Ship laden with " Wines coming from Bourdeaux, or elſewhere,
" unto the aforeſaid City, one Flagon before the " Maſt, and another behind the Maſt: What-
" ſoever Ship, Barge, or Boat, or other Veſſel,
" which ſhall go looſe, by reaſon of Storm or
" Wind, or the Ropes and Cordage being broke,
" ſhall float from London-Bridge to Graveſend,
" or from thence to the ſaid Bridge, to be taken
" by the Conſtable of the ſaid Tower, or his " Servants, and to be applied to the Uſe of the " ſaid Conſtable. What Swans ſoever coming
" under the ſaid Bridge, towards the Sea, or
" from the Sea towards the ſaid Bridge; all Man" ner of Horſes, Oxen, Cows, Hogs, and
" Sheep, which have fallen from the ſaid Bridge
" into the Water of Thames; which the aforeſaid
" Conſtable, or his Servants, may take any
" ſuch like Creature ſwimming thorough the " Middle of the ſaid Bridge, to the aforeſaid
" Tower; which the ſame Conſtable, or his Ser" vants aforeſaid, have taken. Of every Foot
" of ſuch like Creature feeding within the Ditch
" of the ſaid Tower, one Penny. Every Cart,
" empty, or laden, which ſhall fall into the " aforeſaid Ditches, as a Forfeiture, or Fee of " the ſaid Conſtable. And that the aforeſaid
" Conſtables, as well thoſe before named as " others,

" others, have uſed and enjoyed the Uſages un-
" derwritten, from the Time beforeſaid; to " wit, that no Cart, empty, or laden, ought " to come from the End of the Street, called " Petty Wales, upon the ſaid Tower-Hill, nor
" near the aforeſaid Ditch, to the High Street,
" called Tower-Street, unleſs it be taken and " brought within the ſaid Tower: And that no
" Cart ſhall paſs beyond the Bridge between the " Ditch of the ſaid Caſtle, and the Ditch of
" the Hoſpital of St. Catharine's, without the " Licence of the Conſtable of the ſaid Tower;
" and if it do, and break the Bar, that Cart
" ought to be brought within the ſaid Tower,
" and to make Satisfaction for the Trangreſſion,
" according to the ſaid Conſtable's Will.

" WE willing to maintain all and ſingular
" the Rights and Liberties of our Tower
" aforeſaid, that they periſh not, or be un-
" lawfully taken away, Command you, that
" you permit our beloved and loyal Sir Tho-
" mas Murrieux, now Conſtable of the Tower,
" to take and have the Cuſtoms, Pence and " Profits by himſelf and his Servants in Form
" aforeſaid, and to uſe and enjoy the aforeſaid
" Uſages freely, and without any Impediment,
" as he ought to take and have ſuch Cuſtoms,
" Pence and Profits, and to uſe and enjoy the be-
" foreſaid Uſages; and he, and all other Conſta-
" bles of the ſaid Tower have reaſonably accuſ-
" tomed to take and have thoſe Cuſtoms, Pence
" and Profits, and to uſe and enjoy the aforeſaid
" Uſages; and he and all other Conſtables of the " ſaid Tower have reaſonably accuſtomed to take
" and have thoſe Cuſtoms, Pence and Profits,
" and to uſe and enjoy the aforeſaid Uſages from " the Time beforeſaid. And that by no Means " neglect this. Witneſs myſelf at Eltham, the " 16th Day of November, in the ſixth Year
" of our Reign.

By the KING.

THIS cauſed the Struggle between the City and the Conſtables and Lieutenants of the Tower, till King James I. ſettled the Matter in Favour of the City.

THERE were certain Injunctions given the Conſtables by former Kings. In 11 Henry III. the King iſſued out his Command to the Conſtable of the Tower to compel thoſe who brought Fiſh to ſell in Ships to LONDON, to bring the ſaid Fiſh to Queen-hith.

" QUOD Conſtabularius Turr. LONDON.
" diſtringat eos qui ducunt Piſcem venalem in " Navibus uſq. LONDON. & remanent
" trans pontem LONDON, ex Parte Turris
" ad ducendum dictum Piſcem uſq; Hitham
" Reginæ.

AND the Year before, Quod ducet Piſcem venientem apud LONDON, ad ripans Reginæ vendendum.

THE Power of the Conſtable of the Tower extended to the five Ports, and to arreſt their Ships in the Thames, if there were Occaſion. A Precept was ſent to him in the 9th of Henry III. to arreſt thoſe Ships in Time of Dearth of Corn, to prevent the Tranſportation of it.

IN 52 Henry III. the King commanded the Abbot of Weſtinſter, carriare Buſcam, Blada, & alia Victualia tam per Terr. quam per Aquam, uſq. ad Abbiam predict. ita quod nulla inde fiat Priza ad Opus Regis. That is, to carry Bruſh or Underwood, Corn, and other Victuals, as well by Land as by Water, to the ſaid Abbey; ſo that no Prizal be made to the King's Uſe.

IN 14 Edward II. there were Letters Patents for making Allowances to the Conſtables of the Tower, for the Wages of the King's Priſoners there, viz. For a Knight 2*d.* a Day, and for an Eſquire, one Penny.

IN 38 Edward III. there were Orders for the Conſtable of the Tower, to repair the Defects in the Water, or the Banks thereof, running from Ware to Waltham, and ſo to LONDON. This is the River Lee.

MR. STRYPE ſays, in a Manuſcript he has, Theſe Fees were order'd by Philip and Mary, in the ſecond and third Years of their Reign, That the Conſtable ſhall have of their Majeſties at the Receipt of the Exchequer for his Entertaiment, the yearly Fee or Wages of 100 l. and 100 l. by the Year for the Diet of poor Priſoners, who have not wherewithal to pay for their Diets. So that the ſaid poor Priſoners may be examined within ſeven Days after their coming into his Cuſtody, and be diſcharged again from his Cuſtody within ſeven Days after they have been examined.

THE ſaid Conſtable ſhall have of every Duke, if there be any committed by their Majeſties, to the ſaid Tower, for the Suit of his Irons 20 l. and for a Marquis, 16 l. and for the Board of every ſuch Duke or Marquis, weekly, 3 l. 10 s. and for the Chaplain's Board of every ſuch Duke or Marquis every Week, 6 s. 8 d. and for every of his Gentlemen, 6 s. 8 d. and for every of his Yeomen waiting upon him, 5 s. before his Attainder, and after his Attainder, as their Majeſties ſhall appoint.

Item, THE ſaid Conſtable ſhall have for every Earl and Viſcount, for the Suit of his Irons, 20 Marks; and for their Board, every Week, 46 s. 8 d. and for the Gentlemen and Yeomen, as in the Duke's Diet before the Attainder, and after at their Majeſties Will.

Item, THE ſaid Conſtable ſhall have for every Baron and Lord, of the Degree, as the younger Son of a Duke or Marquis, and for a Knight of the Garter, for the Suit of Irons 10 l. and for his Board weekly, 35 s. and for his Gentleman and Yeoman, as before.

Item, THE aforeſaid Conſtable ſhall have for every other Knight or Gentleman, above 100 l. Eſtate, for Suit of his Irons, 5 l. and alſo for his Board, weekly, 23 s. 4 d. and for every of his Gentlemen and Yeomen, as before.

Item, THE ſaid Conſtable ſhall have of every Gentleman of the Eſtate of 100 l. by the Year, and under, for the Suit of his Irons, 40 s. and his Board weekly, 17 s. 6 d. And other Men not having Lands and Poſſeſſions, and yet having Goods ſufficient to find themſelves, for Suit of Irons, 20 s. and for their Week's Board, 13 s. 4 d.

Item, ALL other to live of the Houſe, except their Majeſties appoint the ſame a better Diet by Warrant.

Item, THE Porter ſhall have, of every Priſoner commanded by the King's and Queen's Majeſties for Treaſon to the ſaid Tower, his uppermoſt Garment, or agree with him for it.

Item, HE ſhall have of every Perſon delivered out of the Tower 5 s.

Item, IT is ordered, That the Conſtable ſhall no more take Bedding, Goods, and Plate, or Money of any Perſon attainted, or not attainted, except that he may ſtay the ſame, for the Time that he be anſwer'd, and contented for his Fees and Diets, after the Rate aforeſaid. And except that upon the Attainder of every ſuch Priſoner, the ſaid Conſtable, ſhall have their Wearing Apparel and Bedding of the ſame Priſoner ſo attainted, and the Plate and Jewels of the ſame, if any do remain, to be kept to their Majeſties Uſe.

THESE Orders were made thro' the Queen's Frugality. For theſe Allowances to the Priſoners were for the moſt Part out of the Princes Purſes.

THRO' the long Reign of Queen Elizabeth, there was no Conſtable ſet over the Tower; but inſtead of it, a Lieutenant, who was an Officer ſubordinate to the Conſtable, had the chief Government of this important Place; and therefore was ſometime called the Conſtable's Lieutenant. The Tower Records mention John Chauncy, the Lieutenant to Holland, Duke of Exeter, in 31 Henry VI. and John Winwicke Lieutenant to the Conſtable of the Tower, 16 Edward III. to whom a Command came to this Purpoſe.

" Turr. LONDON. Rex Mandavit Jo-
" han. Winwike, Locumtenenti Conſtabulario

" ejuſdem". That is, Tower of LONDON, The King hath commanded John Winwike, Lieutenant to the Conſtable of the ſame, and W. L. his Chief Carpenter, to bring back his great Engine from Sandwich to the Tower aforeſaid, both to arreſt Ships, and to take for Fraught, &c. of the ſame.

THERE were Cuſtodes, or Keepers, ſometimes ſet over the Tower, who had the chief Power and Government of it, but only the Title not ſo high as that of Conſtable.

YET, Henry Fitz-Aucher, who was Conſtable of the Tower, had a particular Fee for keeping the Tower, which was 50 l. per Annum. as if Conſtable and Cuſtos had been two ſeveral and diſtinct Places. The Record runs, " That this
" Henry Fitz Aucher, Conſtable of the Tower, be " paid, ad Kaiam Regis, i. e. at the King's Key,
" before the Tower, 20 l. 12 Henry III. and 50 l.
" per Annum, for keeping the Tower, Anno 13
" Henry III." And 14 Henry III. it is recorded,
" That the Conſtable took 50 l. for the Cuſtody
" of the ſaid Tower.

IN the 52d Year of Henry III. there was a Cuſtos both of the Tower and City too.

THIS King granting the keeping of his Tower, with the Appurtenances, and his City of LONDON, to Thomas Ipgreve, " Una cum Arma-
" tur. inſtaurand. & Victualib. ſuis per Chirogra-

SUCH another was Radulphus de Sandwich, in the 13th of Edward I. " Turris LONDON,

" de Exitu inde proven. Regi reſpondeat ad Scac-
" carium. 13 Edw. I. Idem Rad. habet Cuſto" diam Civitat. LONDON, ut ſupra. Et
" iterum, Anno 17.

AGAIN, William, Archbiſhop of York, was Cuſtos of the Tower, 1 Edward I. and there was Order for the Payment of 100 l. for his Fee.

THESE Cuſtodes, or Keepers, were often changed: For in the 3d of Edward I. the Keeping of the Tower was granted by the King to Anthony Beke, durante bene placito, as Philip Baſſet before had it. And he was to receive 100 l. per Annum for his ſaid Keeping.

AGAIN, The Cuſtody of the Tower of LONDON was granted to John Crombwell, for the Term of five Years, and to take the Fees and Cuſtoms: And it is commanded to Thomas Walter to deliver the ſame to him, by Indenture with the Appurtenances, together with the Arms, Victuals, and all other Things and Priſoners being there, 1 Edward III.

AGAIN, The Cuſtody of the Tower was granted to William de Monte Acuto, or Montague, for Life, after the Death of John de Crombwell, 9 Edward III. And it was granted pro Michael de la Beche. Et Anno 20. pro Johan. Darcy.

AND for the Repairing of the King's Key, near the Tower of LONDON, it was commanded to the Keeper of the King's Foreſt of Windſor, That he cauſe John Crombwell, Keeper of the aforeſaid Tower, to have 300 Palos de Alneto, i. e. Pales, or Poles, from the Alder-wood in the aforeſaid Foreſt. And it is commanded to the Sheriff of Berks, That he cauſe the ſaid Poles to be felled, and to be carried unto the Tower of LONDON, out of the Iſſues of the County.

LIEUTENANTS of the Tower.

Lieutenant of the Tower.

THE firſt Lieutenant under Queen Elizabeth, was Sir Edward Warner, who had been alſo in that Place under King Edward VI. In the Year 1562, he was deprived of this Truſt, and committed to Cuſtody, upon the coming together of the Earl of Hertford, and the Lady Catharine Grey, who had privately concluded a Marriage together, without the Queen's Conſent. And ſo were put into ſundry cloſe Priſons, not to come at one another; but they corrupted their Keepers.

THE next Lieutenant was Sir Owen Hopton, preferred to this Place by the Intereſt of the Lord Treaſurer. He was an active and brave-ſpirited Man; but was complained of, as will be ſhewn, for ſome Neglects in his Truſt, in the Year 1572, being a Year of great Terror to the Engliſh Nation; fearing ſome Maſſacre, or Inſurrection, or Violence to be offered the Queen's Perſon: For in this Year happened the bloody Maſſacre of the Proteſtants in France, which aſtoniſhed this Kingdom. In this Year were two great Peers cut off, the Duke of Norfolk, and the Earl of Northumberland, for Treaſon and Rebellion. The Queen alſo fell Sick of the Small-pox. There were alſo great Apprehenſions from the Queen of Scots, and her Party, ſhe being then a Priſoner in England. Theſe Uneaſineſſes and Fears made the People concerned for the Preſervation of the Tower; and great Complaints were made to the Lords of the Council againſt Hopton, and of Matters in and about the Tower. As, that the ſaid Lieutenant ſhewed the Warders that they were perjur'd if they did not firſt acquaint him of all Treaſons, Conſpiracies, or any other like Matters, that they ſhould know or hear of, before they utter'd the ſame to any of the Queen's Council. Whereupon he took an Oath of all ſuch Yeomen, as came of late to ſerve there under him.

THAT the Priſoners had much more Liberty to walk and meet upon the Leads of Cold-Harbour, and to go one to another, and alſo to ſend their Minds and Letters to their Friends, as they ſhould think good; which had not heretofore been allowed of. Which Liberty they had by reaſon of ſuch needy Perſons as Mr. Lieutenant had appointed to be their Keepers, to whom he gave very little Wages to maintain them.

THAT there ſhould be Seven-ſcore Gunners belonging to the Tower, whereof there wanted a great Number. And that the moſt Part of them who took Wages were unskilful, ſo that if the Queen's Majeſty ſhould ſtand in Need of Service, ſhe would be diſappointed. And beſides that, many of them were Papiſts.

THAT the Clerk of the Ordnance was a very rigid Papiſt.

THAT there wanted the moſt Part of ſuch Warders, as ought to watch and ward, and to lie within the Tower: And the Hamlets did neither watch nor ward, according to their bounden Duties. For if the Tower-Ditch ſhould be frozen, conſidering there were no better Order taken for the Defence of the ſame, and conſidering the State of the Time, and if Need ſhould ſo require, it might be in great Danger. Wherefore all the Yeomen ſhould be commanded, daily to wait, and to lie within the Tower every Night, for the Preſervation of the ſame: Seeing the Watches of LONDON and St. Catharine's were not kept, as of late, but now moſt needful, until this Time be paſt.

IT was likewiſe informed, That December the 29th, the Earl of Southampton ſtood leaping upon the Tower; his Wife being right over-againſt him, on the other Side of the Ditch: And when one Philip, a Gunner, ſeeing this, demanded, if this might be allowed; the Servants very angrily asked him, If he were therewithal offended?

THAT Command had been given by their Honours, That no great Ordnance ſhould be ſhot off at any Time upon the Tower-Wharf, or about the Tower, except it were only for the Queen; notwithſtanding, they continued, from Time to Time, Shooting off great Pieces. Which Pieces, were to be ſold, or elſe lent to divers Perſons, and with the Queen's own Powder, conveyed by them out of the Tower in Barrels. That this Shooting utterly marred the Wharf, being ſore worn and ſhaken already, broke the Glaſs Windows, and looſed the Tiles of the Houſes newly repaired.

FURTHER, That they did receive and diſcharge upon the ſame Wharf, divers Mens Goods, as Timber-Logs, Billets, Faggots, Rubbiſh, Hay, Straw, and other Things, and carry and re-carry the ſame with Carrs and Carts, which did greatly decay the Wharf, and wear the Queen's Cranes.

THAT they made a common Highway, with all Manner of Carriages, from St. Catharine's leading to the Minories: By reaſon whereof, the Way is greatly decayed, the Banks of the Tower-Ditch ſunk, and the Ditch filled with Earth and Filth; whereas it was uſed to be chained betwixt two great Poſts; and likewiſe by the Tower-Hill there was another Chain with two great Poſts by the Bulwark-Gate, for reſtraining all Carriages, ſave only for the Queen, by reaſon whereof the Banks there are greatly decayed, and the Ditch filled with Earth by the Sufferance thereof.

THIS was the Tenor of the Complaint, made at this dangerous Juncture againſt the Lieutenant, but he was not negligent to vindicate himſelf, by a Letter to the Lord Burleigh, his Friend and Advancer, vowing to GOD, that he ſerved her Majeſty, the more dutifully and painfully, becauſe he was preferred by his Lordſhip, whom he loved and honoured; and deſcending to Particulars, he enumerated what he had done more than other Lieutenants before him.

SIR Owen Hopton continued Lieutenant a great while, till the Year 1590, when he deliver'd up this important Charge to Michael Blount, Eſq; who was ſoon after Knighted. This Gentleman, in a Diſcourſe he had with ſome of his intimate Friends, ſhewed the high Opinion he had of the Charge he was intruſted with; for he declared, if the Queen ſhould die, and ſhe was then very ſick, that he ſhould not think himſelf bound to obey any Counſellor, for then all Counſellors would be private Men; but would keep his Poſt till the Succeſſor ſhould be eſtabliſhed, according to the Juſtice of his Title; and that he would permit none of the Officers of the Ordnance to enter into the Tower, unleſs they were ſworn to take the ſame Side with himſelf; for then the whole Charge would be his, and becauſe he looked upon ſeveral of the Warders to be Knaves, he would turn them out, and call the reſt before him, and ſuch as would not be ſworn to obey him, as by their Oath, he ſaid, they were obliged to, he would turn them out alſo, and ſupply their Places with his own Friends; that by this Means, and having Ammunition in his Power, he ſhould be able to arm more than half the Realm beſide. All this was teſtified by Edmond Nevyl de Latymer, Eſq; before the Lord Cobham and Lord Buckhurſt, two of the Privy Council appointed to examine him; he alſo teſtified that the Lieutenant had often asked him his Opinion how many Men would ſerve to keep the Tower, and what Courſe was beſt to take for victualling it. Theſe Things looking very ſuſpiciouſly, raiſed Jealouſies in the State againſt him, and brought him into Trouble.

AS to the modern State of this great Officer of the Tower, he is, by Virtue of his Office, to be in Commiſſion of the Peace for the Counties of Kent, Surrey and Middleſex: He is High Steward of a Court held within the Tower; he may refuſe an Habeas Corpus; he may give Protection to all Debtors belonging to the Tower, infra Regnum Angliæ; he hath the Privilege, before ſpoken of, to take one Flagon, that is, two Gallons and a Pint, before, and as much behind the Maſt, of all Wine Ships that come. Some hold, that he is to be Cuſtos Rotulorum of the County of Middleſex. His Salary is 200 l. per Annum. His Perquiſites are large. His uſual Fee for every Priſoner ſent to the Tower, is 20 l. and 3 l. a Week for an Earl; and 5 l. for a Knight; for a Baron or a Degree higher, 50 l. at his Entrance, to whom the King allows weekly, 10 l. whereof two Parts go to the Priſoner, and the other third to the Lieutenant, for Lodging and Diet; and 50 l. to the Lieutenant upon the Priſoner's Diſcharge.

THE preſent Lieutenant is Hatton Compton, Eſq;

GENTLEMAN-PORTER.

Gentleman Porter.

A third chief Officer of the Tower, is the Gentleman-Porter, who holds his Place by Patent, and at the Entrance of any Priſoner, hath for for Fee Veſtimenta Superiora, (his upper Garments) or a Compoſition for the ſame.

THIS Office is at leaſt as old as the Time of King Edward III. For in the Tower Records, mention is made, in that King's Reign, of the Cuſtody of the Tower-Gate being granted to John de London.

In the Reign of Edward VI. Henry Webb was Gentleman-Porter. There were four in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, Mr. Chamberlain, Sir William Gorge, Mr. Shelton, and Mr. Worthington.

THIS Officer, among other Perquiſites of his Place, in former Times, had allowed him, out of the King's Wardrobe, yearly, Broad Cloth for a Watching Gown, and ſo had the other Yeomen, as appears by this Extract out of King Edward's Book of Warrants: "A Warrant to Sir Rafe "Sadler, Knt. (who was Maſter of the King's "Wardrobe,) to deliver to Henry Webb, Porter "of the Tower of LONDON, and to fourteen "Yeomen of the Chamber attending there, and "to every of them, five Yards of Broad Cloth, "of London-Ruſſet, at 4 s. 1 d. the Yard, for "their Watching-Gowns.

THIS Officer ſeem'd to have a Right to the Benefit of the Ground, within the Liberties of the Tower. For in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, he received Rents for many Edifices ſtanding thereon: Concerning which, there happened a Controverſy between the Tenants and the Gentleman-Porter. For between the Years 1570 and 1580, many Houſes and Tenements were built within the Liberties, ſome at the Poſtern-Gate, ſome within the Bulwark, ſome without it, and others on Tower-Wharf, where formerly were ſmall Shops; and Parcels of Ground incloſed. So that in the Space of 10 Years, there were 40 Houſes, or more built, and divers other Yards and Incloſures: For pulling down which Yards, and laying open the Incloſures, an Order came from the Council. The chief Landlord of theſe Tenements was the Gentleman-Porter, who about this Year (1580) was Sir William Gorge, between whom and ſome of the Builders, an Agreement was made, that they ſhould allow him, beſides Fines, certain Conſiderations yearly, in Lieu of Rent. When Gorge died, and Mr. Worthington ſucceeded in the Place, he required the Tenants to remove, or come to new Terms with him; and many of them did ſo, rather than be turned out.

THE Builders and petty Landlords found themſelves aggrieved hereby; for the Porter came upon the Occupiers, and took no Notice of them, whereupon, in the Year 1587, they made a Complaint to the Lord Treaſurer againſt him, "That they had built ſundry Tenements upon "noiſome Places, in the Liberties of the Tower, "to their great Charge: But the preſent Gen-"tleman-Porter, contrary to former Uſage, had "required them to depart, either to drive the "Petitioners to change their Habitations, or "otherwiſe to get to himſelf great improved "Rents. A Matter, which if permitted would "work the Undoing of moſt of his Lordſhip's "Orators." The Lord-Treaſurer referred the Examination of this Buſineſs to one Nelſon, who underſtood by the ſaid Gentleman-Porter, that he, as Lord, would not allow of any Petty-Landlords, not ſuffering them to be Tenants to him, but only ſuch of the Tenants as were commorant Tenants to the Petty-Landlords, quite excluding the Petty-Landlords from him, and that upon theſe two Cauſes, the one, becauſe they did not dwell upon any of their Tenements, the other, becauſe they had reſerved to themſelves far greater Rents than they paid to him, which he had a Mind to take to his own Uſe, as he found them improved; but yet he was willing to allow every Petty-Landlord, for their ſeveral Buildings, as much in reaſon as they by Proof had laid out.

THE Petition of the Petty-Landlords againſt the Gentleman-Porter was ſeconded with another of the Tenants againſt the Petty-Landlords. The Effect whereof was, "That they complained, "that the ſaid Landlords had moleſted them, "and threatned daily to arreſt them for their "Rents, that they had then paid to the Gentle-"man-Porter.

THE Rents which the Gentleman-Porter at this Time received, were as follows.

	l.	s.	d.
OF 26 Tenants, within the Liberties of the Tower, for Tenements and Shops	49	10	6
BESIDES, of the Petty-Landlords	27	9	0
AND there remained to them, beſides this Payment to the Gentleman-Porter,	54	15	0

The Gentleman-Jailor.

THE Gentleman-Jailor is an Officer put in by the Lieutenant of the Tower, his Fee is 40 s. for a Gentleman, and 5 l. for a Knight.

THERE are likewiſe 40 Warders of the Tower, who are accounted the King's Domeſtick Servants, and are ſworn by the Lord-Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, or by the Clerk of the Checque: They are all habited with the ſame Caps and Coats as thoſe of the Yeoman of the Guard that attend the King; and come into waiting, ten every Day.

THE following is a Liſt of the Officers immediately under the Conſtable, who is the Right Honourable John Earl of Leiceſter.

Surgeon, Mr. Blake.

Lieutenancy of the Tower.

AS to the Lieutenancy of the Tower, or Military Government thereof, the Conſtable or Lieutenant hath the Command of the Militia, for a conſiderable Compaſs about it in divers Diviſions, called Hamlets, lying in the Pariſhes of Hackney, Stepney, Whitechapel, Minories, St. Catharine's, Wapping, Shadwell, Shoreditch, and the Liberty of Norton-Falgate, and Bromley. The Names of which Hamlets are as follows:

The Hamlets.

Hackney.	Ratcliff.
Norton-Falgate.	Shadwell.
Shoreditch.	Limehouſe.
Spittle-Fields.	Poplar.
Whitechapel.	Blackwall.
Trinity-Minories.	Bromley.
Eaſt-Smithfield.	Bow.
Tower Extra.	Old Ford.
Tower Intra.	Mile-End.
St. Catherine's.	Bednal-Green.
Wapping.

THESE one and twenty Hamlets, being all the Hundred of Oſulſton, in the County of Middleſex, are exempted from the ſaid County by Act of Parliament, 14 Car. II. to be the ſtanding Militia of the Tower. The Conſtable, or Lieutenant, is Lord-Lieutenant of the ſame; they raiſe two Regiments, conſiſting of eight hundred Men each. And this, Time out of Mind, hath been the conſtant Militia and ſtanding Force of the Tower;

Tower; and was confirmed by a Clauſe in an Act of Parliament under King Charles II. in theſe Words:

"PROVIDED alſo, and be it enacted, That "whereas the Militia of the Tower-Diviſion in "the County of Middleſex, commonly known by "the Name of the Tower-Hamlets, are, and al-"ways have been, under the Command of his "Majeſty's Conſtable or Lieutenant of the "Tower, for the Service and Preſervation of that "his Royal Fort; that it ſhall and may be law-"ful for his Majeſty's Conſtable or Lieutenant of "the Tower, for the Time being, to continue "to levy the Train'd-Bands of the ſaid Diviſion, "or Hamlets of the Tower, in ſuch Manner and "Form, as to the Number and Quality of Per-"ſons, as was obſerved in forming the preſent "Forces thereof.

The Antiquity and firſt Foundation of the Tower.

The firſt Foundation of the Tower.

IT has been the vulgar Opinion, That Julius Cæſar was the firſt Founder of this great Fortreſs; but this has very little Probability of Truth, for two Reaſons, the firſt, is, the little Stay he made here, during which, he had other Things to think of; the ſecond, That he himſelf, who is ſo exact in all his Relations, eſpecially where any Thing conduces to his own Honour, nor any other Roman Author, makes any Mention of ſuch a Work; therefore that Opinion which approacheth neareſt to Truth, is what Edmond, of Hadenham, an old Engliſh Antiquary, affirms, That William the Conqueror, firſt built the Tower of LONDON, that is, the great Square White Tower, about the Year of Chriſt 1078, appointing Gundulph, then Biſhop of Rocheſter, Principal Surveyor and Surveyor of the Work, who was for that Time lodged in the Houſe of Edmere, a Burgeſs of LONDON, as it ſtands recorded by the aforenamed Author, in the following Words: Gundulphus Epiſcopus, mandato Willielmi. Regis, magni præfuit Operi magnæ Turris LONDON. Quo Tempore hoſpitatus eſt apud quendam Edmerum Burgenſem LONDON, qui dedit unum Were Eccleſiæ Roffen.

THE Wall of the City was furniſhed, as has been ſaid before, with many Baſtions and Turrets, at due Diſtance from each other, and many ſtood on the Water-Side, where ſome of the old Wall extended at firſt; but the Thames with its Ebbing and Flowing, did, as it were, undermine, and ſubvert thoſe Buildings on the South Side; wherefore the Conqueror (for then the Art of Fortification was come to a greater Perfection) for Defence of the City and River, pitched upon that Place, as moſt convenient, to erect a Bulwark in the Eaſt Part of the Wall. The White Square Tower was firſt erected and finiſhed in the Conqueror's Time, but ſtood naked and ſingle without any other Building a good while; and Hiſtory ſaith, That in the Reign of William Rufus, Anno 1090, it being very much damaged, and Part of it beaten down by a violent Tempeſt, which at the ſame Time took off the Roof from Bow-Church, and overthrew 600 Houſes in London: It was again repaired by the ſaid Rufus, and Henry I. who alſo cauſed a Caſtle to be built under the ſaid Tower, on the South Side towards the Thames, and ſurrounded it alſo with a ſtrong Wall.

Henry of Huntington ſays, That William Rufus challenged the Inveſtiture of Prelates, pilled and ſhaved the People with Tribute, eſpecially to ſpend about the Tower of London, and the Great Hall of Weſtminſter, whereof he was Founder. The four firſt Conſtables of this Tower of LONDON, held, by Force, a Portion of Land belonging to the Priory of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, that is to ſay, Eaſt-Smithfield near the Tower, making thereof a Vineyard, and would not part from it till the ſecond Year of King Stephen, when, by Judgment of the Court, it was reſtored to the ſaid Church.

ONE of the four before-mentioned, named Geffrey de Magnaville, was Earl of Eſſex, Conſtable of the Tower, Sheriff of London, Middleſex, Eſſex, and Hertford Shires, as appeareth by a Charter of Maud the Empreſs, dated 1141. He alſo fortified the Tower of LONDON againſt King Stephen; but the King took him in his Court at St. Alban's, and would not deliver him, till he had rendered the Tower of LONDON, with the Caſtles of Walden and Pleſhey in Eſſex.

IN the Year 1153, the Tower of LONDON, and the Caſtle of Windſor, were by the King delivered to Richard de Lucie, to be ſafely kept.

IN the Year 1155, Thomas à Becket, being Chancellor to Henry II. cauſed the Flemmings to be baniſhed out of England, their Caſtles, lately built, to be pulled down, and the Tower of LONDON to be repaired.

IN the 2d Year of Richard I. about the Year 1190, William Longchamp, Biſhop of Ely, Chancellor of England, on Account of a Difference between him, and Earl John, the King's Brother, who was a Rebel, incloſed the Tower and Caſtle of LONDON, with an outward Wall of Stone, embattled; and alſo cauſed a deep Ditch to be caſt about the ſame, thinking to have environed it with the River Thames. By the making this Ditch in Eaſt-Smithfield, the Church of the Holy Trinity in LONDON, loſt half a Mark Rent by the Year, and the Mill was removed that belonged to the poor Brethren of the Hoſpital of St. Catharine's, and to the Church of Trinity aforeſaid, which was no ſmall Loſs, and Inconvenience to them. And the Garden which the King had hired of the Brethren for ſix Marks a Year, for the moſt Part, was waſted and marred by the Ditch; Recompence was often promiſed, but never made, 'till King Edward, coming after, gave to the Brethren five Marks and a Half, for that Part which the Ditch had devoured, and the other Part thereof without, he reſtored to them again, and of the ſaid Rent of five Marks and a Half, they have a Deed, by Virtue whereof they were well paid.

IT is alſo to be noted, That the ſaid Incloſure and Ditch took the like, or greater Quantity of Ground from the City, within the Wall, namely, on that Part called Tower-Hill, beſides breaking down the City Wall from the White Tower to the firſt Gate of the City, called the Poſtern: Yet was there not any Quarrel made by the Citizens, or Recompence demanded by them for that Matter; becauſe all was done for the Good of the City's Defence, and to their own Liking.

Matthew Paris writes, that in the Year 1239, "King Henry III. fortified the Tower of LON-"DON to another End; wherefore the Citizens "fearing leſt that was done to their Detriment, "complained: And the King anſwered; That "he had not done it to their Hurt; but (ſaith "he) I will from henceforth do as my Brother "doth, in building and fortifying Caſtles, who "beareth the Name to be wiſer than I am.

"IT followed in the next Year, (ſaith our "Author) the ſaid noble Buildings of the Stone "Gate and Bulwark, which the King had cauſed "to be made by the Tower of LONDON, "on the Weſt Side thereof, were ſhaken, as it "had been, with an Earthquake, and fell down, "which the King again commanded to be built "in better ſort than before, which was done.

"AND yet again, in the Year 1241, the ſaid "Wall and Bulwarks that were newly built,

"wherein

" wherein the King had beſtowed more than " twelve thouſand Marks, were irrecoverably " thrown down, as afore; for which Chance the " Citizens of LONDON were not ſorry; for " they were threatened, that the ſaid Wall and " Bulwarks were built to the End, that if any " of them would contend for the Liberties of " the City, they might be impriſoned: And " that many might be laid in divers Priſons, ma- " ny Lodgings were made, that no one ſhould " ſpeak to another.

MORE of King Henry III's Dealings againſt the Citizens of LONDON, may be read in the aforeſaid Author, and other Hiſtorians; but concerning the ſaid Wall and Bulwark, the ſame were finiſhed, tho' not in his Time; for Edw. I. in the Year 1274, and the ſecond of his Reign, commanded the Treaſurer and Chamberlain of the Exchequer, to deliver out of his Treaſury, unto Giles of Andwarp, 200 Marks, of the Fines taken of divers Merchants, or Uſurers, of LONDON, towards the Work of the Ditch, then new made about the ſaid Bulwark, now called the Lion-Tower.

The LION-TOWER.

IN the Year 1235, Frederick, the Emperor, ſent to Henry III. three Leopards, after which the ſaid Leopards, with ſome Lions, Lynxes, and other wild Beaſts, which had been kept in Woodſtock Park, were kept in a Part of the Bulwark of the Tower of LONDON, now called the Lion-Tower, and their Keeper there lodged. King Edward II. in the 12th Year of his Reign commanded the Sheriffs of LONDON to pay the Keeper of the King's Leopards in the Tower of LONDON, 6*d*. a Day, for their Suſtenance, and Three-half-pence a Day for the Diet of the ſaid Keeper, out of the Fee Farm of the ſaid City.

IN the 16th of Edward III. one Lion, one Lioneſs, one Leopard, and two Cat-Lions in the ſaid Tower, were committed to the Cuſtody of Robert, the Son of John Bowre.

Wild Creatures in the Tower at this Time, Anno 1733.

THERE are at preſent in this Tower;

TWO Lions, which were preſented to his late Majeſty King George I. by the Emperor of Morocco.

TWO, by the Conſul of Algiers.

TWO, by the Dutcheſs of Ancaſter.

AND one, by Colonel Clayton, to his preſent Majeſty;

BESIDES five young ones, which were brought forth in the Tower.

THERE are likewiſe two Leopards, one Panther, one Vulture, and two Eagles, one of which was taken in a Steel Trap, in the County of Suſſex.

IN former Times, Perſons of high Quality had the Keeping of the wild-Creatures in this Tower, (whereof the Earl of Oxford was one) and they had a Penſion from the Crown upon that Account.

MR. Martin is the preſent Maſter of the Lion-Office, which Place he has enjoyed many Years; and, it is ſaid, hath ſhewn more Skill in bringing up the young Lions, whelp'd in this Place, than any of his Predeceſſors.

Stow hath ſearch'd into the Original of bringing theſe fierce Creatures here, and hath given us ſome antient Records concerning them; and Strype hath added a few more.

IN the 16th of Henry VI. the Office of keeping the Lions and Leopards of the Tower was granted to Robert Mansfield, Eſq; for Life; with a certain Place there, antiently belonging to it, with a Fee of 6*d*. a Day for every Lion.

IN the 37th of the ſaid King's Reign, the ſaid Office was granted to the ſaid Robert Mansfield, Eſq, and his Son Robert was put into the Patent.

IN the 29th Year of the ſaid King, the Office was granted to Thomas Rookes, Eſq;

IN the 4th of Edward IV. the Office of keeping the Lions, and Leopards, of the Tower, was granted to R. Haſtings, Eſq;

SUCH Grants alſo are extant in the Tower Records, in the Reigns before; as in Edward I. Edward II. and ſucceeding Kings.

BY which we may ſuppoſe, that the wild Beaſts kept in the Tower, were generally Lions and Leopards; for ſeldom any other Creatures are mentioned in the Patents: That the Keeper was ſome Officer about the King, and of Quality; and appointed by the King's Letters Patents: That his Wages were 6*d*. a Day, allowed for himſelf; and 6*d*. a Day for every Lion and Leopard: And that the Place, or Apartment where the Lions were kept, was alſo granted him; as by this Patent to the aforeſaid Robert Mansfield, Eſq; appears.

" REX omnibus ad quos, &c. Dilecto ſervi- " tori noſtro Roberto Mansfield, Armigero, Ma- " reſcallo Aulæ noſtræ - - - - de Gratia noſtra " ſpeciali, &c.

" THE King to all to whom theſe Preſents " ſhall come, &c. We, of our ſpecial Grace, " have granted to our beloved Servant Robert " Mansfield, Eſq; Marſhal of Our Hall, the " Office of Keeper of the Lions, with a certain " Place, which hath been appointed antiently " within our ſaid Tower, for them, to have, and " to occupy the ſame by himſelf, or his ſuffi- " cient Deputy, for the Term of his Life, with " the Wages of 6*d*. per Day, for the Mainte- " nance of every Lion, or Leopard, now being " in his Cuſtody, or that ſhall be in his Cuſtody " hereafter; to be taken yearly, from the 22d " Day of September, during his Life, from the " Iſſues and Profits of the Counties of Bedford " and Buckingham, coming to the Hands of the " Sheriff of the ſaid Counties for the Time " being, &c.

A white Bear and an Elephant in the Tower.

LONG before this King Henry VI. namely, in the Reign of Henry III. there was a white Bear, and an Elephant in the Tower; in which Creatures the King ſeemed to delight: For he iſſued out ſeveral Orders concerning providing for, and taking Care of them; and that to the Sheriffs of LONDON, as appears by theſe Liberates, lately found in the White-Tower.

Rex Vicecomitibus, &c.

" THE King to the Sheriffs of LONDON, " Greeting. We command you, that for the " Suſtenance of a white Bear, which we ſend to " our Tower of LONDON, there to be kept; " and for his Keeper, ye cauſe to be allowed 4*d*. " every Day, as long as they ſhall be there. " Witneſs the King, at St. Edmund's, Sep- " tember 13.

THE like Order was ſent to the Sheriffs from the King, dated from Windſor, September 29.

THERE was ſtill, the next Year, (viz. Anno 1253) concerning this white Bear, another Order iſſued from the King, to provide him a Muzzle, and a Chain, and a ſtrong Rope, to make Sport in the Thames.

Rex Vicecomitibus LONDON, &c.

" THE King to the Sheriffs of LONDON, " Greeting. We command you, that for the " Keeper of our white Bear, lately ſent us from " Norway, and which is in our Tower of " LONDON, ye cauſe to be had one Muz- " zle, and one Iron Chain, to hold that Bear " without the Water, and one long and ſtrong " Cord to hold the ſame Bear fiſhing, or waſhing " himſelf, in the River Thames. Witneſs the " King at Windſor, October the 30th.

THE King, alſo a Year or two after, had an Elephant, viz. Anno 1255, which the Sheriffs was to build an Houſe for, in the Tower, and provide for his Suſtenance and his Keepers.

Rex Vicecomitibus LONDON, Salutem, &c.

" THE King to the Sheriffs of LONDON, " greeting. We command you, That of the " Farm of our City, ye cauſe (without Delay) " to be built at our Tower of LONDON, " one Houſe of 40 Feet long, and 20 Feet deep, " for our Elephant: Providing, that it be ſo " made, and ſo ſtrong, that when Need be, it " may be fit and neceſſary for other Uſes. And " the Coſt ſhall be computed at the Exchequer. " Witneſs the King at Weſtminſter, the 26th " Day of February.

AGAIN, the next Year.

" THE King to the Sheriffs of LONDON, " greeting. We command you, that from the " Feaſt of St. Michael, laſt paſt, and as long as " you ſhall be Sheriffs of LONDON, and our " Elephant ſhall be there, ye ſhall find for him " and his Keeper Neceſſaries, as there ſhall rea- " ſonably be Need. Witneſs the King at Weſt- " minſter, Oct. 2.

Now concerning the Nature of theſe wild Beaſts.

King James I. goes to the Tower, where the Courage of the Lion is tried before him.

Anno 1604, June 3. King James I. taking with him the Duke of Lenox (with divers Earls and Lords) went to ſee the Lions at the Tower. And here he cauſed two of them, a He-Lion, and a She, to be put forth; and then a live Cock was caſt to them, which being their natural Enemy, they preſently killed it and ſucked the Blood. Then the King cauſed a live Lamb to be put to them, which the Lions, out of their Generoſity (as having Reſpect to its Innocence) never offered to touch, altho' the Lamb was ſo bold as to go cloſe to them. Then the King cauſed the Lions to be taken away, and another Lion to be put forth, and two Maſtiffs to be turned to him. The Maſtiffs preſently flew upon the Lion and turned him upon his Back, and tho' the Lion was ſuperior to them in Strength, yet, it ſeems they were his Match in Courage.

THERE was a Spaniel Dog, for ſome Offence or other, caſt into the Lion's Den; but the Lion did not attempt to hurt him: And this Dog continued in the Den with the Lion ſeveral Years, and there died.

In the Month of June 1609, a Reſolution was taken to make Trial of the Valour of the Lion; which was by turning him looſe to a Bear.

THE Bear was brought into an open Yard, and the Lion was turned out of his Den to him, but he would not aſſault him, but fled from him; and ſo it was done with other Lions, one after another; and laſtly, two together were turned to him, but none ſet upon him, but rather ſought to return to their Dens. A Stone Horſe ſoon after was put into the Yard with the firſt Lion and the Bear: The Horſe fell to grazing between them; after he had gazed a little upon them, two Maſtiff Dogs were let in, who boldly fought with the Lion. Afterwards ſix Dogs more were let in, who flew upon the Horſe, moſt in Sight, at their firſt Entrance, and would ſoon have worried him to Death, had not three ſtout Bearherds enter'd, and reſcued the Horſe, and brought away the Dogs, while the Lion and Bear ſtood ſtaring upon them. At this Sight were preſent King James I. the Queen, the Prince, and divers great Lords: And ſo much for the Lion-Tower.

THE Tower of LONDON was fortified by Edward IV. who incloſed with Brick a certain Piece of Ground, taken out of Tower-Hill, Weſt of the Lion-Tower. His Officers, alſo in the 5th Year of his Reign, ſet upon the ſaid Hill both Scaffold and Gallows, for the Execution of Offenders, whereupon the Lord Mayor and Aldermen complained to the King; but were anſwer'd, That the ſame was not done in Derogation of the City's Liberties.

Richard III. repaired and built ſome Part of this Tower; for Mr. Strype ſays, He found in an old Leidger-Book of that King, that in the Year 1484, a Commiſſion was directed to Thomas Daniel, Surveyor of the King's Works, To take and ſeize for Uſe, within this Realm, as many Maſons, Bricklayers, and other Workmen, as ſhould be thought neceſſary for the haſty Expedition of the King's Works, within the Tower of LONDON, and Palace of Weſtminſter.

Henry VIII. in 1532, repaired the White-Tower, and other Parts thereof.

IN the Year 1548, 2 Edward VI. on the 22d of November, a Frenchman, who lodged in the round Bulwark, betwixt the Weſt Gate and the Poſtern, or Draw-bridge, called the Warder's-Gate, blew up the ſaid Bulwark, and burnt himſelf, but no one elſe, by ſetting fire to a Barrel of Gunpowder in the Night. This Bulwark was forthwith new built.

THE Weſt Gate is the principal Gate of the Tower, and is uſed for the Receipt and Delivery of all Kinds of Carriages; a little within this Gate, opening to the South, is a ſtrong Poſtern for Paſſengers, by the Ward-Houſe, over a Draw-Bridge, let down for that Purpoſe. Farther on the South Side, toward the Eaſt, is a large Watergate, for the Receipt of Boats and ſmall Veſſels from the River Thames; beyond it, is a ſmall Poſtern, with a Draw-Bridge, ſeldom let down, but for the Receipt of ſome great Perſons, Priſoners. More towards the Eaſt, is a great and ſtrong Gate, commonly called the Iron Gate, but not uſually opened.

OF the Weſt Gate, the Gentleman-Porter hath the Charge of the Keys, which he is every Night to deliver to the Conſtable, or, in his Abſence, to the Lieutenant, or Deputy-Lieutenant, and receive them again in the Morning.

IN the Year 1663, the Ditch was cleanſed, and all the Wharfing about it new built, with Brick and Stone, ſo that the Water of the Thames running into it, is there kept by Sluices, and to be let out as Occaſion requires.

The Tower in Danger by the Fire of LONDON.

IN the Year 1666, the Fire of LONDON, ending at the Eaſt End of Tower-Street, whoſe Extent came juſt to the Dock on the Weſt Side of the Tower, there was nothing between the Tower-Walls and it, but the Breadth of the Dock, and a great many old Timber-Houſes, which were built upon the Banks of the Dock, and in the outward Bulwark of the Tower and Tower-Ditch, (which then was very foul) to the very Wall of the Tower itſelf. Which old Houſes, if the Fire had taken hold of, the Tower itſelf, and all the Buildings within it, had, in all Probability, been deſtroyed. But ſuch was the Lieutenant's Care of the great Charge committed to him, that to prevent future Danger, a few Weeks after, he cauſed all theſe old Houſes, which ſtood between the Tower-Dock and the Tower-Wall, to be pulled down; and not only them, but alſo all thoſe which were built upon, or near, the Tower-Ditch, from the Bulwark-Gate, along along both the Tower-Hills, and ſo to the Iron-Gate; and cauſed ſtrong Rails of Oak to be ſet upon the Wharf where thoſe Houſes ſtood, which were about 350 or 400; ſo that by this Means, not only the White Tower, but the whole outer Tower-Wall, and the Ditch round about the ſame, are all of them viſible to Paſſengers; and make a fine Proſpect.

ON the Tower-Wharf are 62 Guns, lying in a Range faſt in the Ground, always ready to be diſcharged on any Occaſion of Victories, Coronations, Feſtivals, Days of Thankſgiving, Triumphs, &c.

The White Tower.

NOW to come within the Walls of the Tower. The White Tower is a lofty ſquare Stone Building, with a Turret at each Angle of it, ſtanding on a riſing Hill, diſengaged from the other Buildings, where formerly were kept many thouſand Barrels of Gun-powder, and vaſt Quantities of Match; but great Part of this publick Magazine is now diſtributed in the ſeveral Yards, and Store-Houſes, belonging to the Government, at Woolwich, Chatham, Portſmouth, Plymouth, &c. This White Tower was founded by William the Conqueror, as hath been ſaid before; but has been ſo often repaired, and rebuilt, that it is likely that there are but few Stones left of the original Foundation. At the Weſt End of this Building, is the main Guard of the Tower, with Lodgings for the Officers.

The new Armoury.

THE moſt magnificent Structure in the Tower is the new Armoury, or grand Store-Houſe, which was began to be built in the Reign of K. James II. and finiſhed in the Reign of King William III. It is ſituated on the North of the White-Tower, is a hundred and thirty Yards in length, and about twenty in Depth; it hath a graceful Walk before it, paved with Free Stone the whole Length of it, and planted with Lime-Trees without the Pavement. In the Midſt of the Building, is a ſtately Portal, adorned with four Columns, Entablature, and Triangular Pediment of the Dorick Order; under the Pediment are the King's Arms, curiouſly embelliſhed with Trophy Work.

The Artillery.

IN this Store-Houſe, on the Ground-Floor, is a very large Mortar, which carries a Bomb, of 500 Weight, two Miles; alſo the Carcaſſes and ſeveral leſs Mortars, ſome for throwing Hand-Granadoes, which are called Cohorn-Mortars, from Cohorn, the Dutch Engineer, who invented them: And one that ſhoots nine ſeveral Balls at a Time.

AN Engine for ſhooting ſeveral Musket-Balls at once, to clear an Avenue.

Cheveaux de Frieze, to keep off Horſe.

TWENTY new braſs Guns, each weighing 32 Hundred, 3 Quarters, 14 Pound, and thus inſcribed:

ANNA Mag. Brit. Fran. & Hib. Regina, Anno Regni Quarto.

JOHANNES Baro Churchill, Dux et Comes de Marlbrough, Mag. Brit. Reg. à Conciliis Secretior. Ordinis Periſcelidiſ. Eques, Rei Tormentariæ et Copiarum præfectus Generalis.

Sacri Romani Imperii Princeps, &c.

HERE are alſo ſeveral ſmaller new braſs Guns.

A Pontoon, and ſeveral Guns taken at Vigo, and a Rack to extort Confeſſion.

AN Engine of ſmall Mortars, which ſhoots 30 Shells at a Time.

A Gun that diſcharges ſeven Balls out of as many Bores.

A curious Gun made for Prince Henry, the Workmanſhip of which is ſaid to coſt 200*l.*

A Smith's Forge, wherewith to work on a March, or encamped, &c.

A vaſt Number of other Cannon mounted on Carriages, and a proportionable Quantity of other Materials, for drawing the Trains of Artillery.

KETTLE-DRUMS taken at the Battle of Hochſtet, with a ſtrange Inſtance of a Shot in one of them.

The ſmall Armoury.

IN the Room over the Artillery, is the Armoury of ſmall Arms, of equal Dimenſions with that underneath: It is an Arſenal, ſurpriſingly curious in all its Parts, and is therefore juſtly the Admiration of all Strangers; for here are Pikes, Bayonets, Carbines, Piſtols, Halberts, and Swords, for an Army of 100,000 Men, kept not only beautiful and clean, but in ſuch admirable Order, forming various Kinds of Figures, as render the Scene not a little delightful to the Eye.

THE North and South Walls are adorned with ſixteen Pilaſters, eight on each Side, of Pikes and Piſtols, of the Corinthian Order, whoſe Intercolumns are, CHEQUER-WORK of Carbines and Piſtols, Waves of the Sea, in Swords and Bayonets.

HALF-MOONS, Semicircles, and a Target of Bayonets.

THE Form of a Battery in Swords and Piſtols.

SUNS, with Circles of Piſtols.

A Pair of Gates, in Halberts and Piſtols.

THE Witch of Endor (as they call it) within three Eliſes of Piſtols.

BACK-BONE of a Whale, in Carbines, &c.

A Fiery Serpent, Jupiter, and the Hydra, in Bayonets.

THE Star and Garter of the Order of the Knights of the Garter, repreſented in Piſtols, and Swords, and near the South-Weſt Angle, are the Arms, as Blunderbuſſes, Swords, and Pikes, taken from Sir William Perkins, who was Executed at Tyburn, for the Aſſaſſination-Plot, Anno 1696, and the Blunderbuſs wherewith the King was to have been ſhot in his Coach near Turnham-Green.

AT the Weſt End of the Room, are two Pyramids of Piſtols, at the Eaſt End the Figure of an Organ, Front-formed by Piſtols. At the ſame End, the Armour of Henry V. who conquer'd, and of Henry VI. who loſt France.

AND between the Eaſt and Weſt Ends, there are eight ſquare Columns, or Pillars, eight round Columns, of Pikes and Piſtols; but nothing is more beautiful, than the four lofty wreathed Columns formed with Piſtols, in the Middle of the Room, which ſeem to ſupport it. They ſhew alſo ſome other Arms, which are only remarkable for the Uſe they have been put to; as the two Swords of State carried before the Pretender, when he invaded Scotland, in the Year 1715, and the Arms taken from the Spaniards that landed in Scotland, Anno 1719.

THE ſmall Arms were placed in this beautiful Order, by one Mr. Harris, originally a Blackſmith, who had a Place, or Penſion, granted him by the Government, for this Piece of Service, which he well deſerved; no Nation in Europe, being able to ſhew a Magazine of ſmall Arms, ſo good in their Kind, and ſo ingeniouſly diſpoſed.

IN this Place where this Armoury now ſtands, was formerly a Bowling-Green, a Garden, and ſome Buildings.

The Horſe Armoury.

A little Eaſtward of the Office of Ordnance, is the Horſe Armoury, which contains the Figures of ſeveral of our Kings, ſince William the Conqueror, curiouſly repreſented on Horſeback, in rich Armour, Cap-a-pe, and ſome of their Horſes have Armour. Here are King William III. King Charles I. and II. King Henry V. VII. and VIII.

King

King Edward III. &c. with their Guards in Armour, backward.

A Suit of Armour, ſaid to be John of Gaunt's, 7 Foot and an half high; that of the Lord Kinſale, with the Sword which he took from a French General, for which he and his Poſterity have the Honour of being covered in the King's Preſence; the Earl of Argyle's Leading-Staff, and many other Suits of Armour and Curioſities.

The Spaniſh Armoury.

NEAR the South Weſt Angle of the White Tower, is the Spaniſh Armoury, conſiſting chiefly of Arms of divers Sorts taken from the Spaniards, when we overcame, what they vain-gloriouſly called, the Invincible Armado.

THERE is likewiſe to be ſeen here, a large Wooden Cannon, which is call'd Old Policy, it being ſent with ſeveral others, of the ſame Sort, to the Siege of Bologne, in King Henry VIII's Reign, where it was impoſſible to bring Braſs or Iron Cannon; but theſe appearing as ſuch to the Frenchmen, they were ſo terrified thereat, that they ſurrender'd the Town, without a Shot being made, or a Man loſt.

HERE is alſo the Axe which cut off the Heads of Anna Bullen and the Earl of Eſſex, the Mother and the Favourite of Queen Elizabeth.

The Jewel-Office.

THE Jewel-Office, where the Regalia are kept, is near the Eaſt End of the Armoury. The Keeper of this Office muſt be a Perſon of great Integrity, ſo great a Truſt being repoſed in him. Before Blood ſtole the Crown, Perſons who had the Curioſity to ſee the Regalia, were admitted into the Room where they were kept, and allowed to take them in their Hands; but ſince that Time there is more Care taken, the Place being incloſed with Iron Grates, ſo that they may be ſeen, but none admitted into the Room.

FROM antient Times, the Royal Jewels were carefully preſerved in the Tower, by ſome truſty and faithful Perſon, appointed by the King, who had a ſettled Fee for the ſame. And from hence, upon great Triumphs, and Days of publick Splendor, they uſed to be brought to Weſtminſter; and when all was over, diligently ſent back again, and that under the King's own Hand.

THERE is in the Records of the Tower, an Order to William Biſhop of Carliſle, 14 Hen. III. concerning four Coffers with the King's Jewels, to be laid up in the Tower, and another in the 12th Year of Edward III. appointing one John Flete, Keeper of the Jewels, Armour, and other Things in the Tower, during Pleaſure; and to take for his Fee 12 d. per Diem.

A Liſt printed is commonly given to thoſe who come daily to ſee theſe ineſtimable Curioſities in the Jewel-Houſe, briefly mentioning the chief of them. And it is this that followeth:

A LIST of his Majeſty's Regalia, beſides Plate, and other rich Things, at the Jewel-Houſe in the Tower of LONDON.

THESE Regalia are more fully deſcribed by Mr. Strype, from a Hiſtory of the Coronation of King James II. and his Conſort, written by Francis Sandford, Eſq; and communicated to him by the Keeper of the Jewel-Houſe.

SWORDS.

The three Swords.

Firſt, There are three Swords; that is, two Swords, called the Swords of Juſtice; and one whoſe Place is in the Middle between them, called the Sword of Mercy. One Sword of Juſtice repreſents the Spiritual Sword, and is borne on the Right Hand: The End of this Sword is pointed, but yet ſomewhat obtuſe. The other Sword of Juſtice, being the Temporal Sword, is borne on the Left Hand. This hath a very ſharp Point. The Curtana, or Sword of Mercy, hath the Point flat, and, as it were, broken off.

THIS pointleſs Sword is the principal of the three in Dignity: It is a broad, bright Sword, the Length of the Blade thirty two Inches, the Breadth almoſt two Inches. The Handle is cover'd with a fine Gold Wire, four Inches, beſides the Pomel an Inch and three Quarters; which, with the Croſs, is plain Steel gilt: The Length of the Croſs is almoſt eight Inches. This is borne naked before the King at his Coronation. At the Coronation of his preſent Majeſty King George II. it was borne by that great and worthy Nobleman the late Earl of Pembroke.

THE ſecond Sword, the Sword of Juſtice to the Spirituality, hath a Blade forty Inches long, and an Inch and a half broad: The Handle, as of the other, cover'd with Gold Wire.

THE third Sword, the Sword of Juſtice to the Temporality, is of the ſame Size with the former. The Scabbards, of all three, are cover'd with a rich brocaded Cloth of Tiſſue, with a rich Ferule, Hook, and Chape.

The Spurs.

THE Spurs, called the great Golden Spurs, are curiouſly wrought.

The Ampulla.

THE Ampulla, or Eaglet of Gold, contains the Holy Oil. It is in Form of an Eagle, with Wings expanded, ſtanding on a Pedeſtal; all of pure Gold, finely chaced. The Head ſcrews off at the Middle of the Neck, to put in the Oil: And the Neck being hollow, the Holy Oil is poured out into a Spoon, thro' the Point of the Beak. The Height of it, from Bottom to Top, including the Pedeſtal, is about nine Inches: The Diameter of the Pedeſtal, about three Inches and a half; and the Breadth between the fartheſt Point of the Wings, about ſeven Inches. The Weight of the whole, about eight or ten Ounces.

THE

The Spoon. THE Anointing Spoon is likewiſe of pure Gold, with four Pearls in the broadeſt Part of the Handle; and the Bowl of the Spoon finely chaced, both within and without. It appears to be very antient.

CROWNS.

The Crowns. THESE ſeveral Crowns belong to the Regalia.

King Edward's Crown. Firſt, King Edward's Crown; with which the Kings of this Realm are crowned: So called, in Commemoration of the antient Crown in the Church of Weſtminſter, remaining till the Beginning of the great Rebellion, when, with the reſt of the Regalia, it was ſacrilegiouſly taken away. It is a very rich Imperial Crown of Gold, made againſt the Coronation of King Charles II. embelliſhed with Pearls and precious Stones of divers Kinds, viz. Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds and Saphires, with a Mound of Gold on the Top of it, encircled with a Band, or Fillet, of Gold, embelliſhed alſo with precious Stones, and three very large oval Pearls, one at the Top of the Croſs, and two other pendant at the Ends of the Croſs. The Cap within the ſaid Crown is of Purple Velvet, lined with white Taffata, and turned up with Ermine, thick powder'd in three Rows.

The Crown of State. Secondly, The Crown of State, ſo called becauſe it is worn by the King or Queen, at ſuch Times as they come in State to the Parliament Houſe. This was alſo made at the Coronation of King Charles II. It is exceeding rich, being embelliſhed with ſeveral large Diamonds, and other Stones; but moſt remarkable for a wonderful large Ruby, ſet in the Middle of one of the Croſſes, reckoned worth 10,000 l. as alſo for the Mound's being of one entire Stone, of a Sea-green Colour, called an Agmarine. This Crown was taken to Pieces, being too weighty, in the Reign of Queen Anne, and made fit for her, and ſhe then wore it when ſhe went to Parliament.

The Queen's Circlet. Thirdly, The Queen's Circlet of Gold. Queen Mary, Conſort of King James II. wore it in her proceeding to her Coronation. It is a Rim, or Circlet of Gold, very richly adorn'd with large Diamonds, curiouſly ſet, with a String of Pearl round the upper Edge thereof. The Cap of Purple Velvet lined with white Taffata, and turned up with Ermine richly powder'd.

The Queen's Crown. Fourthly, The Queen's Crown, wherewith the Queens are crowned, being a very rich Imperial Crown of Gold, ſet with Diamonds of great Value, intermixed with a few precious Stones of other Kinds, and ſome Pearl. It is of Gold, but ſo richly embelliſhed with Diamonds and Pearl, that little or none of the Gold appeareth. It is an Imperial Crown, compoſed of Croſſes and Flowers-de-Liz, with Arches, and a Mound, as the other Crowns.

The Orb, or Mound. THE Orb, Mound, or Globe, which is put into the King's Right Hand immediately before his being crown'd, and borne in his Left Hand upon his Return into Weſtminſter-hall, is a Ball of Gold, ſix Inches Diameter, encompaſſed with a Band, or Fillet, of Gold, embelliſhed with Roſes of Diamonds, encircling other precious Stones, and edged about with Pearl. On the Top whereof is a very large Amethyſt, of a Violet, or Purple Colour, near an Inch and an half in Height, of an oval Form; which being encompaſſed with four Silver Wires, becometh the Foot or Pedeſtal of a very rich Croſs of Gold, of three Inches and a Quarter in Height, and three Inches in Breadth, ſet very thick with Diamonds, having in the Middle thereof a fair Saphire on one Side, and and a fair Emerald on the other; and embelliſhed with four large Pearls in the Angles of the Croſs, near the Center, and three large Pearls at the End of the ſaid Croſs. The whole Height of the Orb, or Croſs, being eleven Inches.

SCEPTRES.

Sceptres. Firſt, St. Edward's Staff, in Length four Feet ſeven Inches and an half, is a Staff, or Sceptre of Gold, with a Pike, or Foot, of Steel, about four Inches and a Quarter in Length; and a Mound and Croſs at the Top: The Garniſhings are alſo of Gold, and the Diameter is about three Quarters of an Inch.

Upon the Mound is a ſmall Jeruſalem Croſs, whereupon is fix'd a Dove with Wings expanded, as the Emblem of Mercy.

THE King's Sceptre with the Croſs, or Sceptre Royal, likewiſe of Gold. The Handle plain, and the upper Part wreathed; in Length two Feet nine Inches and a Quarter, and of the ſame Thickneſs as the former. The Pomel at the Bottom enriched with Rubies, Emeralds, and ſmall Diamonds. The Top riſeth into a Flower-de-Liz, with ſix Leaves, whereof three are upright, and the other three hanging down, all enriched with precious Stones. Out of the ſame Flower-de-Liz, iſſueth a Mound, made of an Amethyſt, garniſhed with Table-Diamonds, and on the Mound, a Croſs wholly covered with precious Stones, with a large Table-Diamond in the Center.

THE Queen's Sceptre with the Croſs, alſo of Gold, adorned with Diamonds, and other precious Stones, in Length two Feet ten Inches, with a Mound, and Croſs at the Top, iſſuing out of a Flower-de-Liz, very like the King's in all the Embelliſhments thereof, only ſmaller, and wreathed, not altogether ſo thick.

THE Queen's Ivory Rod, is a Rod, or Sceptre, of white Ivory, in Length three Feet one Inch and a half, whereof the Pomel and Garniture is Gold, as is alſo the Mound and Croſs at the Top, only the Dove at the Top of the Croſs is enamelled with white. The Circumference at the Bottom about two Inches, and at the Top about an Inch and a half.

RINGS.

Rings. THE King's Coronation Ring is a plain gold Ring, with a large Table-Ruby Violet, wherein a plain Croſs, or Croſs of St. George, is curiouſly enchaced.

THE King's Coronation Ring is likewiſe of Gold, with a large Table-Ruby ſet therein, and ſixteen other ſmall Rubies round-about the Ring; whereof thoſe next to the Collet are the largeſt, the reſt diminiſhing proportionably.

THE other Regalia, as the open Pall, the Supertunica of Cloth of Gold, the Surcoat of Crimſon Sattin, the Colobium Syndonis, the Armilla, the Buskins, Sandals, King Edward's Chair, &c. are kept in Weſtminſter-Abbey.

THERE was a Time when the Tower was not thought a Place ſafe enough for this Treaſure: But whatever the Reaſon was (whether the King's Wars here at Home) Henry III. ſent (if not all) a great many of them into France. What they were, and to whom ſent, and by whom, and where laid up, a Tower Record will relate Anno 46, Henry III. William de Latymer, and Mr. Henry de Gandaoo, with others, brought the King's Jewels to Margaret Queen of France, in two Coffers, and ſhe laid them up in the Temple at Paris, under her Seal. The ORDNANCE OFFICE.

The Ordnance Office.

THE Ordnance Office is kept in a Part of the Tower, called Cold-Harbour, where ſtrict Accounts are taken of, and Orders for providing and diſpoſing of Warlike Materials, neceſſary for the Defence of the Kingdom, in Times, both of Peace and War, do iſſue. This is an Office of great Account and Importance, it being the ſtanding and grand Magazine of all the Utenſils, Inſtruments, and Weapons of War, as well by Sea as by Land, for the Defence and Safety of the Kingdom, having the Superintendence, Ordering and Diſpoſing, as well of the grand Magazine, lodged in the Storehouſes in the Tower, as at Woolwich, Chatham, Portſmouth, Plymouth, Hull, Windſor, and elſewhere. In which Places is Ammunition at all Times, for as many Land and Sea Forces, as may not only defend the Kingdom, but be ſerviceable to all our Neighbours in League and Friendſhip with us, and formidable to our Enemies.

IN old Records ſeveral Patent Officers belonging to this Office are to be met with, which are now wholly antiquated, or of little Account.

THERE was alſo another Officer belonging to the Croſs-Bows, who was called, in the Records of the Tower, Attiliator Balliſtarum. He ſeemed to be one who provided Harneſs and Accoutrements for thoſe Bows. King Edward I. in the Firſt of his Reign, granted this Office to *T. Which Bills ſo ſubſcribed, ſhall be allowed him upon his Account.

NOW to look back to the firſt Officers employed in this great Truſt, and their antient Fees.

IN the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the Maſter of the Ordnance was the high born Ambroſe Earl of Warwick, under whom were ſeveral other Officers made by Letters Patents, and their Salaries payable out of the Exchequer, viz.

THE Lieutenant of the Ordnance. The firſt Lieutenant was Sir Chriſtopher Morrice, who was made by King Henry VIII. Anno Regni 36. The Fee then aſſigned to this Officer, was, 56*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* Bromfield was in this Office, in the 5th of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Robert Conſtable and Sir William Pelham, Anno 1588, Sir George Carew, 1593.

NEXT, was the Surveyor of the Ordnance. The firſt Surveyor was Henry Johnſon, conſtituted by King Henry VIII. in the 34th Year of his Reign. His Fee, then aſſigned, was, 36*l.* 10*s.* at 2*s.* by the Day. Randolph was in this Place, Anno Elizabeth 8. Afterwards John Powel, then William Partridge.

THEN is the Clerk of the Ordnance-General, ſometimes ſtiled alſo, Clerk of the Armoury.

THIS Office is antient. The Fee, per Ann. was 12*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* that is, 8*d.* by the Day. William Painter was in this Office when Queen Elizabeth firſt took the Scepter. Anthony Painter and John Bagnal enjoyed this afterward in Queen Elizabeth's Reign; and before them Mr. Pelham, Anno 13 Elizabeth.

THE next Officer is the Keeper of the Stores. The firſt Patent was to one Richard Bowland, in 14 Eliz. His Fee was 54*l.* 12*s.* per Ann. that is, 3*s.* by the Day. Before that Time, he had the Room of a Gunner at 12*d.* per Diem, and he did this Service. Humphrey Bowland was in this Office, Anno 1584. The Queen allowed 6000*l.* per Ann. for buying in Stores.

THE Keeper of the ſmall Guns was the next. The firſt that had a Patent for this Office was E. Partridge, in the 2d and 3d of Queen Elizabeth, and next to him Nathaniel Partridge, his Son. This was no Office before Partridge's Time, whoſe Fee by the Year, was 15*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* that is, 10*d.* by the Day. Afterwards Richard Powell ſucceeded in this Office under Queen Elizabeth.

THEN came the Clerk of the Deliveries. Fleming and Anthony, Anno 7. Edward VI. were the firſt appointed to this Office, but not in Patent, till about 16 Elizabeth, when Brian Hog had a Patent for this Place. The Fee both under King Edward and Queen Elizabeth, was, per Ann. 18*l.* 5*s.* at 12*d.* by the Day. The next that ſucceeded in this Place, was George Hog.

SO that the Sum Total of theſe Officers amounted yearly to 203*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*

BUT beſides theſe firſt and antient Fees, they had theſe Fees and Allowances moreover granted them by the Queen, for their Diet, Riding-Charges, Boat-Hire, Wood, Coals, Ink, Paper, Keeping of Books, Wages of Clerks, &c. that is to ſay, Great Frauds, formerly committed by the Surveyor, Store-Keeper, &c.

In the Reign of her ſaid Majeſty Queen Elizabeth, the Surveyor of the Ordnance, the Keeper of the Stores, and ſome other Officers, were found tardy in their Dealings, having upon Occaſion, taken the Liberty to advance their own private Intereſts, at the Queen's Expence; but about the Year 1591, N. Rainberd, one belonging to that Office, as it ſeems, privately gave the Lord Treaſurer Information, by a Letter, diſcovering their Shifts and Devices in drawing of Books, and Proportions, for their own Gain and Commodity; over-charging her Majeſty with exceſſive Prices of Proviſions brought into the Store from Time to Time. He informed alſo of a Book of Debts to be ſoon exhibited to his Lordſhip, wherein they propoſed to demand Allowances for ſome Things already paid for by the Queen, as, upon due Examination thereof, by the Officers, generally would appear. As divers Emptions for the Ships were demanded in the ſame Book, which the Keeper of the Stores would alledge to be due to him, altho' her Majeſty had already paid for the ſame. Alſo a Quantity of Iron Shot, lately brought into the Store, which in Truth, upon due Examination, would appear to be her Majeſty's, being an old Remain, returned from Sea, at the Time of the Spaniards being here. There was a Bargain of 30,000 Pounds Weight of Copper Plate, and 200,000 Pounds of Match: Of the Copper, there was brought into her Majeſty's Stores 13,000 Pounds Weight; and all at 4*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the Hundred Weight; but, indeed, the ſame was bought for betwixt 50*s.* and 3*l.* the Hundred: So the Queen loſt in every Hundred 33*s.* 4*d.* the leaſt. This Informer offered, when the Lord Treaſurer ſhould command him, to draw a Brief of the whole Deceit.

In the Year 1578, there was another Diſcovery of embezzling the Queen's Gun-powder and Salt-petre, which Abuſe had been practiced a good while before. And one of the Clerks, or ſome other belonging to the Stores, privately ſignified it to the Lord Treaſurer; by which he went in Danger of his Life, were it known: Deſiring it, therefore, might be taken Notice of ſome other Way. In order to which, he ſecretly delivered this Paper to the ſaid Treaſurer, which way the Queen might find out the Abuſes in the Office of Ordnance, without any Suſpicion of the Revealer of the ſame. Which Courſe was accordingly taken by the Lord Treaſurer.

Anno 1587, about Michaelmas, the Earl of Warwick, Maſter of the Ordnance, ſent a Gentleman of his, one Mr. Blincoe, with a Command to all the Gun-Founders in Suſſex, to repair up to the City, on ſuch a Day, there to underſtand his Pleaſure, concernining their further Continuance in that Trade. Whereupon appeared Henry Nevil, and the reſt of that Occupation, at the Houſe of his Deputy Mr. Hockenal, who told them, that upon Complaint made to the Lords of the Council of the Abuſe of the Tranſportation of Ordnance into foreign Countries, their Honours had referred it to the Earl of Warwick, to take Order for Redreſs of it. Whereupon he thought good to call them together, and had authorized them, the ſaid Hockenal, with Blincoe, to deal with them, and to take ſufficient Security againſt the like Abuſes for the Time to come; and becauſe it was thought convenient, that ſome Quantity of Ordnance ſhould yearly be made for the neceſſary Proviſion of our own Navigation, they ſet down a general Rate yearly, which ſhould ſerve the whole Realm, and out of that they allotted to every Founder a certain Quantity; but requiring at their Hands, that they ſhould enter into Bonds, not to caſt any greater Quantity, than ſhould be allotted them; nor to ſell any but in the City, nor to any Merchant, but ſuch as my Lord, or his Deputy, ſhould name, with certain other Conditions, of taking a Stamp for all Pieces out of the Office, and ſome other ſmall Points; but that Article of Selling to none but ſuch as ſhould be appointed, cauſed ſome Diſturbance, becauſe they thought it tended rather to ſome private than publick Benefit.

About the Year 1593, Notice having been before taken of great Quantities of Iron Ordnance Caſt by Founders and tranſported abroad by Merchants, certain Perſons (whereof one Dickenſon was Chief) went about to obtain of the Queen a Patent, for the Term of Twenty-One Years, to have the only Nomination and Appointment of ſuch Founders as were to be allowed, and the ſole Government and Diſpoſition of Caſting and Selling of Ordnance, and Shot of Iron; on Condition to pay her Majeſty 40*s.* for every Ton of Ordnance that ſhould be Caſt and Sold within this Realm, and to keep fifty Tons of Ordnance in Readineſs, ever to be Sold to her Majeſty, upon any ſudden Occaſion; and to give an Account to the Lieutenant of the Ordnance, every ſix Months, of all the ſeveral Guns that ſhould be Caſt and Sold; and to build new Furnaces without any Charge to her Majeſty, when any extraordinary Pieces were to be Caſt for the only Uſe of her Highneſs, upon any reaſonable Warning given.

For the backing of which Suit, they ſhewed, That a Gun-Founder had confeſſed, that of late he he had known 2500 Tons of Iron Ordnance to be Caſt in this Realm, or upward, in ſome one Year; which might prove a Thing, both dangerous to the State, and hurtful to the Subject: And that for theſe two Reaſons.

Firſt, That the more Ordnance is Caſt, the greater is the Waſte of Woods, Timber, and Ewre, and the leſs good Iron made for the Uſe of the Commonwealth. And,

Secondly, For that there is ever ſuch an exceeding Quantity of Ordnance, ready made, and diſperſed into many Places, as did allure bad People in the Night to convey, by Stealth, the ſame to the Water-ſide, and ſo into foreign Countries, where there was uttered three Times as much Ordnance as was uſed here by the Engliſh Subjects; and that, therefore, without Licence, or Payment of Cuſtom.

AND theſe Diſorders chiefly grew by the Wilfulneſs, and over-grown Numbers of Founders, who, notwithſtanding, had often been expreſly forbidden to Caſt any Guns by the Maſter of the Ordnance, and by the Lords of the Privy Council, in the Name of her Majeſty: And for Obſervation thereof have been enforced to enter into Bonds; and yet, to this Day, no Means have been found ſufficient to rule or reſtrain them.

FOR which Cauſe the late Maſter of the Ordnance, and the other Officers there, thought it beſt to abridge the Number of the Founders, and, by Licence from her Majeſty, to eſtabliſh ſome few of the fitteſt of that Company to continue thoſe Services under, and by ſome neceſſary Orders and Penalties. By which Means there ſhould be no more Ordnance Caſt, than were needful, nor any tranſported without Intelligence for full Licence and Payment of Cuſtom.

HERE Sir George Carew, the Lieutenant of the Ordnance (Anno 1593) interpoſed in Behalf of himſelf, as to whom of Right this Matter chiefly belonged, and that as well the Caſting of Guns, as the Tranſportation of them, (which the Queen had granted, under the Great Seal, to certain Farmers) was, in Time paſt, ex Officio, in the Power of the Maſter of the Ordnance, or of the Lieutenant; and that no longer ſince, when Sir Robert Conſtable lived, whereby, in ſome ſort, he held himſelf more intereſted in this Cauſe, than a meer Stranger; and in that Reſpect had good Hope the Queen would admit him to be her Farmer before any Man elſe, and the rather, for that herein he ſhould advance her Benefit in a Thing which hitherto had been wholly unprofitable to her.

NEAR about this Time the Queen granted to John Powell, Eſq; Surveyor of the Ordnance, a Patent by her Prerogative, to have Power and Authority to dig, open, and work for Salt-petre, in, or upon any the Ground, or Grounds, within the Realm of England and Ireland, where the Salt-petre, without Fraud or Covin, ſhould be thought to be found; and the ſame to try out, and make into Powder, as well within her own Grounds, Lands, and Poſſeſſions, as any of her Subjects; ſo as the ſaid Surveyor, or his Deputy, did reaſonably agree accord, and ſatisfy the Parties according to Law, and with the Owner of any ſuch Stuff, or Neceſſaries, as might chance to be taken for the Uſe of the ſaid Works.

IN the Year 1595, William Partherick, Eſq, Surveyor of the Ordnance, was appointed to ride to all the Forts, Caſtles, and Places of Defence, within the Cinque Ports, and their Members, as well to view and ſurvey what Want of Ordnance, Powder, Shot, and other Munition of War, was in every of them; and alſo to ſee the Decays of their ſeveral Platforms, within every of the ſaid Places of Defence. To the Intent further Order might be taken, as well for the repairing and amending thereof, as for the neceſſary Supplies of ſuch other Furniture there needful. He was alſo to take Order for the ſending up from Dover to the Tower, thoſe Pieces of Braſs that were broken, and to deliver certain Powder, remaining at Canterbury, left there ſince the Year 1588.

Of the MINT.

THE Office of the Mint is likewiſe kept in the Tower of LONDON. The Moniers are a Corporation, ſettled by Charter of Edward III. and confirmed ſince by ſeveral of our Kings, conſiſting of, The Mint.

I. THE Warden, who is the Chief, and by his Office is to receive the Gold and Silver Bullion, and pay for it in full Value; the Coinage being defrayed by a ſmall Duty on Wine imported; ſo that the Bullion is coined for the Goldſmiths, or whoever bring it in, Gratis.

II. THE Maſter-Worker, who receives the Bullion from the Warden, cauſeth it to be melted, delivers it to the Moniers, and when minted, takes it from them again. His Allowance is according to the Pound Weight.

III. THE Comptroller, who is to ſee that the Money be made in Size; to over-ſee the Officers, and controul them.

IV. THE Aſſay-Maſter, who weigheth the Gold and Silver to be coined, and ſeeth that it be according to the Standard of Fineneſs.

V. THE Auditor, who is to make up, and audit the Accounts.

VI. THE Surveyor of the Melting, who is to ſee the Silver Caſt out, and not to be altered after it is delivered to the Melter, which is after the Aſſay-Maſter hath made Trial of it.

VII. THE Clerk of the Irons, who ſeeth that the Irons be clean and fit to Work with.

VIII. THE Engraver, who engraveth the Stamps for the Money.

IX. THE Smiter of Irons, who, after they are graven, ſmiteth them upon the Money.

X. THE Melters, who melt the Bullion before it comes to the Coining.

XI. THE Blanchers, who anneal, boil, and cleanſe the Money.

XII. THE Porter that keeps the Gate of the Mint.

XIII. THE Provoſt of the Mint, who is to provide for all the Moniers, and to over-ſee them.

XIV. THE Moniers, who are ſome to ſhear the Money, ſome to forge it, ſome to beat it broad, ſome to round it, and ſome to ſtamp, or coin it.

IN the Year 1344, King Edward III. in the 18th Year of his Reign, commanded Florences of Gold to be made and coined in the Tower, that is to ſay, a Penny-Piece of the Value of Six Shillings and Eight-Pence; the Half-penny Piece of the Value of Three Shillings and Four-pence; and a Farthing-Piece, worth Twenty-Pence. Percevall de Porte, of Luke, being then Maſter of the Mint. This was the firſt Coining of Gold in the Tower, and alſo the firſt Coinage of Gold in England.

IT is alſo recorded, That the ſaid King, in the ſame Year, ordained his Exchange of Money to be kept in Sernes-Tower, a Part of the King's Houſe in Buckler's-Bury. In Times before paſſed, all great Sums were paid by Weight of Gold and Silver, or ſo many Pounds or Marks of Silver, or ſo many Pounds or Marks of Gold, cut into Blanks, and not ſtampt. The ſmaller Sums alſo were paid in Sterlings, which were Pence ſo called, for they had no other Coins.

THE

THE Antiquity of this Sterling Penny uſually in this Realm, is from the Reign of Henry II. notwithſtanding the Saxon Coins (before the Conqueſt) were Pence of fine Silver, the full Weight, and ſomewhat better than the latter Sterlings.

William the Conqueror's Penny alſo was fine Silver, of the Weight of the Eaſterling, and had on one Side ſtamped, an armed Head with a Beardleſs Face (for the Normans wore no Beards) with a Scepter in his Hand. The Inſcription in the Circumference, was this, Le Rei Wilam: On the other Side a Croſs double to the Ring, between four Rowels of ſix Points.

KING Henry I. his Penny was of the like Weight, Fineneſs, Form of Face, Croſs, &c.

THIS Henry, in the 8th Year of his Reign, ordained the Penny, which was round, ſo to be quartered by the Croſs, that they might eaſily be broke into Half-pence and Farthings.

IN the firſt, ſecond, third, fourth and fifth of King Richard I. his Reign, and afterwards, Eaſterling Money is commonly mentioned.

THE Weight of the Eaſterling Penny may appear by divers Statutes, namely, of Weights and Meaſures, made in 51 Henry III. in theſe Words, Thirty-two Grains of Wheat, dry and round, taken in the Midſt of the Ear, ſhould be the Weight of a Sterling Penny; twenty of thoſe Pence ſhould weigh one Ounce; twelve Ounces a Pound Troy. It followeth in the Statute, Eight Pounds to make a Gallon of Wine, and eight Gallons a Buſhel of LONDON Meaſure, &c.

KING Edward I. in the 27th of his Reign, held a Parliament at Stebunheth, in the Houſe of Henry Waleis, Mayor of LONDON, wherein, among other Things handled, the Tranſporting of Sterling Money was forbid.

IN the Year 1351, William Edington, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Treaſurer of England, a Wiſe Man, but loving the King's Convenience more than the Wealth of the whole Realm and Common People, (ſaith Walſingham) cauſed a new Coin, called a Groat, and a half Groat to be coined, and ſtamped; the Groat to be taken for 4*d.* and the half Groat for 2*d.* not containing in Weight, according to the Pence, called Eaſterlings, but much leſs, to wit, by 5*s.* in the Pound; by Reaſon whereof Victuals and Merchandizes became dearer through the whole Realm.

ABOUT the ſame Time alſo, the old Coin of Gold was changed into a new, but the old Floren or Noble, then ſo called, was worth much above the taxed Rate of the new; and therefore the Merchants engroſſed up the old, and conveyed them out of the Realm, to the great Loſs of the Kingdom: Whereof a Remedy was provided by changing of the Stamp.

IN the Year 1411, King Henry IV. cauſed a new Coin of Nobles to be made, of leſs Value than the Old, by 4*d.* in the Noble, ſo that fifty Nobles ſhould be a Pound, Troy Weight.

IN the Year 1421, was granted to Henry V. a fifteen to be paid at Candlemas, and at Martinmaſs, of ſuch Money as was then current Gold or Silver, not over-much clipped or waſhed, to wit, that if the Noble was worth 5*s.* 8*d.* then the King ſhould take it for a full Noble of 6*s.* 8*d.* and if it was leſs of Value, than 5*s.* 8*d.* then the Perſon paying that Gold, to make it good to the Value of 5*s.* 8*d.* the King always receiving it for a Noble of 6*s.* 8*d.* and if the Noble ſo paid, was better than 5*s.* 8*d.* the King to pay again the Surpluſage that it was better than 5*s.* 8*d.* Alſo this Year was ſuch Scarcity of white Money, that tho' a Noble was of ſo good Gold and Weight as 6*s.* 8*d.* Men could get no white Money for them.

IN the Year 1465, King Edward IV. cauſed a new Coin, both of Gold and Silver, to be made, by which he was a great Gainer. For, of an old Noble, he made a Royal, which he commanded to go for 10 Shillings. To this Royal was put an Allay of 8*d.* which made it weigh the more; and it was ſmitten with a new Stamp, viz. a Roſe. He alſo made half Angels of 5*s.* and Farthings of 2*s.* 6*d.* Angelets of 6*s.* 8*d.* and half Angelets, 3*s.* 4*d.* He made Silver Money of Three-pence, a Groat, and ſo of other Coins, after that Rate, to the great Harm of the Commons. Roſe Noble.

William Lord Haſtings, the King's Chamberlain, being Maſter of the Mints, undertook to make the Monies, under Form following, to wit, Of Gold, a Piece of 8*s.* 4*d.* Sterling, which ſhould be called a Noble of Gold; of which there ſhould be fifty ſuch Pieces in the Pound Weight, Troy. Another Piece of Gold, 4*s.* 2*d.* Sterling, and to be of them an hundred in the Pound. And a third Piece of Gold, 2*s.* 1*d.* Sterling, two hundred in the Pound, every Pound Weight of the Tower, to be worth 20*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* of Sterling, which ſhould be 23 Carats, 3 Grains and a half, 5 &c. and for 37*s.* 6*d.* of Sterlings. The Piece of Four-pence to be 112 Groats and Two-pence, in the Pound Weight.

IN the Year 1504, King Henry VII. appointed a new Coin, to wit, a Groat, and half a Groat, which bear but half Faces. The ſame Time alſo was coined a Groat, which was in Value 12*d.* but of thoſe but few, after the Rate of 40*d.* the Ounce.

In the Year 1526, 18 Henry VIII. the Angel Noble, being then the ſixth Part of an Ounce Troy, which was 40*s.* Sterling, and the Angel was alſo worth two Ounces of Silver, ſo that ſix Angels were worth twelve Ounces of Silver, which was 40*s.* A Proclamation was made on the 6th of September, that the Angel ſhould go for 7*s.* 4*d.* the Royal of 11*s.* and the Crown for 4*s.* 4*d.* And on the 5th of November following again, by Proclamation, the Angel was enhanced to 7*s.* 6*d.* and ſo every Ounce of Gold to be 45*s.* and the Ounce of Silver at 3*s.* 9*d.* in Value.

IN the Year 1544, 35 Henry VIII. on the 16th of May, Proclamation was made for the enhancing of Gold to 48*s.* and Silver to 4*s.* the Ounce; alſo the King cauſed to be coin'd baſe Monies (called Teſtons) to wit, Pieces of 12*d.* 6*d.* 4*d.* 2*d.* and 1*d.* in Weight, as the late Sterling, in Shew good Silver, but inwardly Copper.

THE Pieces had whole or broad Faces, and continued current, after that Rate, till the 5th of Edward VI. when they were on the 9th of July called down, the Shilling to 9*d.* the Groat to 3*d.* and on the 17th of Auguſt, from 9*d.* to 6*d.* &c. On the 30th of October it was publiſhed, that new Coins of Silver and Gold ſhould be made, a Piece of Silver, 5*s.* Sterling, a Piece, 2*s.* 6*d.* of 12*d.* of 6*d.* a Penny, with a double Roſe, a Half-penny, a ſingle Roſe; and a Farthing with a Portcloſe. Coins of fine Gold, a whole Sovereign of 30*s.* an Angel, 10*s.* an Angelet, 5*s.* Of Crown Gold, a Sovereign, 20*s.* Half Sovereign, 10*s.* 5*s.* 2*s.* 6*d.* and baſe Money to paſs as before.

WHICH continued till the ſecond of Queen Elizabeth, then called to a lower Rate, taken to the Mint, and refined, the Silver whereof being coined with a new Stamp of her Majeſty, the Droſs was carried to foul Highways to heighten them. This baſe Money (for the Time) cauſed the old Sterling Money to be hoarded up, ſo that 21*s.* current was given for one old Angel to gild withal. Alſo Rents of Lands and Tenements, with with Prices of Victuals, were raiſed far beyond the former Rates, and were not ſoon brought down again. Thus much for baſe Money coined and current in England; but of Leather Money, there is no Mention of any ſuch here. Philip de Commines indeed writes of Leather Money, with a little Stud or Nail of Silver in midſt, being for many Years uſed in France, which was occaſioned by the Poverty brought upon that Nation, by paying a Ranſom of three Millions of Florences for King John, taken Priſoner by Edward, the Black Prince, at the Battle of Poictiers.

Money coined by King Edward VI.

BESIDES the ſeveral Coins mentioned by Mr. Stow, the following are to be added.

THE Money coined in the Reign of King Edward VI. were Pieces of 5 s. of 2 s. 6 d. of 1 s. of 6 d. 4 d. ½. and ſome ſmaller Pieces. On the Pieces of 5 s. were ſtamped upon one Side, the King's Effigy on Horſeback, with the Date of the Year under the Horſe's Feet; and between the Rings, Edwardus D. G. Ang. et Fran. Rex, On the other Side, the Arms of England and France quarter'd, with this Motto, Poſui Deum Adjutorem meum.

By Queen Mary.

IN the firſt Year of Queen Mary certain new Coins were proclaimed of Gold and Silver, viz. a Sovereign of Gold, 30 s. an Angel, 10 s. of Silver, the Groat, half Groat, and Penny.

Phillip and Mary's Coin.

QUEEN Mary alſo coined the ſame Pieces as her Brother Edward VI. had done: And after her Marriage with King Phillip, both their Effigies were ſtampt on one Side of the Piece, facing each other; and the Arms of England and France quarter'd, impaled with the Arms of Spain on the Reverſe. About the Effigies was engraven, Phil. et Mar. D. G. R. et Reg. Ang. Fra. and about the Arms, their Motto.

QUEEN Elizabeth coined the ſame Pieces of Money with King Edward VI. and with the ſame Arms and Motto, only her Effigy was a half Face, looking to the ſiniſter Hand.

King James's Coin.

KING James I. coined alſo Crowns of 5 s. Half Crowns, 2 s. 6 d. Shillings of 12 d. Six-pences, &c. Having his Effigy ſtampt on one Side, with a Dexter Face, and this Inſcription about it. Jacobus. D. G. Mag. Brit. Fra. et Hiber. Rex. On the other Side, the Arms of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, quarter'd in this Order. In the firſt Quarter, the Arms of France and England quartered. In the ſecond Quarter, the Arms of Scotland. In the third Quarter, the Arms of Ireland. The Fourth, the ſame with the Firſt, with this Motto about them. Quem Deus conjunxit Nemo ſeparet.

King Charles I's Coin.

KING Charles I. coined the ſame Peices, both of Gold and Silver, as his Father King James I. had done before him. His Effigy was a half Face, looking to the Siniſter Hand; the Arms the ſame, but the Motto was Chriſto Auſpice Regno.

The Coin of the Commonwealth.

Soon after the Death of this King, in the Year 1649, when England was voted by the Rump Parliament, a Free State, there was Money coin'd in the Tower, both of Gold and Silver, viz. 20 s. Pieces of Gold, and of Silver, Pieces of 5 s. Pieces of 2 s. 6 d. Shillings, Six-pences, Groats, Half Groats, and Pence. All which Pieces had upon one Side the Croſs of England, in a ſingle Eſcutcheon, and on the other Side, the Engliſh Croſs in one Eſcutcheon, and the Iriſh Harp in another, not impaled but joined together in two ſeveral Eſcutcheons. On that Side that had the Croſs of England, there was engraven, The Commonwealth of England: And on the other Side, where the Arms of England and Ireland were in two Eſcutcheons, was engraven, GOD with us; which occaſioned a witty Saying of an old Cavalier, I find, ſaid he, by this Coin, That GOD and the Commonwealth are of different Sides.

About the Year 1643 and 1644, King Charles I. was forced to coin Money at Oxford, and other Places, for the Supply of his Armies at that Time.

King Charles II's Coin.

After the Reſtoration of King Charles II. which was in the Year 1660, and the 13th of his Reign, all the afore-mentioned Money (called the State's or Commonwealth Money) was called in and other Money coined.

The Money coined by King Charles II. of Gold, were Pieces called Guineas, (being made of Gold from that Place) of 20 s. Half Guineas at 10 s. and ſome Double Guineas of 40 s.

Of Silver alſo, he coined Crowns, Half Crowns, Shillings, Six-pences, &c. all which Pieces, both Gold and Silver, were not ſtampt as his Predeceſſors were; but done in a Mill, and from thence called Milled Money, and to prevent clipping, or other defacing, were jagged on the outward Brim, the Crown and Half Crown Pieces have this Inſcription round the Edge: Decus et Tutamen.

These Coins have on one Side the King's Effigy, with a half Face, looking to the Dexter Hand, and about it Carolus II. Dei Gratia: And on the other Side, four Eſcutcheons placed in Form of a Croſs, whoſe Baſe Points meet in the Center of the Piece, in which Eſcutcheons are the Arms of the Four Kingdoms, England, Scotland, France, and Ireland; and about them, Magnæ Britanniæ Fra. et Hibernia Rex; and the Date of the Year.

King James II's Coin.

King James II. coined alſo the ſame Pieces, both of Gold and Silver, bearing the like Inſcription, only the Name altered, and the Face looking towards the Siniſter Hand.

KING William and Queen Mary coined the ſame Pieces, both of Gold and Silver, with the like Inſcriptions, the Names only alter'd, and their Faces, which are two, both looking towards the Dexter Hand, with the Arms of England on the Reverſe. In the Center of the Arms, was an In-Eſcutcheon of Pretence, Billette, a Lion Rampant; but after the Death of Queen Mary, the Coin had only the Effigy of the King.

King William's alone.

IN this King's Reign, the old Coin of England was ſo extremely debaſed, by clipping, which was got ſo far, that Half Crowns were reduced to Shillings, and Shillings were accounted large, that weighed 8 d. And moreover, one half of what paſſed was counterfeited, which was eaſily done, the old hammered Money being at firſt not very curious; this made foreign Exchanges riſe upon the Engliſh, for as Silver is the Medium of Trade, that Metal is by all Nations allowed to bear a certain intrinſick Value, and Coinage being invented to certify the Weight and Fineneſs of the Piece; any Nation that debaſes the Allay, or diminiſhes the Weight in its Coin, does ſo much abate the Value of that Coin in Foreign Markets, however Authority may be able to keep it up at Home.

The Calling-in the old Coin

THIS made Guineas run up to 30 s. a-piece, ſo that in the Year 1696, it was found abſolutely neceſſary, notwithſtanding the expenſive War with France, and the prodigious Difficulty of the Undertaking, to call in all the hammered Money, which was reputed to be about four Millions of the ſix, accounted the Running-Caſh of the Nation, and to have it new coined into mill'd Money, which before the End of the Year 1697, was throughly accompliſhed, and with that Frugality and good Management, that are hardly credible.

THE late Earl of Halifax was Chancellor of the Exchequer at this Time, and was greatly aſſiſted in this Affair by Sir Iſaac Newton, who for the Signal Services he had done upon this Occaſion, was, about three Years after, made Maſter of the Mint, a Poſt, which as Monſ. Fontenelle, ſays, in his Life of this great Man, requires great Skill

Skill in Geometry and Natural Philoſophy, and oftentimes demands both difficult Calculations and a great Number of Chymical Experiments: And of his Abilities in this Way, Sir Iſaac has given Proofs in the Table of Aſſays of Foreign Silver, which he printed at the End of Dr. Arbuthnot's Book.

QUEEN Anne ſucceeding King William, had her Effigy in the Coin, looking towards the Siniſter Hand, all her Money likewiſe milled, with the like Bearings on the Reverſe.

King George I. and II. their Coins.

THE Coins of his late and of his preſent Majeſty King George I. and II. are likewiſe milled, on the Reverſe the Arms of the Kingdoms, with an In-Eſcutcheon of the moſt illuſtrious and antient Houſe of Hanover; but in his preſent Majeſty's Gold Coin, the Arms, on the Reverſe, are in a Shield or ſingle Eſcutcheon.

ALL Coins current in England, as well Gold as Silver, are ſeveral, and of a different Value, but all reduced to Pounds, Shillings and Pence. Only (in relation to the Neceſſity of the Poor, and Exchange of great Money) a ſmall Piece of Braſs, Copper, or Tin, called a Farthing, (being the fourth Part of a Penny) and a Halfpenny (which is the Value of two Farthings) have been permitted to be coined, but no Man is compelled to receive them for Payment of Debt or Rent, which cannot be ſaid of any Nation, or State in the World beſides.

NO Money, in any Mint, is made of pure Gold or Silver, being too flexible, and therefore allayed with Copper. The Standard of Crown Gold, is 22 Carats of fine Gold, and 2 Carats of Allay, in the Pound Weight Troy, which is divided into 44 Parts and a half, each Part is to paſs for 30 s. and the half Part for 10 s.

THE Allay of ſome Gold Coins is all Silver, as the Guinea Gold, which renders the Gold Coin ſome more white, ſome more yellow.

THE Standard for Sterling Silver is, 11 Ounces and 2 Penny-Weights of fine Silver, and 18 Penny-Weights Allay of Copper, out of the Fire: So that 12 Ounces of pure Silver, without any Allay, is worth 3 l. 4 s. 6 d. and the Ounce is 5 s. 4 d. $\frac{1}{2}$. But with Allay, it is worth but 3 l. and the Ounce 5 s.

THUS the aforeſaid Value of the Gold Coin ſtood for many Years, till about the Year 1717, the Guineas (by Proclamation) were reduced Six-pence each Guinea, and the other Coin in Proportion.

NOW as to ſome antient Affairs relating to the Mint, and the Officers thereof.

IN the Year 1483, the firſt of King Richard III. John Wood, Eſq; had a Grant for keeping the King's Coin and Money, of Gold and Silver, in the Tower of LONDON, and elſewhere in England.

A Pardon for all the Officers of the Mint.

IN the Year 1552, It ſeems all, or moſt of the Officers had been tardy, for King Edward VI. on the 21ſt of July in the 6th Year of his Reign, granted a Pardon to Sir John York, Knt. Under-Treaſurer of the Coin-Money and Mints within the Tower of LONDON and Southwark; to Nicholas Throckmorton, Eſq; one of the Under-Treaſurers of the ſaid Mints; to Sir John Godſalve, Knt. Comptroller of the Mint within the Tower; to Thomas Fleetwood, Gent. Comptroller of the Mint within the Tower and Southwark; to William Knight of LONDON, Mercer, Aſſay-Maſter of the ſaid Mints; to William Dunch, Auditor of the ſaid Mints; to William Billingſley, Aſſay-Maſter; to William Stanley, of LONDON, Goldſmith, Aſſay-Maſter; for all and all manner of Tranſgreſſions, Contempts, Abuſes, and Offences, touching or concerning the ſaid Mints of the Tower and Southwark.

Baſe Money called-in by Queen Elizabeth.

Anno 1560, Baſe Monies being called-in by Queen Elizabeth's Proclamation, were received into the Mint, and fine Monies thereof made. And a Computation was given in from the Mint, of the baſe Monies received into the Mint ſince Michaelmas 1560, to Michaelmas 1561, and of the Charges of the Workmanſhip, or Coinage of the fine Monies thereof made, with a Note of the Proviſions, and other Charges incident to the ſame, the Waſte of Melting and Blanching being borne.

THE Total of the Maſs of Baſe Money was, 631,9,50 Pounds Weight.

AT this Time there were odd Pieces coined, of which none are now current, or hardly to be found; namely, Four-pence Half-penny Pieces, Two-pence Farthing Pieces, and Penny Halfpenny Pieces.

Anno 1572, Queen Elizabeth granted to John Loniſon, during Life, to be Maſter-Worker of the Monies in the Tower, and elſewhere, through this Realm. And his Allowance was 14 d. $\frac{1}{2}$, upon every Pound of Silver coined. This Man coined Money Six-pence Farthing in the Pound under the Standard, and ſhort of the Weight for divers Years, pretending that his Indenture bore him out, as it ſeemed indeed to do. Richard Martin, Warden of the Mint, was the chief

Man that ſued him, his Office being to over-ſee Matters of the Mint. This Controverſy between Martin and Loniſon continued for ſome Years. For in the Year 1574, the Lord Treaſurer left the Matter to Peter Osborn, the Remembrancer, an able and honeſt Man. Martin and Loniſon had ſeveral Conferences before the ſaid Osborn, expounding the Articles of their Indentures. Osborn bad them draw out two Books each, concerning their own Minds. The Warden did ſo, and ſent his, by Osborn, to the Lord Treaſurer, concerning the Meaning of the ſaid Articles. Loniſon had Order to draw out his Book, and that he ſhould ſet down, ſimply, what he thought was the Meaning of the Articles for his Turn and Purpoſe. Theſe two Books ſaved the Lord Treaſurer abundance of Pains, and would ſerve to give Light to the Queen's learned Counſel, and the Judges, the more skilfully to judge of, and underſtand the Matter, and Artſmen alſo to find the Difference between them, which, it ſeems, was not ſo eaſily diſcoverable.

THIS held till the Year 1578, when the Queen appointed Commiſſioners to enquire into Loniſon's Doings, who pretended to them, that he did it, becauſe 14 d. was too little to bear the Charges. In fine, the Commiſſioners were contented to allow him 15 d. for every Pound Weight; and if he would not accept of that, to be diſcharged of what was paſt, and the Queen to make Choice of another Officer in his Place, and to allow him a Penſion of 300 l. a Year, during his Life, to be paid out of the Coinage. The Commiſſioners were Perſons of the higheſt Rank, viz. Nicholas Bacon, Lord-Keeper; William Lord Burleigh, Lord Treaſurer; Thomas Earl of Suſſex; Robert Earl of Leiceſter; Sir Chriſtopher Hatton; Sir Francis Walſingham, and Sir Walter Mildmay, all Privy-Counſellors.

AND here, as Mr. Strype has done, we will ſubjoin the Report of the ſaid Lords, and other her Majeſty's Commiſſioners, touching this Controverſy in the Mint, given May the 25th, 1578, becauſe thereby ſomewhat of the Nature of the Mint, in thoſe Days, may be known.

" Firſt, THEY find that the Standard for Silver Monies, appointed by her Majeſty, is " eleven Ounces Two-penny Weights fine Silver; and Eighteen-penny Weights for Allay " in every Pound Weight, which is the antient " Standard of the Sterling of England.

" Secondly, THEY find, that every Perſon bringing Bullion to be coined, muſt deliver the " ſame Bullion at the Fineneſs of the Standard.

" WHEREUPON they think, that no Bullion ought to be put to melting, to make Sterling Monies, of leſs Fineneſs than the Standard " aforeſaid.

" AND therefore do like beſt, (if it may ſo " ſtand with her Majeſty's good Pleaſure) that " the ſaid Standard ſhould, by the Over-ſight " and Avouchment of the Warden, be kept in " the Commixture and Melting of the ſaid Bullion, being the firſt and principal Action of " the whole Work, which, they think, is agreeable with the Tenor of the Indentures, and is " agreeable unto Juſtice, in yielding unto the " Subjects as good Silver in their Monies, as " they delivered to make the ſame; and is alſo " moſt for the publick Utility of the Realm, in " preſerving the Riches of the Coin, being the " common Meaſure and Value of all Things, " bought and ſold, both within the Realm and " without.

" BY which Reſtitution of the Coin to its " Perfection, it will fall out, that her Majeſty " then muſt forbear a Part of that Gain which " now ſhe hath; albeit in the Riches of her " Treaſure it will be ſufficiently recompenced.

" THAT whereout of the 18 d. which the " Subject payeth for the Coinage, Waſte, and " Workmanſhip of every Pound Weight, her " Majeſty now hath 10 d. and the Maſter 8 d. " There is taken from the Monies, as the Coinage " is now in Weight and Fineneſs, 6 d. Farthing " more, to make up 14 d. Farthing for the " Maſter's Allowance, without which he cannot perform the Work. And if the Standard " ſhould be reſtored in Perfection, then the ſame " 14 d. Farthing is to come out of the 18 d. " paid by the Subjects, and not out of the " Monies.

" AND ſo will remain to her Majeſty upon " the Pound Weight, 3 d. ¾. which, nevertheleſs, is more than any of her Majeſty's Progenitors had in the like Caſe.

" AND yet the Commiſſioners think, that the " Subjects, to have the Standard kept upright, " and to receive their Money coined by Weight, " as heretofore they have done, may be endured " to pay 21 d. upon the Pound Weight for " Coinage and Waſte, which is 3 d. more than " they now do.

" AND then will remain to her Majeſty, upon every Pound Weight, 6 d. Three-Farthings, " and the Maſter to have his 14 d. Farthing, being the Sum agreed on in the Bargain with " him, and the Money kept in Perfection in " Weight and Fineneſs.

" THE like Conſideration is to be had in the " Standard of the Gold.

" BUT if her Majeſty ſhall not like to forbear " ſo much of her own Commodity, (which, for " the Reſpects aforeſaid, they wiſh it may pleaſe " her to do) then in a ſecond Degree, they " think it fitteſt, that the Matter be thus ordered.

" THAT the Bullion being delivered by the " Subjects at the full Standard of eleven Ounces, " Two-penny Weights fine, the ſame, ſhould by " the Over-ſight and Avouchment of the Warden, be put to the Melting at eleven Ounces, " one Penny-Weight fine, and be ſhorn at 3 s. 3 d. " in the Weight; whereby will be gotten out " of the Monies in Fineneſs and Weight 6 s. " and a Farthing in the Pound Weight, as the " half Remedy of the Allay and Shear.

" WHICH Profit they think meet to be reſerved wholly to her Majeſty, to be accounted, " viz. for the Fineneſs by the Leiger, and the " Melting Books, and for the Shear by the Teller's Books, as the only true Means to make " the Accompt by.

" WHICH 6 d. Farthing being added unto " the 18 d. paid by the Subjects for Coinage " and Waſte, will make 2 s. and a Farthing upon the Pound Weight; whereof deduct 14 s. " and a Farthing in Money, by Tale, for the " Maſter's Allowance, and then will remain to " her Majeſty 10 d. the Sum that now ſhe hath.

" BUT becauſe the Maſter doth alledge that " 14 d. Farthing is too little to bear all his " Charges, the Commiſſioners, in that Requeſt, " (to encourage him the better to ſerve her Majeſty faithfully in the Place) do think it convenient, (if it may ſo like her Majeſty) to " make his Allowance, the Sum of 15 d. upon the " Pound Weight.

" AND then ſhall remain to her Majeſty 9 d. " Farthing upon every Pound Weight, not " much leſs than the Sum ſhe now hath.

" THE like is to be had in the Standard of " Gold; and whereas John Loniſon, now Maſter-" Worker of the Mint, hath been charged with " the Breach of the Standard, whereby it is alledged, that he ſhould be in Arrearage to her " Majeſty;

" Majeſty; becauſe, that in his Anſwer, it ſeems, " he took it, that his Indenture gave him Power " to proceed in the Courſe he hath done; and " that the Proſecution of the Suit in the ſame, " hath been very chargeable to him, the Com- " miſſioners think convenient, that it may pleaſe " her Majeſty, for the ending the Controverſy, " to give him a Diſcharge for all thoſe Things " riſing in Queſtion heretofore; and that he may " paſs his Account to the Warden accordingly.

" And that it likewiſe pleaſes her Majeſty to " give a Diſcharge unto Richard Martin, now " Warden of the Mint, to reckon and paſs the " ſaid Loniſon's Accompt in Form afore-declared; " which Martin they do not find to have done " any Thing, in this Controverſy, thereby to " have any particular Gain to himſelf; but the " whole Matters alledged by him to have tended " to her Majeſty's Service, and for diſcharging " of his Duty belonging to the Office.

" And this being by her Majeſty allowed, " the Indentures are to be renewed.

" Finally, If Loniſon will not accept " of this laſt Offer, to have 15 d. upon " the Pound Weight, and to be diſcharged of " what is paſt, then the Commiſſioners think " good, that her Majeſty ſhould make Choice of " another Officer that will ſerve the Place, in " ſuch Sort as may be moſt beneficial to her Ma- " jeſty.

" Nevertheless, becauſe Loniſon ſhall " not be diſmiſſed without ſufficient Recompence " for his Service and Intereſt, the Commiſſioners " think convenient, that he have a Penſion of " 300 l. by the Year, during his Life, to be " paid out of the Coinage; or, that wanting, " out of her Majeſty's Receipt, and One Hun- " dred Pounds a Year, after his Deceaſe, unto " his Wife, during her Life, out of the Coinage.

William Burleigh.

Loniſon not complying with the Commiſſioners, or dying before all was ended between the Queen and him, there was brought into his Executors, a Charge of his Debt to the Queen, for ſo much as in his Time, he had impaired the Monies of Weight and Fineneſs under their juſt Standard; ſo that from April 1572, to October 1578, there remained due to the Queen, by him, for the Remedies of the Aſſay and Shear upon Gold, molten and coined, 62 l. 7 s. 11 d. and 8 Mites; and alſo remained due and owing to the Queen for the Remedies of the Aſſay and Shear, upon Silver, molten and coined, 1876 l. 13 s. 3 d. and 8 Mites: Sum Total, due to her Majeſty for Gold and Silver, according to the Leiger and Teller's Books, 1939 l. 1 s. 2 d. ½, and 4 Mites.

Upon the aforeſaid Reſolution of the Commiſſioners for Loniſon's-Buſineſs, theſe Matters following, were concluded upon, or perhaps propounded, only (by the Lord Treaſurer's Device chiefly) for the Coining of Gold and Silver, and for the Allowances to be made to the Warden and Maſter-Worker.

Beſides the four Manner of Monies of Silver, one Piece of a Penny ſhall be coined, ſo as 720 thereof make a Pound Weight.

The Bullion of Gold ſhall be coined at 23 Carats, three Grains, one Quarter of fine Gold, and three Quarters of a Grain of Allay.

The Silver Standard at 11 Ounces one Penny-Weight fine, and 19 Penny-Weights of Allay into the Melting Pot.

The Gold to be 36 l. 1 s. 10 d. ½ the Pound Weight.

The Silver at 3 l. 0 s. 3 d. the Pound Weight.

The Warden ſhall take up in every Pound Weight of Gold 5 s. 10 d. Half-penny, out of which he ſhall pay to the Maſter-Worker 12 d. Three-Farthings.

Note, There ſhall be retained out of the Commixtion of Gold one 18th Part of a Carat of Gold of every Pound Weight of Gold.

And one Penny-Weight of Silver of every Pound of Silver, which the Maſter-Worker ſhall have to his own Uſe, beſides the 3 s. 4 d. Half-penny aboveſaid for Gold, and 12 d. Three-Farthings for Silver, towards all Manner of Charges.

From April 1572 to October 1573, Gold Monies coined were Poiz 583 Pounds Weight 11 Ounces, three Quarters. From the laſt of Oct. 1573, to the 12th of July 1578, Gold Money coined were Poiz 629 Pounds Weight, eight Ounces, one Penny-Weight and ſix Grains.

From April, as aforeſaid, to October, 1573, Silver Monies coined were 55,675 Pounds Weight, ſix Ounces. From October, as aforeſaid, to July 1578, Silver Monies coined, were 94,238 Pounds Weight, 10 Ounces and 16 Penny-Weights.

A Trial-Piece made.

Anno 1577, there was a Trial-Piece made, which Trial-Piece tried the Work-Maſter of the Mint's Monies; which Mr. Martin, the Warden, brought into Goldſmiths-Hall, being a juſt and good Standard in Fineneſs, as he divers Times reported it to be, by Trial made thereof in France and Flanders, and by many other Trials of the ſame made, before the preferring of the ſame to the Goldſmiths: And another Trial-Piece was made, authorized by the Privy-Council, to touch Plate.

Mint Aſhes.

In the Year 1570, and odd, one Nicholas Rykward, formerly a Dependant on Walter Peppard, belonging to the Queen's Mines in Ireland, petitioned the Queen about the Mint Aſhes. The Rubbiſh and Aſhes of the Tower Mint were caſt out as of no Value, and laid rejected for the Space of four or five Years, and other ſome 20, 40, 60, or 100 Years and upwards, after the Silver and other Metals had been tried, waſhed, fined, and molten. This Man thought, that by further trying, good handling, and Husbandry with Labour, theſe Heaps of Rubbiſh might be wrought to ſome Profit. In Conſideration whereof he humbly beſought the Queen to grant him, and his Aſſigns, all that Rubbiſh and Aſhes of all her Mints, which had been ſo caſt out in the Tower, or ſuch Parts of them as ſhe ſhould pleaſe, with convenient Liberty to make, ſearch, dig, take, and uſe the ſame, filling and making good the ſame Places and Grounds which he ſhall break, and leaving them in as good Caſe or better than he found them, during ſome reaſonable Term of Years, by her Majeſty to be limited, with Proviſo, that none other ſhould have, uſe, or occupy the Trying of the ſame Aſhes or Rubbiſh, nor the Earths wherewith the ſame were mingled; to be taken at ſome reaſonable yearly Rent, or Part of the Gain or Profit that ſhould grow thereby.

A Complaint againſt Sir Richard Martin, Warden of the Mint.

In the Year 1597, ſome Goldſmiths, and others, made a Complaint, and preferred a Petition againſt Miſdemeanors in the Mint, which were likely to cauſe great Decay of her Majeſty's Profit, by Thouſands of Bullion that might and would come in; utterly diſcouraging her Subjects that would bring Bullion into the Mint. The great Hindrance whereof they made to be; for that Sir Richard Martin did detain great Sums of their Money by Force, which had been long before coined, converting it to his own Uſe. But this ſeems to be only the Complaint of ſome few peeviſh Folks; there being but ſeven Hands to the Petition, and the two firſt, Women, viz. Mary Feek, and Suſannah Franknel. This Man laid long under the Spleen and Malice of ſome People,

People, but as formerly, in a Letter to the Lord Treaſurer, he appealed to the Searchers of all Hearts, who beſt knew how unjuſtly he was accuſed, and earneſtly deſired an honeſt and indifferent Jury for Trial of his Cauſe; ſo it beſpoke his faithful and good Service, that the Queen continued him thus long in her Service.

The King's Seals to be engraven only in the Tower-Mint.

ONE peculiar Privilege of the Mint in the Tower is, that the King's Seals are to be engraven there only, for tho' the Kings of England had ſeveral Mints in other Places in the Realm, yet it appears, by ſundry Writs, recorded in the Exchequer, that when any Seals of the Kings in former Times were to be engraved, that a Writ was directed to the Warden of the Mint, ſetting forth the Form of ſuch Seal, with a Command, that he ſhould cauſe ſuch a Seal to be engraven by the King's Engraver in the Mint, within the Tower of LONDON. And the ſame Seal, with a fair Pattern thereof, together with the ſame Writ, to return at a Day certain. And then theſe Seals ſo made and returned, were by the Lord Treaſurer, and Barons, delivered unto ſuch Officers, as ſhould uſe the ſame. And the Purpoſe of having a Pattern, was for Judgment, if any counterfeit Seals ſhould be uſed.

WHICH certain Cuſtomers and Alnagers in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, and many other Officers, uſed her Seal in their ſeveral Offices, and cauſed the ſame to be made at their Pleaſures; the Warden of the Mint complained of them to the Lord Treaſurer Burleigh, ſhewing the aforeſaid antient Cuſtom, and the Uſefulneſs of it, and how this Making of Seals at the Officer's Pleaſure tended to the deceiving and defrauding of the Queen and her People: And he required that ſome ſpecial Commandment ſhould be given out for the Defacing of all ſuch Seals as were counterfeit. And that the antient Records might be ſearched for the Penalties due to ſuch Counterfeiture. And that it had been heretofore accuſtomed for the Warden, or Graver, by his Appointment, to make Search for ſuch Counterfeit Seals; and he made Preſentment thereof before the Lord-Treaſurer and Barons. And they, viz. the Mint-Maſter and Graver, prayed his Lordſhip's Order in the Premiſes to be had.

Coining of Farthings.

ONE Thing more to be mentioned in relation to the Mint, is, concerning a Queſtion ſtarted in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, about the Coining of Farthings: Whether to make them of Silver, or Silver debaſed, or Copper? If they ſhould be made of the Standard of other Money, the Piece would be only two Grains, of that Smallneſs, as neither to be conveniently coined or handled for Payment; if a baſe Standard be appointed, therefore to increaſe the Weight, that every Farthing might weigh ſix Grains, (which is the ſmalleſt that conveniently can be) then there would be Eighty in every Ounce; and in every Pound Weight 960, and would be current for 20 s. The Workmanſhip thereof conſidering the Number of Pieces, the Difficulty of Melting, and Manner of Commixture would coſt 2 s. 6 d. the Pound Weight, and for her Majeſty's Revenue, at leaſt, 6 d. So the Value in Silver cannot exceed 17 s. that is, 3 Ounces 3 Penny-Weights of fine Silver; and 8 Ounces 17 Penny-Weights of Allay. This ſmall Quantity of Silver will make no Shew, and be but clearly loſt, and be as eaſy to counterfeit, as if they were only Copper.

IF they be only of Copper, the ſame might be faithfully made of one Penny Weight, the Piece, and ſo in a Pound Weight there ſhould be 240, and be current for 5 s. and with a reaſonable Revenue thereof to her Majeſty, as of the other Monies, and Charges of Copper, Tools, and Workmanſhip will be worth their Value. They will be apt for Uſe, and of infinite Continuance, and in them there is no Precedent of embaſing. This was offered by Mr. Martin, the Warden, and one Mr. Palmer, an Officer (as it ſeems) in the Mint.

The Mint farmed.

QUEEN Elizabeth once farmed out the Mint to ſome private Subject, who ſeems to have been the before-mentioned Martin, the Mint-Maſter. The Inconvenience and Danger whereof to herſelf, and the Nation, ſome Perſon unknown, ſhewed in the following Paper, addreſs'd to the Lord Treaſurer.

THE Mint of this our Realm, with the Gain belonging to the ſame, is not a Thing fit to be converted to the Uſe of every private Subject in ſuch Sort, as of late Time hath been, and yet doth continue, by reaſon of the Eſtate of the outward Doings of the whole Realm, as Things ſold and bought, whatſoever, as well Foreign Commodities, as our own, and our Traffick abroad, with the ordinary Means to maintain the Treaſure in competent Eſtate, and to defend the ſame from extraordinary Decay. All which Things depend upon thoſe Doings, which of Right ought to be put in Practice in the Mint. And theſe Things are of ſo much the more Importance, by reaſon they are daily and continually in Uſe from Time to Time. And therefore, as they are certainly, or uncertainly dealt in, ſo will the Price of the ſaid Commodities, and the Quantity of the Treaſure follow accordingly, by ſome near Proportion to the more Profit or Prejudice of the Queen's Majeſty and the whole Realm.

AND although we have a Mint, yet we have no Mines, and therefore the Treaſure of this our Realm is rather to be maintained by Art, than by Nature. And there is ſome Difference between other Countries and us in the Government of the Treaſure. And this Thing is to be obſerved, That the Occaſions of Loſs or Gain do continually fall out from Time to Time, and will ſo do, ſo long as we have Traffick with other Countries, and many Times in ſuch Sort, as a private Subject is neither able to prevent the Loſs nor to procure the Gain; as of late Time, there hath been Experience of both: And by the Ignorance of theſe Things, the Inconveniences and Loſſes which have happen'd to the Queen's Majeſty, and the whole Realm, with the Gain, which in the mean Time hath been neglected, are not to be countervailed with the Sum of Ten hundred Thouſand Pounds in one reſpect or other. And if every Thing be duly conſider'd, it will appear, that thoſe Doings which of Right ought to be put in Practice in the Mint, are Things of greater Charge than any private Subject is able to diſcharge. And if the Mint ſhall long continue in the Hands of a private Subject, in ſuch ſort as of late Time it hath done, in a ſhort Time it will neither be profitable to Prince nor Subject, without ſome general Loſs otherwiſe, as well to the Queen's Majeſty, as unto the whole Realm. And therefore of Neceſſity the Mint ought to be in the Queen's Majeſty's own Hands, whether the Gain be more or leſs: If not for Gain, yet to avoid the Danger of Loſs otherwiſe, if the like Occaſions ſhould hereafter happen which heretofore have happened.

AND this is moſt certain, that there is not any private Subject living that will ſeek to have the Mint, but rather in reſpect of his own private Gain, than for her Majeſty's Profit, and the Commodity of the whole Realm. And if a Mint-Maſter can make the Mint gainful unto himſelf, his Coin being reſtrained within certain Limits of certain ordinary Allowances, then much more may the Queen's Majeſty make the ſame profitable, conſidering that her Majeſty may urge the ordinary Allowances further than is convenient for any Mint-Maſter to do, and alſo may increaſe ſome extraordinary Cauſes of Gain, far otherwiſe wiſe than any private Subject is able to do. And for my own Part, I am certainly perſuaded, that there is not any private Subject living, which knoweth what of Right belongeth to the Mint, that with a ſafe Conſcience can either ſeek to have the Mint himſelf, or would be willing that any other ſhould have the ſame in Uſe, but only the Queen's Majeſty, if by any convenient Means it lie in him to prevent the contrary.

And although it may be thought that ſuch certain and apparent Gain, as the Queen's Majeſty hath had by the letting out of the Mint to a private Subject, hath been much more profitable than otherwiſe it would have been, if the ſame had remained in her Majeſty's own Hands; which notwithſtanding, if every Inconvenience be duly obſerved, it will appear, that the ſecret Loſs, which ſince that Time, hath happened to the Queen's Majeſty, and the whole Realm, hath far exceeded any ſuch Gain, and that in divers and ſundry reſpects, not here to be ſet down at large, but otherwiſe, if without Offence, it may be thought convenient.

The Court of Record, and Record-Office kept in the Tower.

The Court kept within the Tower of LONDON, is of great Antiquity, conſiſting of a Steward, a Deputy-Steward; and the Gentleman-Porter is in the Nature of a Sheriff of a County, having the like Power within the Liberty of the Tower, for which Compaſs the Court is held by Preſcription, every Monday, for determining Matters, whether Actions of Debt, Treſpaſs, &c. for any Sum.

The Records are repoſited in two Places, viz. in the Chapel, uſually called Julius Cæſar's Chapel in the White-Tower, and in the Record-Office, which is kept in the Place, called Wakefield's Tower, joining to the Bloody-Tower, near Traytor's Gate. This Office was repaired and beautified in the Reign of Queen Anne, at 2000 l. Expence, at leaſt. The Entrance into it is very graceful and clean, through a ſmall Yard paved with free Stone; and againſt the Stone-Walls are planted Phileries. The Stairs and Stair-Caſe mended and whited, and made much more commodious and lightſome. The Windows, which before were but ſmall and darkſome, are now ſaſhed, and let in much more Light, ſo requiſite for the Inſpection of thoſe obſolete, and, ſometimes, obſcure Writings. The Rooms, which are three in Number, one above another, beſides the large round Room, where the Rolls lie, are all beautifully wainſcotted and pannelled with right Wainſcot. This Wainſcot-Work is framed into Preſſes round each Room, within which are Shelves and Repoſitories for the Reception of Records, as they ſhall be ſent hither, from Time to Time.

Great Quantities of other Records lie in the Chapel of the White-Tower, which were in great Confuſion till Queen Anne's Acceſſion to the Throne, when the Lord Hallifax, obſerving the deplorable Condition they were in, moved the Matter to the Houſe of Lords, who forthwith appointed a Committee, (wherein his Lordſhip preſided,) to inſpect this Grievance, and to report their Opinions in what Manner it might be moſt effectually redreſſed; to this Committee, frequently revived, and for ſeveral Years under the Direction of the ſame Preſident, we owe the Safety and now regular Diſpoſition of theſe venerable Remains, juſtly eſteemed to excel, in Age and Beauty, whatever the choiceſt Archives abroad can produce of the like Sort.

Here Mr. Prinn, ſome Time Keeper of the Records, had gather'd out of large Heaps, covered with Duſt and Cobwebs, Pope's Bulls, Parliament Writs, and Returns, and Letters, which he printed; but took leſs Care to ſort and digeſt them, and leave them in Order for the Uſe of others.

Pope's Bulls he reduced to Order being in all 165, beginning at the Year 1256, to the Year 1406, where are Bulls of Alexander IV. Alexander V. &c. unto the Bulls of Gregory XII.

The Records which are in the Office.

The Records that lie in the Office, begin in the firſt Year of King John. For before that Time there were no Rolls, but only Chartæ Antiquæ, i. e. Antient Charters, or Tranſcripts made and done, a few before, the reſt ſince the Conqueſt, until the Beginning of the ſaid King John; then follow the Rolls of his Son, King Henry III. where the firſt Inquiſitions, poſt Mortem, begin. Then the Rolls of King Edward I. King Edward II. King Edward III. of King Richard II. King Henry IV. King Henry V. King Henry VI. King Edward IV. but the Rolls of King Richard III. are kept in the Chapel of the Rolls in Chancery-Lane; where be alſo the Rolls of the ſucceeding Kings.

Rolls Chapel.

And as the ſaid Chapel of the Rolls, and the Petty-Bag-Office, do fill with Records out of other Offices, they have been, and ſtill ought to be tranſmitted into the Tower after ſome Years.

These Records, in the Tower, among other Things, contain the Foundations of Abbies, and other Religious Houſes: And thoſe of later Date in the Chapel of the Rolls, contain the Diſſolution of them, and alſo the Donation of the Lands belonging to them, whereof many Families are now poſſeſſed.

Rymer's Fœdera.

These Records conſiſt alſo of Leagues of Foreign Princes, and Treaties with them; whereof ſeveral Volumes have been tranſcribed and printed by the Pains of Mr. Rymer, the late Queen's Hiſtoriographer. The Homage and Dependancy of Scotland upon England; The Eſtabliſhment of Ireland, and its Laws and Dominions; The Dominion of the Britiſh Seas, totally excluding both French and Dutch from Fiſhing therein, without Licence from England, proved by ſeveral Preſcriptions, and Records before the Conqueſt, the Intereſt of the Iſles of Man, and of Jerſey, Guernſey, Sark, and Alderney, being the only remaining Parts of the Norman Poſſeſſion left to this Crown of England; The Title to the Realm of France, and by what Means obtained, and all that the Kings or Princes of this Realm, to the Time aforeſaid, have done abroad, or granted and confirmed unto their Subjects at home or abroad; Tenures of all the Lands in England; Extents, or Surveys of Manors or Lands; Inquiſitions poſt Mortem, of great Uſe upon Trials of Intereſt or Deſcent; Liberties and Privileges granted to Cities and Towns Corporate, or to private Men, as Court-Leets, Waiffs, Eſtrays, Markets, Fairs, Free-Warren, Felons-Goods, or what elſe could come to the Crown, or paſs out of it; Several Writs, Pleadings, and Proceedings, as well in Chancery, as in all the Courts of Common Law and Exchequer; Inſpeximus's, and Enrolments of Charters and Deeds, made and done before the Conqueſt; Deeds and Contracts between Party and Party; and the juſt Eſtabliſhment of all the Offices in the Nation; The Metes and Bounds of all Foreſts in England, with the ſeveral reſpective Rights of the Inhabitants therein, to common Paſture, &c. beſides many other Privileges and Evidences.

The Antiquity of the Record Office.

Now as to the Antiquity of this Office of Records kept in the Tower.

There is an antient Record of the 34th of Edward III. wherein Mention is made, of a certain Houſe within the Tower of LONDON, wherein the King [Edward III.] cauſed to be laid up the Rolls, and other memorable Matters of Chancery; as well from the Time of his Progenitors, heretofore Kings of England, as in his own, for the ſafe and ſecure Cuſtody of the ſaid Rolls, and memorable Things.

The Place where theſe Records were then kept, was a certain Houſe, which Houſe was afterwards called a Tower; that, undoubtedly, which is now called Wakefield's-Tower.

In the Record above ſpecified, it is ſaid to be in a certain Houſe.

In another Record of King Henry VI. Mention is made of a little Houſe. Johannes Malpas habuit Officium Cuſtodis Armaturæ infra Turrim LONDON, unà cum parvâ Domo tunc vacant. infra dictam Turrim, juxta Turrim infra quam Rotuli Cancellariæ Regis continentur.

In this Houſe there was a Chamber, called the White-Chamber, contiguous to a Hall called the White-Hall, where one Robert de Hoton, by a ſpecial Order from King Edward III. in the firſt Year of his Reign, arrayed and ſet in Order the Charters, Writings, and Muniments, in two Cheſts. The ſame King gave Order to the Clerk of his Works within the Tower, to ſee to the Reparation of the Defects of this Houſe, as well to the Roof, as the Doors, Windows, &c. There were other Places, where, in Times paſt, Rolls and Inſtruments were kept; as, in the Keeper of the Rolls of Chancery his Inn, and in the Priory of St. Bartholomew's. For ſo, in a Record 39 Henry VI. Mention is made of divers great Cheſts, containing Records of Pleas of the Common-Bench, which were in the Priory of St. Bartholomew's in Weſt-Smithfield, to be removed to the Tower, by a Command from the King: For the chief and laſt Repoſitory for theſe Records was the aforeſaid Houſe in the Tower, whither they were often remanded, by ſpecial Orders from the Kings ſucceſſively.

The Keepers of theſe Records were, ſometimes the Kings Treaſurers. Thus Walter Reginald, the King's Treaſurer, ſeems to have had the Records in his Cuſtody, who, as appears by a Record, was by King Edward II. enjoined to deliver to one Benſted, all the Writings and Inſtruments, touching the Negotiation of Peace, between King Edward his Father, and the King of France, which were in his Cuſtody in the Tower.

In the 1ſt of Edward III. Robert Hoton ſeems to have been Keeper of the Records. For in that Year a Writ was directed to him, that he ſhould bring to the Exchequer, all the Writings, Muniments, &c. which belonged to Thomas, Earl Earl of Lancaſter, deceas'd, which remained in his Cuſtody.

IN the 14th of Edward III. William de Kildesby, Keeper of the Privy-Seal, ſeems to be alſo Keeper of the Records of the Tower. For there is a Tower-Record that runs thus; "All "the Rolls, Bundles, and Memoranda of Chan- "cery, which were in the Houſe of John St. "Paul, (i.e. Powel) then Keeper of the Rolls "of the ſaid Chancery, were ſent by the King's "Command to the Tower, and there were de- "livered to Will. de Kildesby, Keeper of the "Privy-Seal of the ſaid King, by William de "Emeldon, Clerk of the ſaid John.

IN the 10th of Richard II. one John Burton ſeems to have been Keeper of the Tower-Records, from a Record extant in the ſaid Tower.

IN the 11th of Henry VI. Thomas Smith, Clerk, was Keeper of the Records, as appears by a large Exemplification of a Proceſs in the Star-Chamber.

SOON after this, viz. the 14th of the ſame King, John Malpas, who was Keeper of the Armoury, had alſo this Place of Keeper of the Records; for a Record in that Office runs; "John Mal- "pas hath the Office of Keeper of the Armoury "within the Tower of LONDON, together "with one little Houſe, then vacant within the "ſaid Tower, within which are contained the "Rolls of the King's Chancery.

ABOUT the 30th of Henry VIII. Ralph Pexal was Keeper of theſe Records; for in a Bill ſigned about that Year, the King commanded Ralph Pexal, termed Keeper of the Records, within the Tower of LONDON, that he raſe, or cauſe to be raſed, certain Words, negligently written, long before, in the Rolls of Chancery, of 22 Edward IV. then being in the Tower, viz. in a Levy granted to Edmund Church.

Edward Hales was Keeper of the Records in King Edward the VIth's Time. In the Time of his Cuſtody of them, a great many Records lay in an old Houſe in the Tower unknown, undiſcovered, till Hoby, that belonged to the Ordnance, looking for a convenient Place to lay Gunpowder in, found, and gave the ſaid Hales Notice of it, and to fetch ſome of them away: Many whereof had lain there ſo long by the Walls, that they were eaten and periſhed by the Lime.

IN the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, one William Bowyer, a Gentleman, bred up in the Study of the Law, by the Perſuaſion of Sir Thomas Parry, a great Man at Court, took on him this Truſt.

WHEN he came into the Place, he found theſe Records in no Order, ſo that they could be but little ſerviceable to any that ſhould conſult them, not knowing where to find what they looked for. He therefore drew up at firſt a Compendium of the Records, from King John to the laſt Year of Edward IV. And at the Inſtigation of Secretary Cecil, and for his Service, at length, writ out, with his own Hand, many Repertoria, neceſſary either for the Queen, or her Subjects, viz. of all the Rolls of Parliament, all the Patents, and Rolls of Wales, of Gaſcoine, Scotland, Rome, France, Normandy, and Almain, from the firſt of King John to the laſt of Edward IV. and digeſted them all into ſix great Volumes, which employed him eight Years, and above 1000 l. of his own Eſtate, beſide all his Labour.

THE Keeper of the Records, ſucceeding Mr. Bowyer, were Thomas Heneage, and William Heneage; then Roger Wilbraham, Eſq; 2 Jac. Robert Bowyer and Henry Elſing, Eſq; 10 Jac. then John Burroughs, afterwards Knight, and Nicholas Parker, Eſq; the one of Gray's-Inn, and the other of the Middle-Temple; the two next Keepers, viz. Prinn and Petyt, were great and laborious Antiquarians.

THE laſt was ſucceeded by Richard Topham, Eſq; as he was by the preſent Keeper, David Polhill, Eſq;

THE Fee for ſearching the Records in the Tower, was at firſt but a Noble for opening the Door; afterwards 10 s. in Queen Elizabeth's Reign; for which any one might have a whole Day's Search from Morning to Night, with the Attendance of one or two Clerks, and the free Uſe of all the Records there, and of as many Kalendars as had been made thereof by the continual Labour of twenty Years, and more: Now the Cuſtom is to ſearch four Terms more for the ſame Fee.

BEFORE the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the Records of the Tower were ſearch'd but ſeldom; but in and ſince her Time, they have been more reſorted to, ſuch Pains being taken in Sorting and Kalendaring the ſaid Records, that the Search is much readier and more eaſy than it uſed to be.

Henry Lord Stafford, a learned Nobleman, who was Chamberlain of the Exchequer in King Edward the VIth's Reign, and to Queen Elizabeth, had a Key of theſe Records committed to him; and being a Man ſtudious of ſuch Antiquity, beſtowed much of his Time thereon: And was one of the firſt that attempted the reducing them into Order. He made an Inventory of moſt of them, ſetting them in ſuch Order, that he could have found any notable Matter enquired for. Which nevertheleſs, after, by tumbling and toſſing were diſplaced again. He made alſo Repertories of every Matter from King John's Days, till Richard III. And of Charters, Rolls, Patent-Rolls, Parliament-Rolls, from Edward III. to Richard III. This Lord is alſo to be remembred with Honour, for the Informations he gave to Secretary Cecil in the very Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, of the Neglects and Embezzlements of theſe precious Records; which had this Effect, that the Queen gave the Secretary, the Earl of Shrewsbnry, and others, Commiſſions to view, ſee, and underſtand, how and where they were conveyed away; and to draw up Inſtructions for the better preſerving, and Order in keeping them hereafter. Whereupon they appointed two Keys unto the Office, one whereof they committed unto the ſaid Nobleman; and that a perfect Inventory ſhould be made of the Books that remained: And he, for the more careful Preſervation of them, kept one Fitz, his Servant to be always there ready with his Key, when any Search ſhould be commanded to be made, and to keep a Book of Comptrolment, when any Records went out; and by what Warrant, and how they were brought in again. For Bowyer, the Keeper of the Records at this Time, did uſe for his own Eaſe to take home with him ſome Rolls, and return them at his Pleaſure again.

SO that theſe Records have been kept ſometimes under two Keys; as when the Keeper had one, and the Chamberlain of the Exchequer another; that the Safety of theſe valuable Writings might not depend upon one Man, whoſe Clerks or Servants might embezzle them. Upon this Account it was, that the above-mentioned Lord Stafford alledged how dangerous a Thing it was for the Queen and Realm, that the ſame ſhould be under one Key; and ſhewed, that by ſundry Records remaining in the Treaſury of the Palace of Weſtminſter, there had been given Allowance unto the Clerks and Deputies of the Lord Treaſurer, and Chamberlains, for the arraying, (i.e. ſetting in Order) and removing of the Records of the Tower.

THERE

THERE are no Rolls perfect, but only Fragments and Pieces, before the Reign of King John. The Reason whereof might be, partly, the Defacing of many, by their being ill laid up, or by the Negligence of former Keepers, who truſted the Office to Servants.

THERE were divers Caſtles and Towers, in antient Times, where the State-Records and other Rolls of Moment were uſed to be preſerved, both in England and France; but the Tower of LONDON was always one.

IN the Reign of King Edward II. the chief Places appointed for preſerving the Records, were the Caſtles of Pontefract in Yorkſhire, Tutbury in Staffordſhire, and Tonnebrug (Tunbridge) in Kent, and the Tower of LONDON; which four Places are mentioned in an old Record. Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Know ye, that we have aſſigned our beloved Clerks, Robert de Hoton, and Thomas de Sibthorp, to ſearch, array, and put in right Order our Charters, Writings, and other our Muniments, being within our Caſtles of Pontefract, Tutbury, and Tonnebrug, and thoſe which came lately, and are in the Cuſtody of our Keeper of our Tower of LONDON; and alſo all thoſe which are in the Houſe of the Friars Preachers within the City of LONDON; that is, the Black-Friars; a Place of Strength, where Parliaments uſed ſometimes to ſit, and where was a Tower.

IN thoſe Times there were alſo other Records kept in the King's Dominions, in the Parts of France, viz. at the Towers of Bourdeaux and Baion; which Places are mentioned in a Record in the Time of Edward III. to which, it is to be obſerved, the Tower of LONDON is alſo added.

CHAP. X.

Of divers remarkable ACCIDENTS and OCCURRENCES which have happened in, or concerning, the TOWER.

IN the Year 1196, William Fitz-Osbert, a Citizen of LONDON, ſeditiouſly moving the common People to ſeek Liberty, and not to be ſubject to the Rich and more Mighty, at length was taken and brought before the Archbiſhop of Canterbury in the Tower, where he was by the Judges condemned, had Judgment, and was by the Heels drawn thence to the Elms in Smithfield, and there hanged.

1242, King John wrote unto Geffery Magnaville, to deliver the Tower of LONDON, with the Priſoners, Armour, and all other Things found therein, (belonging to the King) to William, Archdeacon of Huntington.

THE Year 1216, 1 Henry III. the ſaid Tower was delivered to Lewis of France, and the Barons of England.

IN the Year 1222, the Citizens of LONDON having made a Tumult againſt the Abbot of Weſtminſter, Hubert of Burgh, Chief Juſtice of England, came to the Tower of LONDON, and called before him the Mayor and Aldermen, of whom he enquired for the principal Authors of that Sedition, amongſt whom, one, named Conſtantine Fitz-Aelulfe, avowed that he was the Man, and had done much leſs than he thought to have done: Whereupon, the Juſtice ſent him (with two others) to Falks de Brent, who with armed Men brought him to the Gallows, and there hanged him, and the other two.

IN the Year 1244, Griffith, the eldeſt Son of Luellin, Prince of Wales, being kept Priſoner in the Tower, contrived Means to eſcape, and having, in the Night-Time, made a long Line, of the Hangings, Sheets, Towels, and Table-Cloths, he let himſelf down from the Top thereof; but in ſliding, the Weight of his Body, being a Fat Man, broke the Rope, and his Neck withal. His Carcaſs being found in the Morning, by the Tower-Wall, was a pitiful Sight to the Beholders, for his Head and Neck were driven into his Breaſt between both his Shoulders. The King, hearing thereof, puniſhed the Watchmen, and cauſed Griffith's Son, who was impriſon'd with his Father, to be more ſtrictly confined.

IN the Year 1253, King Henry III. impriſoned the Sheriffs of LONDON, above a Month, in the Tower, for the Eſcape of a Priſoner out of Newgate.

IN the Year 1260, King Henry, with his Queen, for Fear of the Barons, were lodged in this Tower; the next Year he ſent for his Lords, and held his Parliament there.

IN the Year 1263, when the Queen would have removed from the Tower, by Water, towards Windſor, ſeveral Londoners got together on the Bridge, under which ſhe was to paſs, and not only uſed her with reproachful Language, but alſo threw Dirt and Stones at her, which forced her to return for that Time; but in the Year 1265, the Citizens were compelled to ſubmit themſelves to the King for it; and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs, were ſent to divers Priſons, and a Cuſtos was ſet over the City, viz. Othon, Conſtable of the Tower.

IN the Year 1282, Luellin, Prince of Wales, came down from the Mountain of Snowdon, to Montgomery, and was taken at Bluith-Caſtle, where uſing reproachful Words againſt the Engliſh, Roger Le Strange ran upon him, and with his Sword cut off his Head, leaving his dead Body on the Ground. Sir Roger Mortimer, cauſed the Head of this Luellin to be ſet up on the Tower of LONDON, crowned with a Wreath of Ivy. This was the laſt Prince of the Britiſh Blood, who had any Rule or Dominion in Wales.

IN the Year 1290, the 18th of Edward I. ſeveral Juſtices, as well of the Bench, as of the Aſſizes, were ſent Priſoners to the Tower, who, with great Sums of Money, regained their Liberty, viz. Sir Thomas Weyland, and ſeveral others.

Edward II. in the 14th Year of his Reign, appointed for Priſoners in the Tower, 2 d. a Day for a Knight, and one Penny a Day for an Eſquire, to ſerve for their Diet.

IN the Year 1320, the King's Juſtices ſat in the Tower, for Trial of Matters, whereupon John Giſors, late Mayor of LONDON, and many others fled the City for Fear of being charged with Things they had preſumptuouſly done.

IN the Year 1321, the Mortimers yielding themſelves to the King, he ſent them Priſoners to the Tower, where they remained long, and were adjudged to be drawn and hang'd: But at length Roger Mortimer of Wigmore by giving his Keepers a Sleeping Potion, eſcaped out of the Tower, and his Uncle Roger being ſtill kept there, died about five Years after.

IN the Year 1326, the Citizens of LONDON took the Tower, wreſted the Keys out of the Conſtable's Hands, and releaſed all the Priſoners, and kept both the City and Tower for the Uſe of Iſabel the Queen, and Edward her Son.

IN the Year 1330, Roger Mortimer Earl of March, was taken and brought to the Tower, from whence he was drawn to the Elms, and there hanged on the common Gallows, where he hung two Days and two Nights, by the King's Command, and then was buried in the Grey Fryars Church. He was condemned by his Peers, and yet never was brought before them: For it was not then the Cuſtom, after the Death of the Earls of Lancaſter, Wincheſter, Glouceſter, and Kent, wherefore this Earl had that Law himſelf, which before he had appointed for others.

IN the Year 1360, John the French King being Priſoner in the Tower, King Edward III. being newly returned victoriouſly from France, the firſt thing he did was to viſit his Priſoner, whoſe Ranſom was aſſeſſed, afterwards, at three Millions of Florins, or Nobles; whereupon he was brought honourably to the Sea Side.

IN the Year 1381, the Rebels of Kent drew Simon Sudbury, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, Robert Hales, Prior of St. John's, and Treaſurer of England, William Appleton, Friar, the King's Confeſſor, and John Legge, a Sergeant of the King's, out of the Tower, where the King was then lodged, and beheaded them on Tower-Hill. The particular Hiſtory of which Rebellion is related in the following Manner, taken verbatim from the Annals of Mr. John Stow, in the Life and Reign of King Richard II.

The HISTORY of Wat Tylar's Rebellion.

IN the Year 1381, and the fourth Year of the Reign of King Richard II. was granted to the King a grievous Tax and Tallage of his Subjects, both Spiritual and Temporal, through which was raiſed in England a Shipwreck of great Troubles; for divers Courtiers, deſirous to enrich themſelves with other Mens Goods, informed the King and his Court, that the Tallage was not gathered up faithfully to the King's Uſe by the Collectors; whereupon they offered the King, that they would pay a great Sum of Money for the Farm of that which they ſhould gather over and above that which had been paid, if they might be by the King thereunto authorized.

SOME of them getting the King's Letters and Authority, ſate in divers Places of Eſſex and Kent, and handled the People ſore and uncourteouſly, almoſt not to be ſpoken, for the levying of the ſaid Sum of Money; which ſome of the People taking in evil Part, ſecretly took Counſel together, gathered Aſſiſtants, and reſiſted the Exactors, riſing againſt them; of whom ſome they ſlew, ſome they wounded, and the reſt fled.

THIS Tumult began principally in Kent, and after this Manner, as I find the ſame ſet down in a Chronicle of St. Alban's: One of the Collectors of the Groats, or Pole-Money, coming to the Houſe of John (others ſay Wat) Tylar, in the Town of * Dartford in Kent, demanded of the ſaid Tylar's Wife, for her Husband, for herſelf, for her Servants, and for their Daughter (a young Maiden) every one of them a Groat, which the Tylar's Wife denied not to pay, ſaving for her Daughter, who (ſhe ſaid) was a Child, and not to be accounted as a Woman. That will I ſoon wete, (anſwered the Collector) and taking the young Maiden diſhoneſtly, turned her up to ſearch whether ſhe were undergrown with Hair or not; (for in many Places they had made the like ſhameful Trial) whereupon her Mother cried out, which cauſed Neighbours to come in, and her Husband (being at Work in the ſame Town tiling of an Houſe) when he heard thereof, caught his Lathing-Staff in his Hand, and ran preſently Home; where reaſoning with the Collector, Who made him to be ſo bold? The Collector anſwered with ſtout Words, and ſtrake at the Tylar; but the Tylar avoiding the Blow, ſmote the Collector with his Lathing-Staff, that the Brains flew out of his Head; where through great Noiſe aroſe in the Streets, and the poor People being glad, every one prepared to ſupport the ſaid John Tylar.

THUS the Commons being drawn together, went to Maidſtone, and from thence back again to Black-Heath; and ſo (in ſhort Time) they ſtirred all the Country (in a manner) to the like Commotion. Then beſetting the Way that led to Canterbury, arreſted all Paſſengers, compelling them to ſwear; Firſt, That they ſhould keep Allegiance to King Richard, and to the Commons; and that they ſhould accept no King that was named John, in Envy they bare unto John Duke of Lancaſter, who named himſelf King of Caſtile: And that they ſhould be ready, whenſoever they were called: And that they ſhould agree to no Tax to be levied from thenceforth on the Kingdom, nor conſent to any, except it were a Fifteen.

THE Fame of theſe Doings ſpread into Suſſex, Hertford, Eſſex, and Cambridge Shires, Norfolk, Suffolk, &c. And when ſuch Aſſembling of the common People daily took Increaſe, and that their Number was now almoſt infinite, ſo that they feared no Man to reſiſt them, they began to ſhew ſome deſperate Acts, as they had raſhly conſidered on their Minds, and took in Hand to behead all Men of Law, as well Apprentices, as utter Barriſters, and old Juſtices, with all the Jurors of the County, whom they might get into their Hands. They ſpared none whom they thought to be learned; eſpecially, if they found any to have a Pen and Inkhorn about him, they pulled off his Hood, and all with one Voice crying, Hale him out, and cut off his Head. The Bondmen, and other of Eſſex, being joined with them of Kent on Black-Heath, there came Knights to them from the King, to enquire the Cauſe of their Aſſembly; to whom they made Anſwer, That for certain Cauſes they were come together to have Talk with the King, and therefore willed the Knights to tell him, That he muſt needs come unto them, that he might underſtand the Deſire of their Hearts.

THE King was counſelled by ſome to make Haſte unto them; but Simon Sudbury, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, and Robert Hales of St. John's, Treaſurer, affirmed, That it was not meet for the King to go to ſuch a rude Company, but rather ſome Order to be taken for their Suppreſſion; which when the Commons heard, being moved to a furious Rage, they ſwore, That they would go and ſeek the King's Traitors, to take off their Heads. Forthwith they took their Journey towards LONDON, and came to Southwark, where they filled all the Places of that Borough, and the Country about: They ſpoiled the Archbiſhop's Palace at Lambeth, for Deſpite they bare him. The Lord Mayor of LONDON and Aldermen (fearing the City's Spoil)

* It ſhould be Deptford.

Spoil) decreed to ſhut up the City Gates; but the Commons of the City, eſpecially the poorer People, favouring the Commons of the Country, would not ſuffer the Mayor to ſhut them out, but threatned Death to them that went about it.

All the Night following, to wit, Corpus Chriſti Eve, the Rebels enjoyed free Ingate and Outgate, and encouraged the Commons of LONDON, as alſo of all the Realm, to favour their Cauſe: For, ſaid they, their Purpoſe was but to ſearch out the Traitors of the Land, and ſo ceaſe. The more Credit was given to their Speeches, becauſe they took nothing from any Man, but at a juſt Price, and if they found any Man Thieveing, they beheaded him. The Morrow after, to wit, on Corpus Chriſti Day, coming into the City, talking with the Commons of procuring Liberty to them, and apprehending of Traitors (as they termed them) eſpecially the Duke of Lancaſter, they ſhortly got all the poorer Citizens to conſpire with them, and the ſame Day after it was grown ſomewhat warm, and that they had taſted divers Wines (for the Citizens did ſet open their Cellars for them to enter at their Pleaſure) they exhorted each other, That going to the Savoy, the Duke of Lancaſter's Houſe (to which there was none in the whole Realm to be compared for Beauty and Statelineſs) they might ſet it on Fire, and burn it to the Ground.

Straightway they ran thither, and ſetting Fire on it round about, applied their Travel to deſtroy it; and that it might appear to the Commonalty, that they did not any thing for Avarice, they cauſed to be proclaimed, That none, (upon Pain of loſing his Head) ſhould preſume to convert to his own Uſe, any Thing that was there, but that they ſhould break ſuch Plate and Veſſels of Gold and Silver (as was there in great Plenty) into ſmall Pieces, and then to throw the ſame into the Thames, and ſo all, whatſoever, was deſtroyed: But one of the Rebels, (ſaith Henry Knighton) contrary to the Proclamation, took a goodly Silver Piece and hid it in his Boſom; but another, who eſpied him, told his Fellows, who forthwith hurled him and the Piece of Plate into the Fire, ſaying, "We be "zealous of Truth and Juſtice, and not Thieves "and Robbers". Alſo two and thirty of thoſe Rebels entered a Cellar of the Savoy, where they drank ſo much of Sweet Wines, that they were not able to come out again in Time, but were ſhut in with Wood and Stones, that mured up the Door, where they were heard crying and calling ſeven Days after; but none came to help them out, till they were all dead.

These Things being done, they brake down the Place called the New Temple at the Bar, in which Place Apprentices at the Law were lodged, for Anger which they had conceived againſt Sir Robert Hales, Maſter of St. John's Hoſpital, unto which Hoſpital of St. John's the Temple belonged, where many Monuments, the Lawyers had in their Cuſtody, were conſumed with Fire. After a Number of them had ſacked this Temple, what with Wearineſs of Labour, and what with Wine, being overcome, they lay down under the Walls and Houſings, and were ſlain like Swine, one of them killing another for old Grudges, and others alſo making quick Diſpatch of them.

Another Troop (in the mean Time) ſet Fire on the noble Houſe of St. John at Clerkenwell, cauſing it to be burnt by the Space of ſeven Days together, not ſuffering any to quench it. On Friday they burned the Manor of Highbury, the whole Number of the common People (being at that Time) divided into three Parts: Of which Diviſion, one Part was attending to deſtroy the Manor of Highbury, and other Places, belonging to the Priory of St. John; another Company lay at the Mile's-End, Eaſt of the City; the third kept at the Tower-Hill, there to ſpoil the King of ſuch Victuals as were brought towards him. The Company that were aſſembled on the Mile's-End, ſent to command the King, That he ſhould come to them without Delay, unarmed, or without any Force, which if he refuſed to do, they would pull down the Tower, neither ſhould he eſcape alive. The King taking Counſel, with a few unarmed Men, went toward them in great Fear, on Horſeback, and ſo the Gates of the Tower being ſet open, a great Multitude of them entered into it.

There were (at the ſame Time) within the Tower, ſix hundred armed valiant Perſons, and expert in Arms, and ſix hundred Archers, all which did quail in Stomach, and ſtood like Men amazed; for the baſeſt of the Ruſticks, (not many together, but every one by himſelf) durſt preſume to enter the King's Chamber, and his Mother's, with their Weapons, to put in Fear each of the Men of War, Knights, and others. Many of them went into the King's Privy-Chamber and played the Wantons, in ſitting, lying, and ſporting on the King's Bed; and, that which is much more ſaucily, invited the King's Mother to kiſs with them, yet durſt none of thoſe Men of War (ſtrange to be ſaid) once withſtand them: They went in and out like Maſters, that were but baſe Slaves and of moſt vile Condition.

While theſe rude Wretches ſought for the Archbiſhop, running up and down with terrible Noiſe and Fury, at length finding one of his Servants, they charged him to bring them where his Maſter was, whom they named Traitor. The Servant not daring to diſpleaſe them, brought them to the Chapel, where, after Maſs had been ſaid, and having received the Communion, the Archbiſhop was buſy in his Prayers; for not knowing of their Coming and Purpoſe, he had paſſed the laſt Night in Confeſſing of his Sins, and in devout Prayers: When therefore he heard that they were come, with great Conſtancy, he ſaid, to his Men, Let us now go; ſurely it is beſt to die, when it is no Pleaſure to live: And with that the Tormentors entring, cried, Where is the Traitor? The Archbiſhop anſwered, Behold, I am the Archbiſhop, whom you ſeek, not a Traitor: They therefore laid Hands on him, and dragging him out of the Chapel, they drew him forth of the Tower-Gate to the Tower-Hill; where being compaſſed about with many Thouſands, and ſeeing Swords about his Head, drawn in exceſſive Manner, threatning Death to him, he ſpoke unto them in theſe Words:

"What is it (Dear Brethren) you purpoſe to "do? What is mine Offence committed againſt "you, for which you will kill me? You were "beſt to take Heed, that if I be killed, who am "your Paſtor, there come not on you the Indig-"nation of the juſt Revenger; or, at leaſt, for "ſuch a Fact, all England be not put under In-"terdiction.

Scarce could he pronounce theſe Words, before they cried out with an horrible Noiſe, That they neither feared the Interdiction, nor allowed the Pope to be above them. The Archbiſhop ſeeing Death at hand, with comfortable Words, (as he was an eloquent Man, and wiſe beyond all the wiſe Men of the Realm) ſpake fairly to them. Laſtly, After Forgiveneſs granted to the Executioner that ſhould behead him, kneeling down, he offered his Neck to him that ſhould ſmite off his Head. Being ſtricken in the Neck, but not deadly, he, putting his Hand to his Neck, ſaid, Aha, It is the Hand of God. He had not removed his Hand from the Place where the Pain was, but that being ſuddenly ſtricken again, his Fingers Ends being cut off, and Part of the Arteries, he fell down; but yet he died not, till being mangled with eight ſeveral Strokes in the Neck and Head, he fulfilled moſt worthy Martyrdom. There lay his Body unburied all that Friday, and the Morrow, till Afternoon; none daring to deliver his Body to Sepulture. His Head thoſe wicked Villains took, and nailing thereon his Hood, they fixed it on a Pole, and ſet it on London-Bridge, in the Place where before ſtood the Head of Sir John Minſtarworth.

THIS Archbiſhop, Simon Tibald, alias Sudbury, Son to Nicholas Tibald, Gentleman, born in the Town of Sudbury in Suffolk, Doctor of both Laws, was Eighteen Years Biſhop of LONDON; in which Time he built a goodly College, in the Place where his Father's Houſe ſtood, and endowed it with great Poſſeſſions, furniſhing the ſame with Secular Clerks, and other Miniſters; being valued, at the Suppreſſion, at 122*l.* 16*s.* in Lands by the Year. He built the upper End of St. Gregory's Church at Sudbury. Afterward, being tranſlated to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury, Anno 1375, he re-edified the Walls of that City, from the Weſt Gate (which he built) to the North Gate, which had been deſtroyed by the Danes, before the Conqueſt of King William the Baſtard.

HE was ſlain, as you have heard, and afterward buried in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury. There died with him Sir Robert Hales, a moſt valiant Knight, Lord of St. John's, and Treaſurer of England, and John Legg, one of the King's Serjeants at Arms, and a Franciſcan Friar, named W. Appledore, (Appleton) the King's Confeſſor, all whom they drew out of the Tower, and beheaded them on Tower-Hill; Richard Lions alſo, a famous Lapidary and Goldſmith, late one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, was drawn out of his Houſe and beheaded in Cheap. Many that Day were beheaded, as well Flemings as Engliſhmen, for no Cauſe, but only to fulfil the Cruelty of the rude Commons. For it was a ſolemn Paſtime to them if they could take any that was not ſworn to them, to take from ſuch a one his Hood, with their accuſtomed Clamours, and forthwith to behead him. Neither did they ſhew any Reverence to Sacred Places; for in the very Churches they did kill any whom they had in Hatred. They fetched 13 Flemings out of the Auguſtin Friars Church in LONDON, and 17 out of another Church, and 32 in the Vintry, and ſo in other Places of the City, as alſo in Southwark, all which they beheaded, except they could plainly pronounce Bread and Cheeſe: For if their Speech ſounded any Thing on Brot or Cawſe, off went their Heads, as a ſure Mark that they were Flemings.

THE King coming to the Mile's-End, the Place before recited, was greatly afraid, beholding the Mad-headed Commons, who with froward Countenances, required many Things, which they had put in Writing, and to be confirmed by the King's Letters Patent.

The DEMANDS made by the Rebels to the King at the Mile's-End.

I. "THAT all Men ſhould be Free from Ser-
" vitude and Bondage; ſo as (from thenceforth)
" there ſhould be no Bondmen.

II. "That he ſhould pardon all Men, of " what Eſtate ſoever, all manner of Actions and " Inſurrections committed, and all manner of " Treaſons, Felonies, Trangreſſions and Extor-
" tions, by any of them done, and to grant them
" Peace.

III. "THAT all Men (from thenceforth)
" might be enfranchiſed, to buy and ſell in every " County, City, Borough, Town, Fair, Mar" ket, and other Places within the Realm of " England.

IV. "THAT no Acre of Land, holden in " Bondage or Service ſhould be holden but for " Four-pence: And if it had been holden for " leſs in former Time, it ſhould not hereafter be " inhanced.

THESE, and many other Things they required, and told him moreover, That he had been evilly governed.

THE King perceiving that he could not eſcape, except he granted their Requeſt, yielded to the ſame, and ſo craving Truce, departed from them; and the Eſſex Men returned homeward. On the Morrow, being Saturday, the 15th of June, the King, after Dinner, went from the Wardrobe in Tower-Royal, in LONDON, to Weſtminſter, to viſit the Shrine of St. Edward the King, and to ſee if they had done any Miſchief there. Then went he to the Chapel, called Our Lady in the Pew, where he made his Prayers, and returning by the Suburbs of Weſt-Smithfield, he found all that Place full of the Kentiſh Men; wherefore he ſent to ſhew them, that their Fellows, the Eſſex Men, were gone home, and that he would grant to them the like Form of Peace, if it liked them to accept thereof.

THEIR Chief Captain, named John, or, as other affirm, Walter Hilliard, alias Tylar, being a crafty Fellow, and of an excellent Wit, but wanting Grace, anſwered, That he deſired Peace, but with Conditions to his Liking; meaning to feed the King with fair Words until next Day, that he might in the Night Time have compaſſed his Purpoſe; for they thought (the ſame Night) to have ſpoiled the City, the King being firſt ſlain, and the great Lords that were about him, then to have burnt the City, by ſetting Fire to it in four Parts: But GOD that reſiſteth the Proud, did ſuddenly diſappoint him. For, whereas, the Form of Peace was written in three ſeveral Charters, and thrice ſent to him, none of them could pleaſe him; wherefore, at length, the King ſent to him one of his Knights, named Sir John Newton, not ſo much to command as to intreat him (for his Pride was well enough known) to come and talk with him about his own Demands, to have them put into his Charter: Of which Demands I will ſet down one, that it may plainly appear, how contrary to Reaſon all the reſt were.

Firſt, He would have a Commiſſion to behead all Lawyers, Eſcheators, and others whatſoever, that were learned in the Law, or communicated with the Law, by reaſon of their Office. For he had conceived in his Mind, that this being brought to paſs, all Things afterwards ſhould be ordered according to the Fancy of the common People. And, indeed, it was ſaid, that he had (but the Day before) made his Vaunt, putting his Hand to his own Lips, That before four Days came to an End, all the Laws of England ſhould proceed from his Mouth. When Sir John Newton was in Hand with him for Diſpatch, he anſwered him with Indignation, "If thou art
" ſo haſty get thee to thy Maſter, for I will come
" when it pleaſeth me." Notwithſtanding he followed on Horſeback a ſlow Pace, and by the Way there came to him a Doublet-Maker, who had brought to the Commons threeſcore Doublets, which they bought and wore, and he demanded thirty Marks for them, but could have no Payment. Wat Tylar, anſwer'd him, ſaying, "Friend, appeaſe thyſelf, thou ſhalt be well
" paid before this Day be ended, keep thee
" near to me, I will be thy Debtor.

SETTING

SETTING Spurs to his Horſe he departed from his Company, and came ſo near to the King, that his Horſe had touched the Crupper of the King's Horſe, and the firſt Words he ſpake, were theſe, Sir King, ſeeſt thou all yonder People? Yea, truly, (quoth the King) wherefore ſayeſt thou ſo? Becauſe (ſaid he) they be all at my Commandment, and have ſworn to me their Faith and Truth, to do all that I would have them. In good Time, (replied the King) I believe it well. Then ſaid Wat Tyler, Believeſt thou, King, that theſe People, and as many more, as be in LONDON, at my Command, will depart from thee thus, without having thy Letters. No, (ſaid the King,) Ye ſhall have them, they be ordained for you, and ſhall be delivered to every one of them.

AT theſe Words, Wat Tylar, ſeeing the Knight, Sir John Newton, near to him, on Horſeback, bearing the King's Sword, was offended, and ſaid, It had become him better to be on Foot in his Preſence. The Knight, not having forgot his old accuſtomed Manhood, anſwered, That it was no Harm, ſeeing himſelf was on Horſeback: Which Words ſo offended Wat, that he drew his Dagger, and offer'd to ſtrike the Knight, calling him Traitor. The Knight anſwered, He lied, and drew his Dagger likewiſe. Wat Tylar, not ſuffering ſuch an Indignity to be done him, and before his Ruſtick Companions, made as if he would have run upon the Knight; the King, therefore, ſeeing the Knight in Danger, to aſſwage the Rigour of Wat, for the Time, commanded the Knight to alight on Foot, and to deliver his Dagger to Wat Tylar. But when his proud Mind could not be ſo pacified, but he would alſo have his Sword, the Knight anſwer'd, It was the King's Sword, and (quoth he) thou art not worthy to have it, nor durſt thou ask it of me, if there were no more but Thou and I. By my Faith, ſaid Wat Tylar, I ſhall never eat until I have thy Head; and would have run in upon the Knight.

AT that very Inſtant came to the King, William Walworth, Lord Mayor of LONDON, a bold, courageous, and brave-minded Man, with many Knights and Squires to aſſiſt the King, and he ſaid, "My Liege, It were a great Shame, "and ſuch as never had been heard of, if, in thy "Preſence, they ſhould permit a Noble Knight "to be ſhamefully murthered, and before the "Face of their Sovereign, wherefore he ought to "be reſcued, and Tylar, the Rebel, to be arreſted." Which Words being heard, the King, altho' he were but of tender Years, taking Boldneſs and Courage to him, commanded the Mayor of LONDON to lay Hand upon him; the Mayor, being a Man of an incomparable Spirit and Boldneſs, without any further Delay, or Doubting, ſtrait arreſted him with his Mace upon the Head, and in ſuch Sort, that he fell down at the Feet of his Horſe. By-and-by they which attended on the King environed him round about, whereby he was not ſeen of his Company. And an Eſquire, of the King's, called John Cavendiſh, alighted from his Horſe, and thruſt his Sword into Wat Tylar's Belly: Albeit, more Opinions do hold, that the Mayor did it with his Dagger, and many, beſides, thruſt him in, in many Places of his Body, and then drew him from among the People into the Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew; which when the Commons perceived, they cried out, That their Captain was traiterouſly ſlain, heartning one another to fight, and to revenge his Death, bending their Bows. But the King rode to them, ſaying, "What a Work is this, my "Men? What mean you to do? Will you ſhoot "at your King? Be not quarrellous, or ſorry "for the Death of a Traitor and Rebel; I am "your King, I will be your Captain and Leader; "follow me into the Field, there to have what-"ſoever you require.

THIS the King did, leſt the Commons, being bitterly bent in Mind, ſhould ſet Fire on the Houſes in Smithfield, where their Captain was ſlain. They, therefore, followed him into the open Field, and the Soldiers, that were with him, not knowing, as yet, whether they would kill the King, or be in Reſt, and depart home with the King's Charter. In the mean while, worthy Walworth, the (for ever) famous Mayor of LONDON, to ſecond his firſt Piece of Service, which fell out to ſo good Purpoſe, only with one Servant, riding ſpeedily into the City, began to cry, "You good Citizens, come to help your "King, that is in Doubt to be murdered, "and ſuccour me, your Mayor, that am in the "like Danger. Or, if you will not ſuccour me, "yet leave not the King deſtitute." When the Citizens heard this, in whoſe Hearts the Love of the King was ingrafted, ſuddenly, and very ſeemly prepared, to the Number of 1000; they tarried in the Streets for ſome one of the Knights to lead them (with the Mayor) to the King. And by good Fortune, Sir Robert Knowles, a Freeman of the City, came in the very Inſtant, whom they all required to be their Leader. He gladly undertook Part of them, and Perducas Dalbert, the Lord Mayor, and ſome other Knights, led on the reſt to the King's Preſence. The King, and all that were with him, rejoiced not a little at the unhoped-for Coming of theſe brave armed Citizens, who ſuddenly compaſſed the whole Multitude of the Commons.

THERE might a Man have ſeen a wonderful Change of God's Right Hand; how the Commons did now throw down their Weapons and fall to the Gronnd, beſeeching Pardon, who, lately before did glory, that they had the King's Life in their Power, and now were glad to hide themſelves in Caves, Ditches, Corn-Fields, &c. The Knights, therefore, deſirous to be revenged, beſought the King to permit them to take off the Heads of an Hundred or two: But the King would not condeſcend to their Requeſt, but commanded the Charter which they had demanded, written and ſealed, to be delivered to them for the Time, to avoid any more Miſchief, as knowing well, that Eſſex was not yet pacified, nor Kent ſtayed, the Commons and Ruſticks of which Counties were ready to riſe again if he did not ſatisfy them the ſooner. The Commons having got the Charter, departed homeward, and the rude People being diſperſed and gone, the King called for his valiant Mayor of LONDON, William Walworth, whom (with great Honour) he Knighted there in the Field; and as he did very worthily deſerve. The like he did to Nicholas Bremer, John Philpot, Robert Lawnd, John Standiſh, Nicholas Twiford, and Adam Francis, Aldermen. Afterwards the King, with his Lords, and his Company, orderly enter'd into the City of LONDON with great Joy, and went to his Royal Mother who was lodged in the Tower-Royal, called the Queen's Wardrobe, and where ſhe had remained two Days and two Nights very much abaſhed and amazed; but when ſhe ſaw the King, her Son, ſhe was highly comforted, and ſaid, "Ah! fair Son, what great Sorrow have "I ſuffered for you this Day!" The King anſwer'd, and ſaid, "Certainly, Madam, I know "it well; but now rejoice and thank God, "for I have this Day recovered my Heritage, "and the Realm of England, which I had near "loſt.

THE Archbiſhop's Head was taken off the Bridge, and Wat Tylar's Head ſet up in the Place.

HERE we are further to conſider, that for an eternal Remembrance of this happy Day, and the City's Honour withal, the King granted, that there ſhould be a Dagger added to the Arms of the City, in the Right Quarter of the Shield, for an Augmentation of the ſame Arms, and a Memory of the Lord Mayor's valiant Act, as doth appear unto this Day: For, 'till that Time, the City bare only the Croſs without the Dagger.

AND whereas it hath been far ſpread abroad by vulgar Opinion, that the Rebel ſmitten down ſo manfully by Sir William Walworth, the then worthy Lord Mayor of LONDON, was named Jack Straw, and not Wat Tylar, I thought good to reconcile this raſh conceived Doubt by ſuch Teſtimony as I find in antient and good Records. The principal Leaders and and Captains of the Commons, were Wat Tylar, as the firſt Man that took himſelf to be offended: The Second was John or Jack Straw; the Third, John Kirkby; the Fourth, Allen Thredder; the Fifth, Thomas Scot; the Sixth, Ralph Rugge. Theſe, and many others, were Leaders of the Kentiſh and Eſſex Men. At Mildenhall, and Bury in Suffolk, was Robert Weſtbrome that made himſelf a King, and was moſt famous, next to John Wrawe, who being a Prieſt could not ſet Crown upon Crown; but left the Name of King and Crown to the ſame Robert. At Norwich, John Liteſter, a Dyer, exerciſed the Name and Power of a King, 'till he was taken and hanged for his Pains. Thus dangerouſly had this Rebellion diſperſed itſelf abroad, but the happy and proſperous Succeſs at LONDON, with other good Care for them further off, gave a gracious Iſſue to all in the End.

After the Death of Wat Tylar, and Jack Straw being taken, with divers others, as chief Actors in this monſtrous Diſorder, the aforenamed Lord Mayor ſat in Judgment upon the Offenders, and pronounced the Sentence of Death upon them. At which Time the Lord Mayor ſpoke openly to him thus: "John, (quoth he) Behold, thy "Death is at Hand without all Doubt, and there "is no Way thro' which thou mayeſt hope to "eſcape; wherefore, for thy Soul's Health, "without making any Lie, tell us what you pur-"poſed to have done among you; and to what "End you did aſſemble the Commons?" When he had ſtayed a while, as doubtful what to ſay, the Mayor begun thus again to him, "Surely "thou knoweſt, John, that the Thing which I "demand of thee, if thou do it truly, it will "redound to thy Soul's Health, &c. He, there-fore, animated by the Lord Mayor's good Words, began as followeth:

The CONFESSION of JACK STRAW to the Lord Mayor of LONDON, before his Death.

"NOW it booteth not to lie, neither is it "lawful to utter any Untruth, eſpecially under-"ſtanding that my Soul is to ſuffer ſtraiter Tor-"ments, if I ſhould ſo do. And becauſe I hope "for two Commodities by ſpeaking the Truth: "Firſt, That what I ſhall ſpeak may profit "the Commonwealth: And Secondly, After my "Death, I truſt by your Suffrages to be ſuc-"coured according to your Promiſes, which is, "to pray for me; I will ſpeak faithfully, and "without any Deceit.

"AT the ſame Time as we were aſſembled "upon Blackheath, and had ſent to the King "to come unto us, our Purpoſe was to have "ſlain all ſuch Knights, 'Squires, and Gentle-"men, as ſhould have given their Attendance "thither upon him. And as for the King, we "would have kept him among us, to the End "that the People might more boldly have re-"paired to us; ſith they would have thought, "that whatſoever we did, the ſame had been "done by his Authority. Finally, when we "had gotten Power enough, that we needed "not to fear any Force which might be made "againſt us, we would have ſlain all ſuch Noble-"men as might either have given Counſel, or "made any Reſiſtance againſt us; eſpecially we "would have ſlain the Knights of the Rhodes "or St. John's: And Laſtly, We would have "killed the King himſelf, and all Men of Poſ-"ſeſſions, with Biſhops, Monks, Canons, and "Parſons of Churches; only Friars Mendicants "we would have ſpared, that might have ſuf-"ficed for Miniſtration of the Sacraments.

"WHEN we had made a Riddance of all "theſe, we would have deviſed Laws, according to "which Laws the Subjects of the Realm ſhould "have lived. For we would have created Kings, "as Wat Tylar in Kent, and others in other "Counties: But, becauſe this our Purpoſe was "diſappointed by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, "who would not permit the King to come to "us, we ſought by all Means to diſpatch him "out of the Way, as at length we did. More-"over, the ſame Evening that Wat Tylar was "killed, we were determined, (having the "greateſt Part of the Commons of the City bent "to join with us,) to have ſet Fire in Four "Corners of the City, and ſo to have divided, "among ourſelves, the Spoil of the chiefeſt "Riches that might have been found, at our "own Pleaſure. And this (ſaid he) was our "Purpoſe, as God may help me now at my laſt "End.

AFTER this Confeſſion made, he was be-headed, and his Head ſet on London-Bridge, by Wat Tylar's, and many others.

NOW to proceed to other Actions in the Tower.

IN the Year 1387, King Richard II. kept his Chriſtmas in the Tower; and in the Year 1389, was ſent Priſoner thither.

IN the Year 1414, Sir John Oldcaſtle broke out of the Tower; and the ſame Year a Parliament being held at Leiceſter, a Porter of the Tower was drawn, hanged, and beheaded, whoſe Head was ſent up, and ſet over the Tower Gate, for conſenting to one Whitlook's Eſcape out of the Tower.

IN the Year 1419, Fryar Randolph was ſent to the Tower, and there ſlain by the Parſon of St. Peter's in the Tower.

IN the Year 1426, a Fellow, who pretended to be ſent from the Emperor to young King Henry VI. calling himſelf the Baron of Blackamore, and a great Phyſician, was hanged and quartered. His Head was ſet upon the Tower, and his Quarters upon Four of the Gates of the City.

IN the Year 1458, in Whitſun Week, the Duke of Somerſet, with Anthony Rivers, and four more, kept Juſts before the Queen, in the Tower of LONDON, againſt three 'Squires of the Queen's and others.

IN the Year 1465, King Henry VI. was brought Priſoner to the Tower, where he long remained.

IN the Year 1470, the Tower was yielded up to Sir Richard Lee, Mayor of LONDON, and his Brethren the Aldermen, who forthwith enter'd the ſame, delivering King Henry from his Impriſonment, and placed him in the King's Lodgings there: But the next Year he was again ſent thither a Priſoner, and there murthered, by the Bloody Hand of Richard Duke of Glouceſter.

IN the Year 1478, George Duke of Clarence, by the Contrivance of the above-mentioned Richard, chard Duke of Glouceſter, his younger Brother, was drowned in a Butt of Malmſey, in the Tower.

In the Year 1483, the ſaid Richard, being Protector of the King and Kingdom, convoked a Council in the Tower, at which, ſuddenly and unexpectedly, accuſing the Lord Haſtings of High-Treaſon, he ſwore by St. Paul, (his uſual Oath) that he would not touch Bread, nor Drink, till his Head were ſtrucken off, which was done accordingly, upon a Log of Timber, on the Green, before the Chapel in the Tower.

The ſame Year young King Edward V. with his Brother, were murthered in the Tower, by Ruffians, hired for that Purpoſe by their bloody Uncle, Richard the Protector, afterwards King of England.

In the Year 1485, John Earl of Oxford was made Conſtable of the Tower, and had the Cuſtody of the Lions given him.

In the Year 1501, in the Month of May, there was a Royal Tilt and Tourney of Lords and Knights in the Tower of LONDON, before the King.

In the Year 1502, Queen Elizabeth, Wife to Henry VII. died of Child-birth in the Tower.

In the Year 1509, Sir Richard Empſon, Knight, and Edmund Dudley, Eſq; Serjeant at Law, were committed to the Tower. Theſe two were employed by King Henry VII. to raiſe Money, upon Penal Laws, for filling his Coffers, which they did very vigorouſly, in a Commiſſion of Forfeitures; for which, in the Firſt of King Henry VIII. they were both condemned and attainted by Parliament, and upon the 18th of Auguſt 1510, beheaded on Tower-Hill. Divers of their inferior Agents, called Promoters, were ſet on the Pillory in Cornhill, with Papers on their Heads, and forced to ride through the City with their Faces to the Horſe-Tails.

In the Year 1512, the Chapel in the White-Tower was burnt.

In the Year 1513, Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, (whom Philip Duke of Auſtria had deliver'd up into the Hands of King Henry VII. on Promiſe that he would not put him to Death) was by Henry VIII. not being bound by his Father's Oath, cauſed to be beheaded on Tower-Hill.

In the Year 1521, a Difference ariſing between Cardinal Wolſey and the Duke of Buckingham, the Cardinal found Means to take away his Life, alledging that the Duke ſhould ſay to the Lord Abergavenny, who married his Daughter, That if King Henry ſhould die without Iſſue, he expected to have the Crown himſelf; ſo that he, being tried by his Peers, was found Guilty, and on the 17th of May beheaded on Tower-Hill.

In the Year 1534, John Fiſher, Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor, were committed to the Tower for denying to ſwear to the Act of Succeſſion, made in the laſt Parliament; yet, both profeſſing a Readineſs to ſwear to the Succeſſion itſelf, but not to the whole Act, wherein the Marriage with Queen Catharine, the King's firſt Wife, was declared to be againſt the Law of God; and wherein alſo were ſome Touches againſt the Pope's Authority: For this Refuſal they were attainted by Parliament; and afterwards, in another Parliament, an Act paſſed for the King's Supremacy, and for aboliſhing the Pope's Power in this Realm: This Act they alſo refuſed to ſwear to. Upon the ſaid Attainder, they were both executed on Tower-Hill, the Biſhop in June 1535, and the Knight the Month following. Biſhop Fiſher was much lamented, being reputed a Man of great Learning, and of a good Life. The Pope had elected him Cardinal, and his Hat was come as far as Calais, but before it could come to England his Head was off. Sir Thomas More was both learned and wiſe, but ſo given to Jeſting that he could not refrain from it, even under Misfortunes, and at the very Time of his Death. At his Entrance into the Tower, the Gentleman-Porter asked for his Fee, which is the upper Garment, he pulled off his Cap to give him, ſaying, This is the uppermoſt Garment I have; but that not ſufficing, he pulled out a Handful of Angels and gave him: A Knight, who was in his Company, ſaying, He was glad to find that he was ſo full of Angels. Yes, anſwered he, I always love to have my beſt Friends about me. When he had been cloſe Priſoner for ſome Time, his Books were all taken from him, whereupon he ſhut up all his Windows, and being asked, why he did ſo? It is Time, anſwered he, to ſhut up Shop when the Ware is all gone. When he was upon the Scaffold, the Headſman kneeling down to ask him Forgiveneſs, I do forgive thee, ſaid he, but I promiſe thee thou wilt get no Credit by cutting off my Head, my Neck is ſo ſhort. And when he was to lay his Head down upon the Block, having a great Grey Beard, he ſtroked it out, and ſaid to the Headſman, I pray you let me lay my Beard over the Block, leſt you ſhould cut it; for tho' you have a Warrant to cut off my Head, you have none to cut my Beard.

In the Year 1536, Queen Anna Bullen, King Henry VIII's ſecond Wife, was in the Month of May brought to the Tower by Sir Thomas Audley, Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Cromwel, Secretary, and Sir William Kingſton, Lieutenant of the Tower. At the Tower-Gate ſhe fell on her Knees before the ſaid Lords, beſeeching God to help her, as ſhe was Innocent of what ſhe was accuſed. She was arraigned in the Tower before the Duke of Norfolk, he ſetting as High Steward of England: When her Indictment was read, ſhe made ſuch wiſe and diſcreet Anſwers, that ſhe ſeemed fully to clear herſelf of every thing laid to her Charge; but ſhe was nevertheleſs found Guilty, and beheaded in the ſame Month on a Scaffold upon the Green within the Tower; as her Brother, the Lord Rochford, was two Days before upon Tower-Hill; together with Henry Norris, Mark Smeton, William Brierton, and Francis Weſton, all of the King's Privy-Chamber, about Matters concerning the Queen.

The ſame Fate did the Lord Darcy undergo, on the ſame Hill, in June 1538, having been concerned in a Rebellion in the North.

On the third of November following, Henry Courtney, Marquis of Exeter, Henry Pool, Lord Montacute, Sir Nicholas Carew, of Bedington, Knight of the Garter, and Maſter of the King's Horſe, and Sir Edward Nevil, Brother to the Lord Abergavenny, were ſent to the Tower, being accuſed by Sir Geffrey Pool, the Lord Montacute's Brother, of High Teaſon: Three of them were beheaded on Tower-Hill on the 9th of January, and the other, viz. Sir Nicholas Carew on the 3d of March following.

In the Year 1540, on the 28th of July, the like Puniſhment was inflicted on the ſaid Hill, upon Thomas Lord Cromwel, Earl of Eſſex, the King's great Counſellor in the Diſſolution of Monaſteries, and Aſſumption of the Supremacy; together with the Lord Hungerford of Heitiſbury.

In the Year 1541, Margaret Counteſs of Salisbury, attainted two Years before, was beheaded within the ſaid Tower. This Lady was the laſt of the right Line and Name of Plantagenet.

About a Month after, the Lord Leonard Grey, Deputy of Ireland, and Brother to the Marquis of Dorſet, was beheaded on Tower-Hill, for ſuffering his Nephew Gerald Fitz-Garret to eſcape, who had been declared an Enemy to the State.

In

IN February following, Queen Catharine Howard, the King's fifth Wife, and the Lady Rochford, loſt their Heads on the Green within the Tower.

IN the Beginning of the next Month Arthur Plantagenet, Viſcount Liſle, baſe Son to King Edward IV. having been impriſoned upon Suſpicion of a Deſign to betray Calais to the French, whilſt he was the King's Lieutenant there, was now found to be innocent of the Fact, and thereupon, the King, to make ſome Reparation for his Diſgrace, ſent him a Ring, and a very gracious Meſſuage by Sir Thomas Wriothſley, his Secretary; whereat the ſaid Viſcount conceived ſo great a Joy that he died thereof the Night following.

IN the Year 1546, which was the laſt of the Reign of Henry VIII. Thomas Duke of Norfolk, and Henry Earl of Surrey, his Son, upon certain Surmiſes of Treaſon, were committed to the Tower of LONDON; the Earl, being no Lord of Parliament, was tried by a common Jury, and being found guilty, was beheaded on Tower-Hill. The Duke was attainted by Parliament, and kept in Priſon till the firſt Year of Queen Mary, when the Attainder was reverſed; the Special Matter upon which the Earl was tried, was bearing of certain Arms that were ſaid to belong to the King, and to the Prince, tho' the Earl juſtified his Bearing them, as belonging to divers of his Anceſtors, affirming withal, that he had the Opinion of the Heralds therein.

IN this ſame Year, William Foxley, Pot-maker for the Mint in the Tower, fell aſleep on Eaſter-Tueſday, and continued ſleeping for fourteen Days and fifteen Nights, and could by no Means be awakened during that Time, by Pricking, Cramping, Burning, or otherwiſe; but when he did awake, he was in as good Temper as if he had ſlept but one Night, and lived 40 Years after.

IN the Year 1552, the Duke of Somerſet, Uncle to the King (Edward VI.) who had been choſen Protector of the King and Kingdom, was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the Year 1553, the young Lady Jane Grey was beheaded in the Tower, who, upon the Scaffold, made a moſt moving Speech to the Spectators, to this Effect, "That ſhe came thi-
"ther for an Example to Poſterity, that Inno-
"cence cannot be any Protection againſt Great-
"neſs. And that ſhe was to die, not for aſpi-
"ring to a Crown, but for not refuſing one when "it was offered her.

HER Husband, the Lord Guilford, was beheaded the ſame Day.

ABOUT eleven Days after, Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, Father to the ſaid Lady Jane, was alſo beheaded on Tower-Hill.

IN the ſame Year, Sir Thomas Wyat was beheaded on Tower-Hill, whoſe Head was ſet upon the Gallows at Hay-Hill, near Hyde-Park, and his Quarters in ſeveral Places of the City. This Man, in Hopes of ſaving his Life, had accuſed the Lord Courtney, and the Lady Elizabeth, the Queen's Siſter, of being privy to his Conſpiracy; but at his Death he cleared them, and openly proteſted, that they were altogether innocent, and had never been acquainted with his Proceedings; however, this Matter was ſo urged againſt them by Stephen Gardiner, Biſhop of Wincheſter, that both of them were committed to the Tower in the Month of March, but were releaſed from thence, tho' not out of Confinement, in May following. Biſhop Gardiner's Malice was ſo great towards the Lady Elizabeth, that he had procured a Warrant to be framed under certain Counſellors Hands to put her to Death, which had been done, if Mr. Bruges, Lieutenant of the Tower, pitying her Caſe, had not gone to the Queen (Mary) to know her Pleaſure, who utterly denied that ſhe knew any Thing of it; by which Means her Life was preſerved.

IN the Year 1555, Queen Mary diſcharged a great Number of Priſoners out of the Tower, namely, the late Duke of Northumberland's Sons, Ambroſe, Robert and Henry, alſo Sir Andrew Dudley, Sir James Crofts, Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, Sir John Rogers, Sir Nicholas Arnold, Sir George Harper, Sir Edward Warner, Sir William Santlow, Sir Gowen Carew, William Gybbs, Eſq; Cuthbert Vaughan, and others.

IN the Year 1573, Thomas Duke of Norfolk was beheaded on Tower-Hill, for High-Treaſon.

Henry Piercy, Earl of Northumberland, having been committed to the Tower, being ſuſpected of conſpiring with Throgmorton, the Lord Paget, and the Guiſes, to invade England, and free the Queen of Scots, was, in the Month of June 1585, found dead in his Bed, ſhot into the Body with three Bullets under his Pap, and the Door bolted on the Inſide. The Coroner's Inqueſt examining the Matter, brought in their Verdict Felo de ſe.

Commiſſioners appointed to view the State of the Tower.

IN the Year 1590, in the Month of June, when Sir Michael Blount was firſt made Lieutenant of the Tower, Commiſſioners were appointed to take a careful View of the State of that Place, and the Priſoners therein, the Queen being in great Apprehenſion that Year of another Invaſion from Spain, that threatened as much, or more than that in 1588. To make this Enquiry more exactly the following Memoranda were ſent from the Lord Treaſurer.

"the Queen's Privy Lodgings Priſoners are "kept, and who they are.

"Item, To ſurvey all Places, or Houſes, or "Lodgings, wherein any Perſons do inhabit, or
"uſe to lodge; or how many of them have cauſe
"to dwell or lodge there, for the Service of her
"Majeſty, within the Tower. And how many
"Perſons are in every ſuch Family or Lodging,
"Men, Women, and Children.

"Item, How many Families or Perſons be "lodged there, that have no ordinary Cauſe of "Reſort to the Tower for the Queen's Majeſty's
"Service; and how long they have there conti"nued; and by whoſe Means they came to thoſe
"Dwelling-Places or Lodgings.

"Item, How many Priſoners are in the Tower,
"and in what Places they are lodged; and
"whether any Perſons dwell ſo near to the Pri-
"ſon, as that the Priſoners and they may have
"ſecret Conference together.

"Item, To enquire of the Queen's Ordinary "Yeomen-Wardens, whether they do their "Service by themſelves, or by their Deputies.

"Item, To enquire of the Houſes lately
"erected againſt the Tower-Walls, or near to
"the Tower-Ditches, or Wharfs, and whether "they are fit to be continued, or not, and who "dwells in them, and to whom they pay their "Rents.

"Item, What Annoyances are offered to the "Houſe and Ditches by the Citizens of LON-"DON, and the Inhabitants there adjoining,
"as well within the Liberties as without.

In the Year 1600, Robert Earl of Eſſex loſt his Head in the Tower, which he might have kept on longer, had he not been betrayed by the Lady Walſingham, to whom, after the Sentence of Condemnation, he ſent a Ring, which the Queen had given him, as a Token that ſhe would ſtick to him in any Danger. The Lady delivered not the Ring; and being a little after upon her Death-bed, ſhe deſired to ſpeak with the Queen, and having diſburthened a great Weight which lay upon her Conſcience for that Act, the Queen flung away in a Fury, and never enjoyed herſelf perfectly after that Time; but ſhe would break out often into Paſſion, and wring her Hands, crying, O Eſſex! Eſſex! And this Earl was the laſt who was executed within the Walls of the Tower.

In the Year 1603, Sir Walter Raleigh was arraigned, and condemned, but kept Priſoner in the Tower, (where he wrote his Hiſtory of the World) untill the Year 1617, when he was by King James I. allowed (upon his earneſt Deſire) to fetch Gold from a certain Mine in Guiana, in the Weſt-Indies, wherein he miſcarried. After which King James gave Way to have the Sentence of Death executed upon him, having firſt been brought to the King's-Bench Bar, the 27th of October, 1618, and there hearing the Sentence confirmed. From whence he was ſent to the Gatehouſe, and from thence next Morning to the Palace-Yard, where a Scaffold was erected, and there he was beheaded, after 14 Years Reprieve; which the World thought very hard of, having been a Perſon of ſuch uncommon Merit.

In the Year 1615, the Lady Arabella, a near Relation to King James I. having been privately married to Mr. William Seymour, the youngeſt Son of the Earl of Hertford, they were both committed to the Tower, where the Lady died.

In the ſame Year Sir Thomas Overbury was poiſoned in the Tower, for which the Earl of Somerſet, and his Lady, were condemned, but moſt ſurprizingly pardoned, when the meaner Inſtruments made uſe of in that Murther, Sir Gervaſe Elwes, then Lieutenant of the Tower, Mrs. Turner, and divers others, were executed for it.

ON the 16th of January 1662, Mr. Edward Bagſhaw, a Miniſter, was committed to the Tower for Treaſonable Deſigns and Practices. Upon the 18th, Philip Gibbs was removed from Newgate to the Tower: And upon the 26th Archibald Johnſton was committed to the Tower, for Crimes of High-Treaſon, and on the 22d of July following, was executed at Edinburgh, in Scotland, upon a Gibbet 22 Feet high.

IN the Year 1663, Abraham Goodman was committed to the Tower, for attempting to murther the Duke of Buckingham.

IN the Year 1665, on the 30th of October, Sir Thomas Bludworth was ſworn Lord Mayor of LONDON, at the Outermoſt Gate of the Bulwark, by Sir John Robinſon, Lieutenant of the Tower, by Virtue of his Majeſty's Commiſſion for that Purpoſe to him directed.

IN the Year 1673, a moſt ſtrange and daring Attempt was made to ſteal the Royal Crown and Scepter out of the Tower of LONDON, by Thomas Blood, and others in Confederacy with him; the Manner of which is thus related by Mr. Strype, who ſays, he had it from Mr. Edwards himſelf, the Keeper of the Regalia.

The Crown ſtolen out of the Tower by Blood.

ABOUT three Weeks before this Blood made his Attempt upon the Crown, he came to the Tower in the Habit of a Parſon, with a long Cloak, Caſſock, and Canonical Girdle, and brought a Woman with him, whom he called Wife; altho' in Truth, his Wife was then ſick in Lancaſhire. This pretended Wife deſired to ſee ſee the Crown; and having ſeen it feigned to have a Qualm come upon her Stomach, and deſired Mr. Edwards (who was Keeper of the Regalia) to ſend for ſome Spirits, who immediately cauſed his Wife to fetch ſome; whereof when ſhe had drunk, ſhe courteouſly invited her up Stairs to repoſe herſelf upon a Bed: Which Invitation ſhe accepted, and ſoon recovered. At their Departure they ſeemed very thankful for this Civility.

About three or four Days after, Blood came again to Mrs. Edwards, with a Preſent of four Pair of white Gloves from his Wife: And having thus begun the Acquaintance, they made frequent Viſits to improve it: She profeſſing, that ſhe ſhould never ſufficiently acknowledge her Kindneſs.

Having made ſome ſmall Reſpite of his Compliments, he returned again, and ſaid to Mrs. Edwards, that his Wife could diſcourſe of nothing but of the Kindneſs of thoſe good People in the Tower. That ſhe had long ſtudied, and at length bethought herſelf of a handſome Way of Requital. You have, ſaid he, a pretty Gentlewoman to your Daughter, and I have a young Nephew who hath two or three Hundred a Year in Land, and is at my Diſpoſal. If your Daughter be free, and you approve of it, I will bring him hither to ſee her, and we will endeavour to make it a Match.

This was eaſily aſſented to by old Mr. Edwards, who invited the Parſon to dine with him that Day, and he as readily accepted of the Invitation; who taking upon him to ſay Grace, performed it with great Devotion, and caſting up his Eyes, concluded his long winded Grace, with a hearty Prayer for the King, Queen, and Royal Family. After Dinner he went up to ſee the Rooms, and ſeeing a handſome Caſe of Piſtols hang there, he expreſs'd a great Deſire to buy them to preſent to a young Lord who was his Neighbour. That was his Pretence, but his Purpoſe, probably, was to diſarm the Houſe againſt the Time that he intended to put the Deſign in Execution.

At his Departure, (which was with a Canonical Benediction of the good Company) he appointed a Day and an Hour to bring his young Nephew to his Miſtreſs, and it was that very Day that he made his Attempt, viz. the 9th of May, about ſeven in the Morning, Ann. Dom. 1673.

The old Man was got up ready to receive his Gueſt, and the Daughter had put herſelf into her beſt Dreſs to entertain her Gallant; when, behold, Parſon Blood, with three more, came to the Jewel-Houſe, all armed with Rapier-Blades in their Canes, and every one a Dagger, and a Pair of Pocket-Piſtols. Two of his Companions enter'd in with him, and the third ſtaid at the Door, it ſeems, for a Watch. The Daughter thought it not modeſt for her to come down till ſhe was called, but ſhe ſent the Maid to take a View of the Company, and to bring her a Deſcription of the Perſon of her Gallant. The Maid conceived that he was the intended Bridegroom, who ſtaid at the Door, becauſe he was the Youngeſt of the Company, and returned to her young Miſtreſs with the Character that ſhe had formed of his Perſon.

Blood told Mr. Edwards, that they would not go up Stairs, till his Wife came, and deſired him to ſhew his Friends the Crown to paſs the Time till then; as ſoon as they were enter'd the Room, where the Crown was kept, and the Door, as uſual, was ſhut behind them, they threw a Cloak over the old Man's Head, and clapp'd a Gag into his Mouth, which was a great Plug of Wood, with a ſmall Hole in the Middle to take Breath at; this was faſten'd on with a waxed Leather, which went round his Neck. At the ſame Time they faſten'd an Iron Hook to his Noſe, that no Sound might paſs from him that Way neither.

When they had thus ſecured him from crying out, they told him, that their Reſolution was to have the Crown, Globe, and Sceptre; and that if he would quietly ſubmit to it, they would ſpare his Life, otherwiſe he was to expect no Mercy. He thereupon forced himſelf to make all the Noiſe that poſſibly he could, to be heard above: Then they knocked him down with a wooden Mallet, and told him, that if he would lie quietly they would ſpare his Life; but if not, upon the next Attempt to diſcover them, they would kill him, and pointed three Daggers at his Breaſt. But he ſtrained himſelf to make the greater Noiſe. Whereupon they gave him nine or ten Strokes more upon the Head with the Mallet, for ſo many Bruiſes were found upon the Skull, and ſtabbed him into the Belly.

Whereat the poor Man, almoſt Eighty Years of Age, fell and lay ſome Time entranced; one of them kneeled on the Ground to try if he breathed, and not perceiving any Breath come from him, ſaid, He is dead I'll warrant him. Mr. Edwards, came a little to himſelf, heard theſe Words, and conceived it beſt for him to be ſo thought, and lay quietly.

Then one of them, named Parrot, put the Globe into his Breeches. Blood held the Crown under his Cloak. The Third was deſigned to file the Sceptre in two (becauſe too long to carry) and when filed, it was to be put into a Bag brought for that Purpoſe.

But before this could be done, young Mr. Edwards (Son of the old Gentleman) who had attended upon Sir John Talbot into Flanders, and upon his firſt Landing in England, was with Sir John's Leave, come away Poſt to ſee his old Father, chanced to arrive at the very Inſtant that this was acting, and coming to the Door, the Perſon that ſtood Centinel for the reſt, asked him with whom he would ſpeak? he made Anſwer, he belonged to the Houſe. But young Edwards perceiving, by his Queſtion, that he himſelf was a Stranger, told him, that if he had any Buſineſs with his Father, he would go and acquaint him with it, and ſo went up, where he was welcomed by his Mother, Wife and Siſter.

In the mean Time, the Centinel gave Notice of the Son's Arrival, and they forthwith haſted away with the Crown and Globe, but left the Sceptre, not having Time to file it. The old Man recovering himſelf got upon his Legs, pulled off the Gag (for they concluded him dead, and ſurpriz'd with the Son's unexpected Arrival, had omitted to tie his Hands behind him) and cried out, Treaſon, Murther!

The Daughter, hearing him, haſted down, and, ſeeing her Father thus wounded, ran out upon the Tower-Hill, and cried Treaſon! The Crown is ſtolen! This gave the firſt Alarm, and Blood and Parrot, making more than ordinary Haſte, were obſerved to jog each other with their Elbows as they went, which cauſed them to be ſuſpected and purſued.

By this Time young Mr. Edwards, and Captain Beckman, upon the Cry of their Siſter, were come down, and left their Father, likewiſe, to run after the Villains, but they were advanced beyond the Main-Guard, and the Alarm being given loudly, to the Warder at the Draw-Bridge, he put himſelf in a Poſture to ſtop them. Blood came up firſt, and diſcharged a Piſtol at him. The Bullet (if any there were) miſs'd him; but the Powder, or Fear, made him fall to the Ground, whereby they got ſafe to the little Ward-Houſe-Gate, where one Sill, who had been a Soldier under Cromwel, ſtood Centinel, who, altho' he ſaw the Warder ſhot, made no Reſiſtance.

Reſiſtance. By whoſe Cowardice, or Treachery, the Villains got over that Draw-Bridge, and through the Outward Gate upon the Wharf, and made all poſſible Haſte towards their Horſes, which attended at St. Catharine's Gate, called the Iron Gate, crying themſelves, as they ran, Stop the Rogues. And they were by all thought innocent, he being in that grave Canonical Habit, till Captain Beckman got up to them: Blood diſcharged his ſecond Piſtol at Captain Beckman's Head, but, he ſtooping down, avoided the Shot, and ſeized upon the Rogue, who had the Crown under his Cloak, yet had Blood the Impudence, altho' he ſaw himſelf a Priſoner, to ſtruggle a long while for the Crown, and, when it was wreſted from him, ſaid, It was a gallant Attempt, how unſucceſsful ſoever, for it was for a Crown.

A Servant belonging to Captain Sherburn, ſeized upon Parrot, before Blood was taken.

THERE was ſuch a Conſternation in all Men, and ſo much Confuſion in the Purſuit, that it was a Wonder ſome innocent Perſons had not ſuffered for the Guilty. For young Edwards over-taking one that was bloody in the Skuffle, and ſuppoſing him to be one of thoſe, who had murthered his Father, was going to run him through, had not Captain Beckman, cried, Hold, he is none of them.

AND as Captain Beckman made more than ordinary Haſte in the Purſuit, the Guards were going to fire at him, ſuppoſing him to be one of the Rogues, but one of them, who by good Fortune, knew him, cried out, Forbear; He is a Friend.

Blood and Parrot being both ſeized, as hath been ſaid, Hunt, Blood's Son-in-Law, leaped on his Horſe, with two more of the Conſpirators, and rid far away; but a Cart ſtanding empty in the Street, chanced to turn ſhort, and Hunt run his Head againſt a Pole that ſtuck out; but he recovering his Legs, and putting his Foot in the Stirrup, a Cobler running to enquire after the Diſaſter, ſaid, This is Tom Hunt, who was in that bloody Attempt upon the Perſon of the Duke of Ormond: Let us ſecure him. A Conſtable, being accidentally there, ſeized him upon that Affirmation, and carried him before Juſtice Smith; who, upon his confident Denial of himſelf to be Hunt, was about to let him go; but the Hue and Cry coming, that the Crown was taken out of the Tower, he was committed to ſafe Cuſtody.

YOUNG Edwards propoſed to Lieutenant Rainsford, to mount ſome of his Soldiers upon the Horſes that were left, and ſend them to follow the reſt that eſcaped; but he bad him follow himſelf, if he would; it was his Buſineſs: And led the Fellows Horſes into the Tower, as forfeited to the Lieutenant.

Hunt (as has been ſaid) was Son-in-Law to Blood, and trained up in his Practices.

Parrot was a Silk-Dyer in Southwark; and in the Rebellion had been Major General Harriſon's Lieutenant.

Blood was the Son of a Blackſmith in Ireland; a Fellow that thought ſmall Villanies below him. One of his virtuous Comrades, having received Sentence of Death in Yorkſhire for ſome Crime, he was reſcued out of the Hands of the Sheriff's Men, as they were leading him to the Gallows. He, with others, laid a Deſign in Ireland, to ſurprize the Caſtle of Dublin, and the Magazine therein, and to uſurp the Government: But being diſcovered by the Duke of Ormond, the Night before the intended Execution, ſome of them were apprehended, and ſuffered as Traitors; whoſe Death Blood, and the reſt of the ſurviving Rogues, bound themſelves by ſolemn Oath, to revenge upon the Duke's Perſon. This occaſioned his third Enterprize: For he, with five or ſix more of his Aſſociates, (whereof Hunt was one) well mounted, came one Night up to his Coach Side, before he came to his own Gate, dwelling then at Albemarle Houſe, took him out of his Coach, forced him up behind one of the Horſemen, and were riding away with him as far as Berkely Houſe; where the Duke threw himſelf off the Horſe with the Villain, who had tied the Duke faſt to him. The reſt turned back, diſcharging two Piſtols at the Duke; but taking their Aim in the Dark, miſſed him: By this Time the Neighbourhood was alarmed, and the Rogues having Work enough to ſave themſelves, rid for it, and got away.

IT was no ſmall Diſrepute to that helliſh Contriver amongſt his Comrades, to fail in a Project which he had laid ſo ſure, and repreſented to them ſo eaſy to be effected: Therefore, to redeem his Credit with them, he entered immediately upon the Contrivance of another, that ſhould fully recompence all former Miſcarriages, with an infallible Proſpect of Gain, and the Reputation of a daring Villainy; which was that of ſharing the Regalia.

IN the robuſteous Struggle for the Crown, as was ſhewed before, the great Pearl and a fair Diamond fell off, and were loſt for a while, with ſome other ſmaller Stones: But the Pearl was found by Catharine Maddox (a poor Sweeping-Woman to one of the Warders) and the Diamond by a Barber's Apprentice; and both faithfully reſtored. Other ſmaller Stones were by ſeveral Perſons picked up, and brought in. The fair Ballas Ruby belonging to the Sceptre, was found in Parrot's Pocket: So that not any conſiderable Thing was wanting, the Crown only was bruiſed and ſent to repair.

YOUNG Mr. Edwards went preſently to Sir Gilbert Talbot, and gave him an Account of all that had paſſed, who inſtantly went to the King, and acquainted his Majeſty with it. His Majeſty commanded him to make Haſte to the Tower, to enquire how Matters ſtood; to take the Examination of Blood, and the reſt; and to return and report all to him. Sir Gilbert accordingly went and found the Priſoners, whoſe Wounds had been already dreſſed, with their Keepers in the White Tower. Blood lay in a Corner, dogged and lowring, and wou'd not give a Word in Anſwer to any one Queſtion.

HIS Majeſty was in the mean Time perſuaded by ſome about him to hear the Examination himſelf; and the Priſoners were forthwith ſent for to Whitehall. Nothing but that could poſſibly have ſaved Blood from the Gallows; but that which ought to have been his ſurer Condemnation, proved to be his Safety. For all Men concluding, that none but thoſe who had the Courage to venture upon ſuch a daring Villany, as that of the Crown, could be guilty of the Practice upon a Peer of that Magnitude, as was the Duke of Ormond; eſpecially the Parliament than ſitting. Amongſt other Queſtions, therefore, it was thought fit to interrogate him, Whether he had not a Hand in that Aſſault? For the Authors of it were as yet altogether in the Dark.

Blood, as if he had valued himſelf upon the Action, and poſſibly ſuſpecting that the King might have made ſome Diſcovery of it already, without any manner of Scruple or Heſitation, confeſſed he had. It was then asked him, Who his Aſſociates were? He anſwered, That he would never betray a Friend's Life; nor ever deny a Guilt, in Defence of his own. It was next asked him, What Provocation he had to make ſo bold an Aſſault upon the Duke of Ormond? He ſaid, The Duke had taken away his Eſtate, and executed ſome of his Friends; and that he and many others had engaged themſelves by ſolemn Oath to revenge it.

And leſt any of his audacious Villanies ſhould leſſen the Romance of his Life, by lying conceal'd in his Examination about the Crown, he voluntarily confeſſed to the King, that he had been engaged in a Deſign to kill his Majeſty with a Carbine, from out of the Reeds by the Thames Side, above Batterſea, where he often went to ſwim. That the Cauſe of this Reſolution in himſelf, and others, was, his Majeſty's Severity over the Conſciences of the Godly, in ſuppreſſing the Freedom of their Religious Aſſemblies. That when he had taken his Stand in the Reeds for that Purpoſe, his Heart was checked with an Awe of Majeſty, and he did not only himſelf relent, but diverted the reſt of his Aſſociates from the Deſign.

He told his Majeſty, That he had, by theſe his Confeſſions, laid himſelf ſufficiently open to the Law; and he might reaſonably expect the utmoſt Rigor of it; for which he was (without much Concern of his own) prepared: But he ſaid withal, That the Matter would not be of that Indifference to his Majeſty, inaſmuch as there were Hundreds of his Friends yet undiſcovered, who were all bound to each other by the indiſpenſible Oaths of Conſpirators, to revenge the Death of any of the Fraternity, upon thoſe who ſhould bring them to Juſtice, which would expoſe his Majeſty, and all his Miniſters, to the daily Fear and Expectation of a Maſſacre: But on the other Side, if his Majeſty would ſpare the Lives of a few, he might oblige the Hearts of many, who (as they had been ſeen to do daring Miſchiefs) would be as bold, if received into Pardon and Favour, to perform eminent Services for the Crown: And he pretended ſuch an Intereſt and Sway amongſt the Fanaticks, to diſpoſe them to their Fidelity, as though he had been their choſen General, and had them all entered in his Muſter-Roll.

In ſhort, Blood, and his Aſſociates, were not only pardoned, and ſet free, but the Arch-Villain himſelf had 500 l. per Annum, ſettled upon him in Ireland, and was admitted into all the Privacy and Intimacy of the Court. Mr. Edwards had a Grant of 200 l. and his Son of 100 l.

The famous Andrew Marvel, at the Time this Buſineſs happened, gives the following ſhort Account of it, in a Letter to a Friend.

" One Blud, (ſo he writes his Name) outlawed for a Plot to take Dublin Caſtle, and " who ſeized on the Duke of Ormond here laſt " Year, and might have killed him, a moſt " bold, and yet ſober, Fellow, ſome Months " ago, ſeized the Crown and Sceptre in the " Tower, took them away, and, if he had killed " the Keeper, might have carried them clear off. " He being taken, aſtoniſhed the King and Court, " with the Generoſity and Wiſdom of his An- " ſwers. He, and all his Accomplices, for his " Sake, are diſcharged by the King, to the " Wonder of all.

In the Year 1677, the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Salisbury, the Earl of Shaftsbury, and the Lord Wharton, were committed to the Tower, for propoſing a Queſtion in the Houſe, about the Legality of the Parliament, which might raiſe Doubts and Jealouſies, it was ſaid, in the Minds of the King's Subjects. This Commitment was oppoſed by ſeveral Lords, who apprehended that it might prejudice the Freedom of Debate. The Earl of Shaftsbury continued in the Tower above a Year; but the other three, upon making their Submiſſion, were ſooner diſcharged.

In the Year 1678, the Earl of Powis, Viſcount Stafford, the Lord Arundel of Wardour, the Lord Petres, and the Lord Bellaſis, were committed to the Tower, being accuſed of the Popiſh-Plot.

In the Year 1679, the Earl of Danby was committed to the Tower by the Houſe of Lords; but ſoon after pleaded the King's Pardon at the Bar of the ſaid Houſe.

In the Year 1680, on the 29th of December, the Lord Stafford was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

In the Year 1681, the Earl of Shaftsbury, being accuſed of Treaſonable Practices, was again committed to the Tower; but when he was to be brought on his Trial, the Jury returned the Bill Ignoramus.

In the Year 1682, the Lord Ruſſel, eldeſt Son of the Earl of Bedford, was committed to the Tower for High Treaſon; of which being brought in Guilty upon his Trial, he was condemned, and ſoon after executed in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields.

The Earl of Eſſex, having been accuſed of being concerned in the ſame Conſpiracy, was, quickly after the Diſcovery, committed to the Tower; where, on the ſame Day that the Lord Ruſſel was tried, he was found with his Throat cut; but whether by himſelf, or any Body elſe, has been the Occaſion of ſome Diſpute.

On the 7th of December 1683, Colonel Algernoon Sidney was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

In the Year 1685, James Duke of Monmouth was beheaded on Tower-Hill. When he went to the Scaffold he was attended by a very ſtrong Guard, who, it is ſaid, had Orders to ſhoot him, if any Attempt had been made of a Reſcue, as had been talked of. The Executioner, at the Block, was in very great Diſorder, trembling all over, and gave him at firſt only a ſlight Stroke, at which he turned and looked at him; then the Duke laid himſelf down again, and the Headſman gave him two Strokes more, but then threw down the Ax, and cried out, That he could not go on; but the Sheriff, with Threats, obliged him to take it up again; and ſo, at two Strokes more, his Head was taken off.

In the Year 1688, Dr. Sancroft, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and ſix other Biſhops, viz. Dr. Lloyd, Biſhop of St. Aſaph; Dr. Kenn, Biſhop of Bath and Wells; Dr. Turner, Biſhop of Ely; Dr. Lake, Biſhop of Chicheſter; Dr. White, Biſhop of Peterborough; and Sir Jonathan Trelawney, Biſhop of Briſtol, were committed to the Tower. The Court expecting ſome Diſturbance upon this Occaſion, had ordered that they ſhould be carried thither by Water; but the People ran in Crowds to the River Side, to wait their coming, and filled the Banks of the Thames, by which they were to paſs, and expreſſed all the Tranſports that Love, Compaſſion, and Rage, could beget. They were ſoon after brought to their Trial, and acquitted.

In the ſame Year the Lord Chancellor Jefferies was committed to the Tower, where he died, as ſome ſay, of Grief, others ſay, of drinking Strong-Liquors, but more likely of the Stone. This Gentleman had, by his Cruelty, render'd himſelf ſo very odious, that it was with much Difficulty they could ſecure him, as they were bringing him to the Tower, from the Fury of the Populace, who threatned to tear him to Pieces. He was taken in a Sailor's Habit, in a little Houſe in Wapping, where he had concealed himſelf, in order to make his Eſcape to Hamburgh.

In the Year 1696, Sir John Fenwick, who was concerned in the Plot to aſſaſſinate King William III. was beheaded on Tower-Hill.

In the Year 1709, the Lord Griffin, committed for High Treaſon, died in the Tower. A Scaffold was erected upon Tower-Hill for his Execution, where it long continued, the Queen reprieving him from Time to Time, till his Death.

IN the Year 1716, James, Earl of Derwentwater; William, Lord Widdrington; William, Earl of Nithſdale; George, Earl of Wintoun: Robert, Earl of Carnwarth; William, Viſcount Kenmure, and William, Lord Nairn, were committed to the Tower. They were all tried, and found Guilty of High Treaſon, but only the Earl of Derwentwater, and the Lord Kenmure, were beheaded; the Earl of Nithſdale, who was likewiſe order'd to be executed at the ſame Time, having found Means to eſcape out of the Tower, in Womens Apparel, the Night before.

IN the Year 1722, Francis, Biſhop of Rocheſter, and Chriſtopher Layer, Eſq; were committed to the Tower for High Treaſon; the latter was condemned and executed for the ſame at Tyburn; and the Biſhop, by an Act to inflict Pains and Penalties, was baniſhed the Kingdom, and died in Exile.

MR. Kelly, and Mr. Plunket, who were committed at the ſame Time, remain ſtill Priſoners in the Tower.

AND now to conclude this Chapter: The Tower of LONDON is not only a Jail for Priſoners, but a ſtrong Fort, or Citadel, to defend or command the City; a Royal Palace for Aſſemblies and Treaties: It is the Treaſury for the Jewels and Ornaments of the Crown; the great Archive which preſerves all the antient Records of the Courts of Juſtice at Weſtminſter: It is the Place for the Royal Mint and Coinage of Gold and Silver; and is the chief Magazine, or Arſenal, of the whole Land, for Martial Proviſions.

CHAP. XI.

Of SCHOOLS, and other Houſes of LEARNING.

" IN the Reign of King Stephen, and of " Henry II. (ſaith William Fitz-Stephen) " there were in LONDON, three " principal Churches, which had famous Schools, " either by Privilege, and antient Dignity, or " by Favour of ſome particular Perſons, (as of " Doctors) who were accounted notable and " renowned for Knowledge in Philoſophy: And " there were other inferior Schools alſo.

" UPON Feſtival Days the Maſters made ſo- " lemn Meetings in the Churches, where their " Scholars diſputed Logically and Demonſtra- " tively; ſome bringing Enthymems, others per- " fect Syllogiſms: Some diſputed for Shew, o- " thers to trace out the Truth; and cunning So- " phiſters were thought brave Scholars, when " they flowed with Words. Others uſed Falla- " cies; Rhetoricians ſpake aptly to perſuade, " obſerving the Precepts of Art, and omitting " nothing that might ſerve their Purpoſe. The " Boys of divers Schools did Cap, or Pot Verſes, " and contended of the Principles of Grammar.

" THERE were were ſome, which, on the " other Side, with Epigrams and Rhymes, nip- " ping and quipping their Fellows, and the " Faults of others, (tho' ſuppreſſing their Names) " moved thereby much Laughter among their " Auditors.

THE three principal Churches which had theſe famous Schools by Privileges, Mr. Stow was of Opinion, muſt needs be the Cathedral Church of St. Paul for one, ſeeing that by a General Council, holden in the Year of CHRIST 1176, at Rome, in the Patriarchy of Lateran, it was decreed, " That every Cathedral Church ſhould " have its Schoolmaſter to teach poor Scholars, " and others, as had been accuſtomed, and that " no Man ſhould take any Reward for Licenſe " to teach.

THE ſecond, as moſt antient, may ſeem to have been the Monaſtery of St. Peter at Weſtminſter, whereof Ingulphus, Abbot of Crowland, in the Reign of William the Conqueror, writeth thus:

" I, Ingulphus, an humble Servant of GOD, " born of Engliſh Parents, in the moſt beautiful " City of LONDON, for to attain to Learn- " ing, was firſt put to Weſtminſter, and after to " Study at Oxford, &c.

AND writing in Praiſe of Queen Edgitha, Wife to Edward the Confeſſor:

" I have ſeen her (ſaith he) often, when be- " ing but a Boy, I came to ſee my Father, dwel- " ling in the King's Court; and often coming " from School, when I met the Queen, ſhe " would oppoſe me, touching my Learning and " Leſſon; and falling from Grammar to Logick, " (wherein ſhe had ſome Knowledge) ſhe would " ſubtilly conclude an Argument with me; and, " by her Hand-maiden, give me three or four " Pieces of Money, and ſend me unto the Pa- " lace, where I ſhould receive ſome Victuals, " and then be dimiſſed.

THE third School ſeemeth to have been at the Monaſtery of St. Saviour at Bermondſey, in Southwark: For other Priories, as of St. John by Smithfield; St. Bartholomew in Smithfield; St. Mary-Overy in Southwark; and that of the Holy Trinity by Aldgate, were all of later Foundation; and the Fryaries, Colleges, and Hoſpitals in this City, were raiſed ſince them, in the Reigns of Henry III, and Edward I, II, and III, &c. all which Houſes had their Schools, tho' not ſo famous as theſe firſt named.

KING Henry VI. in the 24th Year of his Reign, by Patent, appointed, That there ſhould be in LONDON, Grammar Schools, beſides St. Paul's, at St. Martin's le Grand, St. Mary le Bow in Cheap, St. Dunſtan's in the Weſt, and St. Anthony's. And in the next Year, to wit, 1394, the ſaid King ordained by Parliament, That four other Grammar Schools ſhould be erected; to wit, in the Pariſhes of St. Andrew's in Holborn; Alhallows the Great, in Thames-ſtreet; St. Peter's in Cornhill; and in the Hoſpital of St. Thomas Acons in Weſt-Cheap: Since which Time, as divers Schools, by ſuppreſſing of Religious Houſes, (whereof they were Members in the Reign of Henry VIII.) have been decayed; ſo again, have ſome others been newly erected and founded for them: As, namely, St. Paul's School, in the Place of an old ruined Houſe, was built in moſt ample Manner, and largely endowed in the Year 1512, by John Collet, Doctor of Divinity, and Dean of St. Paul's, for 153 poor Mens Children; for which there were ordained a Maſter, Sur-maſter, (or Uſher) and a Chaplain.

AGAIN, in the Year 1553, after the Erection of Chriſt's-Hoſpital, (in the late diſſolved Houſe of the Grey Fryars) a great Number of poor Children being taken in, a School was ordained there at the Citizens Charge.

IN

In the Year 1561, the Merchant-Taylors of LONDON founded a Free Grammar-School, in the Pariſh of St. Laurence Pountney, by Candlewick-Street, Richard Hills, Maſter of that Company, giving 500 l. towards the Purchaſe of a Houſe, called the Manor of Roſe, ſometime the Duke of Buckingham's.

Of theſe Schools more will be ſpoken of hereafter.

As for the Meeting of Schoolmaſters on Feſtival Days, at Feſtival Churches, and the Logical Diſputations of their Scholars, they have been long diſuſed; but the School-Boys arguing about the Principles of Grammar, was continued even to the Time of Mr. Stow, who ſays, that he himſelf, in his Youth, yearly ſaw, on the Eve of St. Bartholomew, the Scholars of divers Grammar-Schools repair unto the Church-Yard of St. Bartholomew, the Priory in Smithfield, where, upon a Bank boarded about, under a Tree, ſome one Scholar hath ſtept up, and there hath oppoſed and anſwered, till he was by ſome Scholar overcome and put down; and then the Overcomer taking the Place, did as the firſt, and in the End, the beſt Oppoſers and Anſwerers had Rewards; which made both good School-Maſters and Scholars, (diligently againſt ſuch Times) to prepare themſelves for the obtaining this Garland.

There repaired to theſe Exerciſes, (amongſt others) the Maſters and Scholars of the Schools of St. Paul's in LONDON, and of St. Peter's at Weſtminſter, of St. Thomas Acon's Hoſpital, of St. Anthony's Hoſpital, whereof the laſt named, commonly preſented the beſt Scholars, and had the Prize in thoſe Days.

This Priory of St. Bartholomew being ſurrendred to Henry VIII. thoſe Diſputations of Scholars in that Place ſurceaſed, and was again (only for a Year or two) in the Reign of Edward VI. revived in the Cloyſter of Chriſt's Hoſpital, where the beſt Scholars (then ſtill of St. Anthony's School) were rewarded with Bows and Arrows of Silver, given to them by Sir Martin Bowes, Goldſmith.

Nevertheleſs, however the Encouragement failed, the Scholars of St. Paul's, meeting with them of St. Anthony's, would call them St. Anthony's Pigs, and they again would call the other, Pigeons of St. Paul's, becauſe many Pigeons were bred in St. Paul's Church, and St. Anthony was always figured with a Pig following him. And, mindful of the former Uſage, did for a long Seaſon (diſorderly in the open Street) provoke one another with Salve: Salve tu quoque. Placet tibi mecum diſputare? Placet. And ſo proceeding from this to Queſtions in Grammar, they uſually fell from Words to Blows, with their Satchels full of Books, many Times in ſuch great Heaps, that they troubled the Streets and Paſſengers, ſo that finally they were reſtrained, with the Decay of St. Anthony's School.

Out of this School have ſprung divers famous Perſons, viz. Sir Thomas More, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England; Dr. Nicholas Heath, ſome Time Biſhop of Rocheſter, and laſtly, Archbiſhop of York, and Lord Chancellor of England; Dr. John Whitgift, Biſhop of Worceſter, and after Archbiſhop of Canterbury, &c.

In the Year 1582, there was founded a publick Lecture in Chirurgery to be read in the College of Phyſicians, then in Knight-rider's-Street, and to begin in the Year 1584, on the 6th of May, and ſo to be continued, for ever, twice in every Week, on Wedneſday and Friday, by the Honourable Baron John, Lord Lomley, and the learned Richard Caldwell, Doctor in Phyſick, the Reader whereof to be Richard Forſter, Doctor of Phyſick, during his Life.

Furthermore, about the ſame Time, there was alſo begun a Mathematical Lecture, to be read in an old Chapel, built by Simon Eayre, within the Leadenhall, whereof a learned Citizen, named, Thomas Hood, was the firſt Reader. But this Chapel, and other Parts of that Hall, being employed for Stowage of Goods, taken out of a great Spaniſh Carack, the ſaid Lecture ceaſed to be read, and was then, in the Year 1588, read in the Houſe of Maſter Thomas Smith, in Graſs-Street, &c.

Greſham-College.

Sir Thomas Greſham, Knt. a Merchant of LONDON, Agent to Queen Elizabeth, by his laſt Will and Teſtament, made in the Year 1575, gave the Royal-Exchange, and all the Buildings thereunto appertaining, that is to ſay, the one Moiety to the Mayor and Commonalty of LONDON, and their Succeſſors, upon Truſt, that they perform, as ſhall be declared, and the other Moiety to the Mercers, in like Confidence. The Mayor and Commonalty to find four to read Lectures of Divinity, Aſtronomy, Muſick and Geometry, within his Dwelling-Houſe in Biſhopſgate-Street, and to beſtow the Sum of 200 l. to wit, 50 l. a-piece, &c. The Mercers likewiſe to find three Readers, that is, in Civil Law, Phyſick, and Rhetorick, within the ſame Dwelling-Houſe, and to beſtow the Sum of 150 l. that is, to every Reader, 50 l.

These Salaries and other Bequeſts of Sir Thomas Greſham, are payable out of the Rents of the Exchange, and other Rents of Houſes belonging thereunto; but the exceſſive Charges in rebuilding the Exchange, by a Model, which was ſhewn to, and approved by King Charles II. (which ſome ſay, coſt not leſs than 80,000 l.) hath put the Company in Debt, and ſomewhat poſtponed the Payment of the Salaries.

The Will of Sir Thomas Greſham.

The Will of Sir Thomas Greſham, dated in July 1575, the 17th Year of Elizabeth, for the Endowment of the Readers of theſe Lectures, was to this Tenor: "That one Moiety of the "Buildings of the Royal-Exchange, with all "Pawns, Shops, Cellars, Vaults, Meſſuages, "Tenements, &c. Parcel of the ſaid Exchange, "after the Expiration of an Indenture Quadripar-"tite, ſhould remain unto the Mayor, Commo-"nalty, and Citizens of LONDON, and to "their Succeſſors, upon Truſt, to perform certain "Payments, and other Intents hereafter limited: "And the other Moiety to remain to the War-"dens and Commonalty of the Myſtery of the "Mercers of LONDON, and to their Suc-"ceſſors, upon Truſt and Confidence, and to "the Intents hereafter-mentioned. And when "that one Moiety of the ſaid Exchange ſhould "come to the ſaid Mayor and Corporation of the "ſaid City, they and their Succeſſors, ſhall every "Year give, and diſtribute, for the Suſtentation "of four Perſons, to be choſen by the ſaid Mayor "and Commonalty, qualified to read the Lectures "of Divinity, Aſtronomy, Muſick, and Geometry, "within his own Dwelling-Houſe, within the Pa-"riſh of St. Helen's in Biſhopſgate-Street, and St. "Peter's the Poor, the Sum of 200 l. that is, to "every of the ſaid Readers, the Sum of 50 l. "yearly, each, for their Salaries and Stipends; "to be paid at the Feaſts of the Annunciation of "St. Mary the Virgin, and St. Michael the "Archangel. And further, to give and diſtri-"bute the Sum of 53 l. 6 s. 8 d. yearly, unto "eight Alms-Folks, whom the ſaid Mayor and "Commonalty, or their Succeſſors appoint to in-"habit his eight Alms-houſes in St. Peter's the "Poor; to every of them the ſaid Alms-Folks, the "Sum of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. to be paid at the four uſual "Terms in the Year. And that the ſaid Mayor "and Commonalty ſhould give and diſtribute at "the Terms aforeſaid to the Relief of the poor "Priſoners in the Priſons, known by the Names "of Newgate, Ludgate, the King's-Bench, the "Marſhalſea,

" Marſhalſea, and the Compter in Woodſtreet, " 50 l. in Money, or other Proviſions and Ne- " ceſſaries, viz. to every of the ſame five Priſons, " 10 l. at the four uſual Feaſts, or twenty eight " Days next after.

" AND as concerning the other Moiety, diſ- " poſed to the Wardens and Commonalty of the " Corporation of the Mercers, they and their " Succeſſors yearly ſhall give and pay, to and for " the Find and Suſtentation of three Perſons, " by them, from Time to Time, to be choſen, " and meet to read the Lectures of Law, Phy- " ſick, and Rhetorick, within his ſaid Dwelling- " Houſe, the Sum of 150 l. that is, to every of " the ſaid Readers, for the Time being, the Sum " of 50 l. for their Salaries and Stipends, at the " two uſual Terms of the Year, viz. the Annun- " ciation of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, and St. " Michael. And that the ſaid Wardens and " Corporation of Mercers, and their Succeſſors, " ſhall yearly beſtow and expend 100 l. at four " ſeveral Times in the Year, in and about the " Expences and Charges of a Feaſt or Dinner for " the whole Company, to be had and made in " the Mercers Hall, in the End of every their " Quarter-Day, the Sum of Twenty-five Pounds; " and ſhall every Year give and diſtribute to the " Relief of the poor Perſons and Priſoners in the " Hoſpitals and Priſons, known by the Name " of Chriſt, or Chriſt's-Church, lately Grey Fryars " in LONDON, the Hoſpital of St. Bar- " tholomew, near Smithfield, the Spital and " Bedlam, near Biſhopſgate, the Hoſpital for the " Poor in Southwark, and the Compter kept in " the Poultry, 50 l. in Money, or other Provi- " ſions and Neceſſaries for them; that is, to " every the ſaid Hoſpitals and Priſons, 10 l. at " the four moſt uſual Feaſts, or within 28 Days " after, &c.

" AND as concerning his ſaid Manſion-Houſe, " with the Gardens, Stables, and all and ſingu- " lar the other Appurtenances, &c. he willed " and diſpoſed, that they ſhould remain, and " the Uſe thereof be, to the ſaid Mayor and " Commonalty, and to their Succeſſors: And " alſo to the Wardens and Commonalty of the " Mercers, to have and to hold in common, " upon Truſt and Confidence, that the ſame " Mayor and Commonalty, and the ſaid War- " dens and Commonalty of the Mercers, and " their Succeſſors, ſhall permit, and ſuffer, ſeven " Perſons by them to be elected and appointed " in Manner and Form aforeſaid, meet, and ſuffi- " ciently learned, to read the ſaid ſeven Lectures, " to have the Occupation of all the ſaid Man- " ſion-Houſe, Gardens, and all other the Ap- " purtenances, &c. for them, and every of them " there to inhabit, ſtudy, and daily to read, the " ſaid ſeveral Lectures.

" AND his Will was, that none ſhould be choſen " to read any of the ſaid Lectures, after being " married; nor receive any Fee or Stipend ap- " pointed for the Reading of the ſaid Lecture.

IT is to be noted, That all this was thus diſ- poſed and given only during fifty Years. Then after, the Will proceeds: " That moreover he " willed and diſpoſed, that if the ſaid Mayor " and Commonalty, and the ſaid Wardens and " Commonalty, before the End of the ſaid fifty " Years, to them in Form aforeſaid limited, " ſhould procure and obtain ſufficient and lawful " Diſpenſations and Licences, Warrant and Au- " thority had and obtained, ſhould have and " enjoy the ſaid Royal Exchange, Meſſuages, " Shops, Pawns, Vaults, Houſes, and all other " the Premiſes, &c. for ever ſeverally, by ſuch " Moieties, Rates, and other Portions, and in " ſuch Manner and Form, as before was limited, " upon Truſt and Confidence, that they ſeverally " for ever ſhould do, and perform the Payments, " Charges, &c. before limited and expreſſed.

" AND he required and charged the ſaid Cor- " porations and chief Governors thereof, with " circumſpect Diligence, and without long De- " lay, to procure, and ſo to be done and obtain- " ed, as they would anſwer for the ſame before " Almighty God. For if they, or any of them, " ſhould neglect the obtaining of ſuch Licence, " or Warrant, (which he truſted could not be " difficult, nor ſo chargeable, but that the " Overplus of his Rents, and Profits of the " Premiſes would ſoon recompence the ſame, " becauſe to ſo good a Purpoſe in the Common- " wealth, no Prince or Council in any Age " would deny or defeat the ſame. And that if " conveniently, by his Will, or other Convey- " ance, he might have aſſured it, he would not " have left it to be done after his Death) then " the ſame to revert to his right Heirs, whereas " he meant the ſame to the Commonwealth. " And then the Default thereof ſhould be to the " Reproach and Condemnation of the ſaid Cor- " porations afore God. The proving of this " Will bore Date, November 26, 1579.

THIS noble Gift was afterwards confirmed by Act of Parliament, in the 23d of the Queen, and was intitled, " An Act for the Eſtabliſhing an " Agreement, between Sir Henry Nevyl, Knt. and " Dame Anne Greſham, Widow, for the better " performing of the laſt Will of Sir Thomas Gre- " ſham, Knt. deceas'd, and for the Payments of his " Debts." The Clauſe ratifying and confirming the Donation of the Exchange for the aforeſaid Lectures, was in theſe Words:

" AND the Buildings in LONDON, called " the Royal Exchange, and all Pawns, and " Shops, Cellars, Vaults, Meſſuages, Tenements, " and other whatſoever Hereditaments, Parcel " of, or adjoining to the ſaid Royal Exchange in " LONDON, ſome Time the ſaid Sir Tho- " mas Greſham's, ſhall be to the ſaid Dame Anne, " during her Life; and after her Deceaſe, the " one Moiety thereof to the Mayor, Commonal- " ty and Citizens of LONDON, by whatever " ſpecial Name, or Addition, the ſame Corpo- " ration is made, or known, and to their Succeſ- " ſors for ever, and the other Moiety thereof " to the Wardens and Commonalty of the My- " ſtery of Mercers of the City of LONDON, " that is to ſay, to the Body and Corporation of " the Company of the Mercers of LONDON, " by whatſoever ſpecial Name, or Addition, " the ſame Corporation is made, or known, and " to their Succeſſors, to the good Uſes and In- " tents, in the ſaid Writing, laſt Will and " Teſtament, limited, or appointed.

So that theſe Lectures began after the De- ceaſe of the Lady Anne Greſham, (which happen- ed in the Year 1596) and ſo to continue for ever; whereupon the Lecturers were accordingly cho- ſen and appointed to begin their Readings in Trinity Term 1597, which alſo they do at this Time perform. The Names of the firſt Profeſſors were Anthony Wooton for Divinity, Dr. Matthew Gwinne, for Phyſick, Dr. Henry Mountlow, for the Civil Law, Dr. John Bull, for Muſick, Edward Breerwood, for Aſtronomy, Henry Briggs, for Geometry, and Caleb Willis, for Rhetorick, to the great Delight of many, both learned and Lovers of Learning.

THESE Lectures are read daily in Term Time, by every one upon his Day, in the Morning, be- twixt Nine and Ten, in Latin, and in the Af- noon, betwixt Two and Three, in Engliſh, ſaving that the Muſick Lecture is in Engliſh only, upon two

two ſeveral Days, Thurſday and Saturday, in the Afternoons, betwixt three and four o'the Clock.

THE Profeſſors of this College have been Men of excellent Parts, and well qualified to perform the ſame: But after the great Fire of LONDON, (this College eſcaping in that Conflagration) the City made Uſe of it for their Court and Chamber, and for other Publick Uſes. The Inner Court-Yard for the Meeting of the Merchants, until ſuch Time as the Royal Exchange could be re-built; alſo, the Galleries above the Court-Yards without, and the Piazza's about the Inner Court, where the Merchants met, were all converted into Shops for thoſe who had been burnt out in the Fire of the Exchange. This Alteration did, for ſome Time, impede the orderly Courſe of the Reading the aforeſaid Lectures: But afterwards the antient Practice was renewed.

THIS noble Foundation of Learning, Mr. Stow hath given a brief Account of; and Mr. Strype adds a few other Things, whereof he is ſilent. The Lady Greſham being dead, at whoſe Deceaſe the Salaries for the Lectures were to commence from the Rents then growing out of the Royal Exchange, and the Manſion-Houſe of Sir Thomas Greſham, and the Lecturers being now to be appointed, in the Year 1597; the Mayor therefore, Aldermen, and Commons, conſidering what a Truſt this was committed to them, thought fit to write Letters to the Univerſity of Cambridge, importing, "How that "they might the better diſcharge the Truſt "committed to them, both in Conſcience, and "in regard of their own Credit, as not doubting "but the Eye of her Sovereign Majeſty, her "Honourable Council, and all other of beſt "Judgment throughout this Land, would obſerve their Doings, with what Care and good "Diſcretion they perform'd this Duty, being "Matter of ſo great Importance to the Church "of GOD, and this Commonwealth: And that "for themſelves, for Want of Judgment to diſcern Men of moſt Sufficiency in the ſaid "Faculties, they might make Default, and commit ſome Error in their Election: They thought "good therefore to derive their Choice from the "very Fountain, and in earneſt and hearty Manner to crave the Help and Aſſiſtance of their "learned Judgments; and to entreat of them "the Nomination of two meet Perſons, being "unmarried, according to the Will of the Teſtator, of beſt Knowledge in every Faculty of "thoſe four that were referred to the beſtowing "of the City; being alſo furniſhed with good "Utterance, and other meet and requiſite Parts "for the publick Profeſſion of the ſaid Arts, "whoſe ſeveral Names they prayed them to ſet "down, and ſend unto them, under the Signature of the Univerſity, that they might make "Choice of the fitteſt Perſons in every Faculty, "being aſſiſted by ſo many grave and learned "Judgments; wherein, as they ſhould perform "a ſpecial Part of their own Duty, ſo they "doubted not but that themſelves ſhould do a "good acceptable Work to Almighty GOD, "and bind them and the whole City in mutual "Reſpects, and good Correſpondence of like "Deſire to procure the Good, wherein they "might, of that Univerſity.

TO the like Effect they directed their Letters to the Univerſity of Oxford.

SOME of the Heads in Cambridge were jealous that theſe Lectures, being to be read in LONDON, might be prejudicial to that Univerſity, in hindering many from coming thither to ſtudy the Sciences, and drawing them to LONDON. This occaſioned Dr. Jegon, the Vice-Chancellor, to refrain for a little Time to nominate any, before he had acquainted the Lord Burleigh, their High Chancellor, with it, and had his Allowance for the doing it.

THERE were two Things that thoſe who had the Care of this College, in order to the Settlement thereof, were buſy about; the one was in concerting, whether the Lectures ſhould be read in Latin, or Engliſh; the other, for the Regulation of the College with good Rules and Orders.

CONCERNING the former, it was much controverted in which of the two Languages the Lectures ſhould be read; and there were two Papers of Reaſons aſſigned; one, Why the Lectures in Divinity ſhould be read in Engliſh, all, or Part: And the other, Why all the other Lectures ſhould be rather read in Engliſh, all, or Part: But the Judgment of learned Men differ'd, it ſeems, in this Point; ſome being for reading in Latin, ſome in Engliſh; the general Opinion was, That in the three Readings in the Week, the two former ſhould be in Latin, and the laſt in Engliſh.

THE Reaſons given in the aforeſaid Papers, were as follow:

I. BECAUSE the Good that would enſue would be more Publick.

AND the Founder ſeemed to have a more ſpecial Reſpect to the Benefit of the Citizens; of whom few underſtood the Latin Tongue.

THAT there would be more Hope of Contribution from the Citizens for the perfecting this and other good Works, if they might be employed to the common Benefit of the People of the City.

THAT it would be leſs offenſive and damageable to the Univerſities, that this Reading be in Engliſh.

THAT the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, to whom the Ordering theſe Lectures was committed by the Will of the Founder, thought themſelves bound in Conſcience to provide that they might be read to the greateſt Profit.

THAT if they be read in Latin, ſome of the Learned might probably reſort to them, at firſt, for Novelty's Sake; but in ſhort Time, they would become ſolitary, and void of Auditors; whereby Occaſion would be taken to convert the Revenue to ſome other Uſes, or elſe to transfer the Lectures to the Univerſities; both which were contrary to the Founder's Meaning.

THAT the Grecians taught all Parts of Learning in their own Tongue; Varro, Cicero, and Cæſar, and other of the wiſeſt and learnedeſt of the Romans, laboured to have the like done in the Latin: That the vulgar Tongues, at this Time, eſpecially the Italian, French, and Spaniſh, both tranſlate out of Latin and Greek, and write in their Languages all Parts of Learning; which hath much graced and benefited thoſe Countries.

AND Laſtly, It will farther the Eſtimation of Learning among the People, and will give them ſuch a Taſte of Learning as not to deſpiſe it, as the ruder Sort do; and make them withal to find their own Wants, and how neceſſary it is to have learned Men among them.

II. Reaſons why the Divinity Lecture ſhould be in Engliſh; viz.

THAT the former Reaſons make moſt for the Divinity Lecture.

THAT the Expoſition of the Texts of Scripture is fit for none more than the common People, who may and do miſtake many Places of Scripture: And when Points of Doctrine, which they hear but ſhortly and ſlightly handled in Sermons and ordinary Lectures, ſhall be ſoundly and largely delivered in Engliſh, with plain Proofs of the Truth of our Doctrine, and Diſ-proof of the Sophiſtry of the adverſe Party; hereby Knowledge will come to be well ſettled in the Minds of the People, in whom there is a great and general Want of it.

THAT many, able to underſtand Latin when they read it deliberately, will not be able to underſtand the Reader when he ſpeaketh it.

THAT it will be a good Means to beget a Reverence towards learned Miniſters, when Divinity, and the Study thereof, ſhall appear to be a greater and harder Matter than is apprehended by many; ſince many ſimple Men and Women take themſelves to be great Divines, upon meer Ignorance and vain Preſumption.

RECUSANTS, and other ſecret Papiſts, ſhall not be ſo eaſily able to ſhake the Faith, and diſquiet the Minds of unlearned People, who, for want of Grounds, are ſnared and confounded with ſubtle Arguments, as Papiſts furniſh themſelves withal.

THAT that falſe and dangerous Opinion, That the Difference between us and the Popiſh Church is about ſmall Trifles, and maintained by our Side for Contention rather than Conſcience ſake, may be found falſe and ſlanderous; and a true and grounded Deteſtation of Popery ſhall be bred in the Queen's Subjects Hearts.

THAT it may pleaſe God to make it a Means of the Converſion of ſome Papiſt, who, though they refuſe to be preſent at Sermons, yet peradventure, will not ſhun altogether Scholaſtical Lectures.

IF it be objected, That it will not be fit to have all Controverſies, or the Reaſons of both Sides made known to the People, it may be anſwered, That the Practice of the Adverſaries, who have contrived the Controverſies, and framed their Reaſons in the Engliſh Tongue, with as much Subtilty as they can, ſhew the Neceſſity of writing and reading Scholaſtically and Learnedly in Engliſh, that the People may be able to maintain the Truth profeſſed by Soundneſs of Reaſon.

THERE is a Collection of Rules prefaced in theſe Words: "It is thought good by the "Mayor and Aldermen, and Commons of the "City; and by the Maſter, Wardens, and "Company of the Mercers, to whom the Elec-"tion of the ſaid Profeſſors, and the good Go-"vernment of their ſaid College is wholly com-"mitted, by the laſt Will of the ſaid Founder, "to deviſe and ſet down certain Ordinances for "the good Government of the ſaid College, in "Manner following:

BUT the Reader may obſerve, by what will be ſaid hereafter, that theſe Orders were never kept up to.

THE firſt whereof was, for a Priority among the Profeſſors. This Priority to be in the Profeſſors of Divinity, Law, and Phyſick, ſucceſſively; ſo that theſe three principal Readers be Preſidents in Succeſſion. The Divinity Reader to be next the Preſident. The other Readers, after the Divinity Profeſſor, to have their Place according to their Seniority within the College.

THE Readers to lodge and common within the Houſe, as Collegiate Perſons.

DEPUTY Readers to be allowed by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Wardens of the Mercers.

A common Table, or ordinary Diet, to be kept by the Profeſſors, within the College, by a common Charge.

NO Stranger to be entertained at their common Diet, above three Meals within one Month.

THE publick Reading to be performed at five Terms; whereof the firſt to begin the Monday before Trinity Term, of the Common Law, and to continue for one whole Month, viz. the Space of thirty Days next enſuing; after which Term, a greater Vacancy and Intermiſſion is granted to them for their private Study, and other Buſineſs; and for avoiding the Concourſe of People in the Heat of Summer. The ſecond Term to begin the firſt Monday in September, and to continue for a Fortnight. The third Term to begin the Monday before Michaelmas Term; and to End with the ſame Term. The fourth Term to begin the Monday next after the Epiphany, and to continue for two Months, viz. the Space of threeſcore Days. The fifth Term to begin the Monday ſeven-night after Eaſter Day, and to End with Eaſter Term.

The Divinity Lecture.

THE Divinity Lecture to be read thrice every Week, twice in Latin, and once in Engliſh, between the Hours of eight and nine in the Forenoon, a whole Hour at a Time. The Lecture to be read in Latin for the Sake of Strangers (whereby the Memory of the Founder may be divulged) on Mondays and Wedneſdays. To be read in Engliſh, for the common Benefit of the People of the City on Fridays. Which Engliſh Lecture may be the Effect of the two former Latin Lectures.

THAT the Divinity Reader employ his Time in handling Controverſies that concern the chief Points of Chriſtian Faith, eſpecially thoſe with the common Adverſary, the Church of Rome: And to endeavour to confirm the true Doctrine eſtabliſhed in the Church of England; and to bolt out the true State of each Controverſy, eſpecially drawn from the Council of Trent, and the late Writers of refined Popery; and to overthrow their falſe Opinions. Firſt, by Scripture, then by Conſent of Antiquity; and laſtly, by Schoolmen, and chief Writers, of their own Side; not intermeddling with Domeſtick Queſtions, or inteſtine Differences, touching the Rites and Manner of Government of the Church.

The Law Lecture.

THE Law Lecture to be read thrice every Week for an Hour; the two former in Latin, and the third in Engliſh, as a brief Recapitulation of the two former. The Days to be Tueſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays.

THIS Law Lecture, conſidering the Hearers, for the moſt Part, are like to be Merchants, or other Citizens, not to be read after the Manner of the Univerſity, upon any Text of the Civil Courſe, but to cull out ſuch Titles and Heads of Law, as beſt may ſerve to the good Liking and Capacity of the Auditory, and are more uſual in Practice, which may be handled after the Method of Waſerbekius, and certain others, by Definition, Diviſion, Cauſes, Effects, Contraries, &c. To which are added the Heads and Titles of ſuch Matters as were fitted for this Place and Auditory.

The Phyſick Lecture.

THE Phyſick Lecture to be thrice every Week, viz. Tueſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays, between the Hours of 10 and 11. The two firſt Lectures in the Latin Tongue, and the third in the Engliſh, as a brief Collection and Recapitulation of the two former.

AND for the Matter of the ſaid Lecture, it is to be wiſhed, that the Reader follow Fernelius's Method, by reading Phyſiology, then Pathology, and laſt Therapeutics; whereby the Body of the ſaid Art may be better imprinted by good Method in the ſtudious Auditors, rather than be disjointed, and delivered out of Order, by Expoſition of ſome Part of Galen, or Hippocrates.

The Aſtronomy and Geometry Lectures.

THE Aſtronomy and Geometry Lectures to be read likewiſe, viz. either of them thrice every Week.

THE Geometrician to read every Trinity Term, Arithmetick. In Michaelmas and Hilary Term, Theorical Geometry; and every Eaſter Term, Practical Geometry.

THE Aſtronomy Reader to read, firſt, the Principles of the Sphere, and Theories of the Planets, &c. then to apply them to Uſe, by reading Geography, and the Art of Navigation in ſome one Term of every Year. The Days for the Aſtronomy Lecture Lecture to be Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, between the Hours of Two and Three in the Afternoon. For Geometry, Tueſday, Thurſday, and Saturday, at the ſame Hour. The firſt Reading of the ſaid Lectures to be in Latin, the next in Engliſh, and ſo following in the ſame Order.

THE Rhetorick Lecture to be read thrice every Week, viz. Mondays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, for a whole Hour in the Latin Tongue, with a brief Recapitulation for one Quarter of an Hour in the Engliſh, between the Hours of Ten and Eleven in the Forenoon.

THE Muſick Lecture to be alſo read thrice every Week, viz. the Theorick Part, for half an Hour in the Engliſh Tongue, and the Practick Part, by Conſort of Voices, or of Inſtruments, the other Half Hour: The Days appointed to be Tueſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays, in the Afternoon, between the Hours of Three and Four.

FOR the more Order and Comlineſs, the Readers are to read their Lectures as the Manner is in the Univerſities, viz. in ſuch Hoods, and Habits, as fit their Degree.

THE Keeper of the Houſe, who is to keep the Place of Reading, Cloiſters, Garden, and other open and common Places, and to ſee the Gates be ſhut and opened in convenient Times, to be appointed by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, with the Conſent of the ſaid Lecturers; and to have his Lodging within the ſaid Houſe.

IT has been ſaid, That before the Truſtees for this Benefaction proceeded to chooſe the firſt Profeſſors, they ſent Letters to the two Univerſities, deſiring them to recommend to their Choice fit Perſons, under the Univerſity's Seal: It is not known whether either of the Univerſities ſent ſuch Recommendations, but it is probable they never did, or at leaſt, that the firſt Choice was made without any Regard to them; for at the firſt Election, two of the Profeſſors were choſen by Recommendations from the Court, namely, Dr. Matthew Gwinne, Profeſſor of Phyſick, and Dr. John Bull, Profeſſor of Muſick. The Firſt, viz. Dr. Gwinne, had, by his Intereſt at Court, been ſent into France, Phyſician to Sir Henry Unton, Leaguer Ambaſſador to the King of France from Queen Elizabeth, and after his Return, was deſigned to be made Phyſician to the Tower of LONDON; but the firſt Election of the Profeſſors for Greſham College happening at that Time, the Lord Thomas Egerton, Baron Elleſmere, Lord High Chancellor of England, recommended him, in two Letters, to the Mercers Company, to be choſen Phyſick Profeſſor, which they did accordingly; and he was about the ſame Time admitted Fellow of the College of Phyſicians. The other, Dr. Bull, Muſick Profeſſor, had for ſome Years been travelling into France, Spain, and Germany, as Mr. Wood tells us, in his Athenæ Oxonienſes, and on his Return, was one of the Gentlemen of the Queen's Chapel, for four or five Years at leaſt, before the Election of the firſt Greſham Profeſſors; and as he was in the Service of the Court, and in the higheſt Eſteem there, for his vaſt Knowledge in Muſick, it is very likely he had his Recommendation from thence.

IF the Truſtees did not take the Recommendations of the Univerſities to direct their Choice, yet they ſeemed to make their Methods and Cuſtoms the Pattern by which the Greſham Lectures were to be modelled, and accordingly the Greſham Profeſſors began, and ever performed their Lectures in a Method and Courſe, in no material Point differing from the Univerſities, which appears to be altogether agreeable to the Intention of Sir Thomas Greſham, who, as he founded Profeſſorſhips in the ſame Arts and Sciences as are in the Univerſities, muſt be ſuppoſed to deſign, that they ſhould be cultivated in the ſame Manner at LONDON. Thus Sir George Buck, in his Treatiſe of the third Univerſity of England, namely, LONDON, ſays, That all the Liberal Arts and Sciences are there profeſſed and taught, and that there are many and daily Lectures thereof read Particularly and Academically in Greſham-College, for which Reaſon, he afterwards ſtiles Greſham-College, a little Univerſity, Academiæ Epitome. And beſides, That the Method of the Lectures themſelves, the Times of Reading them, and the Intervals between the Times of Reading, were, in a great Meaſure, conformable to the publick Lectures in the Univerſities, and in the ſame Manner performed when the Greſham Lectures were firſt inſtituted, is beyond Contradiction, plain, from the Concluſion of Dr. Gwinne's ſecond Oration, read in Greſham-College, wherein he ſays, That the Exerciſes, or Lectures, required of the Profeſſors in Greſham-College, are no other than what are required from the Profeſſors in the Schools, and Lecturers in the Colleges in the Univerſities; and that as they, the Univerſities, had their Vacation Time, and Receſſes between the Performance and Return of their Duty, ſo had Greſham-College; where the Lectures were read only at particular and appointed Times; namely, when ſuch Exerciſes are uſually performed in other the like Places: And that theſe uſual and cuſtomary Times of Reading were the Term Times only, is plain from Stow; for it appears from the firſt Edition of his Survey, written the ſame Year that Dr. Gwinne read the aforeſaid Lecture, and not above ſeven Months after the firſt Lectures were read, that the firſt Profeſſors began their Lectures in Trinity-Term 1597. That every Lecturer had his particular Day in the Week, on which he was to read twice, once in Engliſh, and the other in Latin; and the ſame Practice appears to have been followed in 1603, from the ſecond Edition of the Survey, publiſhed by Mr. Stow himſelf, in that Year, improved, augmented, and carefully corrected; and it is as plain, that the ſame Practice continued in the Year 1618, from the third Edition publiſhed by Mr. Anthony Monday; and in the Year 1633 from the fourth Edition publiſhed at that Time.

IN this Manner theſe Lectures began to be read; and thus they continu'd without any Interruption till the dreadful Fire of LONDON in 1666, when the Exchange of LONDON being conſumed, this College was made Uſe of to ſupply the Want of Shops for the Inhabitants of the Exchange, and to be a Place for the Merchants to meet in, till ſuch Time as the ſaid Exchange could be re-built, as has been ſaid before. After which the Lectures were again renew'd in the Manner they had before been practis'd; and thus continued till they had again been like to be interrupted in the Year 1699, thro' the Diſcouragement the Profeſſors met with from the Truſtees, who, under Pretence of a great Debt they had run into by Re-building the Royal Exchange in the ſumptuous Manner it now appears, thought it good to ſtop the Profeſſors Salaries; but they, however, did not think this a ſufficient Reaſon to omit their Duty, but continued in the Diſcharge of it, notwithſtanding this great Difficulty they had to encounter with: The Particulars of which Matter were as follow:

Profeſſors Salaries ſtopp'd by the Truſtees.

IN the Month of Auguſt 1699, a grand Committee for Greſham Affairs was ſummoned to meet, and the Profeſſors directed to give their Attendance: When the Profeſſors came, the Committee acquainted them, that Sir Thomas Greſham's Gift had greatly run them into Debt; that the Expence of Re-building the Exchange, (to do which they were forced to take up great Sums of Money Money upon Intereſt) was ſo great, and the Income of the Exchange ſo ſmall, the Trade thereof being greatly fallen of, that the preſent Profits of the Exchange were leſs than the Intereſt of the Money borrowed to re-build it, whereby there was no Revenue left to maintain and ſupport the Uſes of Sir Thomas Greſham's Will; wherefore they were not in any Condition to pay the Profeſſors Salaries any longer, nor any more could be at any Expence in Repairing the College, tho' they had ever, before that, kept in conſtant Repair both the publick Rooms of the College, and the private Apartments of the ſeveral Profeſſors. The Profeſſors uſed all poſſible Endeavours, in the moſt reſpectful Manner, to prevail with the Truſtees to recede from theſe Reſolutions, but without Succeſs, till the following Year, when they were forc'd to apply to Counſel, to adviſe what proper Courſe to take to obtain Redreſs: The Counſel they apply'd to, were the then Attorney-General, Sir Thomas Trevor, and Mr. Henry Pooley, to whom they gave a ſhort State of their Caſe in Subſtance, as follows:

Sir Thomas Greſham, by Will, made 1575, left one Moiety of the Exchange, &c. to the City of LONDON, to the Intent that they perform certain Payments mentioned in his Will; and the other Moiety thereof to the Company of Mercers, on the ſame Confidence and Truſt: One of theſe Payments directed by the Will, was, that the City ſhould find four Lecturers in Divinity, Geometry, Aſtronomy, and Muſick, for ever, and pay them yearly 50 l. a-piece. And that the Mercers likewiſe find three Lecturers for ever, in Civil Law, Phyſick and Rhetorick, and pay them alſo 50 l. a-piece. As to his Manſion-Houſe, with the Gardens, Stables, and Appurtenances, &c. the Will directs the ſame to be, and remain to the ſaid City and Company, upon Truſt and Confidence, that they permit and ſuffer the ſeven Readers aforeſaid, there to inhabit, and have the Uſe thereof to ſtudy and read the ſaid Lectures daily. On the next Year, an Act of Parliament paſſed for the better Performing this Will. The City and Company have accordingly enjoy'd this Gift, and have nominated the Readers, paid the Salaries, and kept the College in Repair ever ſince, till of late, which they now refuſe to do, alledging, that they were at a vaſt Expence in Re-building the Exchange, and had borrowed vaſt Sums to do it, and that the Intereſt thereof being firſt paid, the clear Profits of the Exchange, &c. will not pay the Salaries and other Payments appointed. The Truſtees farther pretend, That the Ground Sir Thomas built the Exchange on, was not his own Ground. On ſtating their Caſe after this Manner, the Profeſſors made theſe Queries, and received the following Advice:

THE firſt Queſtion is, ſuppoſing they [the Truſtees] have borrowed Money to build, "Whether they, enjoying the Rents and Profits, "as they do, under the Will, ſo confirmed by "Act of Parliament, and the Act for Re-building "the City, not appointing in what Manner the "Exchange ſhould be re-built, are not in all "Events to pay the ſeven Salaries, and the other "Charities yearly, and whether they can be "now admitted to controvert the Title to the "Ground, upon which the Exchange was built?

I conceive this City ſhall not now be admitted to controvert Sir Thomas Greſham's Right to the Ground on which the Exchange is built; and I conceive no extravagant or extraordinary Expences which the City may have been at in Building the Exchange more ſumptuouſly than needful, only for their own Grandeur and Magnificence, ſhall be allowed to them to ſink the Rents in Diſappointment of the Lecturers, and other Charities. The neceſſary Charges of Re-building, in ſuch a Manner, as to make it anſwer a Rent ſufficient to anſwer the Charities, muſt be allowed; and if after ſuch an Allowance, the reſt of the Profits will not be ſufficient to anſwer the Charities, I conceive the City ought to account for all the Rents and Profits from the Death of Sir Thomas Greſham, that ſo the Surplus of Profits may be applied to make up the Deficiency that now is.

THE ſecond Queſtion is, "Whether the "ſeveral Readers ſhall bring in a Bill in Chan-"cery for Performance of the Will in their own "Names, and for their Salaries only? or, "Whether in the Name of the Attorney-Gene-"ral, at their Relation for the Payment of their "Salaries, and the other Charities in the Will?

I conceive it is moſt proper to bring the Bill in the Attorney-General's Name, at the Relation of the Lecturers, &c.

MAY 17, 1700. HENRY POOLEY.

UPON this Advice, the Profeſſors, who ſtill ſought the Truſtees to give them Redreſs, without running to Extremities, but could not prevail, filed a Bill in Chancery againſt the Truſtees in Michaelmas Term, 1700. This Information was in Subſtance as follows: "That Sir Thomas "Greſham, did, in the Reign of the late Queen "Elizabeth, at his own Charge, build and erect "in the City of LONDON, a Building, "which was, by the ſaid Queen, called the "Royal Exchange; That by his laſt Will, made "1575, he left one Moiety of the ſaid Exchange, "&c. to the City of LONDON, and the "other Moiety thereof to the Company of Mer-"cers, upon this ſpecial and expreſs Truſt and "Confidence, and to the Intent that they ſhould "perform the Payments, and other Intents, in "that his laſt Will appointed to be done and "performed." Then the Bill recites the ſeveral Payments of Salaries and other Charities mentioned in the Will, and proceeds: "That the "Overplus of the Rents, and Profits of the Pre-"miſes, above all the Payments thereout ap-"pointed, to iſſue by the ſaid Will, would ſoon "abundantly recompence ſuch Charge and Trou-"ble as the Truſtees ſhould be at: And as to "his Manſion-Houſe, now commonly called "Greſham-College, he gave that, and all the "Appurtenances thereto belonging, to the ſaid "City and Company, to have and to hold, upon "this expreſs Truſt and Confidence, that they "ſhould permit the ſaid ſeven Lecturers to have "the Occupation of all his ſaid Manſion-Houſe, "&c. for them, and every of them there to in-"habit, ſtudy, and read, &c. That the ſaid "Truſtees did pay the ſaid Salaries and other "Charities, until the 25th Day of March, "1699; but ſince that Time, have ſtopped "further Payment, whereby the Salaries of the "Profeſſors are in Arrear from the ſaid 25th of "March 1699, to the preſent October 1700, al-"tho' Application has been ſeveral Times made "of late to the Truſtees for the Payment of the "ſaid Salaries; and when the Performance of the "Founder's Will has been earneſtly preſſed upon "them, the Anſwer was, There was no Money "to make good the ſaid Salaries, &c. on which "Pretence the Truſtees do abſolutely refuſe to "perform the Will of the ſaid Teſtator, by pay-"ing the ſaid Salaries, but do convert the Rents "and Profits of the Premiſes deviſed to them, to "their own reſpective Uſes, and their Pretence "for this Want of Money, is, That the Royal "Exchange, and other Appurtenances deviſed to them

" them in the ſaid Will, were burnt in the Fire of " LONDON; that they re-built the ſame at a
" vaſt Expence, borrowing Money for that Pur-
" poſe; and that the Incomes and Profits ariſing
" from the Exchange, thus re-built, does not an-
" ſwer the Money that was borrowed to re-build
" the ſame. Altho' this was true, the ſame
" ought not to prejudice the Payment of the ſaid
" Salaries, &c. for that there was no Neceſſity
" for them to expend ſuch vaſt Sums in outward
" Magnificence, and beſides, they had, for above
" an hundred Years, enjoyed all the Rents and
" Profitsof the Premiſes, being a very great Re" venue, much above the ſaid Payments charged
" on the ſame: Beſides, had not the Truſtees
" thought it for their Advantage, and ſo had re-
" fuſed to re-build the ſame, ſubject to the " Truſts and Payments in the Teſtator's Will,
" ſome other Ways and Means would have been " found out, and provided for the Re-build" ing, without defeating the ſeveral Payments
" appointed; and of this the Truſtees are ſo
" ſenſible, that they have, ever ſince the Fire of " LONDON, continued to pay the ſame,
" and but lately, as is afore ſet forth, ſtopp'd
" Payment; and for ſome farther Colour to make
" this Stop, do pretend, that, by a late Act of " Parliament for the Relief of Orphans, &c. the " Revenues of the City are appropriated to anſwer
" for ever a Fund of 8000 l. a Year, to pay theſe
" Orphans Debts, &c. which is only a Pretence
" to defeat the Founder's Will, ſince this Act
" cannot affect the Salaries due to the Profeſſors,
" &c. for that not the whole Benefaction of Sir
" Thomas Greſham, but only the Surplus of it,
" after paying the Uſes of the Will, can be called " or taken to be Part of the Revenue of the City.
" And ſo bent are the Truſtees to defeat the Will " of the Teſtator, that, tho' by his ſaid Will,
" his Manſion-Houſe is expreſly appointed for
" the Habitation of the ſaid ſeven Readers, yet,
" to force the Readers from thence, they have let
" the ſaid Houſe run to Ruin, and refuſe to repair
" and keep in Repair the ſame. All which Re-
" fuſal of Paying the Salaries, &c. and of Re-
" pairing the Manſion-Houſe, is againſt all Equi-
" ty and good Conſcience, and directly againſt
" the Will and Meaning of the Teſtator afore-
" ſaid, and a Breach of the Truſt repoſed by the " ſaid Will in them. To the end, therefore,
" that the ſaid Truſtees may anſwer the Pre-
" miſes, and be decreed to make good the Salaries,
" &c. and to pay the Arrear, and put the ſaid
" Manſion-Houſe, and keep the ſame, in Re" pair, the Lord Chancellor is prayed to grant
" his Writ of Subpœna to the Truſtees, com" manding them perſonally to appear, &c.

THE Conſequence of Filing this Bill, was, That not long after the Truſtees met, and directed the Profeſſors to attend, and at their Meeting, order'd the Payment of one Year's Salary, telling them, That they would, in convenient Time, diſcharge the remaining Part of the Arrear, whereupon all Proceedings in Chancery were ſuſpended. The Truſtees ſaid, likewiſe, That they had a Propoſal to make for the mutual Advantage, both of the Truſtees and Profeſſors, to which they deſired the Concurrence of the Profeſſors: Which Propoſal was to bring a Bill into Parliament for the Re-building Greſham-College into a Square (to be let out for Rent, for the Uſe and Advantage of the Truſtees) and Providing Houſes more commodious for the Profeſſors, than the Lodgings they now enjoy; and to this Propoſal all the Profeſſors, ſave one, gave their Conſent, and accordingly the Bill was brought into the Houſe of Commons, in 1701, and carried there; but at the ſecond Reading, in the Houſe of Lords, it was rejected, upon the Petition of Dr. Robert Hooke, Geometry Profeſſor, who had before denied his Conſent to it. The Contents of this intended Act of Parliament were as follow: In the Preamble it ſets forth, " That the Royal Exchange
" was given to the Truſtees in Truſt, to pay out
" 603 l. 6 s. 8 d. per Ann. That this Exchange
" was burnt down in the great Fire of LON-" DON; and ſo no Revenue left to pay the " Annual Charge. That the Truſtees re-built
" the Exchange at the Expence of 80,000 l. or " thereabouts, and the Truſtees loſt thereby
" more than 2000 l. yearly, the Trade of the " Exchange decreaſing, and many of the Shops
" ſtanding empty, altho' conſiderable Abate-
" ments have been made to encourage Tenants.
" That Greſham-College is grown old and ruinous,
" and the Repairs thereof have been very Expen-
" ſive; but the ſaid College ſtanding upon a " conſiderable Quantity of Ground, and great " Part of it lying Waſte, good Improvement may " be made by Re-building it. That the Truſ-
" tees and Profeſſors are agreed upon a Scheme
" of Building ſeven convenient Houſes for the " Lecturers, and a publick Hall, and likewiſe
" Alms-Houſes in a more airy and convenient
" Place for the Alms-Folks.

" WHEREFORE they pray, that it may be " enacted, That it may be lawful to pull down
" the old College, &c. and to convert the Ma" terials to their own Uſe, and alſo to let and
" diſpoſe all, or any Part of the Ground belong-
" ging to the ſaid College, except ſuch Part as
" the Lecturers Houſes and Hall are agreed to " be built upon. Provided, however, that the " Lecturers Houſes and Hall be built in the " Manner ſpecified, and that all thoſe new " Buildings be liable, together with the Royal
" Exchange, &c. in the firſt Place, and before
" all other Charges, to the Payment, of the Uſes
" of Sir Thomas Greſham's Will, and that all
" the Arrears due to the Lecturers, &c. be fully " paid, clear of all Taxes, either now aſſeſſed,
" or to be ever hereafter aſſeſſed; and that no
" Stoppage ſhall be made of the ſame Payments
" for the future, on Account of Re-building the " Exchange, or otherwiſe, howſoever, and that
" the Truſtees ſhall ſupport, maintain, and re" pair, at their own Coſts and Charges, the ſaid
" Lecturers Houſes, &c. as often as Occaſion
" ſhall be, and that the Truſtees ſhall on any " Vacancy of a Lecturer, for the future, come " to a Choice within two Months.

THE Bill being thus loſt in the Houſe of Lords, upon the Petition of Dr. Hooke, the Geometry Profeſſor, the Truſtees were much offended, and therefore went no farther in clearing the Arrears due to the Profeſſors, than the abovementioned Payment of the Year's Salary, and laid aſide this Project of Re-building till the Death of Dr. Hooke, which happened within a Year or two after; ſoon after which, the Truſtees again reſumed their Deſign of bringing their Bill into Parliament, as hoping now for better Succeſs, when the main Oppoſer of it was dead; and then again they deſired the Profeſſors Conſent and Concurrence, which they readily had; and accordingly, in the Year 1703-4, they brought into the Houſe of Lords the ſame Bill as before, where it paſſed, but with the following Clauſe added. " Provided always, that no Perſon ſhall
" hereafter be capable of being choſen a Lectu-
" rer upon any Vacancy, except he be a Gradu-
" ate in one of the Univerſities of this Kingdom."
There was likewiſe added a Penalty to the Bill, namely, " That the Truſtees ſhould be obliged " and required to build theſe Houſes, Hall, and
" Alms-Houſes, for the Lecturers and Alms-Folks,
" within five Years from the paſſing of this Act,
" upon the Penalty of 2000 l. to be forfeited to her
" Majeſty, or Heirs, or Succeſſors, &c." But

Bill for Re-building the College again brought into Parliament.

A Bill for Re-building Greſham-College brought into Parliament.

Thrown out again.

when this Bill came down to the Houſe of Commons, Exception was taken to this Clauſe, and the Bill being on that Account rejected, hath never ſince been attempted again in Parliament.

IN the Year 1706, ſome Perſons in Office, in the Pariſhes of St. Helen's and Broadſtreet, did, contrary to all Cuſtom and Uſage, aſſeſs and tax the ſeveral Apartments of the Profeſſors as diſtinct Houſes; whereas the whole ſeven Lodgings (all which, as was well known, were only the ſingle Manſion-Houſe of Sir Thomas Greſham) had been before taxed but as one Houſe: They likewiſe endeavour'd to bring the Profeſſors into the Poors Rates, and other parochial Taxations, to ſubject their Salaries to the King's Taxes, and to lay other ſuch-like Hardſhips upon them, nothing of which had ever before been ſo much as demanded of them. The Profeſſors abſolutely refuſed to comply with any of theſe Demands, and by proper Appeals, and other Methods, got themſelves diſcharged from theſe Impoſitions. The Pariſh-Officers finding themſelves diſappointed, and not able to leſſen their own Charges, by laying Part of them on the Profeſſors, grew angry, and ſought to give all the Moleſtation and Trouble they could to them; for which Purpoſe they employed Perſons of mean and baſe Condition, perpetually to attend the Lectures, not to reap any Advantage thence, or even to ſatisfy any Curioſity, but to obtain Matter for Calumny or Complaint, and to give Notice if any blameable Omiſſion ſhould happen: And theſe Perſons Behaviour was ſuitable to the Deſign they were ſent to purſue, being always tumultuous and rude, and ſometimes abuſive to ſome of the Profeſſors, during the Time of their performing their Duty. The Profeſſors might have taken juſt Exception to ſuch an Audience, or have refuſed to read to Perſons ſo unqualified as they were: However, they never omitted their Lectures on this Account, but continued in the conſtant Diſcharge of their Duty, to the Diſappointment of their Adverſaries, who wanted nothing more than a juſt Occaſion of Complaint; but as they could find no Neglect in the Profeſſors of their real Duty, they had Recourſe to an imaginary one, demanding of the Profeſſors to read Lectures on Holidays; nay, of the Divinity Profeſſor to read on Sundays: This they afterwards carried ſo far, as to inſiſt on Lectures every Day in the whole Year. The Profeſſors refuſing Compliance with theſe Demands, their Adverſaries had Recourſe to Clamour and Noiſe; they printed Repreſentations and Advertiſements, that ſuch Lectures were to be read on ſuch Days, namely, on Holidays, when they knew no Lectures would be read, and paſted theſe up and down in the moſt publick Places, and by other Means diſperſed them, and thus drew many Strangers thither, who being diſappointed, and not knowing the Uſage and Cuſtom of the Place, were drawn in to join with them in their unreaſonable Clamours: And among theſe were ſeveral Perſons of good Faſhion and Education; ſuch, whoſe Attendance might have been a Credit and Reputation to the Profeſſors, had they not fallen into the Prejudices before-named, and with great Zeal joined in the groundleſs Demand of Lectures every Day in the Year, inſtead of the known Duty of Reading them only in the Term Times. The Profeſſors refuſing to depart from what had been ever the Cuſtom of the College, were menaced with Complaints to be made to the Committee for Greſham Affairs; and if Redreſs was not to be had there, of farther appealing to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen. And to make theſe Complaints more effectual, and purſue them with greater Vigour, the Complainants ſelected a Number from among themſelves, to meet and conſider how to carry on theſe Deſigns; at which Meetings they diligently went thro' the Founder's Will, to ſee if any thing was omitted that they could charge the Profeſſors with, and there finding the Expreſſion of, Studying and Reading daily, they fixed upon this laſt Word, and obſtinately contended that nothing elſe was, or could be meant by it, than every Day in the Year; they likewiſe found Fault with the cuſtomary Hour of Reading, (two o'Clock) as unſeaſonable for them to attend, it falling at the Time of their Dinner. This was the Original and Progreſs of their Complaints, which they carried on farther, by uſing great Induſtry to get Hands to an Inſtrument, ſetting forth theſe Grievances, in order to be preſented to proper Authority to obtain Redreſs; and accordingly Petitions were delivered in to this Effect, both to the Court of Aldermen, and Grand Committee for Greſham Affairs.

THE Profeſſors proved, by ſufficient Authorities, That from the firſt Inſtitution, to the preſent Time of the Diſpute, theſe Lectures were read only in Term Times. The firſt Author mentioned for Proof hereof, was Dr. Gwinne, in his Orationes Duæ; he was, as is before obſerv'd, choſen Profeſſor of Phyſick at the firſt Election, and was directed to begin his Lectures in Trinity Term 1597. The ninth Lecture that he read is printed, and bears this Title, Prælectio nona, cum reſumerentur Lectiones poſt Natalitia. The ninth Lecture, read when the Time of Reading came on again after Chriſtmas. The Profeſſors obſerved, from this Citation, that Dr. Gwinne beginning his Lectures in Trinity Term 1597, and his ninth Lecture coming after Chriſtmas, in January, that is, in Hilary Term 1597-8, he could only have read in the Term Times: For juſt as in the then preſent Year 1706, ſo in that Year 1597, there would fall three Saturdays (which are the Phyſick Lecture Days) in Trinity Term, and five Saturdays in Michaelmas Term, ſo that he read eight Lectures only in 1597; there being juſt eight Saturdays within thoſe Terms, and no more; and conſequently the ninth Lecture muſt fall on the firſt Reading Time after Chriſtmas; that is, on the firſt Saturday in Hilary Term in 1597-8, exactly, as he ſays it did, in the Inſcription of his Lecture juſt now quoted. To this evident Proof the Profeſſors added the Citations from the other Parts of Dr. Gwinne's Book.

THE next Author the Profeſſors cited, was Mr. Stow, whoſe SURVEY was written in the Year 1598, the very Year after the firſt Inſtitution of theſe Lectures; and he ſays, Page 57, Line 32, of his firſt Edition, as he does alſo in the ſecond Edition, corrected and amended by himſelf, and publiſhed in the Year 1603, Page 76, Line 5; Theſe Lectures are read Daily, Sundays excepted, in the Term Time, by every one on his Day, &c. and from thence they inferred, That the Words to read Daily, in the Founder's Will, might be either underſtood in the Senſe of the Univerſities before-mentioned, or elſe in this of Mr. Stow, That each Lecturer ſhould read on his particular Day aſſigned him in the Week; that ſo the Auditors, who had a Mind to attend any particular Science, might know on what Day to come, and not be diſappointed.

THE next Author was Sir George Buck, in his Treatiſe concerning the three Univerſities of England, annexed to Stow's Chronicle, and dedicated to the Lord Chief Juſtice Coke, printed in the Year 1612, within fifteen Years of the Founding the Lectures; and he ſays, Page 980, Line 35. And theſe Lectures, viz. in Greſham College, muſt be read only in the Term Time.

THE

THE next Author mentioned, was the Editor of the third Edition of Stow, Anthony Monday, before cited, which he publiſhed in 1618, one and twenty Years after the Founding the Lectures, and he ſays, Page 123, Line 26, That their Lectures were read daily in the Term Times. The Profeſſors obſerved, That this Author had been ſix and twenty Years one of the City Servants, in ſundry Employments, had Encouragement from the whole Court of Aldermen, and Orders for the Peruſal of whatever Helps he wanted, and that this Work was by them approved when finiſhed, which coſt him twelve Years Time in compiling; that therefore, he neither wanted Means of Knowledge, nor refuſed Induſtry for the obtaining it.

THE next Author was Dr. Holdſworth, who was choſen Divinity Profeſſor in Greſham-College in 1630, thirty three Years after the firſt Inſtitution; and his Divinity Lectures were publiſhed in 1661, by Biſhop Pearſon. Dr. Holdſworth tells his Auditors, It was three whole Months ſince his laſt Reading. Again, That thoſe Lectures had been omitted for theſe three Months. Again, he concludes his Lecture with telling them, He ſhould not read till that Day three Weeks, becauſe the following Monday was a State Holiday, and the Monday after that, a Church Holiday. At the End of another Lecture, he ſays, He is ſorry he is forced to break off abruptly in his Diſcourſe, which muſt be the Work of the next Term. And again, he refers his Audience for the Remainder of the Argument to the next Term; and more to the ſame Purpoſe: And this Author continued Divinity Profeſſor for nine or ten Years, with the greateſt Applauſe. The next Author was Howell's Londinopolis, who publiſh'd his Work in 1657, ſixty Years after the firſt Inſtitution: And he ſays, Page 21, Line 29, Theſe Lectures are to be read every Day in the Week in Term Time. The Profeſſors were ready with Proof, that likewiſe ever ſince the Reſtoration, the Lectures were only read in the Term Time; and among other Inſtances of this Practice, they had the Example of the moſt celebrated Dr. Iſaac Barrow, who was choſen Geometry Profeſſor in Greſham-College in the Year 1662; being, at the ſame Time, Fellow of Trinity-College in Cambridge: All the while he continued Geometry Profeſſor in Greſham-College, he was Fellow of Trinity; and as he read his Lectures in Term Times in Greſham-College, ſo in the Vacation Times, he went down to Cambridge, and attended his Duty and Fellowſhip there: But this, and the reſt of their Proofs thereof, were not produced before the Committee, becauſe the Petitioners were willing to allow, that Termly Readings only had been the Cuſtom and Practice in Greſham-College, ever ſince the Reſtoration.

WHEN the Profeſſors had given in this Proof, they obſerved, that the Argument by them offered, was of the ſtrongeſt Nature, becauſe it proved that reading the Lectures (in Term Times only) was the Original Practice enjoyn'd by the firſt Truſtees, taken up by the firſt Profeſſors, and followed by their Succeſſors in all Times, that therefore this Practice could be no Corruption crept in by Degrees, either thro' the Sloth of the Profeſſors, or the Connivance of the Truſtees; but was founded in and continued by the full and free Approbation or Conſent of both. They argued farther, That the firſt Truſtees and Profeſſors could not poſſibly be ignorant of that Expreſſion in the Founder's Will, that ſay, The Profeſſors are to inhabit, ſtudy, and read Daily, becauſe that Part of the Will is, at all Elections, read to the Perſons elected, in the Preſence of the Electors, and if ſo, it was not conceiveable that the firſt Truſtees could underſtand the Word Daily, in the Senſe of the Petitioners, to mean every Day in the Year, ſince they were ſo deſirous of diſcharging their Conſciences faithfully, as their Letter before-mentioned ſhews them to be; it is hardly poſſible they could ſit down quiet and unconcerned, when they ſaw the firſt Profeſſors begin and continue to read only in Term Time, in direct and open Violation of the Founder's Will, much leſs could they ever have been brought to give their Direction, or even Conſent, that they ſhould do ſo, nor can it be believed, that, had the firſt Profeſſors thus underſtood the Word Daily to mean, they could ever have began and continued a Practice directly contrary to their Duty, unleſs they be ſuppoſed to have been Men of the moſt profligate and ſhameleſs Character poſſible, the very Reverſe of which they had, as is before ſeen of Dr. Gwinne, and might eaſily be proved of the other Six. In the Concluſion, the Profeſſors brought in the Books they cited, in order to ſubmit their Citations to Examinations, and then called on the Petitioners to ſhew ſo much as one Proof or Evidence to the contrary.

THE Petitioners, who had in their Plea and in their printed Papers aſſerted, that at the original Inſtitution, the Profeſſors read every Day in the Year, and amongſt theſe Profeſſors, which they aſſerted did thus read, had named Dr. Gwinne and Dr. Holdſworth, &c. and had, with all Aſſurance, ſaid, that their printed Works intimated as much (the direct contrary to which is true) and had farther laid down, that the Interruption of theſe every Day Readings was owing to the Civil War Time, to the great Sickneſs, or to the Fire of LONDON, thought fit no longer to inſiſt on theſe Pretences, but fell to vilify and depreciate the Characters of the Authors quoted. Mr. Stow, they ſaid, might eaſily be convicted of Falſhood, and miſtake even in what he writes concerning this Matter: His Authority was never admitted in any Cauſe or Court: He and the others were antiquated Authors. As for Dr. Holdſworth, he ſpoke in his own Cauſe, and might be convicted of Partiality, &c. and this laid the Profeſſors under a Neceſſity of doing a needleſs Work, of juſtifying the Reputation of Mr. Stow, which, till that Time, had never been queſtioned; and the rather becauſe one or two of the Committee ſpoke with Contempt of him, as an old, neglected, uſeleſs Author. The Profeſſors referred themſelves to Dr. Nicholſon, then Dean, and afterwards Biſhop of Carliſle, who gives the following Character of Mr. Stow and his Book, in his Hiſtorical Library, then printed in Octavo, but ſince, in 1714, in Folio. He ſays, Page 18, "John Stow wrote and publiſh'd "A Survey of LONDON.—— The whole is "collected out of our beſt Hiſtorians and moſt "authentick Records, and diſcovers a great deal "of Induſtry and Accuracy in the worthy and "honeſt Author." And again, he ſays, Page 72, "Induſtrious John Stow deſerves to be remembred with Honour: He was a Member of the "Merchant-Taylors Company in LONDON, "and a ſpecial Benefactor to that City, in inquiring after and preſerving its Antiquities and "Records. He travell'd thro' a good Part of "England in Search after the Manuſcript Hiſtorians, in the Libraries of our Cathedral "Churches, and was very exact and critical in "his Collections, and ſpent above forty Years in "theſe Studies. He always proteſted (and we "may take his honeſt Word for it) that he never "was ſway'd by Favour or Fear in any of his "Writings; but that he had impartially, to the "beſt of his Knowledge, delivered the Truth. "This good Opinion the greateſt of our Hiſtorians ſeem to have of him, ſince even Sir "Francis Bacon, and Mr. Cambden, (not to "mention others of leſs Repute) have boldly "taken ſeveral Things upon his ſingle Credit.

As

As to the next Author, Sir George Buck, quoted by them, he was not only a Man of Credit, but of Quality, being both one of the Gentlemen of the King's Privy Chamber, and alſo Maſter of the Revels: This his Work he delivered to the Lord Chief Juſtice Coke, and dedicated it to him, leaving the Manuſcript to be diſpoſed of at his Lordſhip's Pleaſure. The Lord Chief Juſtice was ſo well ſatisfied of his Integrity and his Ability, that he himſelf directed the Printing it, giving his Allowance for its Publication, and under his Hand giving his ſpecial Commendation and Approbation of it, as of a Work worthy the publick Light.

WHAT Character Mr. Monday's Work, which was the next Author quoted, deſerves, is mentioned before. The Profeſſors on this Head took Notice, how ſtrange a Thing it was to make the Antiquity of theſe Authors an Exception to their Teſtimony, becauſe their being old Authors gave their Evidence the greateſt Strength, ſince they wrote of Things within their own Knowledge, and of Times in or very near to which themſelves liv'd.

THE next Author, who was quoted by the Profeſſors, was Dr. Holdſworth, a Man of the ſtricteſt Virtue, and moſt unſullied Reputation; though, at Random, his Character was excepted againſt, as is ſaid before, by the Petitioners. He was, as the eminent Biſhop Pearſon tells us, the moſt celebrated Preacher of his Time, being Miniſter of St. Peter's Poor in Broadſtreet, to which Living he was preferred in 1623 or 1624. He was a moſt faithful Paſtor of his Pariſh, and a moſt conſcientious Man; inſomuch, that when the great Sickneſs happened in 1625, he refuſed to go into the Country, as moſt others did, but lived in his Pariſh, and conſtantly viſited the Sick, deſpiſing the Contagion, and preferring the Diſcharge of his Duty to the Safety of his Perſon. In the Year 1630, he was, without making any Intereſt, or uſing any Solicitation (ſo great was his Reputation) choſen Divinity Profeſſor in Greſham-College, of which he was a great Ornament nine or ten Years. He was a Perſon that ſo exactly adhered to his Duty, and ſo fearful of acting in the leaſt againſt his Conſcience, that in the Beginning of the Rebellion he was ſequeſtered, plundered, and impriſoned four Years in the Tower, after which Time he was releaſed; in every Part of his Life, being of an unblameable Carriage and a moſt holy Converſation. In ſhort, he was, as Biſhop Brownrig aſſures us, a moſt excellent Preacher, a moſt faithful Interpreter of Scripture, a Contemner of Riches, a moſt charitable Man, of ſtrict Morals, and one of a moſt holy Life. This was the Character of thoſe Men, whom the Petitioners repreſented as Men of no Weight, of no Principles, nay of Falſhood and Partiality.

FROM thus ſupporting the Characters of the Authors cited by them, the Profeſſors proceeded to juſtify themſelves, as to the other Parts of the Charge againſt them. As to the not reading on Holidays, they inſiſted on their ſuperior Obligation to attend their Duty at Church, as alſo on the perpetual Practice of the Univerſities, and of all their Predeceſſors, who never read Lectures on Holidays; an early Proof of which is found in Dr. Holdſworth, who ſays, as is before-mentioned, He ſhould not read till that Day three Weeks, becauſe the following Monday was a State Holiday, and the Monday after that, a Church Holiday. And in this Matter the Truſtees were ſo far ſatisfied, that in their Order, preſently to be mentioned, they did not comply with the Petitioners in this Point, in directing Lectures to be read on Holidays. As to the not reading in broken Weeks, the Profeſſors juſtified that from the Practice likewiſe of their Predeceſſors, and alſo produced Letters from both the Univerſities, proving, that the Divinity Profeſſor always opened the Term. As to the laſt Part of the Complaint, the Unreaſonableneſs of the Hours, the Profeſſors were indifferent whether they remained the ſame, or were altered.

AFTER both the Petitioners and Profeſſors were withdrawn, the Truſtees, after a long Debate, made an Order, dated October 4, 1706: The Preamble of which declares, That Application had been made by ſeveral Citizens and others, in relation to the Lectures at Greſham-College, ſetting forth, that the ſaid Lecturers did not duly perform their Readings in Term Time, for that if any Term did not begin on a Monday, that was taken for a broken Week, and no Lecture that Week; and in like Manner, if any Term did not end on a Saturday, that was taken for a broken Week, and no Lecture performed; whereby the Inhabitants of this City, and others, were much hindered of the Benefit which they might reap by the ſaid Lectures: Wherefore they do Order and Direct, That for the Future, thoſe Lectures ſhall be performed, by the ſeveral Profeſſors, on ſuch Days of the Week as they now read in their ſeveral Sciences, at four Terms in every Year, as followeth, viz. The firſt Term to begin the Monday before Michaelmas Term of the Common Law, and to end with that Term. The ſecond Term to begin the Monday before Hilary Term, and to end with that Term. The third Term to begin the Monday Se'n-night after Eaſter-Day, and to end with Eaſter Term. The fourth Term to begin the Monday before Trinity Term, and to continue for one whole Month, viz. eight and twenty Days: And farther, it is ordered by the Committee, That the ſaid Lecturers do begin to read their ſeveral Lectures at nine of the Clock in the Forenoon, and three in the Afternoon preciſely. This Order likewiſe ſets forth, that it was made after conſulting the Founder's Will, and Articles that were made ſoon after the Truſt came to the City and Company: The Profeſſors comply'd with this Order, with Reſpect to the broken Weeks and Hours of Reading, but finding the Order direct them to read out of the Term, contrary to all Cuſtom and Uſage, and this alſo by Virtue of ſuch Articles or Orders, as were never looked upon to have any legal Authority or Force, they went to Counſel, and were adviſed not to charge themſelves with any new Duties, nor ſubmit to the Authority of ſuch Articles, as they had good Reaſon to believe were never duly ſigned, or legally ratified, wherefore the greateſt Part of the Profeſſors drew up a Paper, and waited on Sir Thomas Rawlinſon, the Chairman of the Committee, with it, which was as follows: Reaſons why the Profeſſors have not, in all Points, complied with the Order of the Honourable Committee, dated October 4, 1706. Firſt, "We are, "at our being choſen into our reſpective Places, "directed to perform our Duty, according to "the Cuſtom and Practice of the Place. Secondly, "We are able to give unqueſtionable Proof, that "the Cuſtom has been, without any Interruption, "to read only in Term Time, and ſince it has "been ſo, we are adviſed to be very careful how "we charge ourſelves, or our Succeſſors with un-"neceſſary Burthens. Thirdly, We are inform-"ed, that the Ground upon which this Order to "read out of Term is founded, is taken from "ſome Articles which were never legally ratified, "or admitted, as legally ratified, either by the "then Truſtees or Profeſſors. We therefore, "that our Compliance with this Order might "not be looked upon as allowing of the Autho-"rity of thoſe Articles, and ſo ſubject us to "the reſt of them, which, when under Conſideration

" ſideration appeared unreaſonable, both to yours " and our Predeceſſors, have rejected it." The Profeſſors had made Application to obtain an Order to examine theſe Articles in the Original, in the Committee's Books, but could not obtain Leave ſufficiently to inſpect them; however, when they came to the Lord Mayor, with the afore-mentioned Reaſons, why they could not comply wholly with the late Order of the Truſtees, they offer'd likewiſe to give into the Committee their Exceptions to the Legality and Validity of theſe Articles or Orders, in Subſtance as follows:

Firſt, They had this to offer, namely, That none of their Predeceſſors ever acknowledged the Validity of theſe Articles, or owned the Obligation of them, becauſe they, from the Beginning, acted quite otherwiſe than theſe Articles direct. The Articles direct, that the Profeſſors ſhall read three Times in each Week, and that on three diſtinct Days in the Week; but it has been proved, that from the very Beginning, the Profeſſors never have read otherwiſe than twice in the Week, and that both Times on the ſame Day. Again, the Articles direct, that the Profeſſors ſhould live and diet at a common Table, to be kept at a common Charge, but the Profeſſors never had any ſuch common Table, as Dr. Gwinne ſays, in his afore-mentioned Book, where, ſpeaking of the Profeſſors living together, he ſays, They live not together ſo as to have Commons at one Table. And as their Manner of living together, was altogether different from what theſe Articles direct, ſo alſo was their Method of Reading their Lectures; for none of all the Profeſſors Lectures that have ever yet appeared in Print, have followed the Method directed by theſe Articles. The Articles ſay, that the Phyſick Profeſſor ſhall follow the Method of Fernelius, by Reading Phyſiology, then Pathology, and laſtly, Therapeutics, but Dr. Gwinne, the firſt Phyſick Lecturer, read upon the Aphoriſms of Hippocrates, and Dr. Winſton, who was choſen in 1616, eight Years after Dr. Gwinne, read Anatomical Lectures only. The ſame Difference may be ſeen between what theſe Articles direct the Divinity Profeſſor, and what Method Dr. Holdſworth follow'd in his Divinity Lectures, before quoted, and ſo between what the Articles direct the Geometry Profeſſor, and what Method Dr. Barrow and Dr. Hooke followed in their Lectures, now printed. From all which it is plain, that the Profeſſors altogether neglected the Direction of theſe Articles, or Orders, as well in the Method of their Reading, as in the Manner of their Living, and therefore could never believe them to have any obligatory Force, or be of any Authority whatſoever.

Secondly, The Profeſſors had this farther Conſideration to offer, That theſe Articles were ſo far from being legally ratified, that they were never duly conſider'd, being not ſo much as even conſiſtent with themſelves. For Inſtance, when they ſpeak of the Times of all the Profeſſors Readings in general, they make five Terms of Reading, but when they ſpeak of the particular Profeſſors Times of Reading, they make but four Terms of Reading; but farther, they enjoin what it is impoſſible the Profeſſors ſhould comply with, becauſe the Amount of their Incomes could never defray the Expence that their Profeſſorſhips muſt put them to, if the Directions of theſe Orders be comply'd with, ſince 50 l. a-piece is the whole of their Salaries, out of which it is impoſſible to ſupport themſelves, their private Servants, and likewiſe publick ones, for the Hall, the Kitchen and Cellar, and farther, for an hoſpitable Entertainment for Strangers; all which Expences theſe Articles direct, and beſides the Muſick Profeſſor's Proportion to this Charge, he muſt, according to theſe Orders, be ſingly at the Expence of Seventy-five publick Conſorts every Year, of Vocal or Inſtrumental Muſick, which if properly performed, would ſo far exceed the Salary of one Profeſſor, that it would hardly be ſupported by the Income of all ſeven. Again, a farther Proof, that theſe Articles are not Authoritative, might be taken from hence, that whereas the Profeſſors at every one of their Elections, have the Founder's Will, ſo much of it as concerns them, read over to them, to which they give their ſolemn Promiſe to conform themſelves, ſo if they were obliged to any Compliance with the Directions of theſe Articles, that Part of them that concerns the common Duties of all the Profeſſors, as well as what belongs to the particular Duty of each Profeſſor, would at leaſt be read to them, if not a Copy thereof be directed to be given them, at their Elections; but inſtead thereof, the Profeſſors, tho' they ſometimes apply'd to the Truſtees for Liberty, to inſpect them carefully, have never been able to obtain Leave for a diligent Examination of them, theſe Articles then to be ſure would never be kept from their Knowledge, if their Compliance with them was at all expected as Part of their Duty. But, laſtly, The Profeſſors were ready to appeal to the Truſtees, whether they had not (at a former Meeting ſome few Years before, at which were preſent many of the Truſtees, and the Profeſſors, living in 1706) themſelves diſowned the Authority of theſe Articles. The Truſtees, not many Years before, held a grand Committee within Greſham-College, in the Muſick Profeſſor's Lodgings, about the Affair of Re-building the College, at which Meeting, upon ſome Diſcourſe then ariſing, Part of theſe Articles were directed to be read, whereupon the Profeſſors, then preſent, asked of the Truſtees, whether theſe Articles had ever been ſigned by all the firſt Profeſſors, or whether they were legally ratified by the firſt Truſtees? To which the Truſtees anſwered, Not that they knew of, but ſaid, that they were produced as Papers that were very antient. And this was the Subſtance of what the Profeſſors had to except againſt theſe pretended Orders.

THE Reſult of all theſe Complaints and Hearings ended in a fair Juſtification of the Profeſſors. The Truſtees not long after made an Order, that the Profeſſors Salaries ſhould be conſtantly paid them one Year under another, without troubling the Committee from Time to Time for particular Orders. And in the Year 1719, upon the Profeſſors petitioning that the Year's Arrear, then remaining, might be diſcharged, the Truſtees, after ſome Debate, came to a Reſolution, that, tho' the Exchange brought them in Debt, yet that ſhould not tend to the Prejudice of the Profeſſors, but the Inconvenience thereof lie on the City, and Company of Mercers, wherefore they then order'd the immediate Payment of the ſaid Arrear, and that the future Payments ſhould be made regularly as they became due.

The ROYAL-SOCIETY.

THERE is a more modern College inſtituted for Experimental Philoſophy, called, The Royal-Society, founded alſo in the City of LONDON, and a great Ornament thereof. The Meeting of the Members of this Society uſed to be at Greſham-College, but is now in Crane-Court in Fleet-ſtreet.

THE Original of the Society was, about the Year 1650, at Oxford, and about the Year 1658, in LONDON, when divers learned and judicious Perſons, of different Profeſſions, uſed to have Meetings together, to conſider, diſcover, and take Account of Philoſophical Experiments, Obſervations, and Matters; to view and diſcourſe upon the Production and Rarities of Art and Nature; to conſider how they may be improved, and what to deduce from them for the Benefit of Mankind, and to make Record thereof for future Ages.

SINCE their firſt Inſtitution, they have made a great many very delightful and profitable Experiments, relating to Eclipſes, Meteors, Comets, and other Cœleſtial Phœnomena; likewiſe to Mines and Minerals; to Animals and Plants; to Earthquakes, Fiery Eruptions, Inundations, Mountains, Lakes, Tides, Currents, the Depth of the Sea, with Abundance of the like Works of Nature; they have alſo much advanced the Art of Navigation, ſo uſeful to us, and improved that of Architecture, Civil, Military, and Natural. They have alſo been very induſtrious in promoting the Planting of Trees, as well for Fruit as for Timber, and other Uſes, to the great Benefit of the Nation.

THEIR Experiments have been publiſhed from Time to Time, of which there are now 37 Volumes, under the Title of The Philoſophical Tranſactions; and likewiſe an Abridgment of them is publiſhed by Mr. John Lowthorp, and other Fellows of the Society, in ſix Volumes in Quarto.

AMONG the firſt Perſons that met, which was at Wadham-College in Oxford, at the Lodgings of Dr. Wilkins, late Biſhop of Cheſter, were Dr. Seth Ward, afterwards Biſhop of Salisbury; the Honourable Robert Boyle, Eſq; Sir William Petty, Dr. Wallis, Dr. Goddard, Dr. Willis, Dr. Bathurſt, Sir Chriſtopher Wren, and ſome others.

BY theſe Meetings for conſulting the Matters aforeſaid, they gained Applauſe, not only at home, but in foreign Parts, which augmented their Number, eſpecially about the Year 1658, at which Time they had a Meeting at Greſham-College; and the greateſt Part of them living in LONDON, they continued their Meetings at the ſaid College, until the Year 1660, being the Time of the Reſtoration of King Charles II. ſoon after which his Majeſty was ſo well pleaſed with the Deſign, that he granted them a Charter, bearing Date the 23d of April 1663, whereby they were made a Corporation, to conſiſt of a Preſident, of a Council of twenty, and of Fellows, as many as ſhould be thought worthy of Admiſſion, For promoting the Knowledge of natural Things, and uſeful Arts, by Experiments; wherein his Majeſty ſtiled himſelf the Founder and Patron, Sovereign and Companion of this Society, giving them Power to purchaſe Lands and Houſes; to have and uſe a common Seal, and Coat of Arms; to have two Secretaries; two, or more, Curators of Experiments; one, or more, Clerks; and two Servants at Mace. He likewiſe gave them Power to make Laws, Orders, and Conſtitutions amongſt themſelves; to have one, or more, Engravers and Printers, with Power to Print whatſoever they ſhall think good of their own Obſervations and Remarks; to take and anatomize dead Bodies, executed by Order of Law; to erect Colleges, &c.

THE Coat Armour granted to this Society by King Charles II. is Argent, on a Canton Gules, three Lions of England. The Supporters are two hunting Hounds, Emblems of Sagacity and Search, both Argent, and collar'd with Ducal Coronets, Or, Creſt, on a Helmet Proper, and a Coronet, as before; an Eagle Proper, ſupporting with his Right Foot, an Eſcutcheon as the Canton. The Motto:

Nullius in Verba.

UPON their firſt Meeting in LONDON, their Number was much increaſed; Henry Lord Viſcount Brounker, the Lord Brereton, Sir Paul Neal, John Evelyn, Eſq; Dr. Scarborough, Dr. Clark, and divers others, became Members of this Society, which continually augmented, ſo that at this Day, they are very conſiderable, according to the Liſt we ſhall give our Readers.

The Office of the ſeveral MEMBERS of this Society.

The Preſident.

THE Preſident is to call and diſſolve the Meetings; to propoſe the Matter whereon to conſult; to put Queſtions; to call for Experiments; to admit of Members that from Time to Time ſhall be received into the Society.

The Treaſurer.

THE Treaſurer receives and diſburſes all Monies.

The Secretary.

THE Secretary reads all Letters and Informations, Replies to all Addreſſes, or Letters from foreign Parts, or from others; is to take Notice of the Orders, and material Paſſages at the Meetings; regiſters all their Experiments and Concluſions; and publiſhes that which is ordered and allowed by the Society.

The Curators.

THE Curators, or Experimentors, are to receive the Directions of the Society, and at another Meeting to bring all to the Teſt, and the Society judgeth thereof; whereby the World may have the concurring Teſtimony of many Perſons, of undoubted Credit, for the Truth of whatſoever they publiſh.

Of the Election of MEMBERS into this Society.

THE Manner of electing Fellows, is, according to the Venetian Way, by Ballotting. At one Aſſembly the Candidate is propoſed, by ſome who knows him well; the next Meeting he may be put to the Scrutiny, for which the Candidate muſt have the major Number of twenty-one Suffrages, at the leaſt, and then at that, or the next Aſſembly, he may be introduced and ſolemnly admitted by the Preſident: At his Admiſſion, he ſubſcribes this following Promiſe:

" THAT he will endeavour to promote the " Good of the Royal-Society of LONDON, " for the Improvement of natural Knowledge.

AFTER this, he may at any Time free himſelf from this Obligation, only by ſignifying, under his Hand, to the Preſident, that he deſires to withdraw from the Society.

WHEN any one is admitted, he pays to the Treaſurer only 40 s. afterward 13 s. a Quarter, ſo long as he continues a Member; and this towards defraying ſome neceſſary Expences for making Experiments, &c.

THE Royal Society for Advancement of this noble Deſign, hath begun a Library, to conſiſt only of ſuch Authors as may be ſerviceable to their Deſign; towards which, the Lord Henry Howard, Earl Marſhal of England, was pleaſed to beſtow on the Society, his whole Library, then at Arundel-ſtreet in the Strand, (where this Society Society met for ſome Time after the Fire of LONDON) with a free Permiſſion of changing ſuch Books as were not proper for their Deſign; by which Means, and by other publick Gifts of Books, they will have a compleat Library of all that hath been publiſhed in antient and modern Languages, which either regard the Production of Nature, or the Effects of all moral Arts and Sciences.

The CURIOSITIES of the ROYAL-SOCIETY, which are now removed to their Houſe in Crane-Court, were kept in a Repoſitory in Greſham-College, which was the Gift of Daniel Colwell, Eſq; Dr. Nehemiah Grew has given the following Catalogue of them, in a Volume, intitled, Muſæum Regalis Societatis.

Several Human RARITIES.

I. AN Egyptian Mummy, given by Henry Duke of Norfolk, in Length five Feet and a half, defended with Thickneſſes of Linnen Cloth, three Degrees of Fineneſs; on the utmoſt Cover is laid a white Paint, the Thickneſs of an Egg-ſhell, whereon are drawn the Hieroglyphick Figures of Men, Women, and Birds, of ſeveral Colours, but with rude Shapes; ſo mean was the Art of Painting among the Egyptians heretofore.

THE inmoſt Cover is wrapped round the Head, Trunk, each Arm and Leg a-part, like Swathing-Bands; about twenty of the utmoſt of theſe Folds are lightly tinged, the others more fully with a blackiſh gummy Subſtance, and the Fleſh ſeems to be converted into black Roſin, which being held to the Flame of a Candle, is a little odorous and inflammable, and the Bones are of a black Colour, as if burnt: Whence it is probable, the Way of Embalming among the Egyptians was by boiling the Body in a long Cauldron, in ſome Kind of liquid Balſam; but 'tis likely a better Way would be by ſoaking the Body in ſome white Sort of Oil, and ſuch as will dry, made and kept ſo hot as to evaporate the watery Parts, and the Fleſh white and limber, which would be of good Uſe in the Buſineſs of Anatomy.

II. THE intire Skin of a Moor, tanned with the Hair on, every Part remaining.

III. ALL the principal Veins, Arteries, and Nerves, both of the Limbs and Viſcera; the Gift of John Evelyn, Eſq; who ſaw them taken out of the Body of a Man, and very curiouſly ſpread upon four large Tables. The Veins and Arteries are very well done, but the Nerves have been more truly repreſented by Dr. Lower.

IV. THE Skeleton of a Man, wherein the Number of Bones (about two Hundred and fifty) with their Dimenſions, Figure, and Articulations, are ovious; given by Thomas Povey, Eſq;

OF humane Bones are prepared the Spiritus Oleoſus, &c. which is of undoubted Uſe in Hyſterical Paſſions.

V. THE Skeleton of a Woman, of equal Height with the former; by comparing theſe together, it appears, that the Os Ilium is larger, and more outward, in the Female, for the more eaſy Labour. It is alſo half an Inch broader in the Female, for the better Suſtentation of the Fœtus in the Womb. The Vertebræ of the Loins are larger and ſtronger in the Male, being thereby better fitted for bearing Burthens; and as in the Male there are thirty two Teeth, and in the Female twenty eight, ſo the nether Chap in the Male is half an Inch broader than the Female, as being made to accommodate a bigger Muſcle for the Motion of thoſe Teeth, and the Angles ſubjected to the Os jugale, are half an Inch more diſtant; for that a Man, being fitted in other Reſpects to undergo more Labour, his Chaps alſo ſhould be the better made to eat the more: Alſo the Skull of the Male is much bigger, and ſo capable of more Brains.

VI. A Tooth taken out of the Teſticle of a Woman half an Inch long, pointed like the Eye-tooth of a Man; given by Dr. Tyſon.

VII. HAIR taken out of the Ovary of a Woman by the ſame Hand; it is Grey, and one Hair longer than the reſt, three Quarters of a Yard.

VIII. A Piece of Bone, voided by Sir William Throgmorton, with his Urine, one third of an Inch over.

IX. A Relation of a Bullet voided by the Penis with Urine.

X. A Stone voided by the Penis of a Man at Exeter, given by Dr. Cotton, of a Pyramidal Figure, in Length two Inches and a Quarter.

OF human Stones, either of the Kidnies or Bladder, are prepared the Chryſtalline Salt, and the Elixir Medicines.

Of QUADRUPEDES.

XI. THE Sloath: He comes near the Bear Kind, and breeds chiefly in Florida and Braſil; it is ſo ſlow of Motion, as to be three or four Days in climbing up and coming down a Tree; his Fore-Feet are almoſt double to thoſe of his Hinder.

XII. THE Foot of a white Greenland Bear, ſix Inches broad.

XIII. THE Trunk of a Tyger, near five Inches, or from the Goom to the Apex near two Inches, an Inch over, and two and a half about. This Tyger weighed 435 Pound.

XIV. A Fore Claw of the ſame Tyger, in Shape like a Cat's, an Inch broad, and two and a half long. Tygers abound in Mexico, Braſil, and Eaſt India.

XV. A Stone taken out of a Dog's Bladder, given by Seth, late Lord Biſhop of Sarum, above one Inch and an half thick, two and an half over, and above three Inches long.

XVI. THE great Tamandua, or Ant-Bear, feeds on Ants, he uſeth his Tail for a Cover, which he flings ſometimes over his whole Body, like a Squirrel.

XVII. THE Skull of a River-Horſe, or Hippopotamus. If we reſpect his Figure, he was more properly a River Ox. The ſame Animal, which in Job is called Behemoth. This Creature, full grown, is four Yards and a half long, two Yards high, and one Yard and a half broad, ſhort legg'd, cloven hoofed, having four Hoofs, a Tail like a Tortoiſe, which he twiſts like a Hog, Head almoſt like an Ox, his Chaps wide, his Eyes ſmall, his Fore-Teeth very great, ſome of them half a Foot round, and above three Quarters long; Rings of his Teeth are believed to be effectual againſt the Cramp. He is found in the River Nile, Bamboth, and Cango.

XVIII. THE Quills of a Porcupine, which on Occaſion the Creature can ſhoot at his purſuing Enemy, and erect at Pleaſure; bred in India, Africa, and Æthiopia.

XIX. THE Flying Squirrel, of a dark grey Colour, about five Inches and an half from his Noſe to his Buttock; this Creature, for a good Nut-tree, will paſs a River on the Bark of a Tree, erecting his Tail for a Sail.

XX. THE Horns of a Roe Deer of Greenland, about an Inch long, and half an Inch over. Deer in New Mexico are ſo big, that they breed them to draw as Oxen.

XXI. THE Rock Doe, a Creature of admirable Swiftneſs, and whoſe Horns grow ſometimes backward over their Buttocks.

XXII. THE

XXII. THE Horns of a Spaniſh Ram, in Length three Yards, and one Yard between the Tips.

XXIII. THE Tail of an Indian Cow, its Hair about one Yard and a Quarter long, near as ſoft and fine as Womens. This Cow is worſhipped by the People near the River Ganges.

XXIV. THE Skin of a young Rhinoceros. This Creature is near as big as an Elephant, but not ſo tall, he will lick a Man to Death by rakeing away the Fleſh to the Bone, with a rough and ſharp Tongue. They breed in India, about Bengall, and the River Ganges.

'Tis about one Yard and ſix Inches long, and above a Foot about in the ſmalleſt Part: The Elephant, to which it did belong, might be about five Yards high. Theſe Creatures are brought from Ceylan, Sumatra, Cochin, Siam, &c. but they breed moſt in Aracan and Pegu, thoſe in the firſt Place are moſt docile; the Æthiopians behind Moſambique eat them, and ſell their Teeth; the Indians uſe them to draw and ſhip their Goods. In Winter, when it begins to rain, they are mad, and ſo continue from April to September, chained to Trees, and then become tame again.

XXVI. A round hairy Ball, near three Inches over, taken out of the Stomach of a Calf, alſo ſeveral others.

XXVII. HALF a Fibrous Ball taken out of the Stomach of a Sheep. It conſiſts of moſt fine herby Threads, or Fibres, very compact, covered with a black, ſhining and thin Cuticle; a Piece thereof fired, burns like Match-cord, always to Aſhes. The hair Balls are ſuppoſed to be made by the Motion of the Stomach, as Wool is compacted, by the Hand in making a Hat.

XXVIII. Several Sea and Land Tortoiſe-Shells. The Difference is, that the Sea Tortoiſe, has a more rude and ſofter Shell, and the Feet of him more like the Fins of a Fiſh, as proper to ſwim with, alſo in Bulk; ſome on the Brazilian Shore are ſufficient to dine 80 Men, and ſo great in the Iſland Cuba as to creep along with five Men on their Backs; he ſquirts the Water out of his Noſtrils like a Dolphin. In Generation the Embraces of the Male and Female, are ſaid to continue a Lunary Month. They are catch'd by being turned on their Backs when they come to the Shore as they lie; they will ſometimes fetch deep Sighs, and ſhed abundance of Tears.

XXIX. THE Heart of a Sea Tortoiſe, about as big as a Lamb's.

XXX. THE Pizzle of a Sea Tortoiſe; 'tis fourteen Inches long, and two and an half in Circumference, in Subſtance like a Bull's. Great Efficacy is attributed to it, in curing Fits of the Stone.

very numerouſly in both the Indies, and fly in great Flocks in Barbados.

XLVIII. The Bill of a Bird, called, in Braſil, Coa, in Shape and Bulk like a Parroqueet: He feeds on all Kind of venomous Things, but is himſelf a Cordial.

XLIX. A young Linnet, preſerved in rectified Spirits of Wine ſeventeen Years; given by the Honourable Robert Boyle, the firſt Inventor of that Way of preſerving Animals.

L. The Head of the horned Crow, or Rhinoceros Bird, and the Beak, which is a precious Antidote againſt all Manner of Poiſon.

LI. The Leg of a monſtrous Bird, half a Foot long, two Inches and a Quarter about, and hath five Toes, and great black Spurs.

LII. Two Heads of the Groſsbeak; his Beak is ſo ſtrong, that he can crack an Olive Stone.

LIII. A Humming-Bird, from the Top of his Breaſt to the End of his Tail, two Inches; a Bird of radiant Colours: This Bird and Neſt is ſaid to weigh but twelve Grains; his Feathers, ſet in Gold, ſell at a great Rate.

Water-Fowls.

LIV. The Jabirus's Head; he is bigger than a Swan; the Bill is above a Foot and a half long, his Beak bending upward.

LV. The Horn of the Unicorn-Bird; he is headed and footed like a Dunghill-Cock, tailed like a Gooſe, with a Horn on his Forehead, ſomewhat as the Unicorn is pictur'd; his Spur grows on the Fore-Joint of the Wing.

LVI. The Head of a Shoveler; he is like a Hern, only his Bill is flat like a Shovel; he feeds on Shell-Fiſh, wherewith having his Crop full, he lets them lie warm there till they open, and then diſgorging, picks the Meat out of the Shell.

LVII. The Sea-Curlew, whoſe Colours ſo alter, that he is at firſt Black, then Aſh-coloured, next White, after that Scarlet, and laſt Crimſon, which grows the richer the longer he lives.

The Palmipedes, or Web-footed Birds.

LVIII. The Phœnicopter; there are many of them in Peru, and in Winter in France; his lower Beak is longeſt, the Tongue was a delicious Morſel among the Romans.

LIX. The Loon; his Legs are broad and flat, his Claws like a Man's Nail, he is as big as a Gooſe; they breed in Farra and other Scotch Iſlands.

LX. A Shag's Foot; he is a little bigger than a tame Drake; he and the Cormorant are the only Palmipedes that ſit and build in Trees.

LXI. The Pelican; which makes a Noiſe like an Aſs; from the End of its Bill to its Rump, an Ell long, tho' the Trunk of its Body is not a Foot; its Crop extends to the End of its Bill, and, 'tis probable, that the Meat herein warmed, is partly diſgorged by the Female to feed her Young, which might give Occaſion to the Fiction of her feeding her Young with her own Blood.

LXII. The Soland-Gooſe, about the Bigneſs of ours, but larger Wings; ſhe is ſaid to find out the moſt agreeable Fiſh to carry to her Young, by ſwallowing and diſgorging ſeveral. Out of the Fat of this Bird the Scots make an Oil for the Gout; their Young are a great Dainty.

LXIII. The Penguin; his Wings are ſo ſhort he cannot fly, but ſwims faſt; they work themſelves, as the Conies, deep Burrows by the Sea-ſide.

LXIV. The Puffin; when they fight, they will hold ſo hard by their Bills, as to break one another's Necks; what they eat in the Day they diſgorge a good Part of it in the Night, into the Mouths of their Pullen.

LXV. The Tropick-Bird, ſo called, becauſe never to be ſeen but between the Tropicks.

Eggs, and Neſts of Birds.

LXVI. Oſtrich Eggs, about five Inches and a half Diameter.

LXVII. That of a Caſſowary, a perfect Oval, at both Ends alike; Diameter about three Inches and a half.

LXVIII. The Egg of a Red-ſhank, acutely Conical, as big as a Rook's.

LXIX. The Egg of a Swan, with another within it; given by Sir Thomas Brown of Norwich, who has obſerved the like in Hens and Turkies. It is obſerved, that Nature is ſo intent on finiſhing her Work, that ſhe is oftner known to over than underdo it, as you may find twenty Eggs with two Yelks, or twenty Animals with two Heads, for one that has none.

WE think it not improper to take Notice in this Place, as others have done, of which had great Honour while it continued; but is now extinct.

IT was begun in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, by ſeveral Perſons of Honour and Learning, and was called the Society, or College of Antiquaries, of which Dr. Gibſon, the preſent Biſhop of LONDON, gives ſome Account in his Life of the learned Camden, who was one of the Society.

THEY met one Day in the Week at Darby-Houſe, where the Heralds Office was, and ſtill is kept; and their Buſineſs was to confer together concerning the Antiquities of this Land; and at each Meeting two Queſtions were propounded to be the next Week diſcuſſed, each ſhewing their Opinions of them; and that which ſeemed moſt material, was, by one appointed for that Purpoſe, entered into a Book, that it might be of Uſe afterwards, and remain to Poſterity. This Society increaſed daily, many Perſons, both learned and noble, joyning themſelves as Members thereof, but at length it flagged, and ſo was diſcontinued for twenty Years; but was revived again, by divers ingenious Gentlemen, in the Year 1614. Some of the Members were Sir James Ley, Knt. Attorney of the Court of Wards, afterwards Earl of Marleburgh, and Lord Treaſurer; Sir Robert Cotton, Knt. and Baronet; Sir John Davies, King James's Attorney for Ireland; Sir Richard St. George, then Norroy; Mr. Hackwel, the Queen's Sollicitor; Mr. Camden, Clarencieux; Sir Henry Spelman, Knt. and ſome others, whereof the two laſt were of the original Foundation.

THESE prudently began this Society, by drawing up ſome Rules of Government and Limitations to be obſerved among them; whereof this was one, That for avoiding Offence, they would meddle neither with Matters of State, nor Religion. At one of theſe Meetings they agreed upon two Queſtions, according to their former propounded Method, one whereof was touching the Original of the Terms, of which Sir Henry Spelman ſaith, That it being obſcure, and generally miſtaken, he took ſome Pains about it. But before the next Meeting, underſtanding the King took ſome Diſlike to the Society, and being informed, that they had reſolved to decline all Matters of State (which very Caution might have given the King ſome Jealouſy) they forbore to meet any more; and ſo this brave Society ſunk: But ſome Benefit of it remained; namely, what that learned Knight had prepared concerning the Hiſtory of our Terms. It remained in MS. in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; ſince printed, tho' not correct.

TO this Society of Antiquaries, Camden refers himſelf, when Brookeſmouth, York Herald, made Exceptions to ſeveral Genealogies of Noblemen, in his Britannia, as falſe, in a Treatiſe of his, printed Anno 1599, called, A Diſcovery of Errors, &c. In Anſwer to which, that learned and modeſt Man vindicates himſelf, in a few Sheets at the End of the Edition of his Britannia, Anno 1600, from the Calumnies of that Herald, and at laſt refers the Accounts he had given of thoſe ancient Pedigrees excepted againſt, either to the Earl Marſhal, or to the College of Heralds, or to the College of Antiquaries: Qui ſtatis Temporibus conveniunt, & de rebus antiquis conferunt: Quorum plerique etiam in Genealogiis ſunt exercitati: i. e. "Who at ſet Times "meet, and confer concerning Antiquities, di-"vers of whom are skilled in Genealogies.

SION COLLEGE.

THIS College is ſituated near the North-Eaſt Angle of Philip-Lane, by London-Wall, near Cripplegate, adjoining to St. Alphage Church: It was anciently a Houſe of Nuns, afterwards, Anno 1329, an Hoſpital was founded here by William Elſing, Mercer, for 100 blind Men, and called Elſing Spittle; the ſame Perſon, in the Year 1332, founded here a Priory for Canons Regular, which was ſurrender'd to Henry VIII. Anno 1530, and about 100 Years after, the Rev. Dr. White, Reſidentary of St. Paul, and Vicar of St. Dunſtan's in the Weſt, founded the preſent College and Hoſpital.

IT conſiſts of a handſome Hall, the Preſident's Lodgings, with Chambers for Students, and a ſpacious Library. Over the outer Door-Caſe, toward London-Wall, which is adorned with two Columns, their Entablature and pitch'd Pediment, of the Tuſcan Order, is this Inſcription, in Letters of Gold.

THIS College was purchaſed, at the Charge of about 3000 l. for the Uſe of the Clergy of LONDON, by the Executors of Dr. White, before-mentioned. He gave alſo to the ſaid College and Alms-Houſes for 20 poor People, viz. 10 Men, and 10 Women, 160 l. per Annum for ever, of which 120 l. per Annum is for the Maintenance of the Alms-People, and 40 l. per Ann. to bear the Charges of the Foundation; and for four Dinners for the Clergy, who are to have four Latin Sermons in the Year, one every Quarter; and upon theſe Days are to dine together in the College.

IN the Year 1631, the 6th of Charles I. the Clergy of LONDON were incorporated under the Great Seal of England: By which all the Rectors Rectors, Vicars, Lecturers and Curates are conſtituted Fellows of this College, which is governed by the Preſident, two Deans, and four Aſſiſtants, who are yearly elected every third Tueſday after Eaſter, when there is an Election Sermon preached at the Church of St. Alphage.

The FOUNDATION.

THE Will of the Founder, Dr. Thomas White, bore Date, Anno 1623; he made two Executors, Mr. John Simſon, Rector of St. Olave's Hart-Street, in LONDON, who died 1633, and John Keeling of the Inner-Temple, Eſq; It was ſeveral Years before all Things were adjuſted and a Place found out and appointed for the Situation of this intended College.

Anno 1627, the Place on which the College now ſtands was purchaſed: It was a religious Houſe, as is before-mentioned, and was founded to the Honour of the Virgin Mary, for one Maſter and four Secular Prieſts; afterwards ſettled on Auguſtin Fryars, Anno 1340. Upon the Diſſolution, 31 Henry VIII. it was granted to John Williams, Eſq; (afterwards Lord Thame) reſerving a Quit-Rent to the Crown of 1 l. 17 s. 2 d. per Ann. His only Daughter Margery was married to Henry Norris, who in the 5th of Queen Elizabeth, conveyed it to Sir Rowland Havard, Alderman of LONDON for 700 l. and afterward Sir John Havard, Son of Sir Rowland, ſold it to Robert Parkhurſt, except the aboveſaid Quit-Rent, and 4 l. per Annum for ever, left by his Father to the Poor of St. Alphage, to be diſtributed in Bread. Parkhurſt, 3 Car. I. ſold it to the Executors of Dr. White, who, in Purſuance of their Truſt, conveyed it to the Preſident and Fellows of Sion College.

AFTER their being incorporated, the Governors and Clergy being ſummoned, Anno 1632, agreed upon a Common Seal, which had round it Sigillum Collegii de Sion Londini; and upon it the Good Samaritan, with this Inſcription, Vade & fac ſimiliter. St. Luc. 10. 37.

THE Biſhop of London is Viſitor; but no Biſhop ever viſited it till July the 16th 1695, when Dr. Compton, Biſhop of LONDON viſited it.

The ALMS-HOUSE

conſiſts of twenty diſtinct Rooms for ten Men within the College, and ten Women without. They are to be nominated, four by the City of Briſtol, where Dr. White was born; eight by the Merchant-Taylors Company; ſix by the Pariſh of St. Dunſtan's, where he was Miniſter 49 Years; and two by St. Gregory's Pariſh, where he had lived about twenty Years; except any of the Kindred of either of his Wives appeared, who were firſt to be conſidered, not exceeding four at a Time. All which are to give Security, at their Admiſſion, that they be no Charge to the College, nor the Pariſh of St. Alphage. The College appoints one to take Care of them; to diſtribute the Charity, and to eject in Caſe of Delinquency.

BESIDES the Munificence of the Founder, one Mr. Brewer, by his laſt Will, made in the Year 1684, gave them a Farm in Hertfordſhire. They are paid Quarterly by the College: Formerly their Allowance amounted to 6 l. per Annum each, but this is ſomewhat abated by the Value of Rents being ſunk, as one Manor in the Hundreds of Eſſex, from 120 l. per Ann. to 70 l. per Ann.

The LIBRARY.

This was not appointed by the Founder, but was erected, by Mr. Simpſon, one of his Executors, at his own proper Coſt and Charges. It is a ſpacious Room 121 Feet in Length, and 30 Feet broad, furniſhed with Wainſcot Stalls, Desks, Seats, and other neceſſary and uſeful Ornaments. It contains Books on the following Subjects, each Claſs marked, and the Title of the Subjects which the Books therein conſiſt of, are;

The BOOKS in this LIBRARY were given by ſeveral Benefactors, the chief of which were as follow:

Rebecca, Lady Romney, Widow to Sir William Romney, late Alderman of LONDON, in the Year 1630, gave 100 l.

Mr. William Gonnell, late Citizen and Girdler, and Merchant-Adventurer of LONDON, gave, by his Will, 100 l. and Mr. John Greennough, late Citizen and Woolman of LONDON, gave 50 l. both in the Year 1631.

Richard Watſon, D. D. of St. Mary Aldermary, was likewiſe a Benefactor, in the Year 1632; as was John Harper, Treaſurer of Chriſt's Hoſpital, in the Year 1633. The ſame Year Mr. Robert Parkhurſt, Citizen and Alderman of LONDON, gave 50 l.

Sir Paul Pindar, Sir John Wolſtenholm, Sir Abraham Dawes, Sir John Jacob, Knights, and John Harriſon, Eſq; chief Farmers of his Majeſty's general Cuſtoms, gave 100 l. Anno 1635.

THE firſt of theſe, viz. Sir Paul Pindar, gave divers Manuſcripts.

BOOKS were likewiſe given by Henry Fetherſton, Michael Spark, John Day, Stationers, and divers City Miniſters, whoſe Names are gratefully preſerved in a large Vellum Book in the College, given by the aforeſaid Mr. Simpſon, where the Names of the Benefactors, with their ſeveral Gifts, are recorded.

THIS Library was alſo much augmented by the Library of the Cathedral of St. Paul's, which was carried to Camden-Houſe, and thence brought to the College, Anno 1647.

BUT in the Year 1666, the diſmal Fire, which conſumed this famous City, burnt alſo this College, with the Library, and a third Part of the Books, as alſo the Hoſpital for twenty poor People, many convenient Chambers for Students, beſides thoſe that were reſerved for the Meeting of the Governors and Fellows, and for the Clerks and Library-Keeper to dwell in; the whole Fabrick, at a moderate Eſtimate, being worth 4000 l. There were alſo loſt the Rents of ſeveral Chambers within, and certain Tenements without the College, to the Value of 106 l. 6 s. per Annum.

BENEFACTORS ſince the Fire were in the Year 1667, Sir John Shaw, Sir John Wolſtenholm, Sir Robert Vyner, Sir Edmond Turner, Knights and Aldermen, Edward Backwel, and Francis Millington, Eſqs; chief Farmers of his Majeſty's general Cuſtoms, who gave 300 l. Griffith Owen, Citizen and Brewer, 100 l. Edward Lord Biſhop of Norwich; Dr. William Sancroft, Dean of St. Paul's, afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Dr. Robert Pory, Reſidentiary of St. Paul's; Dr. Edward Stillingfleet, Reſidentiary of St. Paul's; Dr. Simon Patrick, Rector of Covent-Garden; Dr. John Lake, Rector of St. Botolph Biſhopſgate; Dr. William Bell, Vicar of St. Sepulchre's, and divers other Reverend Divines of the City.

IN the Year 1670, Daniel Mills, D. D. Rector of St. Olave's Hart-ſtreet, Preſident this Year, gave 40 l. He alſo cauſed to be ſet up nineteen compleat Stalls, or Desks, and three half ones, wherein Books are placed for publick Uſes: He wainſcotted the upper End of the Library, and ſet up a Repoſitory for Books, wherein now ſtandeth the great Bible of France, in many learned Languages, and whereon is placed the large Regiſtry of Benefactors: He alſo, by himſelf, and Procurement of others, was very beneficial in re-building of the College and Library.

THIS Library was alſo enlarged by the Jeſuits Books that were ſeized Anno 1679; and, at the Motion of the Governor, what were not before embezzelled were granted by King Charles II. to the College, as alſo by the Benefaction of the Lord Barkley, who gave half his Uncle Cook's Books to this Library, and promiſed the other half at his Death. Many others gave Books, whoſe Names are inſerted in the Catalogue of the Benefactors, and ſet down according to Order, in every Book they gave. Mr. Brewer's Name muſt not be forgotten, tho' his good Intention ſucceeded not, who left his Books to the Library, but his Executors pretended there were not Aſſets ſufficient to ſatisfy his Debts. Mr. Wynn, Citizen and Dyer, gave 100 l. the Intereſt to be laid out Yearly in Books. Mr. Calſe 20 l. per Annum, for the ſame Uſe, payable by the Leatherſellers Company.

THIS Library is to be ſurvey'd twice a Year; and had, at firſt, a Library-Keeper, an Under Library-Keeper, and an Oſtiary; now one ſerves for all, who is the Reverend Mr. William Reading. This Gentleman, with a great deal of Care and Induſtry, made a Catalogue of the Books, which he printed by Subſcription in the Year 1721, under the following Title:

Bibliothecæ Cleri Londinenſis in Collegio Sionenſi Catalogus, duplici forma concinnatus. Pars prior exhibet Libros juxta ordinem Scriniorum diſtributos, & ad proprias Claſſes redactos. Pars altera omnium auctorum nomina, & rerum præcipuarum capita, ordine Alphabetico complectitur. Auctore GULIELMO READING, Bibliothecario.

WHICH Work was recommended to the Publick, by the under-written Certificate, ſigned by three of the Governors, and the Regiſter.

At a Court at Sion College, Monday, November 6, 1721.

"WHEREAS Mr. Reading, Keeper of "the publick Library in Sion College, "has, purſuant to an Order of former "Governors of this College, beſtowed very much "Time and Pains in preparing for the Preſs, a "double Catalogue of all the Books contained "in the ſaid Library, anſwerable to the Title "herein above recited: And whereas, by Reaſon "of the Smallneſs of his Salary, and a heavy "Debt, which has lain upon the College ever "ſince the Re-building of it after the Fire of "LONDON, there is no poſſible Way for "the Library-Keeper to print his Catalogue, "and get ſomething for his laborious Work, "(which by the Eſtimate of a skilful Perſon, "will make a Book of two Guineas Price in "Sheets) but by the Aſſiſtance of about two "hundred Subſcribers, advancing a Guinea a-"piece. We the preſent Governors of Sion "College, do very heartily recommend this Un-"dertaking to all the Clergy and Gentry, who "may have Occaſion for it, being perſuaded, that "it will be uſeful, not only in the Library, "for readily finding the Books there, but like-"wiſe in the Studies of all Lovers of Learning, "for their Information of many excellent Au-"thors, which are here to be met with, upon "the moſt important Subjects.

William Strengfellow, Preſident.
Richard Sear, } Aſſiſtants.
Edward Waddington. }
Thomas Sheppard, Regiſter.

THIS whole College being conſumed by the Fire, the Re-building of the Alms-Houſe, and the Library, coſt above 1300 l. the Hall, and all the other Buildings coſt above 2000 l. more, as was computed in the Year 1688. The Wainſcotting of the Hall coſt 140 l. and as for the Chambers of the Students, which before the Fire were wholly for ſuch, no Women being then permitted to inhabit there, and amounted to a conſiderable Revenue to the College of about 54 l. per Ann. the Ground was let out to build upon at Ground-Rents.

The

CHELSEA COLLEGE.

BESIDES Sion College, there was another College for Divines, ſituated in a Place adjacent to the Cities of LONDON and Weſtminſter, called Chelſea College.

IT was built on a Piece of Ground in the Pariſh of Chelſea, called Thame-Shot, containing about ſix Acres, and founded about the Beginning of King James I's Reign; endowed liberally, but not ſufficiently, by Dr. Matthew Sutcliff, Dean of Exeter, for a Provoſt and Fellows, who were to devote themſelves to Polemical Divinity, to vindicate the Reformation of Religion, from Time to Time, againſt all Popiſh Writers. In this College alſo were to be maintained two Hiſtorians, to record and publiſh all Matters worthy of Remark in this Church and State. Dr. Sutcliff, the worthy Founder, who had earneſtly employed his Pen, in Behalf of Religion, againſt Parſons the Jeſuit, did, in his Life-time, ſettle four Farms in Devonſhire, on this College, to the Value of 300 l. per Annum, and upon his Death, by Will, dated November 1, 1628, bequeathed unto Dr. Prideaux, and Dr. Clifford, as Feoffees in Truſt, the Benefit of an Extent on a Statute of 4000 l. acknowledged by Sir Lewis Steukley.

KING James I. approved of this Deſign, and, when the Building began, laid the firſt Stone himſelf, and gave all the Timber requiſite to it, to be fetched out of Windſor Foreſt. Mr. A. Monday, in his Edition of Stow's Survey, gives the following Account of this College:

"NOT far from Weſtminſter, by the River, "there is erected a goodly Building, not yet "finiſhed, for Students in Divinity, commonly "known by the Name of Chelſea College, whereof "I thought fit to make mention, becauſe I find "an Act of Parliament, made in the ſeventh "Year of King James I. in the Behalf of the "ſame College; as alſo a Declaration publiſhed "by Authority, in the Year 1616, containing "the Reaſons that moved his Majeſty and the "State to erect the ſame; which here followeth:

"WHEREAS his Majeſty, of his moſt "Royal and Zealous Care for the Defence "of true Religion, now eſtabliſhed within this "Realm of England, and for the Refuting of "Errors and Hereſies repugnant unto the ſame, "hath been graciouſly pleaſed, by his Letters "Patents under the Great Seal of England, to "Found a College at Chelſea, near LONDON, "and therein to Place certain learned Divines; "and to Incorporate the ſame by the Name of, "The Provoſt and Fellows of the College of King "James in Chelſea, near LONDON, of the "Foundation of the ſame James King of Eng-"land; and hath of his moſt gracious Bounty "and Goodneſs, not only endowed the ſame "with certain Lands, Privileges, and Immuni-"ties; but hath alſo, for their further Mainte-"nance and Suſtentation, given unto them a Ca-"pacity and Ability, to receive and take from "his Majeſty, or any of his loving Subjects, any "Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Gifts, "Benefit, and Profits whatſoever, not exceeding "in the whole, the Yearly Value of three thou-"ſand Pounds, as in and by the ſaid Letters Pa-"tents doth more at large appear. Cap. 9.*

The following is a brief DECLARATION of the Reaſons that moved his Majeſty and the State to erect a College of Divines, and other learned Men at CHELSEA.

" UNDERSTANDING by Experi- " ence, that want of Information hath " hinder'd Mens Devotion in contri- " buting toward the Erection and Donation of " Chelſea College, we have thought it very fit, " together with his Majeſty's Letters, ſeconded " by the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to de- " clare the Reaſons that cauſed this Work to be " undertaken; and to add ſuch Motives, as we " have ſuppoſed may be moſt effectual to give " Satisfaction to his Majeſty's Deſire, and Per- " fection to this Honourable Deſign.

" Firſt, It was conſidered, That the Pope's " Agents travelled by Sea and Land, wrote Books " in Favour of their Faction, deviſed Lies and " Slanders, to bring Religion and the Profeſſors " thereof into Hatred, and not ſparing any ſtand- " ing in their Way, by Falſhood and Treachery " oppugned Kings and Princes, that could not en- " dure the Pope's Tyrannical Government. And " for this End, Men of ready Wits, good Speech, " long Experience, and competent Learning, " have been maintained in Colleges, furniſhed " with Books, holpen with Counſel and Direc- " tions, bound with Laws and Oaths, to uphold " the Papal Hierarchy and Hereſy; and, which " moveth much, encouraged with great Promiſes, " and large Rewards.

" WHEREUNTO, albeit, private Men, piouſly " affected, have from Time to Time oppoſed them-

" themſelves; yet becauſe they wanted Encou" ragement to undertake ſo great a Labour, Counſel
" of their Antients to direct them, Books and " Libraries to inſtruct them, Forms of proceed-
" ing to keep them in Compaſs, and Rewards
" to maintain them, thoſe excepted that are " due for Eccleſiaſtical Cures: It was further
" adviſed, That to make a ſufficient Defence for
" the Truth of Religion, and Honour of the " State, and a ſtrong and continual Oppoſition
" againſt the continued Lies, Slanders, Errors,
" Hereſies, Sects, Idolatries, and Blaſphemies
" of our Adverſaries, it was neceſſary to unite
" our Forces, and to appoint ſpecial Men, that " without other Diſtraction might attend the Cauſe
" of Religion and the State, being furniſhed
" with Directions, Inſtructions, Counſel, Books,
" Preſſes, competent Maintenance, and other
" Neceſſaries.

" THIS then was the Reaſon why this Col" lege, by his Majeſty and the State, was firſt
" deſigned, and a Corporation granted with " large Privileges, viz. That a ſelect Number
" of Divines, and others, ſhould be gathered to" gether into one Body, and united with one
" Form of Laws, and there maintained, who,
" being furniſhed with Books, and directed by " Men of Experience and Action, might always " be ready to maintain our Chriſtian Faith, to
" anſwer the Adverſaries Calumniations, as well
" againſt Religion as the State; to defend the " Majeſty of Kings and Princes againſt the " Uſurpation of Popes; the Liberty of Chri-
" ſtians againſt the Yoke of Superſtition; to
" ſupply the Defect of Teaching, where Appro" priations have devoured the Miniſtry; by " Teaching and Conference, to convince the " obſtinate Papiſt and Atheiſt, and by all lawful " Means to maintain Truth and diſcover Falſe-
" hood.

" THIS is the College commended by his
" Majeſty, and intended by the State, and eaſy
" to be perfected, if it pleaſe all true Chriſtians
" to further it with their Help and Favour, ac" cording to ſome Proportion of their Means.

HIS Majeſty's Letters, directed to my Lord of Canterbury, were in theſe Words:

Right Truſty, and well-beloved Counſellor, We Greet you well.

" WHEREAS the Enemies of the Goſ-
" pel have ever been forward to write
" and publiſh Books for confirming
" erroneous Doctrine, and impugning the Truth;
" and now of late ſeem more careful than before,
" to ſend daily into our Realm ſuch their Wri-
" tings, whereby our loving Subjects, tho' other-
" wiſe well diſpoſed, might be ſeduced, unleſs
" ſome Remedy thereof ſhould be provided: We,
" by the Advice of our Council, have lately
" granted a Corporation, and given our Allow" ance for erecting a College at Chelſea, for " learned Divines to be employed to write, as
" Occaſion ſhall require, for maintaining the " Religion profeſſed in our Kingdoms, and con-
" futing the Impugners thereof. Whereupon,
" Dr. Sutcliff deſigned Provoſt of the ſaid Col" lege, hath now humbly ſignified unto Us,
" That upon divers Promiſes of Help and Aſſiſt-
" ance towards Erecting and Endowing the ſaid
" College, he hath, at his own Charge, begun,
" and well proceeded in the Building, as doth
" ſufficiently appear, by a good Part thereof al" ready ſet up in the Place appointed for the " ſame. We therefore being willing to favour
" and further ſo religious a Work, will and re" quire you to write your Letters to the Biſhops
" of your Province, ſignifying unto them in our " Name, That our Pleaſure is, they deal with
" the Clergy, and other of their Dioceſe, to " give their charitable Benevolence for the per-
" fecting of this good Work, ſo well begun:
" And for the better Performance of our Deſire,
" We have given Orders to the ſaid Provoſts, and " his Aſſociates, to attend you and others, unto
" whom it may appertain, and to certify Us,
" from Time to Time, of their Proceedings.
" Thetford, the 5th of May, 1616.

THESE Letters the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſent Abroad to the Biſhops of his Province, and ſeconded them in theſe Terms:

" NOW, becauſe it is ſo Pious and Religious
" a Work, conducing both to God's Glory,
" and the ſaving of many a Soul within this " Kingdom, I cannot but wiſh, that all devout
" and well-affected Perſons ſhould, by your ſelf
" and the Preachers in your Dioceſe, as well
" publickly as otherwiſe, be excited to contri" bute, in ſome meaſure, to ſo holy an Intend-
" ment now well begun. And altho' theſe and " the like Motions have been frequent in theſe
" latter Times, yet let not thoſe whom God
" hath bleſſed with any Wealth, be weary of " well-doing; that it may not be ſaid, that the " idolatrous and ſuperſtitious Papiſts be more
" forward to advance their Falſhoods, than we " are to maintain God's Truth. Whatſoever is " collected, I pray your Lordſhip may be care" fully brought unto me; partly that it paſs not " through any deſrauding Hand, and partly that " his Majeſty may be acquainted what is done in " this Behalf.

Your LORDSHIP's

very Loving Brother,

G. CANTERB.

THE like Letters were written to the Lord Chancellor, and the Lord Mayor of LONDON.

NOTWITHSTANDING all the Pains and Endeavours that were taken, and the Encouragement given to bring this good Work to Perfection, there was only one Range of Building erected, and that hardly finiſhed, which coſt 3000 l. as Mr. Fuller, in his Church Hiſtory, ſaith he was informed. This was begun and done chiefly by Dr. Sutcliff, but was ſcarce an eighth Part of the intended Edifice, which was to have been a double Quadrangle, beſides Wings on each Side: However Provoſts and Fellows were appointed from Time to Time. The firſt Provoſt, and Set of Fellows, nominated by the King himſelf, were,

Matthew Sutcliff, Dean of Exeter, PROVOST.

The ſeventeen FELLOWS.

John Overal, Dean of St. Paul's.

NONE, who were actual Biſhops, were capable of Place in this College, and when ſome of theſe were afterwards advanced to Biſhopricks, others tranſlated to Heaven, King James, by his Letters Patent 1622, Nov. 14, ſubſtituted others in their Rooms, amongſt whom the Archbiſhop of Spalato (but then no more than Dean of Windſor in England) was moſt remarkable.

TO advance this Work, the King, 1616, ſent his Letter to Abbot, Archbiſhop of Canterbury (as was mentioned before) to ſtir up all the Clergy in his Province to a liberal Contribution. He accordingly wrote his Letters to the Biſhops to deal with their reſpective Clergy and others of Ability, to give their charitable Benevolence for perfecting ſo pious a Deſign. But the Collections came in but ſlowly and ſparingly, ſo that finally the Building ſtopt and went not forward, and ſo by little and little fell to Decay and Ruin. And at laſt there was a Decree in Chancery, made by Coventry, Lord Keeper, that three of thoſe four Farms formerly given to the College, ſhould return again to the Poſſeſſion of the Heir general of Dr. Sutcliff; and this by the Conſent of Dr. Featly the third Provoſt of the College, and Dr. Prideaux ſurviving Truſtee. Suits were alſo commenced about the Title of the very Ground it ſtood on, between William Lord Mounſon, who married the Widow of the Earl of Nottingham, that granted the Leaſe of the Land, and the fourth Provoſt. This Provoſt was Dr. Samuel Wilkinſon, living about the Year 1654 or 1655, when Dr. Fuller wrote his Hiſtory, to whom the ſaid Provoſt imparted the Records of the ſaid College.

AT laſt, there remaining not Fellows enough to continue the Corporation, the Land on which the College was built fell to the Crown; after which it was leaſed out, and King Charles II. after his Reſtoration, gave it to the Royal Society, who bought out the remaining Term of the Leaſes, and having kept it ſome Years to little Purpoſe, ſold it to Sir Stephen Fox, who probably purchaſed it for the ſaid King Charles II. and he founded it a-new, though not for the ſame, but for another Good, as will be ſpoken of hereafter.

CHAP. XII.

Of the INNS of COURT and CHANCERY.

HAVING done with the Colleges founded for Divinity, and Philoſophy, we come of Courſe to the Houſes of the Law: Whereof there were very lately fourteen, but the Leaſe of Sergeant's-Inn in Fleet-Street, from the Dean and Chapter of York, being expired, the Judges and other Gentlemen of the Law are removed from thence; ſo that, at this Day, there remain but thirteen, eight of which ſtand in the Liberties of the City, and five in the Suburbs thereof; which are as follow,

Within the Liberties.
- Sergeant's-Inn in Chancery-Lane, for Judges only.
- The Inner-Temple, } Houſes of Court.
- The Middle-Temple, }
- Clifford's-Inn, in Fleetſtreet, } Houſes of Chancery.
- Thavies-Inn, in Holborn, }
- Furnival's-Inn in Holborn, }
- Barnard's-Inn, in Holborn, }
- Staple's-Inn, in Holborn, }

Without the Liberties.
- Gray's-Inn, in Holborn, } Houſes of Court.
- Lincoln's-Inn, in Chancery-Lane, }
- Clement's-Inn, } Houſes of Chancery.
- New-Inn, }
- Lion's-Inn, }

THERE was in antient Time, in Scroop's Court in Holborn, an Inn alſo for Sergeants only; and where Somerſet-Houſe now ſtands, an Inn, called Cheſter's-Inn, from its Nearneſs to the Biſhop of Cheſter's Houſe; but more commonly Strand-Inn, in the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, which was pulled down with many other Buildings, in the Reign of King Edw. VI. to make Room for the Houſe of Edward Duke of Somerſet, Protector of the Realm, who had alſo his Materials from St. John of Jeruſalem, which, being looked upon as little better than Sacrilege, many of thoſe Hiſtorians who delight in Judgments, make to be the Cauſe of the Sentence that was paſſed upon him, to be beheaded, and the Infatuation of himſelf and his Counſel, who forgot to demand his Clergy, which by the Laws of England might have ſaved him.

JUSTICE Forteſcue, in his Book of the Laws of England, makes mention of a 10th Inn of Chancery, in the Reign of Henry VI. but does not name the Place where it ſtood.

THE Houſes of Court are filled partly with young Students, and partly with Graduates and Practiſers of the Law: But the Inns of Chancery, being as it were Provinces, ſeverally ſubjected to the Inns of Court, are chiefly furniſhed with Officers, Attornies, Sollicitors, and Clerks, who follow the Courts of King's-Bench and Common-Pleas.

AND yet there are ſome other, being young Students, that come thither ſometimes from one of the Univerſities, and ſometimes immediately from Grammar Schools. And theſe having ſpent ſome Time in ſtudying upon the firſt Elements and Grounds of the Law, and having performed the Exerciſes of their own Houſes, called Boltas, Moots, and Putting of Caſes, they proceed to be admitted and become Students in ſome of theſe four Houſes or Inns of Court, where continuing the Space of ſeven Years, or thereabouts, they frequent Readings, Mootings, Boltings, and other learned Exerciſes; whereby, growing ripe in the Knowledge of the Laws, and approved withal to be of honeſt Converſation, they are either by the general Conſent of the Benchers, or Readers, being the moſt antient, grave and judicious Men of every Inn of Court, or by the ſpecial Privilege of the preſent Reader there, ſelected and called to the Degree of Utter-Barriſters; and ſo ena-enabled to be common Counſellors, and to practiſe the Law, both in their Chambers and at the Bars.

Of theſe, after they have made one farther Step of Preferment, and are become Benchers, there are two choſen every Year to be Readers there, who make their Readings twice in a Year alſo, viz. in Lent, and in the Beginning of Auguſt.

For the Help of young Students in the Inns of Chancery, they likewiſe chooſe out of every Inn of Court, a Reader there, being no Bencher, but an Utter-Barriſter, of ten or twelve Years Continuance; from thoſe of the ſaid Degree of Counſellors, or Utter-Barriſters, having continued therein the Space of fourteen or fifteen Years, the chief and beſt learned, are elected by the Benchers, to increaſe the Number of the Bench among them; and ſo, in their Time, become firſt ſingle, and then double Readers to the Students of thoſe Houſes of Court: After which laſt Reading, they become Apprentices of the Law; and in Default of a ſufficient Number of Sergeants at Law, theſe are, at the Pleaſure of the Prince, to be advanced to the Places of Sergeants; out of which Number of Sergeants the vacant Places of the Judges are commonly filled, altho' ſometimes they are raiſed, by ſpecial Favour, to the Dignity both of Sergeant and Judge at the ſame Time.

These Sergeants may plead in any of the Courts, and none but Gentlemen of that Degree in the Common Pleas: The Judges being commonly choſen out of the Sergeants, do therefore call them Brothers, and hear them with much Reſpect; and from the Time of their being called to this Dignity, they hold no Room in the Inns of Court, being tranſlated to the Sergeants Inn, where none but the Sergeants and Judges dwell together.

The Study of the Law hath not been allowed to be in any other Places than theſe Inns of Court; for ſome Schools being once ſet up in the City, for reading and teaching the Laws, the King thought fit to have them reſtrained by Proclamation, as appears by this Record, about the 28th of Henry III.

Mandatum eſt Majori, & Vicecomit, LONDON, &c. i. e.

"Command is given to the Mayor and She-
"riffs of LONDON, That they cauſe Pro-
"clamation to be made thro' the whole City,
"and firmly to forbid, that any one ſhould ſet
"up Schools of the Laws in the ſaid City, and
"and teach the Laws there for the Time to "come: And if any ſhall ſet up ſuch Schools
"there, that they cauſe them to ceaſe without "Delay. Witneſs the King, at Baſing, De- "cember 11.

These Houſes are call'd Inns, being the old Engliſh Word for Houſes of Noblemen, and which is of the ſame Signification with the French Word Hotel at Paris. Of each Houſe in particular, more will be ſaid in its proper Place.

The Inns of Chancery were probably ſo called, becauſe they, for the moſt Part, conſiſted of ſuch Clerks as did chiefly ſtudy the Forming of Writs, which belonged to the Curſitors, who are Officers of Chancery; but are now taken up by Attornies, Sollicitors, and ſuch as belong to the Courts of Common-Pleas and King's-Bench; but formerly were preparatory Houſes for younger Students, as well as for the forming of Writs, as aforeſaid: And many were enter'd here before they were admitted to the Inns of Court; as ſome are at this Day.

The Inns of Court were ſo named, as ſome ſay, becauſe the Students therein are to ſerve the Courts of Judicature; or elſe, becauſe theſe Houſes antiently received the Sons of Noblemen, and Gentlemen of the better Sort, which is the Opinion of Forteſcue.

These Societies are no Corporations, nor have any judicial Power over their Members, but have certain Orders among themſelves, which, by Conſent, have the Force of Laws. For ſlight Offences they are only excommoned, that is, put out of Commons; which is, not to eat with the reſt in their Halls: And for greater, they loſe their Chambers, and are expelled the Houſe; and being once expelled, they are not to be admitted by any of the other three Societies.

The Members, when they meet in Chapel or Commons, or when they attend the Courts at Weſtminſter, wear decent black Gowns; but out of thoſe Places, go habited like other Gentlemen.

These Societies have no Lands or Revenues, except their Houſes; nor have they any thing to defray the Charges of each Houſe, but what is paid at Admittances, and Quit-Rents for their Chambers, with the Purchaſe Money for Chambers, when any fall to the Houſe.

The Gentlemen in the Societies are divided into four Claſſes: 1. Benchers. 2. Utter-Barriſters. 3. Inner-Barriſters; and 4. Students.

Benchers are the Seniors, to whom the Government of the Houſe, and ordering Matters thereof, is committed: And out of theſe a Treaſurer is annually choſen, who receiveth, diſburſeth, and accounteth for all Money belonging to the Houſe.

Utter-Barristers are ſuch, as for their Learning and Standing, are called by the Benchers, to plead and argue in the Society doubtful Caſes and Queſtions, which are called Moots, from Mooting, the old Saxon Word for aſſembling together, or elſe from the French, Mot, a Word; and whilſt they argue the ſaid Caſes, they ſit outermoſt on the Forms of the Benchers, which they call the Bar. Out of theſe Mootmen are choſen Readers for the Inns of Chancery, belonging to the Inns of Court, whereof they are Members; where, in Term Time, and grand Vacations, they argue Caſes in the Preſence of Attornies and Clerks.

All the reſt of the Society are accounted Inner-Barriſters, who for want of Learning or Time, are not to argue in theſe Moots; and yet in a Moot before the Benchers, two of theſe Inner-Barriſters, ſitting on the ſame Form with the Utter-Barriſters, do, for their Exerciſes, recite by Heart, the Pleading of the ſame Moot Caſe, in Law French, the one taking the Part of the Plaintiff, and the other of the Defendant.

They divide the Year into three Parts.

I. The Learning Vacation.

II. The Term Times.

III. The dead, or mean Vacation.

They have two Learning Vacations, viz. Lent Vacation, which begins the firſt Monday in Lent, and continues three Weeks and three Days; and Summer Vacation, which begins the Monday after Lammas Day, and continues alſo three Weeks and three Days. In theſe Vacations are the greateſt Conferences, and Exerciſes of Study, in the following Manner.

The Benchers appoint the eldeſt Utter-Barriſters to read among them openly in the Hall, whereof he hath Notice half a Year before; he then, the firſt Day, about eight o' Clock, makes Choice of ſome Act or Statute, whereupon he grounds his whole Reading for that Vacation, and declares ſuch Miſchiefs and Inconveniences as were not provided againſt before the ſame Act;

and

and then recites certain Doubts and Queſtions which he hath deviſed, that may grow upon the ſaid Statute, and declares his Judgment therein: After which, one of the younger Utter-Barriſters repeats one Queſtion propounded by the Reader, and, by Way of Argument, labours to prove the Reader's Opinion to be againſt Law; and after him, the Senior Utter-Barriſters and Readers, one after another, according to Seniority, do declare their Opinions and Judgments in the ſame, and then the Reader, who put the Caſe, endeavours to confute the Objections laid againſt him, and to confirm his own Opinion. After which the Judges and Sergeants, if any are preſent, declare their Opinions; then the youngeſt Utter-Barriſter again rehearſes another Caſe, which is proſecuted as the former was. And this Exerciſe continues daily three or four Hours. Out of thoſe who have read once in the Summer Vacation, and are Benchers, is choſen always one to read in Lent, who obſerves the ſame Method and Order as the former. Out of theſe Readers, Sergeants at Law are uſually choſen.

The Manner of MOOTING in the INNS of COURT.

IN theſe Vacations, after Supper in the Hall, the Reader (with one or two of the Benchers) comes in, to whom one of the Utter-Barriſters propounds ſome doubtful Caſe, which being argued by the Benchers, and laſtly, by him that moved the Caſe, the Benchers ſit down on the Bench at the upper End of the Hall; and upon a Form in the Middle of the Hall ſit two Utter-Barriſters, and on both Sides of them, on the ſame Form, ſits one Inner-Barriſter, who in Law French doth declare to the Benchers ſome kind of Action; the one being (as it were) retained for the Plaintiff, and the other for the Defendant: Which ended, the two Utter-Barriſters argue ſuch Queſtions as are diſputable within the Caſe. After which, the Benchers do likewiſe declare their Opinions, as how they take the Law to be in theſe Queſtions.

The Manner of MOOTING in the INNS of CHANCERY.

IN the Learning Vacations, each Utter-Barriſter, that is a Reader in the Inns of Chancery, goes with two Students of the ſame Inn of Court to the Inn of Chancery, where he is appointed to read, and there meet him commonly two of each of the Inns of Court, who, ſitting as the Benchers do in the Inns of Court at their Moots, hear and argue the Caſe.

IN Term Time the only Exerciſes of Learning, is Arguing and Debating Caſes after Dinner, and Mooting after Supper, in the ſame Manner as in the Vacations.

THE Time between the Learning Vacations and Terms, is called the Mean Vacation; during which Time, every Day after Dinner, Caſes are argued as at other Times; and after Supper, Moots are brought in, and pleaded by the Inner-Barriſters, in the Preſence of the Utter-Barriſters, who ſit there in the Room of the Benchers, and argued by them, as the Benchers do in Term Time, and Learning Vacations.

EVERY Quarter, commonly the Benchers cauſe one of the Standing Officers of the Houſe to ſummon a Parliament, which is only an Aſſembly and Conference of Benchers, and Utter-Barriſters, who are called the Sage Company, and meet in a Place called the Parliament Chamber, and there treat of ſuch Matters as ſhall ſeem expedient for the good ordering of the Houſe, and the Reformation of ſuch Things as they ſhall judge meet to be reformed. Here are the Readers for Lent, and the Summer Vacation elected; alſo a Treaſurer is choſen, and the Auditors appointed to take the Accounts of the old Treaſurer, &c. Here Offences committed by any of the Society are puniſhed. In theſe four Inns of Court are reckoned about 800 Students.

DURING the Time of Reading above-mentioned, which uſed formerly to continue three Weeks and three Days, the Reader was wont to keep a conſtant and ſplendid Table, entertaining the Nobility, Judges, Biſhops, principal Miniſters of State, and ſometimes the King himſelf; inſomuch that it hath coſt a Reader above 1000 l.

AFTERWARDS, he, who hath been Reader, wears a long Robe differing from other Barriſters, and is then in a Capacity to be made a Sergeant at Law.

The Manner of electing and calling the SERGEANTS at LAW.

WHEN the Number of Sergeants is ſmall, as Sergeant Benlows was once the only one, the Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, by the Advice and Conſent of the other Judges, ſignifies the ſame to the King, and who are fit for that Degree, or elſe preſents their Names to the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper, who, by the King's Writ, ſends to each of them to appear on ſuch a Day before the King to receive the State and Degree of a Sergeant at Law.

At the appointed Time, being habited in Robes of two Colours, viz. Brown and Violet, they come into Weſtminſter-hall, accompanied by the Students of the Inns of Court, and attended by a Train of Servants and Retainers in certain peculiar Cloth Liveries. In Queen Elizabeth's Reign, they were uſually Muſ-Colour on the right Side, and Murrey Colour on the Left; here they take a ſolemn Oath, perform the antient Ceremony of Counting, and have their Coifs of white Linnen or Silk put on, without any black ones over them, afterwards they give Rings to the ſeveral Judges and Sergeants, beſides others to the Nobility and many of their Friends, ſome of 40 s. and ſome of 20 s. Value, whom they alſo entertain with a magnificent Dinner.

IT was formerly uſual for the new Sergeants to walk two and two, Arm in Arm, to Weſtminſter-Hall from the Place where the Feaſt was intended to be kept; but that Cuſtom has been long diſcontinued, as well as the Words that were wont to be ſpoke by the Judges upon the appearing of the Sergeants upon a Call, i. e. Methinks I ſee a Brother.

THE Gentlemen of this Degree were heretofore called Narratores in Latin, and in French Countors, i. e. Pleaders. According to the Opinion of Sir Edward Coke, Rep. Lib. 9, they are upwards of 1100 Years ſtanding, and we find the Degree mentioned in a Stat. 3. of Edward I. Chap. 29.

Of the ELECTION of JUDGES.

OUT of theſe Sergeants Judges are choſen; and therefore it is that they wear always the white Linnen Coif, which is the principal Badge of a Sergeant, and which he wears even in the Preſence of the King.

WHEN any of the Judges are wanting, by Death, or otherwiſe, the King, by the Advice of his Council, makes Choice of one of the Sergeants to ſupply his Place; and by Letters Patent ſealed by the Chancellor, who, ſitting in the Midſt of the reſt of the Judges in open Court, declares to the Sergeant the King's Pleaſure, and to the People the King's Goodneſs, in providing or ſupplying the Bench with ſuch able and honeſt Men, as that Juſtice may be done impartially ally and expeditely to all his Subjects: And then cauſes the ſaid Letters Patents to be read. And being departed, the Chief Juſtice places the ſaid Sergeant on the Bench, Junior of all the reſt: And having taken the Oath, "Well and Truly "to ſerve the King, and his People, in the Of- "fice of Juſtice; to take no Reward; to do "equal and ſpeedy Juſtice to all, &c." he ſets himſelf to the Execution of his Charge.

The Judge's Oath.

His Salary.

THE Sergeant being thus advanced to a Judge, hath great Honour, and a very conſiderable Salary of 1500 l. per Annum, beſides great Perquiſites.

AND now, in ſome Things, his former Habit of a Sergeant is altered. His long Robe and Cap, his Hood and Coif are the ſame: But there is beſides, a Cloak put over him, which is cloſed on his Right Shoulder; and his Caputium is lined with Miniver, that is, divers ſmall Pieces of white rich Furr; but the two Lord Chief Juſtices, and the Lord Chief Baron, have their Hoods, Sleeves, and Collars, turned up with Ermine.

Of the Manner of keeping Chriſtmas in the INNS of COURT.

IF the Houſe (a little before Chriſtmas) is furniſhed with ſuch a Number of Students, and of ſuch Quality as are fit to keep a ſolemn Chriſtmas, then they meet together, and hold a Parliament, as they call it, and there chooſe and appoint certain Officers of their own Students, in Imitation of the King's Court, viz. a Comptroller, and a Treaſurer, with other great Officers; and theſe bear Rule in the Houſe during the whole Time of Chriſtmas, and are to behave themſelves in that Port, Gravity, and Authority, as if they were ſo in the King's Houſe.

DURING the Time of Chriſtmas, they uſed to have ſeveral Diverſions, as Feaſting every Day, Muſick, Singing, Dancing, and Dicing; to which laſt all Comers were admitted, and was ſo high, that the Box-Money has amounted to 50 l. a Night, which, with a ſmall Contribution from each Student, has defrayed the Charges of the whole Chriſtmas. Theſe Revellings gave Occaſion to ſo much Miſchief, by Perſons loſing their Money, and by Apprentices robbing their Maſters, &c. that they are prudently laid aſide.

SOMETIMES, when they had a young Gentleman who would be profuſe, they created him Prince, and he had all his Officers, and a Court, ſuitable to one with that Title. At ſuch Times moſt of the principal Nobility, Officers of State, &c. were ſplendidly entertain'd. Theſe Sports and Feaſtings uſed to laſt from All-Saints Day to Candlemas, in each Houſe; and ſome young Student was choſen Maſter of the Revels.

ALL theſe Inns of Court and Chancery, being not far diſtant from one another, make as it were an Univerſity of Lawyers, the moſt famous in the World, conſiſting of ſo many Perſons, eminent for their ſound Judgment and fine Parts, as well as, many of them, for their Births, being the Sons of Gentlemen of great Eſtates and Quality.

THE Fees, in old Times, from a Client to a Sergeant at Law, for Advice in his Chamber, or for Pleading in any Court of Judicature, was but 20 s. and the Fee of a Barriſter 10 s. which is more than is now given in our neighbouring Nations; but, at preſent, in England, it is uſual to give the Counſellors 10 l. or 20 l. at the Pleading of any conſiderable Cauſe; ſo that there are ſome Lawyers who gain 3000 or 4000 l. Yearly in Fees, purchaſe great Eſtates in a ſmall Time, and are ſometimes advanced to the Peerage. After the Inns of Court and Chancery, it cannot be improper to come next to

DOCTORS-COMMONS:

OR the College of Civilians in LONDON, which is ſituated on the Weſt Side of St. Bennet's Hill, or on the South Side of Great-Knight-Rider-ſtreet, almoſt over-againſt the College of Heralds. This College is called Doctors-Commons, becauſe ſeveral learned and grave Civilians reſide here in a Collegiate Manner, commoning together, and is the chief Place in his Majeſty's Dominions for the Practiſe of the Civil Law; and all Perſons who have Buſineſs relating to that, or to the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, or have Occaſion to conſult with learned Men in that Faculty, may repair hither, where their ſeveral Chambers, Apartments, and Offices are.

HERE is alſo a ſpacious Room for a Library, repleniſhed with a great Number of Books of all Sorts, but eſpecially of Hiſtory, and of that Faculty, given by divers of this College: And among the reſt, the whole Library of Sir John Gibſon, Knight, ſome Time Chancellor to Archbiſhop Grindal, and his two Succeſſors of York, and Judge of the Prerogative-Office, Anceſtor to James Gibſon, Eſq; the late Town-Clerk, who beſtowed it. This Library is, and will be, in a growing Condition, every Archbiſhop and Biſhop, at their Confirmations, preſenting 20 l. or more, to the ſaid Society, to buy Books: The laſt Archbiſhop of Canterbury gave 50 l. for that Uſe.

AS to the original Foundation of this Place, Dr. Henry Harvey, Doctor of the Civil and Canon Law, and Maſter of Trinity-Hall in Cambridge, Prebendary of Ely, and Dean of the Arches, a learned and good Man, purchaſed and provided this Houſe for the Civilians and Canoniſts to dwell in, being then an old Stone Building belonging to St. Paul's Church, but let out. Before which Time they lodged in Pater-Noſter-Row, in a meaner and leſs Houſe; afterwards, and ſtill, a Tavern, known by the Sign of the Queen's Head; which had ſome Time been a Houſe for a Reſidentiary of St. Paul's.

Cauſes belonging to the Civil Law.

THE Cauſes whereof the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Law take Cognizance, are, Blaſphemy, Apoſtacy from Chriſtianity, Hereſy, Schiſm, Ordinations, Inſtitutions of Clerks to Benefices, Celebration of Divine Service, Matrimony, Divorces, Baſtardy, Tythes, Oblations, Obventions, Mortuaries, Dilapidations, Reparation of Churches, Probate of Wills, Adminiſtrations, Simony, Inceſts, Fornications, Adulteries, Solicitation of Chaſtity, Penſions, Procurations, Commutation of Penance, Right of Pews, and other ſuch like Matters.

Courts.

THE Courts belonging to the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Law are divers.

Court of Arches.

I. The Court of Arches; which is the higheſt Court belonging to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Judge of which is called, the Dean of the Arches, and the Juriſdiction of this Judge extends thro' the whole Province of Canterbury; and upon any Appeal, he forthwith ſends out his Citation to the Judge and Appellee. To his Office of Dean of the Arches, or Official of this Court, is joined a peculiar Juriſdiction of thirteen Pariſhes in LONDON, termed a Deanary belonging to the Archbiſhop, and exempt from the Authority of the Biſhop of the Dioceſe of LONDON. This Court was formerly kept in Bow-Church in Cheapſide; and the Church and Tower thereof being arched, the Court was from thence called the Arches, and is ſo ſtill. Beſides the Judge afore-mentioned, this Court hath a Regiſter, or Examiner, an Actuary, a Beadle or Crier, and an Apparitor, beſides Advocates, and Procurators, or Proctors.

IN the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Whitgift being Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Dr. Coſins Dean of the Arches, a Paper was drawn up by Order, wherein it was written, That there ſhould be, as by antient Uſage and Cuſtom, Time out of Mind, but twelve Doctors of Law admitted, who were called Advocates, to Plead; and ten Proctors, to be as Attornies; tho' there were then treble the Number. Theſe, after they are once admitted by Warrant and Commiſſion, directed from the Archbiſhop, and by the Dean of the Arches, may then exerciſe as Advocates and Proctors there, and in any other Court.

Court of Audience.

II. The Court of Audience. This was alſo a Court of the Archbiſhop's, which he uſed to hold in his own Houſe, where he received Cauſes, Complaints, and Appeals, and had learned Civilians living with him, who were Auditors of the ſaid Cauſes, before the Archbiſhop gave Sentence. This Court was kept in later Times in St. Paul's. The Judge of this Court was ſtiled, Cauſarum, Negotiorumque Cantuarien. Auditor Officialis. It had alſo other Officers as the other Courts.

THERE were antiently Complaints made of this Court, once in the Reign of King Henry VIII. on Account of the Troubles and Inconveniences it cauſed both to the Clergy and Laity, Men being forced up to LONDON, oftentimes from the remoteſt Parts, for a ſlanderous Word, or any trifling Thing: And therefore there was a Convocation that took Notice of this Court, and made Complaint of it to that King, and urged, That the Archbiſhop's Court of the Arches, kept at LONDON, beſides his other Courts kept within his own Dioceſe, was ſufficient, being authorized to hear and determine all Cauſes and Complaints appertaining to a Metropolitan. It was alſo complained of in regard to the Place where it was kept; namely, in LONDON, within the Church and Juriſdiction of another Biſhop: But this Stir ſeemed partly to be moved out of an Ill-will in the Popiſh Clergy towards Cranmer, who was then Archbiſhop. They ſuggeſted alſo, That the Archbiſhop kept his Court, as he was Legate of the See of Rome, inaſmuch as no Archbiſhop within Chriſtendom, ever had any Authority to keep any ſuch Court, but only Legates of the See of Rome: And that therefore if the King thought fit to continue the Uſe of it, it would be adviſable he ſhould give it to ſomebody elſe, by Special Commiſſion from himſelf, and at his Pleaſure. Whereupon the Archbiſhop was fain to enter his Proteſt, That he kept not his Audience Court by Virtue of his Title of Legatus ratus; and pleaded, That the Parliament had confirmed the former Privileges of the Archbiſhops of Canterbury, whereof this Court was one. And ſo this Court continued long after: But after the Civil Wars under King Charles I. it was diſuſed.

Prerogative Court.

III. The next Court for Civil Cauſes belonging to the Archbiſhop, is the Prerogative Court, wherein Wills and Teſtaments are proved, and all Adminiſtrations taken, which belongs to the Archbiſhop by his Prerogative; that is, by a Special Pre-eminence, that this See hath in certain Cauſes above ordinary Biſhops within his Province: This takes Place where the Deceaſed hath Goods to the Value of Five Pounds out of the Dioceſe; and being of the Dioceſe of LONDON, to the Value of Ten Pounds. If any Contentions grow, touching any ſuch Wills or Adminiſtrations, the Cauſes are debated and decided in this Court.

To this Court belongs a Judge, who is ſtiled, Judex Curiæ Prerogativæ Cantuarienſis, and a Regiſter, who hath convenient Rooms in his Office, for the diſpoſing and laying up ſafe all original Wills and Teſtaments; and whither any may have Recourſe, that have Occaſion to ſearch ſuch Wills: And for a Shilling may read any one of them over; and for other moderate Prices, at ſo much a Sheet, may have the whole, or ſome Part of any of them, tranſcribed and copied for his Uſe. This Regiſter alſo hath his Deputy, beſides ſeveral Clerks.

THIS Prerogative Office is now kept in the Dean of St. Paul's Court.

The Faculty Court.

To theſe add, Fourthly, The Court of Faculties and Diſpenſations; whereby a Privilege, or Special Power is granted to a Perſon by Favour and Indulgence, to do that which by Law otherwiſe he could not; as, To eat Fleſh upon Days prohibited; To marry, without Banns firſt asked in the Church three ſeveral Sundays, or Holydays; the Son to ſucceed his Father in his Benefice; For one to have two or more Benefices incompatible; For Non-Reſidence; and in other ſuch like Caſes.

THIS Authority was given to the Archbiſhop by the Statute of 25 Henry VIII. Cap. 21. And the Chief Officer of this Court is called Magiſter ad Facultates.

THERE is a Regiſter alſo belonging to this Court.

IN theſe Diſpenſations the Archbiſhops have always uſed to be very tender, and to refuſe many that come for them, unleſs upon very good Reaſons and Conſiderations.

BESIDES theſe Courts peculiarly pertaining to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, there is,

Court of Admiralty.

Fifthly, The Court of Admiralty, which was erected in Edward III's Time. This Court belongs to the Lord High Admiral of England, who hath the Government of the King's Navy, and the Hearing of all Cauſes relating to Merchants and Mariners. He takes Cognizance of the Death or Maim of any Man, committed in the great Ships riding in great Rivers, beneath the Bridges of the ſame next the Sea. Alſo, he hath Power to arreſt Ships in great Streams, for the Uſe of the King, or his Wars. And in theſe Things this Court is concerned.

THE Judge of this Court muſt be a Civilian; and his Title is, Supremæ Curiæ Admiralitatis Angliæ Locumtenens Judex. The other Officers of this Court, are, a Regiſter, and a Marſhal, who carrieth a Silver Oar before the Judge; beſides an Advocate, and Proctor of the Admirals.

THE Judge, Clerk, and Sergeant of this Court, uſed to have the Goods and Chattels of all attainted for Pyracies for their Trouble in keeping of Seſſions: But about the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign the Lord Admiral paſs'd all his Intereſt in the Goods of Traitors and Pyrates to that Queen.

Dr. David Lewis was Judge of the Admiralty in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, Anno 1573, and in the Year 1580, that Office decaying much, he made a Complaint to the Lord Treaſurer, ſhewing him by what Means it came into ſo low a Condition, which was in theſe Words:

" Firſt, There is no ſtanding Fee incident to " the ſame. The Commodities thereof do grow " only by the Great and Little Seals, and by ſuch " Inſtruments and Decrees that do paſs in " Cauſes depending there. The Judge, Clerk, " and Sergeant, were wont to have the Goods and " Chattels of all attainted for Pyracies, for their " Travail in keeping of Seſſions: Which they " have not now, by reaſon that the Lord Admi- " ral hath of late paſſed all his Intereſt in the " Goods of Traitors and Pyrates, in her Ma- " jeſty.

THE

" THE Caſes that are treated of in the Court " of Admiralty do proceed only of Things done " upon, and beyond the Seas; and yet the Judge " cannot enjoy the ſame, by reaſon of Prohibi- " tions out of her Majeſty's Bench, denied to " none that will ſue for them. By reaſon where- " of, and that the Suitors of the Court of the " Admiralty be many Times vexed with Actions " upon the Caſe, for ſuing their Merchants and " Mariners, be ſo terrified, as they have for- " ſaken the Court of Admiralty; and do now " ſue for Things done beyond and upon the Sea, " at the Common Law, in her Majeſty's Bench, " and in the Guildhall, LONDON: And the " ſame are maintained there, by ſurmiſing the " Matters to be tranſacted in ſome Place upon " the Land; where in Truth the ſame was " done beyond and upon the Sea: And there " may no Traverſe be admitted touching the " Place.

" Finally, The Company of Merchants trading " in Spain and Portugal, have of late obtained " Privilege of her Majeſty, under the Great " Seal, not only to make Laws and Ordinances, " but alſo to hear and determine all Quarrels, " Suits and Strifes happening between any of " the ſaid Company, or between any of them " and any other, tho' he or they be not of their " Company; and to puniſh ſuch, as will not " obey them therein, by Impriſonment. Where- " by the Judge of the Admiralty ſhall not here- " after have to do with any Matter happening " between the ſaid Merchants, either upon, or " beyond the Sea. Whereas before, the Court " of Admiralty ſtood chiefly by ſuch Cauſes as " grew in Spain and in Portugal: And now the " ſame being transferred to the Knowledge of " Merchants, the Court of Admiralty is brought " to utter Ruin; ſo that the ſame is not worth " the keeping.

THE ſaid Dr. Lewis, in the ſaid Year 1580, gave this Account of himſelf: That he had ſerved in that Court of Admiralty then Twenty-two Years; and before that, was an Advocate about eleven Years, having withal the Officialty of Surrey. That he continued an Advocate after he became Judge, five or ſix Years, ſo as to make a competent Living thereby: But afterwards when Sir William Peter and Dr. Wotton began to withdraw themſelves from this Court, the ſaid Judge was driven to give ſuch Attendance there, that he was forced to forego both his Officialty and Advocateſhip. And yet, ſo long as he enjoyed his Office of Admiralty whole, and without Impair, he took this Hindrance in good Part, in Hopes of Recompence ſome other Way: And hereupon he grounded his Complaint.

THIS Court, in antient Times, was kept at St. Margaret's-Hill in Southwark, but is now held in the Hall in Doctors-Commons, where the other Civil Courts are kept; only upon the Trial of Pyrates, and Crimes committed at Sea, the Court often ſits at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Bailey.

Court of Delegates.

THE next is the Court of Delegates; to which High Court Appeals do lie from any of the former Courts. This is the higheſt Court for Civil Cauſes. It was eſtabliſhed by an Act in the 25th of Henry VIII. Cap. 19. wherein it was enacted, " That it ſhould be lawful, for Lack of " Juſtice, at or in any of the Archbiſhops Courts, " for the Parties grieved to appeal to the King's " Majeſty in his Court of Chancery. And that " upon every ſuch Appeal, a Commiſſion under " the Great Seal ſhould be directed to ſuch " Perſons as ſhould be named by the King's " Highneſs, like as in Caſe of Appeals from " the Admiralty Court, to determine ſuch Ap- " peals, and the Cauſes concerning the ſame, " and no farther Appeals to be had or made " from the ſaid Commiſſioners for the ſame.

THESE Commiſſioners are appointed Judges only for that Time, and are commonly of the Spiritualty, as Biſhops; of the Common Law, as Judges of Weſtminſter-Hall; as well as thoſe of the Civil Law; and theſe are mixed one with another according to the Nature of the Cauſe.

THIS Commiſſion of Appeal may be granted in three Caſes. I. When any Sentence is given in any Eccleſiaſtical Cauſe by the Archiſhop, or his Official. II. When any Sentence is given in any Eccleſiaſtical Cauſe in Places exempt. III. When Sentence is given in the Admiralty in Suits Civil and Marine.

A Commiſſion of Review is ſometimes granted by the King, under the Broad Seal, to conſider and judge again, what was decreed in the Court of Delegates: But this is ſeldom, and upon great, and, ſuch as ſhall be judged, juſt Cauſes, by the Lord Keeper. This is done purely by the King's Prerogative; ſince by the Act for Delegates no farther Appeals were to be had or made from thoſe Commiſſioners.

THIS Court is called the Delegates, becauſe delegated, or appointed, by the King's Commiſſion.

THE Practiſers in the Courts aforeſaid are, Advocates and Proctors.

ADVOCATES are ſuch as have taken their Degree of Doctor in the Faculty of the Civil Law; or (when this Kingdom ſubmitted to the Papal See) of the Canon Law, or of the Decrees; that is, Canons and Decrees made and enjoined by Popes. Theſe are retained as Counſellors or Pleaders. And they muſt firſt, upon their Petitions to the Archbiſhop, have his Fiat, and then they are admitted by the Judge to practiſe.

THE Manner of their Admiſſion is ſolemn. Two Senior Advocates in their Scarlet Robes with the Mace carried before them, conduct the Doctor up the Court with three low Reverences, and preſent him with a ſhort Latin Speech, together with the Archbiſhop's Reſcript: And then having taken the Oaths, the Judge admits him, and aſſigns him a Place or Seat in the Court; which he is to keep when he pleads.

THE Habits they uſe in Court, both Judges and Advocates, are a Scarlet Robe, and a Hood lined with Taffata, if they be of Oxford; if of Cambridge, white Miniver, and round Caps of black Velvet.

PROCTORS, or Procurators, the other Sort of Practiſers, are they who exhibit their Proxies for their Clients, and make themſelves Parties for them, who draw and give Pleas, or Libels and Allegations in Behalf of their Client, produce Witneſſes, prepare Cauſes for Sentence, and attend the Advocates with the Proceedings. They are admitted alſo by the Archbiſhop's Fiat, introduced by two Senior Proctors; they wear black Robes, and Hoods lined with white Fur.

IN Henry the VIIIth's Time, the Number of the Proctors was found a Grievance: And that they were ſo clamorous by reaſon of the Plenty of them, that neither Judges nor Advocates could be heard; that they retained and concluded Cauſes oftentimes without the Advocates, and thruſt themſelves into Cauſes without the Knowledge or Will of the Parties. In order to the reducing theſe Evils, Archbiſhop Cranmer (that great and ever memorable Reformer of Abuſes) thought good to begin with reſtraining the Number of them. And whereas they were about twenty in the Court of Arches, and twenty-four more, he made an Order that thenceforth there ſhould be no more admitted till the Number was reduced to Ten; and then that Number never to be increaſed. And this was confirmed confirmed by the Chapter and Convent of Chriſt-Church, Canterbury. Though ſome looked upon this as a Craft of the Proctors of that Time, that all others being excluded from being Proctors, they might have all the Buſineſs of the Arches in their own Hands: But this Order gave Offence to many, and a Petition was drawn up againſt it and preſented to the Parliament. Therein they ſhewed how prejudicial this would be to the Commonwealth, becauſe the Number of ten Perſons was not ſufficient to diſpatch the Cauſes that came into that Court; and ſo there muſt be Delays and prolix Suits; and that it was a great Diſcouragement to young Men in ſtudying the Law; and contrary to the Canon and Civil Law, that permits any Man to be Proctor for another, a few excepted. Thus much for thoſe Practitioners, the Proctors.

The Times of Sitting.

THE Terms for the pleading and ending of Cauſes in theſe Civil Courts, are little different from the Term-times of the Common Law. The Order as to the Time of the Sitting of theſe Courts is thus: The Sitting of the Court of Arches hath the Pre-eminence of Sitting firſt, according to the Quality of that Court, and regulates the Sittings of the others. The Sitting of the Court of Audience is the next Morning after the Sitting of the Court of Arches. The Prerogative Court ſits in the Afternoon, as the Audience ſet in the Morning. The Court of the Admiralty is held on the ſame Day with the Arches, but in the Afternoon.

THIS College was conſumed by the general Devaſtation that happened by Fire to the City, Anno 1666: And then Exeter-Houſe, in the Strand, was employed for the ſame Uſe, where the Civilians had their Chambers, and Offices; and the Courts were kept in the Hall: But after ſome Years the Commons being rebuilt far more conveniently, and more ſumptuouſly than before, the Civilians removed thither again.

FOR the Relief of the Subjects, in caſe of any hard Dealings feared from Civil or Eccleſiaſtick Laws, the Lords Chief Juſtices may ſtop Proceedings in theſe Courts, and call the Matters in Controverſy to be heard before them, by a Writ of Prohibition; which lies of one that is impleaded in the Court Chriſtian for a Cauſe that belongeth to the Temporal Juriſdiction; whereby, as well the Party and his Counſel, as the Judge himſelf and the Regiſter, are forbidden to proceed any further in that Cauſe. The Law Books ſhew the Cauſes for which this Prohibition lies. Bracton ſaith, It lies not after a Sentence given in any Cauſe.

BUT theſe Prohibitions were ſo frequently granted, and in Cauſes that ſeemed properly Eccleſiaſtical, that the Civilians and Eccleſiaſticks have ſometimes made great Complaints of them, as exceeding injurious to their Practice, and vexatious to the Subject; and alſo ſeeming to derogate from the ſupreme Authority, in taking away Cauſes from the High Commiſſion and Delegates, which acted by a Special Commiſſion from the Prince.

THUS in the Year 1573, under Archbiſhop Parker, the Judge of the Admiralty being Dr. David Lewis, the Lord Chief Juſtice had very often granted Prohibitions out of the Court of King's-Bench to this Court, almoſt to the Ruin of it: Whereupon in the Year aforeſaid the Lord Admiral uſed ſharp Speeches to him for it; and warned Dr. Lewis, that when ſuch Prohibitions ſhould be granted again, to ſpare to move the Lord Chief Juſtice, but to make the Lord Treaſurer acquainted with it. Accordingly, when another Prohibition was granted the ſame Year, Dr. Lewis wrote of it to the Lord Treaſurer, ſignifying what juſt Cauſe of Grief he had, by reaſon of a Prohibition granted the Day before, in a Cauſe which he had deſcribed in a Paper incloſed: And that this, and one more before, were two ſuch Precedents, that if they took Place, in a ſhort Time would utterly overthrow the Juriſdiction of the Admiralty: That he was therefore forced to crave his Lordſhip's Favour, to be a Means to the Lord Chief Juſtice and his Colleagues to ſtop the ſame: For if theſe Prohibitions were not prevented, he ſhould not be able to ſhew his Face in that Court any more; theſe Prohibitions tending ſo much to his Diſcredit, and the utter Ruin and Subverſion of the Juriſdiction of the Admiralty.

IN the Year 1580, under Grindal the next Archbiſhop, Dr. Lewis complained again to the Lord Treaſurer of the Decay of his Office, and drew up the preſent mean State of the Judge and Court of Admiralty. He ſhewed how the Cauſes which were treated of in this Court, proceeded only of Things done upon and beyond the Seas; and yet the Judge could not enjoy the ſame, by reaſon of Prohibitions out of her Majeſty's Bench; denied to none that would ſue for them. By reaſon whereof, and that the Suitors to this Court were many Times vexed with Actions upon the Caſe for ſuing there, Merchants and Mariners were ſo terrified, that they forſook the Court of Admiralty, and ſued for Things done beyond and upon the Sea, at the Common Law, in her Majeſty's Bench, and in the Guild-Hall of LONDON: And the ſame were maintained there by ſurmiſing the Matters to be contracted in ſome Place upon the Land, where, in Truth, the ſame was done beyond and upon the Sea; and there might no Traverſe be admitted touching the Place.

AND theſe Prohibitions were grievous to the other Courts as well as this; and chiefly the Eccleſiaſtical.

AGAIN, about the Year 1598, under Archbiſhop Whitgift, theſe Prohibitions lay heavy upon the Civil Courts; and then a notable Paper was drawn up for the Conſideration of the Queen or the Parliament, entitled, Certain Collections and Inferences concerning Matter of Prohibitions and Conſultations: Not unfit to be thought upon for the better Preſervation of her Majeſty's Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical; which were theſe, viz.

I. SINCE by the Laws and Inſtitutes of this Realm, the Libel is appointed as a Rule for the granting of Prohibitions and Conſultations, How can a Prohibition duly be granted, either before the Libel is exhibited in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, or without Sight and diligent Peruſal thereof, or upon any other Matter or Suggeſtion that may be probably gathered out of the ſame?

II. WHERE the Cauſe originally is undoubtedly of Eccleſiaſtical Cognizance, Why ſhould any Prohibition be granted (as almoſt all be) upon any Matter pleaded at Bar, or by Way of Exception, tho' merely Temporal; the Law itſelf, and common Reaſon being plain and evident to the contrary? For, ſuch Matter incident comes not there to be finally ſentenced and determined; but it is uſed as a Means and Furtherance for the Deciſion of his Principal: And ſuppoſing the Law were otherwiſe, then might either Party at their Pleaſure, by pleading ſome Matter Temporal, make any Cauſe Eccleſiaſtical whatſoever, ſubject to a Prohibition.

III. SINCE the Prohibition once granted, (though never ſo unduly) muſt needs bring with it a Delay of Juſtice, intolerable Expences, and many great Inconveniencies to the Party prohibited, Why are Prohibitions ſo uſually granted, without calling or hearing both Parties, and the Judge Eccleſiaſtical alſo (ſi ſua putaverit intereſſe) contrary to the common Rules of Juſtice in all Cauſes, eſpecially in Matters of ſo great Prejudice?

IV. Can

IV. Can it be thought expedient, or reaſonable, that the Plaintiff, making Choice of the Court Chriſtian for his Relief, ſhould afterwards in the ſame Cauſe, be ſuffered to procure a Prohibition? Were it not found Diſcretion and Policy, to cut off ſuch wilful, malicious Vexation of a Subject, and publick Scandal to Juſtice, howſoever the Law be defective and ſilent in that Behalf?

V. To ſue for a Prohibition not till after Concluſion in the Cauſe, is very prepoſterous and inconvenient: But after Sentence given, in Bracton's Opinion, is altogether unlawful; much more after two or three Inſtances, and as many Sentences paſt: And yet in all theſe Caſes Prohibitions are common and ordinary.

VI. What Law or Reaſon can be pretended, why the Judge Eccleſiaſtical, after Conſultation delivered unto him, may not condemn the Party who brings the Prohibition, in Expenſis retardati proceſſus, in Caſe the Judges ſhall refuſe, as oftentimes they do, to aſſeſs double Coſt and Damage, according to the Statute, or in any other Caſe whatſoever, wherein the Judges can, or will allow no Charges at all?

VII. If in the Prohibition directed to the Eccleſiaſtical Judge, the Suggeſtions appeared notably falſe, vain, or frivolous, as in ſome of the late hath been ſeen, Why may not the Temporal Judge, in that Caſe, juſtly be preſumed, wittingly and willingly to infringe the Liberties of the Church; and thereupon, after due Circumſtances obſerved, be declared and denounced Excommunicate, according to the Statute in that Behalf eſtabliſhed?

VIII. Is there either Warrant, or Colour of Law, that any Prohibition ſhould be grounded upon any of theſe Surmiſes, viz. That Matters Teſtamentary and Matrimonial only be Eccleſiaſtical; or that the Law Civil requireth two Witneſſes, where the Common Law accepteth of one? Seeing by the firſt Suggeſtion, divers and ſundry Cauſes undoubtedly known, and confeſſed to be of Eccleſiaſtical Cognizance, are falſely ſuppoſed to be of Temporal Juriſdiction; and by the ſecond, unlearnedly miſconceived, no Cauſe ſo purely Spiritual, but muſt be determined at the Common Law?

IX. Were it not very convenient and neceſſary, conſidering the very long, tedious, and chargeable Suits in obtaining Conſultations, together with the manifold Difficulties which accompany ſuch unwelcome Motions, that the Temporal Judges would be pleaſed, for Relief of poor Subjects, within ſome reaſonable and competent Time to determine the Queſtions depending before them, as touching Conſultations; and that hereafter the Spiritual Courts be not kept in Suſpenſe for two, three, or fours Years, as often it hath been, before the Conſultations can be procured, notwithſtanding the beſt and uttermoſt Endeavours of the Defendant, and the manifold Juſtice of this Demand?

X. It ſeemeth by the Scope and Purport of all the moſt antient Statutes in that Behalf provided, that the Prohibition and Conſultations, as other original Writs, ought not to be granted but in the Court of Chancery, by the Lord Chancellor of England; and howſoever of late Years the Courſe hath been drawn another Way, yet no doubt the Power of the Chancellor is no whit thereby reſtrained, but that he may lawfully (and it were to be wiſhed he would) reſume and put in Execution his antient Right and Authority: So ſhould not her Majeſty's Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction be driven as now it is, to admit the Cenſure and Judgment of thoſe, who indeed be principal Parties, as touching the Queſtion of Prohibitions.

XI. What Cauſe or Grievance ſoever, cannot be redreſſed by any Writ but of the Chancery, there the Statute expreſly forbiddeth the King's Prohibition to take Place; but it is manifeſt and notorious, that moſt of the Prohibitions now-a-days, or rather all, be granted in Stay of ſuch Complaints, as wherein neither by any Writ out of the Chancery, nor any other Courſe of Proceeding at the Common Law, the Subject can receive ſound Juſtice, or final Cenſure.

XII. Can it be warranted, either by Law or Statute, that after Conſultation once granted in the King's-Bench, a ſecond Prohibition ſhould be granted out of the Common-Pleas in the ſame Cauſe, the Matter not being augmented, enlarged, nor otherwiſe altered. And yet howſoever the Statute be plain and evident to the contrary, divers ſuch Prohibitions have been of late obtained.

XIII. If ſuch Care and Conſideration had been taken in the Granting of Prohibitions, as were fit and neceſſary in Cauſes of ſuch great Moment, the Judges Temporal would never have granted ſo many Conſultations as have been granted within the Compaſs of three or four Years.

XIV. Foraſmuch as both the Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal, are now united in the Crown of the Realm, which was heretofore de facto ſevered, and derived from ſeveral Heads and Authorities; and for that the Ground and true Original Cauſe of Prohibitions was none other than the aforeſaid Severance and Partitions of Juriſdictions, May it not be very probably drawn into Queſtion, Whether, as the Caſe now ſtandeth, any Prohibition at all, may, in ſound Conſtruction of Law be warranted; at leaſt, how the Form and Manner of Prohibitions heretofore uſed, may not, without Offence and Derogation to the Queen's Prerogative Eccleſiaſtical, be retained and practiſed, as though the two Juriſdictions remained now diſtinct, and as ſeveral as before; and as though her Majeſty's Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical may not, with as little Prejudice to the Crown, encroach upon the Temporal, as the Temporal may upon the Eccleſiaſtical?

XV. But in Caſe the Prohibition, by Force of ſo many Years, Uſe, and Cuſtom, may not now conveniently be diſcontinued, either in Matter or Manner, yet, in true Senſe and Meaning of Law, What Reaſon can be deviſed, why the Prohibition ſhould be extended to the Reſtraint of her Majeſty's High Commiſſion, or Court of Delegates, both of them being authorized under the Great Seal of England, and eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament, and neither of them ſo much as thought upon, for divers hundred Years after the Prohibition was current in England, neither by colour of any Argument or Similitude that can be drawn to the Caſe of ordinary Juriſdiction, either as then it was, or now it is uſed?

XVI. And for that her Majeſty's Delegates have no general Commiſſion, ad Univerſitatem Cauſarum, but for every ſeveral Cauſe of Appeal, receive a ſpecial and particular Commiſſion, it may ſeem ſomewhat ſtrange and extraordinary, that any Subjects ſhould preſume to countermand her Majeſty's expreſs Command, and to forbid the Judges Delegates to proceed any further in any one Cauſe, which her Majeſty hath eſpecially and particularly commanded them to hear and determine.

As, under three Archbiſhops, through the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, theſe Prohibitions were not at all liked by the Civilians; ſo in the Reign of King James I. under Archbiſhop Bancroft, in the Year 1606, the Convocation then met, and ſtirred in it, praying ſome Redreſs, by a Petition of the Lower Houſe to the King, to this Purpoſe:

The Convocation petition King James I. about Prohibitions.

"MOST humbly beſeeching your moſt Excellent Majeſty, your faithful Subjects, the Clergy of the Lower Houſe of Convocation, for themſelves and the reſt of the Brethren in the Miniſtry: That whereas they have been very much of later Years defrauded of their Tithes, and debarred from obtaining their Right, due unto them, by your excellent Laws of this Church, through Prohibitions procured by thoſe which wrong them, out of your Majeſty's Temporal Courts, to your Suppliants great Hindrance, Moleſtation, and utter Impoveriſhing in Time, if Remedy be not provided; beſide the Stopping of Juſtice, Occaſion of Perjury, and further Wrong, and Overthrow of your Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, as though it were an unjuſt Uſurpation of foreign Power againſt your Majeſty and Crown; and not to do Execution of your Majeſty's own rightful Power and Juriſdiction in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical: It may pleaſe your moſt Excellent Majeſty, upon due Notice given, and in tender Conſideration of our Grievances herein, to take ſome ſpeedy Order for the Help and Relief of the ſame, in ſuch Manner as to your Highneſs's Wiſdom, Piety, and Clemency, ſhall ſeem juſt, fit, and convenient; and your Majeſty's Suppliants ſhall evermore, as they are bound, with all due Thankfulneſs, pray unto GOD for your Majeſty's long and happy Life, and proſperous Reign, &c.

The COLLEGE of HERALDS.

The Office of Arms.

THIS College, or Corporation, conſiſts of a certain Number of Perſons skilled in Coat Armour: Their Buſineſs being to grant Arms to Perſons of Wealth and Merit; to regiſter Deſcents and Pedigrees at their Viſitations or otherwiſe; to regulate Abuſes in ſuch as bear Arms, not belonging to them; and they are made Uſe of in Affairs of State for Proclaiming Peace or War. They are to attend at Feaſts of Kings or Princes, at Cavalcades, Coronations, Funerals, &c. of Kings, Queens, and Perſons of Quality: At which Times they are to be in their Heralds Coats.

THIS College is ſituated near Doctors-Commons, between St. Bennet's Hill, and St. Peter's Hill, and was the antient Houſe of Thomas Stanley, Earl of Derby, given to this Society by Queen Mary, that they might reſide together for the better Conſulting the Affairs of the Office, and for Keeping their Books of Arms, Deſcents, &c. in an Office together. Since the Fire of LONDON, Anno 1666, which conſumed the whole Houſe, it is well and conveniently rebuilt, with a large Hall for Keeping the Court of Honour; together with a Library, and Houſes and Apartments for the King's Heralds and Purſuivants.

Their Privileges.

BY their Charter, firſt granted them by King Richard III. and after by ſucceeding Kings, they had ſeveral Privileges allowed them, and are freed from all Tolls, Subſidies, and Offices of Trouble in the Kingdom.

THEIR Society conſiſts of four Kings at Arms, eight Heralds, and four Purſuivants at Arms, who are as follow;

FIRST, Garter King at Arms, inſtituted by King Henry V. whoſe Office is to attend at the Solemnities of the Knights of the Garter, and to cauſe their Arms to be hung up upon their Seats or Stalls after their Inſtalment; to carry, or cauſe to be carried, the Garter to Kings and Princes beyond Sea, that are elected of this Order.

der; to take Cognizance of the Arms of the Nobility; to make Supporters to thoſe new created to any Degree of Peerage, and to marſhal the Solemnities at the Funerals of the Nobility.

ANTIENTLY, this, as alſo the other Kings at Arms, were created and crowned by the Kings themſelves, and the Heralds and Purſuivants had their Creation from the King's Hand: But of late Days, the Earl Marſhal, who is Head of this College, hath a ſpecial Commiſſion for every particular Creation, and to perform the ſame, as the Kings formerly did.

THE Ceremony uſed at his Creation and Crowning is this: There is a Sword and a Book provided, whereon he takes an Oath, to obey, firſt, the ſupreme Head of the Order of the Garter, which is the King, in ſuch Things, as belong to his Office; to give Notice to the King, upon the Death of any of the ſaid Order; and to inſtruct the Heralds and Purſuivants in Doubts relating to the Office; which ſaid Oath is thus adminiſtred: He kneels down before the Earl Marſhal, and laying his Hand on the Book and Sword, he takes the aforeſaid Oath, which is read to him by one of the other Kings at Arms: Then the Letters Patent are read, during which Time, the Earl Marſhal pours Wine out of a Bowl on his Head, and gives him the Name of Garter; and then he is inveſted with his Coat, which is of Velvet, richly embroidered with the Arms of England, &c. alſo with a Collar of SS and a gilt Crown on his Head.

HIS Salary is double to what the other Kings have; and he hath Fees at the Inſtalments, with a yearly Allowance, given by the Knights of the Garter; and hath their uppermoſt Garment at their Inſtalment.

CLARENCIEUX is the next of the Kings, ſo called from the Duke of Clarence, to whom he firſt belonged: For, Lionel, third Son to King Edward III. married the Daughter and Heir of the Earl of Ulſter, in Ireland, and had with her the Honour of Clare, in the County of Thomond; whereupon he was afterwards Duke of Clarence, which Dukedom eſcheating to King Edward IV. he made this Herald a King at Arms, and ſtiled him Clarencieux. His Office is to marſhal and diſpoſe of the Funerals of the Gentry under the Degree of a Baron, on the South Side of the River Trent, that ſhall have any publick Ceremony made at their Interments. He is alſo to keep his Viſitations within his Limits, for the Regiſtring of Families, taking Account of Coat Armour.

NORROY is another King; his Office is the ſame of that of Clarencieux, for the Gentry on the North Side of the ſaid River Trent; and theſe two are called Provincial Heralds, the whole Kingdom being divided into two Provinces betwixt them: Another was added to the Number, in the late King's Reign, called Gloceſter King of Arms, and Hanover Herald.

THE eight Heralds are, 1. Somerſet, 2. Richmond, 3. Cheſter, 4. Windſor, 5. York, 6. Lancaſter, 7. Bath, 8. Brunſwick. The Office of theſe Heralds is to wait at Court; to proclaim Peace and War: On the Death of the King or Queen to proclaim the next to the Crown, and to attend at publick Solemnities, &c.

THE four Purſuivants are, Portcullis, Rouge Dragon, Blue Mantle, and Rouge Croſs. Theſe give their Attendance alſo in the Office for the aforeſaid Matters.

A Herald is created with the like Ceremonies as the Kings, except a Coronet; and his Coat muſt be of Sattin, embroider'd with the King's Arms, as aforeſaid. He is brought before the Earl Marſhal, betwixt two other Heralds: Their Oath is, "To be true to the King; ſerviceable "to Gentlemen; to keep Secrets; to aſſiſt the "diſtreſſed Gentlemen, and Gentlewomen, Widows, and Virgins; to avoid Taverns, Bawdy-"Houſes, and Dice.

THE Purſuivant is alſo created by Letters Patents: His Coat is to be of Damask, with the King's Arms embroider'd. He is to be introduced by two other Purſuivants. His Oath is, "To be true to the King; ſerviceable to all "Chriſtians; to keep Secrets; to be ſober, "lowly and humble.

THESE being all the King's Servants in Ordinary, have yearly Salaries. The Heralds, 26 l. 13 s. 4 d. each; the Purſuivants, 20 l. each.

IN the Reign of King Richard III. their Fees granted by that King, were to John Moore, King of Arms in the North Parts, 20 l. for Term of Life. To John Water, alias York Herald, the Lordſhip of Bayhal, to the Value of 100 s. and an Annuity of 8 l. 6 s. 8 d. of the Revenue of Huntingfield in the County of Kent. To Thomas Holme, alias Clarencieux, King of Arms in the South Parts, 20 l. of the Cuſtoms and Subſidy of Exeter and Dartmouth; and 20 l. more, more, of the Annuity of the Lordſhip of Walden, in the County of Eſſex, for Term of Life. Gloceſter Herald, to him, his Heirs and Aſſigns for ever, the Manor of Oven in Kent, with all the Lands, Tenements, &c. late Sir John Fogg's.

BESIDES theſe Salaries, when the Kings of England went their Progreſſes, they commonly took their Heralds along with them, and theſe then had their daily Allowances. Thus in the Year 1552, in a Progreſs of King Edward VI. he took along with him in his Retinue the Four Kings at Arms, reckoning in Ulſter for the Fourth, Somerſet Herald, Rouge Dragon, and Blue Mantle, Purſuivants; and appointed Allowances to them for their Diet, from July the 5th, to the 7th of October, (which was the Time of the King's Progreſs) viz. to Garter 10*s.* by the Day, to the three other Kings, 6*s.* 8*d.* per Diem, to Somerſet, 4*s.* and to the two Purſuivants, 2*s.* each.

The Uſefulneſs of the College of Heralds.

THE Uſefulneſs of this College appears, in that it is an Office Conſervatory of antient Honour, and of the Memory of Perſons of Nobility, and Merit, either for their Learning, Eccleſiaſtical Preferments, Exploits in War, Service to the Commonwealth, Wiſdom in Government, Favour with their Princes, or the like; together with their Pedigrees and Poſterities, in whatſoever County in England they have lived. It is alſo highly uſeful, for the aſcertaining many Doubts relating to Names and Families, and putting a Concluſion to Contentions in Law about Right Heirs, Legitimacy, Primogeniture, &c.

And as the Office is Honourable, and of great Import, ſo none are to be admitted to it, but Perſons learned, and of ingenious Education, and ſtudious of Heraldry, and able to trick Coats of Arms, and to paint, as may appear by the Suit of Anthony Hall, Anno 1593, to the Lord Treaſurer, who acted then in the Earl Marſhal's Office, by a Special Commiſſion from the Queen; that his Son Anthony Hall, might be admitted a Purſuivant at Arms, being a Scholar bred up at Cambridge, in Emanuel College, and ſince profeſſing the Law at Bernard's-Inn, and by the Lord Anderſon's Gift, Clerk in the Prothonotary's Office in the Common-Pleas, and his Inclination apt to gather Gentlemen's Coats, as well on Church Windows, Stone Walls, as on Noblemens Tombs, whereby he had collected ſome 30,000, or more Coats of his own Tricking and Writing; beſides a pretty Skill in Counterfeiting Pictures after the Life, or otherwiſe.

Sir Gilbert Dethick, Garter, Principal King of Arms under King Edward VI. was inſtrumental in procuring the Houſe, College and Corporation of the Heralds, with their Privileges; for tho' Queen Mary, vulgarly, and according to Stow, hath the Praiſe of this Gift, yet indeed, it more truly belonged to that King. For, (as appears in a Volume of the Cotton Library) in the Year 1552, the Earl of Derby's Place was then in the Tenure of Sir Richard Sackvile, Knt. when the ſaid Place, with divers other Meſſuages and Hereditaments, were ſold to King Edward by an Indenture bearing Date November the 24th, Anno Regni 6. For which the King in Exchange, made over to the Earl certain Lands, called Leonard's Lands, joining to the Earl's Park, called Knowſley Park, in the County of Lancaſter, and lately belonging to the Monaſtery of Briſcow, of the Yearly Value of 20*s.* with other Lands, &c. to the Yearly Value of 4*l.* 10*s.* and ---.And a Meſe and a Grange, called Badley Grange, of the Value of 42*s.* per Annum in Cheſhire. All which amounted to the Value of 7*l.* 12*s.* The Date hereof was January the 24th. This Gift, very probably was confirmed by Queen Mary, King Edward's Succeſſor.

BUT tho' the Heralds had now a College, or General Office, yet for ſome Time after they had not the Conveniences of Habitations here, to dwell together, but lived at their own private Houſes, where they could provide themſelves; whereby they kept their Viſitation-Books at Home; for ſo Leigh's Words import, in his Accidents of Armoury, ſpeaking how far the Heralds were ſometimes to ſeek, when the Gentlemen of antient Blood came to ſee their Pedigrees; becauſe they had no ſeparate Houſe where they might plant their Offices, and in that Place to make their Libraries for their Provinces. For as they were all now here, now there; ſo when they died, their Wives ſold for a little Money their Books of Viſitation, which coſt them much Travail.

THIS Office for preſerving of Honour was antient. For, when in the 28th of Henry III. Gerald Fitz Maurice (who was Juſtice of Ireland) died, as it ſeems, at Canterbury, King Henry III. (near five hundred Years ago) viz. Ann. 1244, iſſued out his Command to the Keepers of that Archbiſhoprick, Quod emi faciant unum pulchrum Lapidem, ponend. ſuper Corpus Geraldi Fil. Mauric. Juſticiar. Hibern. In quo fieri faciant Scutum ipſius Geraldi cum Armis ſuis. Teſte Rege apud Roff. 20 Die Novembr. i. e. That they cauſe to be bought a fair Stone, to be laid upon the Body of Gerald Fitz Maurice, Juſtice of Ireland; whereon to be ſet his Shield with his Arms.

AND in the Time of Edward I. Thomas Earl of Lancaſter, Leiceſter, and Derby, and Conſtable of England, ordained by ſpecial Reformation, That no Man ſhould wear any Hood on his Shoulder in Time of Mourning, except he were a Gentleman; but only a Tippet of three Nails Breadth. Alſo that no Parſon, Curate, Churchwarden, or others, ſhould put down any Atchievement, Coat of Arms, or Pinion, or eraſe any Tomb out of Churches, or Church-yards: And that no Goldſmith, Copperſmith, Glazier, Painter or Marbler, ſhould have to do with Arms, without the Conſent of the Kings of Arms of that Province: And that they ſhould not ſet a Merchant's Mark within an Eſcutcheon: And that this ſhould be the more diligently looked to, he ordained, That all the Kings of Arms ſhould keep their Chapters once every Quarter of the Year at leaſt: And that they ſhould make their Viſitation in their Provinces, or their Marſhals for them, every ſeventh Year. To conclude, He ordained the Herehaughts (i. e. Heralds) at the Interment of every Gentleman (where they were called to that Service) ſhould take the Pedigree with diligent Examination of old Folks, then living, and to record the ſame.

IN former Times, the Number of the Officers that belonged to this Corporation was not fixed, the Precedency uncertain; and Contentions and Differences ſprang up among them concerning their Rights and Privileges.

THERE was formerly another King of Arms, who was called Ulſter, firſt created by King Edward VI. chiefly for the Uſe of Ireland; and the firſt that enjoyed it, was Bartholomew Butler (Anno 6 Edward VI.) York Herald. Then was made alſo Philip Butler, alias Athlone, Purſuivant of Arms there. And upon their Creation, a Warrant was iſſued to Sir Rafe Sadler, Knight of the King's Wardrobe to deliver to Bart. Butler, alias Ulſter, King at Arms of Ireland, one Coat of Blue and Crimſon Velvet, embroidered with Gold and Silver upon the ſame with the King's Arms. And to Philip Butler, alias Athlone, Purſuivant of Arms there, one Coat of Sarſenet of the King's Colour, with the Arms laid on with Gold and Purple.

THIS

THIS Place was poſſeſſed in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, by one Nicholas Narboon, who was raiſed from being Richmond Herald, to be Ulſter King.

THERE were formerly Exeter, Leopard, Faulcon, Carliſle, &c. Heralds.

THE Purſuivants formerly were of two Ranks, Ordinary and Extraordinary; the Ordinary were the afore-mentioned; the Extraordinary were theſe: Faulcon, (afterwards a Herald,) Antelope, Cadran, Guiſnes, Hammes, Berwick, Comfort, Roſeblanch, Callis, Ricebank, Wallingford, Mountorguile, Nottingham, Barnes, Boloign: But theſe Extraordinary Purſuivants in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign ceaſed.

IN the ſame Reign were great Diſſentions and Animoſities among the Heralds concerning their Rights, Fees, and Precedencies, inſomuch that they preſented Petitions and Informations one againſt another unto the Lord Treaſurer Burleigh, and the Lord Admiral, who then executed the Office of Earl Marſhal; which occaſioned the ſaid Lords to make an Order, dated October 22, 1597, entitled,

The ORDER of placing the Kings, Heralds, and Purſuivants at Arms, by the Lord Burleigh, Lord High Treaſurer of England; and the Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord High Admiral of England; by Force of her Majeſty's Commiſſion under the Great Seal of England, to us directed in that Behalf.

THE Controverſies among theſe Gentlemen were on the following Account:

IT was the proper Office and Benefit of Clarencieux King of Arms, to give Arms and go in Viſitations; but Dethick (who was made Garter in the 29th Year of Queen Elizabeth) claimed the ſame Privileges, as additional to his Office; and that by Virtue of two Commiſſions, one of Henry VII. and another of Henry VIII. to his Predeceſſors to be joined in Commiſſion with Clarencieux; and accordingly had procured of Queen Elizabeth, her Letters Patents under her Great Seal, for the Office of Garter, with Words expreſſive of more Power than ever were in any Garter's Patent before, viz. To Viſit, Correct, and give Arms, abſolutely of himſelf; whereas Clarencieux and Norroy, being Provincial Kings of Arms, could not give Arms without Conſent of the Earl Marſhal; which was an Abuſe.

BUT Cook, Clarencieux, in a Paper to the Commiſſioners of the Office of the Earl Marſhal, ſhewed the true Reaſon of thoſe Commiſſions, namely, That Roger Macado, a Briton born, was Clarencieux 1 Henry VII, (and ſo continued all that Reign) who being an old and impotent Man, and not well underſtanding our Language, did agree with Garter, that then was, (viz. Sir John Wrythe or Wriotheſley) to take the Office upon him, and to give Arms, and go in Viſitations; for which Garter paid to Clarencieux forty Marks per Annum, which was to be paid out of the ſaid Garter's Fee: And this appeared by the ſaid Garter's Letters Patents; and becauſe Garter would have ſome Authority of himſelf to ſhew, and alſo for that he thought it not for his Credit to be Deputy to Clarencieux, he procured a Bill, ſigned by Henry VII. wherein Garter was joined with Clarencieux.

THERE was alſo a ſecond Commiſſion, obtained by the ſame Garter, of King Henry VIII. to the ſame Import with the former, empowering him to give Arms, and go in Viſitation with Clarencieux that then was, viz. Thomas Benolt, who was for the moſt Part employed beyond the Seas, and had no Books to exerciſe his Office, for at that Time Garter had gotten all the Books of Office into his own Cuſtody, by reaſon of his former Dealings with Macado; ſo that in Truth, he was driven of Neceſſity to agree with Garter in like Order, to execute his Office, as Macado had done: And thereupon Garter, ſhewing to the King the Agreement and Conſent of Clarencieux, obtained of the King the ſaid Commiſſion, Clarencieux being then beyond the Seas: At whoſe Return, finding himſelf not well uſed by Garter, and that the Credit of his Office (of Clarencieux) was greatly diminiſhed by the ſaid Garter, would have broken off with him for dealing any farther with him; which Thing Garter would not by any Means conſent unto, but ſtood upon the Authority of the King's Bill aſſigned. Benolt then was forced to acquaint the King with ſome of the Abuſes of Garter; and among others, how he had given Arms to a Bondman: Hereupon, the King examining the Cauſe of Clarencieux's Grief and Complaint, and finding that Garter had wronged him, deviſed and granted to him a Commiſſion, under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date the 21ſt of Henry VIII. wherein he did inhibit the ſaid Garter, and all others, to deal or meddle either in giving of Arms, or going in Viſitation, in the ſaid Clarencieux's Province. Since which Time, all the Clarencieux's have had their Commiſſions ſucceſſively one after another, and have ever ſince gone in Viſitation, and given Arms as by the Books of Viſitation and Grants of Patents, may appear.

ADD, That long before thoſe two Bills, ſigned by thoſe two Kings, Clarencieux did give Arms, and go in Viſitation, without Garter, by Virtue of his Office, and without any Commiſſion, as appeared by divers Viſitation and Gifts of Arms; and for theſe Reaſons, he earneſtly petitioned the Lord Burleigh and Lord Howard, to obtain of the Queen a Reverſe of Garter's Patent.

THESE, and the like Matters, gave great Offence to Garter; and, to be even with Cook, Clarencieux ſpared not to impeach him in another Addreſs to thoſe Noblemen: As, concerning his Birth, being ſprung of a Tanner; his Ignorance of Languages, not being able to ſpeak French; of his diſſolute Life; being Guilty of haunting Taverns, marrying another Man's Wife; Prodigality, and running into Debt; injuring the Office; in that he and Cheſter had ſpoiled the Library in the Office of Arms of more than forty or fifty Books at one Time; that he made Multitudes of Gentlemen by himſelf, under the Name of Principal King of Arms; (being but Clarencieux) that his Deputy ranged over all the Realm, giving, altering, and changing Shields of Arms, and Cognizances of Honour, to all Sorts of Men, and of all Faculties; obtruding Arms to ſome, and exacting Fees exceeding the Queen's Fifteens; and many Pedigrees were unregiſtred: And as his Deputy went about in ſundry Shires of England, ſo he went about in LONDON, into all Companies and Societies, and in every Street, commanding Merchants, Mechanical Men, and Artificers before him, at ſundry Taverns, and gave and allowed Arms to all manner of Perſons, at all Prices, and for good Chear, contrary to all Honour; and yet waſted all: That he had a Grant of the Queen, worth a thouſand Pounds, but conſumed it. He was charged alſo for giving the Earl of Deſmond's Arms to one Captain Cheſton.

OF theſe Matters Garter complained, and by the Queen's Authority reſtrained and reformed them: But Secretary Walſingham took and detained the Queen's Letters Patents of the ſame, permitting this Man, and others, Garter's Enemies, to proceed in that Abuſe. He petitioned then her Majeſty, That a Commiſſion might be given to examine this, to the Lord Hundſon, Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Treaſurer, Lord Howard, Lord Admiral, the Earl of Ormond, Sir Chriſtopher Hatton Lord Chancellor of England, Baron Buckhurſt, and Sir John Wolley, Chancellor of the Garter.

IT was charged alſo upon this Officer, That in the Year 1571, he contrived and ſet out a great Pedigree, painted on Vellum, for the Duke of Norfolk, ſince his firſt Impriſonment in the Tower, for his Deſign of marrying with Mary Queen of Scots; which was finiſhed with his Arms on the Right Hand, and the Arms of that Queen on the Left, largely painted. He alſo ſet out and marſhalled the Duke's Pedigree in Glaſs, in the Windows of the great Chamber at the Charterhouſe, quartered with the Arms of the Daughter of Edward Duke of Bucks, attainted.

HOW much there was of Truth in theſe Things, it is not eaſily determined, for Dethick was a Man of great Pride and Paſſion (whereby he procured to himſelf many Enemies) otherwiſe a Man of Worth and Learning. His Father Sir Gilbert Dethick, Garter, had been in the Office ſixty two Years, and he himſelf had been ſent in her Majeſty's Service of the Garter, with the Right Honourable the Lord Hundſon to Lions in France, and with the Earl of Suſſex to the Emperor at Vienna, and with the Lord Buckhurſt to the French King, Charles.

AND as theſe publick Employments were for his Honour, ſo it muſt be recorded for his Commendation, That he endeavoured to redreſs many Things amiſs in the Office and Officers, reduceable to theſe Articles following:

I. The Contents of their Corporation in all Points, for the Aſſembly, Government, Erudition, &c. in the Office of Arms, to be kept and obſerved.

II. Chapters General and Particular to be had and ſummoned.

III. The Order and Attendance for waiting at the Court in High Feaſts, to be dutifully performed.

IV. The Houſe and College of the Office of Arms to be in good Order, inhabited, and repaired.

V. The General Library in the Office and Records there, to be preſerved, ratified, and augmented.

VI. The Kings, Heralds, and Purſuivants of Arms, to be there at convenient Times attending, upon Pain.

VII. The Viſitations made by Garter, Clarencieux, and Norroy, to be limited or appointed to the Heralds, or Purſuivants, and no other.

VIII. The Burials, or Funerals, to be orderly and duly ſerved, and Certificates entered.

IX. All Painters, Glaziers, Goldſmiths, &c. for dealing in Arms and Pedigrees, to be inhibited.

X. Arms, Creſts, Pedigrees, Searches, and all Precedents and Acts of Honour and Gentility, and all other Things, with the Conſents of the three Kings of Arms, in the General Office, to be ſet out and regiſtered.

XI. The Profits and Commodities faithfully collected, and generally, to ſuch as deſerve well, duly parted.

BESIDES all this, Dethick, Anno 1584, being then York Herald, propounded the ſetting up of an Office in the Court of Wards, for enrolling Deſcents and Pedigrees of every one that was Ward, or ſued Livery; for the politick Preſervation of the Remembrance of Parents and Progenitors, and of the Conjunction of Blood and Kindred with good Proportion; to preſerve that Law in Magna Charta, Chap. v. and the Statutes at Marton, Capitul. vi. and vii. wherein the Diſparagements for Marriages are eſpecially forbidden. The Wards did not enjoy the Benefit of Law in that Point: So that ſome Preſervation in Blood in the Courſe of that Court, might go jointly together with the Preſervation of the Inheritances.

THE eſtabliſhing of ſuch an Office in the ſaid Court of Wards, as he ſhewed to the Lord Treaſurer Burleigh, Maſter of that Court, would firſt tend to the adorning of it, for the Honour and Renown of the Queen, tending to a more perfect Preſervation of the Genealogies and Deſcents of her Wards, and to perpetuate the ſame, and moſt convenient for the Nobility and Gentry of her Realm. And, Secondly, It would be a good and direct Means to try and keep the Records of the Truth, againſt ſundry Occurrences and Subtilties, contrived in Prejudice of the Minors and Heirs of the ſaid Court.

AND whereas it might be objected, that ſuch an Office ſeemed to be needleſs, ſince the Heralds in their own Office were diligent to ſearch and regiſter all Pedigrees: To this he anſwer'd, That the Heralds of Arms had been, for Time long paſt, Meſſengers of Princes, allowed for their Languages, Travel, and Experience: But as for their Dealings in Pedigrees of Nobibility, they did but privately collect and obſerve the Marriages and Iſſues of Princes, Nobles, and Gentlemen, for their better Knowledge and Remembrance; whereof they took Notice upon Sight, Relation, or ſlender Surmiſes. But this Buſineſs was intended to be committed to the Cuſtody of one ſecret and ſworn Officer, an Herald: And the Pedigrees, and Conſanguinities to be regiſter'd in this Court, ſhould be grounded upon Matter of Record and Warrant, provided by Offices, Traverſes, and Inqueſts, containing the Names of the Perſons, Times, and Ages. Secondly, The Form and Manner of the Pedigrees in this Court, ſhould contain in the Roundel or Circle of each Deſcent, a certain Notice of the Age, Time, Liveries, and Obijt of each Perſon. Thirdly, This would be very grateful to the Ward in his Minority, to have ſo careful a Remembrance of his Pedigree; and it would carry with it a Proof of the Deſerts of Anceſtors towards their Poſterity: For herein ſome Note ſhould be made of the Tenure of the Lands and Manors, with this Addition, if thought proper, of Primus Acquiſitor; which might affect Children with a grateful and reſpectful Senſe of thoſe from whom they are ſprung, and from whom they derived their Eſtates and Honours.

Garter gives Mr. Rotheram Lord Grey of Ruthyn's Coat.

THIS Garter, in the Year 1595, fell into new Troubles, being cited by Earl Marſhals Commiſſioners, for giving George Rotheram, Eſq; the Coat of the Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, belonging to Henry Earl of Kent: To which by a Letter to Sir John Pickering, Lord Keeper, he anſwer'd, that the ſaid Rotheram, a Year before, had requeſted him to take Notice, according to the Cuſtom of his Office, of certain Records, one out of the Tower, and other Evidences, and by an antient Book, and a Monument, or Tomb-Stone, with Arms in the Church of Luyton, to ſet down his Pedigree, pretended from Anthony, Lord Grey of Ruthyn; which Pedigree he did exemplify for him, without any farther Approbation or Confirmation of the ſame, to be true; but only according to his Proofs ſhewn him, which he, the ſaid Rotheram was to produce or defend by Laws, and not by his Office: And ſo he, the ſaid Garter, reckoned himſelf to ſtand diſcharged.

Sentence againſt Garter in Favour of the Earl of Kent.

BUT the Complaint made by the Earl of Kent, to the Court of Earl Marſhal, ran againſt both Garter and Rotheram: And the Sentence alſo was againſt both, which was given in Favour of the Earl in June, Anno 1597, after long Hearings at ſundry Times, whereby it was adjudged, "That the ſaid Dethick Garter, and "Rotheram had manifeſtly done Wrong to the "Complainant, for ſo are the Words of the "Sentence, in making and publiſhing that Pe-"digree, in a Caſe ſo long ſuſpended without "Claim, to make a Shew that the ſaid Rotheram "was deſcended Lineally from Catharine, a "Daughter of Anthony Lord Grey of Ruthyn, "who was proved before them by divers Means "of good Credit to have died without Iſſue. "And the Commiſſioners of the Office of Earl "Marſhal, Judges in this Cauſe, did revoke "and annul the Bearing of the ſaid Arms of "the Earl of Kent, Quarterly by Rotheram, "and judged them to be unlawfully borne, "and determined that Part of the Pedigree, "made by Garter, to be unlawfully borne, by "which the ſaid Rotheram was made the Cou-"ſin and Heir General of Edmund, Earl of "Kent, by Anthony, eldeſt Son of the ſaid "Earl, reſerving to themſelves Power to tax "the Coſts and Expences of the Complainant "againſt the Defendants.

It is not certain how Garter got off from this troubleſome Affair; but he was afterwards Knighted, and ſome Time after that, in the firſt Year of King James I. depoſed.

THE Quarrel in theſe Times between the two Kings, Garter and Clarencieux, in regard of their Rights and Encroachments upon each other, made the Lord Treaſurer Burleigh, bethink himſelf of joining them both into one, that the Office might hereafter be enjoyed by one Perſon, Cook, Clarencienx, being now dead; but the Eſtabliſhment of the Corporation by Parliament, whereby theſe two Kings were appointed, obſtructed this Deſign, and other Conſiderations made it inconvenient: Wherefore ſome other Expedient was propounded for the begetting and continuing of better Agreement between theſe Kings; and particularly, that the Earl Marſhal, in preferring Clarencieux to the room of Garter, would take Order, that his Succeſſor in the Office of Clarencieux, might remit ſome Part of his Intereſt in Matters of Profit; then Garter might be well provided for, and the Corporation no Way altered.

Robert Cook, Clarencieux, dyed in the 37th Year of Queen Elizabeth, that is, about the Year 1593. Then the Lord Burleigh acting as Earl Marſhal, knowing he had many Books of Heraldry (ſome whereof he had taken out of the Office violently) ſent to the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs to take an Inventory of his Books; which they did, and returned a Catalogue of them. Then Dethick, Garter, propounded to the ſaid Lord, that they might have them at a reaſonable Price to the Office, being ſorry, as he ſaid, that the Mayor and Merchants of LONDON ſhould have the Peruſal of the Honourable Secrets of the Office at Arms, and have the Cuſtody thereof, who might not arreſt their Bodies, and yet keep their Records. By this Catalogue Cook ſeems to have been a very diligent Man in his Science; for it conſiſted of a vaſt Collection of Deſcents and Pedigrees of Engliſh Noblemen, Gentlemen and Strangers, Statutes of the Order of the Garter, antient Patents, Evidences, Certificates, Viſitations of the Counties of Leiceſter, Warwick, Lincoln, the City of LONDON, Surrey, Kent, Hampſhire, Suſſex, and Cornwall, Cambridge, Hertford, Eſſex, Suffolk, Norfolk, Juſts, Proceedings to Coronations, and Combats, divers Books of Tricks of Arms, Eſcripts, Writings, Muniments, with Seals to the ſame, Notes of the Wars of King Edward III. and many other old Papers and Offices from Henry III. to Henry VI.

Richard Lee, Richmond Herald, ſucceeded Cook in the Office of Clarencieux: Againſt him alſo Garter took great Offence, accuſing him to have invaded his Office for the Burial of Biſhops, and the Lord Mayor of LONDON. He accuſed him alſo to the Commiſſioners of the Earl Marſhal's Office, for uſing an Hearſe in the Funeral of a Knight Batchelor, viz. Sir Richard Baker. To which he anſwered for himſelf, That Knights Funerals had, according to Cuſtom, Hearſes, as well as Barons; nor did Hearſes make Difference or Diſtinction between thoſe two Degrees, and that the Uſing thereof was left to the Diſcretion of the Officers at Arms, as more indifferent: And that the ſaid Hearſe of that Knight wanted Ornaments, wherewith properly the Hearſes of Barons were garniſh'd. Garter alſo accuſed the ſaid Lee, that he had allowed, and ſet out the Arms, and Funerals, of one Bucher, a Mercer of LONDON, a Man of ſmall Parentage, with Helmet, Creſt, Coat of Arms, Penon, and a Pall, and himſelf Attendant in his rich Coat.

THERE was another Herald belonging to this College at this Time, and a Man of Note for his Virtues. His Name was Brookes, or Brookeſmouth, York Herald, being preferred thither from being Rouge Croſs Purſuivant, about the Year 1592. He underſtood neither Latin nor French, to qualify him for his Place, but having been once a Painter, he had an excellent Hand in Tricking Coats of Arms, hardly to be equalled by any of the reſt, as appears by a Book ſtill remaining in the Office, of his own doing, containing the Arms of the Nobility: Which curious Skill of his was the Reaſon that the Lord Burleigh favoured him, and once gave his Hand for him to be preferred to be Norroy againſt Camden, namely Anno 1593, when Edmund Knight, Norroy was very ſick and Camden, was nominated to the Place.

Brookeſmouth York Herald, an Antagoniſt of the great Camden.

THIS Brookeſmouth is beſt known for his preſumptuous Attempt to confute ſeveral of the learned Camden's Genealogies of the Nobility in his Britannia; againſt whom, that excellent Man (an unequal Match for him) vindicated himſelf ſo fully, and ſhewed ſo plainly the Ignorance and Malice of his Antagoniſt (and yet with much Gentleneſs and Modeſty) that he was thenceforth eſteemed eſteemed a very ignorant Man in Heraldry and a notorious Calumniator to all Poſterity. Beſides this, he was of a very ſcandalous and evil Life. He once broke open the Office, and took away all the Books belonging to it, and an Iron Cheſt, and took thence the Order and other Muniments. He was once condemned at Newgate for two Felonies, and burnt in the Hand. He was alſo guilty of Whoredom and Uncleanneſs. He was ſuppoſed to be a Procurer of perjured Perſons in the Star Chamber, detected in the Court of Requeſts. Twice degraded, and the Queen's Coat of Arms, which he wore, was pulled over his Ears. And for his Ignorance of Languages and Learning, and other Miſdemeanors, by the Judgment of the Earl of Leiceſter, and all wiſe Men, thought to be unfit to be an Officer of Arms, or to be permitted to come to her Majeſty's Preſence, being a Vagabond, and not worth 3 l. But after Leiceſter's Death, he began to ſhew himſelf again; and afterwards got ſuch Friends and Credit, that he dared to oppoſe himſelf againſt Garter, and vexed him both in the Exchequer and Star Chamber, by ſlanderous Acts and Suits commenced againſt him, and a great many vexatious Interrogatories, chiefly taken out of Informations, the ſaid Garter had, in Conſcience and Care of the Office, given the Lord Treaſurer concerning him; ſo that he was fain, Ann. 1594, to beſeech the ſaid Lord to conſider of his Credit and Service to the Queen for thirty Years, truſting that he would have Reſpect to him for his Office, Place and Parents, and how Brookeſmouth ſpared not Time, Means, Place, or Perſons to diſcredit him. In ſhort, he rendered himſelf uneaſy to all the Society, ſo turbulent was he in his Office, impugning all their honeſt Proceedings in Matters of Funerals, and other Caſes of Office, inſomuch that Sir Edward Hoby, Knt. deputed by the Lords in Commiſſion for the Office of Earl Marſhal, writ to them in this Manner: "There is one Brookeſmouth, now "York, a wonderful lewd Fellow, untemperate, "quarrelſome, and all the Office weary of him." Yet he endeavoured afterwards to obtain that Place of Norroy, with much Aſſurance of his own Qualifications, tho' he miſſed it.

DURING theſe Quarrels of the Kings and Heralds among themſelves, the Office was much neglected, the College ran to Ruin for Want of Reparation, and the Books were embezzled. The Lord Treaſurer Burleigh, and the Lord Howard, Lord Admiral, were commiſſioned by the Queen to act in the Office of Earl Marſhal of England; being authorized with full Power, from Time to Time, to call before them all Officers of Arms, Kings, Heralds, and Purſuivants, and to cauſe due Inquiſition to be made of all Manner of Arms by them given to any Perſon without good Warrant, or uſurped and taken by any Perſon without the like Warrant; and upon due Examination and Trial thereof, to revoke and diſannul all ſuch as ſhould be ſo unlawfully aſſigned or uſurped. By Virtue of this Commiſſion and Authority, in this decayed Eſtate of the Heralds College, they deputed Sir Edward Hoby, and Sir George Carew, Knights, to view it, and make Statutes and Orders for its better Regulation for the future: Which they did; laying before them the true Intent of their firſt Charter, and drew a Book for the Reformation of the Office, and preſented, Anno 1596, to the ſaid two Peers. It bore this Title;

"ORDERS to be obſerved and kept by "the Kings, Heralds, and Purſuivants of Arms "that now are, or hereafter ſhall be, and eſta-"bliſhed by us, the Right Honourable the Lord "Burleigh, Lord High Treaſurer of England; "Charles Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord "High Admiral of England; and Henry, Baron "of Hundſon, Lord Chamberlain of her Maje-"ſty's Houſhold, Knights of the moſt Noble "Order of the Garter, and deputed by Com-"miſſion for the Office of Earl Marſhal of Eng-"land.

THE Dedication of theſe Orders, to the Lords aforeſaid, giving an Account of the Reaſon and Occaſion of making them, was in the following Words:

"THAT whereas it had pleaſed their Lord-"ſhips by Virtue of her Majeſty's Commiſſions "to their Lordſhips, granted for the Exerciſe of "the Earl Marſhal's Office of England, to au-"thorize, ordain, and depute them, Sir Edward "Hoby, and Sir George Carew, Knts. for the "View of the preſent State of the Office of "Arms, commonly called Darby-Houſe, in "LONDON: Theſe were to ſignify unto "their Lordſhips, That according to the Inſtruc-"tions and Charge given in that Behalf unto "them, they had oftentimes made their Repair "unto the ſaid Office, and, as far forth as they "might, had accompliſhed the ſame in all "Points.

"AND foraſmuch as they found the Houſe "itſelf to be fallen into great Ruin, through "Want of due Reparations, an habitable Uſe, "the Office diſcontinued, and in as great De-"cay for Lack of Books, and general Exerciſe "therein, Garter and Clarencieux, at open "Wars for their Livings and Profits; and the "Heralds and Purſuivants, Factious among them-"ſelves, daily Arreſting, Suing, and Undoing "one another: Their Opinions therefore were, "that there could be no ſpeedier Reformation "of all their Errors and Abuſes, than the Re-"eſtabliſhment of the general Office, according "to the true Extent of their Charter and Cor-"poration, which appointed one Place, one "Common Seal, and mutual Conſent to all "their Deeds, and to be governed by the Earl "Marſhal, or Marſhals, for the Time being, as "had been accuſtomed. Out of whoſe Ordi-"nances Statutes and Decrees heretofore made, "they (the ſaid Sir Edward Hoby, and Sir "George Carew) had alſo gathered a Method, "or Form of Government which they held very "expedient and neceſſary.

"ALL which, ſtanding with their Lordſhip's "good Likings, they humbly preſented to be "ratified by their preſent Authorities under "their Hands and Seal: So that from henceforth "the ſame might not be altered, nor fruſtrated, "but be recorded in Chancery, until by Parlia-"ment it might be made an Act irrevocable, to "their Lordſhips perpetual Memory. Dated "September 28, 1596.

THE Exordium of the Book ſhew'd ſome of the Antiquities of this Office; viz.

"Firſt, That it appeared unto them the "Commiſſioners, that ſundry antient Ordinan-"ces, Statutes and Decrees had been made and "eſtabliſhed (as well by the moſt High and "Mighty Prince Thomas of Lancaſter, Duke of "Clarence, &c. as by divers other Conſtables "and Earl Marſhals of England, ſucceeding un-"til the Time of Thomas, late Duke of Nor-"folk) for the good Eſtate, Rule, and Govern-"ment of the Office and Officers of Arms.

"THAT it was manifeſt alſo by a memo-"rable Chapter, holden by the King's Heralds "and Purſuivants at Roan in Normandy, tem-"pore Henry V. what neceſſary Orders were to "be had and obſerved amongſt themſelves, and "their Succeſſors for ever.

"FURTHER, That in the Time of Ri-"chard III. the Kings, Heralds, Purſuivants "of

" of Arms, were by ſpecial Charter, under the " Great Seal of England, made one Body Poli- " tick, in Name and Fact, and Collegiate, at " Cole-harbour, in the City of LONDON, " confirming therein Garter, Principal King of " Arms of Engliſhmen, and Clarencieux and " Norroy Provincial Kings, by the Names of " King of the South, and King of the North, " to be continued in Succeſſion.

" Henry VII. and Henry VIII. confirmed and " allowed their Letters Patents, and by Signa- " tures licenſed their Authorities.

" Edward VI. amplified their Liberties and " Privileges under his Great Seal.

" AND Queen Mary re-eſtabliſhed their Cor- " poration in Derby-Houſe in LONDON, as " a College wherein the Kings, Heralds, and " Purſuivants ſhould inhabit, aſſemble, commu- " nicate, exerciſe, and keep all their Books, " Rolls, and Muniments, for their better Eru- " dition, and good Eſtate of her Majeſty's Of- " fice of Arms.

" ALL which being for many Years diſcon- " tinued, thorough great Diſorders amongſt " themſelves, and the Non-reſidence of late Earl " Marſhals, whereby many groſs Abſurdities " and Abuſes had been ingendered and commit- " ted; it was now her Majeſty's high Will and " Pleaſure, that they, the ſaid Commiſſioners, " ſhould enquire, ſee into, and reform all ſuch " Errors and Abuſes, as they found in the ſaid " Office, and Officers of Arms; and therefore " had eſtabliſhed ſuch good Orders and Decrees " as might, from henceforth, by no Remove, " Change, or Election, of any Earl Marſhal, " or Marſhals, be revoked, altered, or made " void, any Ordinance, Statute, Act of Office, " Charter, or Decree, heretofore made, to the " contrary hereof notwithſtanding.

AND then follows the Orders; the Titles whereof are; 1. The Site of the Houſe appropriated to the College of Heralds. 2. Records to be ſafely kept. 3. Daily Attendance in the Office. 4. Prerogative and Office of Garter. 5. Burials, &c. for Garter. 6. Office of Provincial Kings. 7. Burials, &c. for the Provincial Kings. 8. Arms to be given with the Conſent of the Earl Maſhal. 9. None to trick or publiſh Arms to Poſterity, without Privity of the Office. 10. Chapters to be holden for Learning, Knowledge, and Doubts. 11. Allowance for Purſuivants. 12. Avoiding of Controverſies among them. 13. How far Authority is yielded to the King's Chapter. 14. Power in Viſitations. 15. Oath for Performance and due keeping of theſe Statutes.

Preferments in this Office ſhould be obtained gradually.

THE common Practice of attaining to Preferment in this Office is gradual; firſt a Purſuivant, then a Herald, before any arrive at the Profit and Honour of a King at Arms: A very reaſonable Method, that the Heralds ſhould be taken from the Purſuivants, and the Kings out of the Number of Heralds, and that generally by the Antiquity of ſtanding, whereby the Hope of future Advancement might be a Spur to their Diligence, in the Study of Arms, and that Kings, by long training up in that Science, might be ſubſtantially learned and exerciſed in the Hiſtory of Arms, of whom the greateſt Knowledge, in ſuch Points, was reaſonably looked for, ſo to be the Arbitrators of thoſe Matters, and to whom the reſt were to apply themſelves for Reſolution in any Difficulties or Queſtions thereof.

AND therefore when Mr. St. George, (afterwards Sir Richard St. George) a learned Man, and of great acquired Knowledge, particularly in Heraldry, was recommended to the Lords Commiſſioners, and petitioned for the Place of Norroy, the Heralds and Purſuivants petitioned the ſame Lords; ſhewing, " That it was con- " trary to all Order of the Office, or was there " Precedent of the like, ſince their firſt Cor- " poration, and a great Wrong and Diſgrace to " them, that a Man, who had never been em- " ployed in her Majeſty's Service one Day, " ſhould overgo ſo many that had ſpent both " their Youth and Wealth in her Service, and " overthrown their better Fortunes, by the " Hopes and Expectations of Preferment here, " when it fell.

IT may be mentioned for the Honour of the Heralds, that from ſome of them have ſprung very noble Families; and others have been adorned with excellent Learning. The Right Noble Family of the Wriotheſleys, Earls of Southampton, was derived from John Wrythe, or Wriotheſley, in the Reign of Edward IV. who was firſt Antelope Purſuivant, or Faulcon, according to Dugdale's Baronage; and after, by Degrees, came to be Garter, and received Knighthood. He had Iſſue Thomas, Garter, and William Wriotheſley, York Herald, whoſe Son, Sir Thomas, was firſt a Clerk of the Signet in the Reign of King Henry VIII. then made Coroner and Attorney in the Court of Common-Pleas, ſoon after Principal Secretary of State; and in the 30th of Henry VIII. was ſent Ambaſſador to the Lady Regent in the Netherlands, to treat of a Marriage between King Henry and Chriſtiana Dutcheſs of Milan, a beautiful Lady, then in thoſe Parts. Two Years after he was made Conſtable of the Caſtle of Southampton; and two Years after that, had the like Command for the Caſtle of Portcheſter, and was made one of the Chamberlains of the Exchequer; a Year after that, viz. 35 Henry VIII. upon the League made by King Henry and the Emperor Charles, he was appointed one of the Commiſſioners for managing the Treaty conducing thereunto: And the firſt Day of January, the ſame Year, he was advanced to be a Baron, by the Title of Lord Wriotheſley, of Titchfield in the County of Southampton; which Titchfield was a Monaſtery newly diſſolved, which he had obtained. In the 36th of this King, he was made Lord Chancellor of England; and at the End of the ſame Year, was inſtalled Knight of the Garter; and the King, on his Death-bed, conſtituted him one of his Executors, and appointed him of Council to his Son Edward; who was to ſucceed him: And three Days before the ſaid Edward's Coronation, he had the Title and Honour of Earl of Southampton, as appears by Patents bearing Date the 16th of February, in the firſt Year of Edward VI: But by reaſon of the great Factions in this Reign, he was diveſted of his Office of Lord Chancellor, put from the Council, and afterwards confined; and the Honour continued in his Family for three or four Generations.

YET tohigher Honour did the Poſterity of another Herald arrive, viz. Pain Roet, Knight, Guienne King of Arms, who had two Daughters, Anne, the younger, whom Geoffrey Chaucer (our antient famous Poet) married; by whom he had Sir Thomas Chaucer, Knight, whoſe Daughter Alice was matched with Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, (by whom ſhe had no Iſſue) and afterward with William de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, who had by her John Duke of Suffolk, and others. Roet's other Daughter, Catharine, who was the Elder, married to Sir Otes Swinford, and afterwards to John of Gaunt, the great Duke of Lancaſter; of whoſe Iſſue by her, came a moſt Royal and Illuſtrious Off-ſpring, viz. eight Kings, four Queens, and five Princes of England; ſix Kings, and three Queens of Scotland; two Cardinals, above twenty Dukes, and almoſt as many Dutcheſſes, of the Kingdom of England; divers Dukes of Scotland, and moſt of all the now antient Nobility of both theſe Kingdoms: Many other Potent Princes, and eminent Nobility of Foreign Parts.

THOSE that brought Honour to this Office, for their Learning or Writings, were divers in the latter Days of Queen Elizabeth, ſome of whom are as follows:

Robert Glover. Robert Glover, Somerſet Herald; a Man of great Reading, and infinite Pains and Induſtry, who began the Book, called The Catalogue of Honour, in Latin, which was finiſhed by Mills, his Kinſman; wherein he undertook to clear the Deſcents from Royal Pedigrees of our Kings and Queens. He had Abundance of Rolls and Pedigrees, and antient Writings of Heraldry, which he had gathered together for his Uſe, beſides vaſt Collections made by his own Hands, and Travail, touching Arms, Books of Viſitation of 24 Shires, and Miſcellanea, wrote by himſelf. Camden mentions him oft, with Honour, and acknowledged he made much Uſe of him in Genealogies. Glover alſo communicated to Dr. David Powell a Copy of the Hiſtory of Cambria, tranſlated by H. Lloyd: He was thus uſeful in promoting the Knowledge of the antient Hiſtory of Britain, and would doubtleſs have been much more, had he not been taken away ſo early, being at his Death but Forty-five Years old. In the Pariſh-Church of Cripplegate (where he was interred) is a decent Monument ſet up to his Memory, with an Inſcription in Latin.

Francis Thynne. Francis Thynne, Lancaſter Herald, was well verſed in our Engliſh Hiſtory, and thoroughly ſtudied in Heraldry, before he ſued (Anno 1593) to be admitted into this Office: When he offered himſelf to the Lord Burleigh for his Skill in that Learning to be examined even in the deepeſt Points of Armoury, which he thought could not be attained to without Knowledge of Philoſophy and Hiſtory, he ſignified then, that he had drawn out a Series of the Lord Treaſurers, and compoſed a certain Circulary Pedigree of the Earls and Viſcounts of England. In Behalf of himſelf, thus he wrote to the aforeſaid Lord:

"How worthy I may be thereof, (the Place "of an Herald) it beſeemeth not me to ſpeak, "becauſe to praiſe myſelf, were Vanity; to "diſpraiſe myſelf, were Folly; and to compare "with any of the Office, were odious. Yet this "much without Offence I may ſay, That I be-"ſeech your Lordſhip to put me to Trial, whe-"ther I may not in Skill of Learning, even in "the deepeſt Points of Armoury, (which cannot "be known without the Myſteries of Philoſo-"phy, and the Judgment of Hiſtories) deſerve "that Place as well as ſome others. Many, I "know, have, and do labour for the Offices of "Clarencieux and Norroy, of whom I am not to "ſpeak, altho' I know who they are; what they "can do; how learned they be; how meet for "thoſe Places; how able to ſerve their Prince "and Country; and of how great Continuance "in Heraldry: But yet, if it like your Lord-"ſhip to caſt a favourable Liking to him, who "hath wholly tied himſelf to you and to your "Houſe, it may be that he which cometh laſt "may be preferred before the firſt.

Wood, in his Athenæ Oxonienſis, mentions ſeveral of his Works, ſome printed, and ſome in Manuſcript. Among the former are the Annals of Scotland, continued where Hollingſhed left off, viz. to the Year 1586. He drew up, beſides the Catalogue before-mentioned, another of the Engliſh Cardinals, which is printed in Hollingſhed, at the End of Queen Mary: Likewiſe a Catalogue of the Lord Chancellors in MS. another alſo, alphabetically diſpoſed, of ſuch as had wrote on the Engliſh Hiſtory, whether Engliſhmen or Foreigners, which is printed at the End of Hollingſhed's Hiſtory. There are alſo remaining in MS. Thynne's Diſcourſes of Arms; Collections of Antiquities; Sepulchral Inſcriptions, collected by him as well in the Churches of England, as other Parts; Notes on Chaucer's Works, with which he intended to put out that Author with a Comment, tho' he performed it not; but he aſſiſted Speght with his Notes and Directions, and with conſiderable Materials for writing Chaucer's Life.

SIR William Segar, Garter, wrote a Book entitled, Honour, Military and Civil.

SIR Richard St. George, Clarencieux, another learned Man of this Office. This Gentleman was in the Society of the great Antiquarians of thoſe Times, Sir Robert Cotton, Camden, Spelman, and others; and was one of thoſe, who endeavoured to revive the College or Society of the Studious of Antiquity, and their learned Meetings, that had for ſome Time ceaſed. Of him Weaver makes mention with Honour, and particularly, that he was ready to give him his Aſſiſtance in his Book of antient Funeral Monuments that he was writing.

John Hart, Cheſter Herald, wrote a Book of the Engliſh Orthography.

TO theſe may be added, Vincent, Brook, Lant, Sandford, and the elaborate Antiquarian, Sir William Dugdale, and laſtly, Elias Aſhmole, Eſq; Windſor Herald.

Camden. BUT Camden, Clarencieux, is an eternal Monument of Honour to this Society, who, beſides his Modeſty, and the Simplicity of Manners that adorned his great Learning, left two moſt incomparable Books to Poſterity, his Britannia, and his Annals of Queen Elizabeth. To which, his Remains may be added, ſet forth after his Death, by John Philpot, Somerſet Herald, who alſo may be reckoned among the Learned of this College, being Author of an Hiſtory of the County and Families of Kent, called Villare Cantianum.

Gybbon Author of Heraldo Memoriale. Mr. Gybbon, a learned Purſuivant, diligently collected out of the Engliſh and Scotch Authors, and other foreign Writers, a large Account of the great and important Services of the Heralds in former Times, which Collections he entitled, Heraldo Memoriale; ſhewing how antient Heralds have been; their Retaining to Princes; their Employments in War and Peace, and in Proclaiming and Publiſhing weighty Things; the great Eſteem of them, with their Rewards and other Accidents that happen'd to them.

And, firſt, as for their Antiquity, they were in Requeſt among the antient Grecians. Homer, in the ſecond Book of his Iliad, ſpeaks of nine Heralds in the Græcian Army; and the Romans made great Uſe of them: And as in Meſſages of War, and the like, ſo in Funerals, it was a Cuſtom among them, that the Heralds diſmiſſed the Mourners with the Word Ilicet, or Ire licet; i. e. You may withdraw. And this Ceremony is taken Notice of by the Deſcriber of the Funeral Solemnity of the Lord Henry de la Tour, Marſhal General of the Field and Armies of Lewis the XIVth of France.

THEY have been immediately retained by Kings and Princes, and have gone abroad with them to their Wars, and in their Progreſſes; and have been diſpatched by them to other Princes upon important Meſſages, and eſpecially upon Warlike Occaſions. The chief Nobility alſo have had their Heralds. The Earl of Northumberland ſent an Herald, named Northumberland, to King Richard II. (ultimo Reg.) for a ſafe Conduct, to come and commune with him. The Duke of Bedford had his Herald, named Bedford, whom he he ſent, after the Crowning of Charles VII. of France, to defy him. The ſame Duke ſent the Herald, Anno 1433, from Laigny, to the Lord Gaucourt, to offer him Battle, which was warily refuſed. The Duke of Gloceſter, and Earl of Pembroke, had his Herald, named Pembroke, whom he ſent, Anno 1436, to defy the Duke of Burgundy. Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, had Suffolk Herald, and Marteon Purſuivant. The Marquis of Dorſet kept Grooby Herald. Arthur Plantagenet, Viſcount Liſle, had Liſle Purſuivant. Baron Haſtings had Haſtings Purſuivant; and Sir John Chandois, and Sir John Falſtolph, had their Heralds; and ſo had Cardinal Wolſey, according to Stow.

THE French King, Contempary with our King Henry V. had his King at Arms, named Montjoy; the Duke of Burgundy, about that Time, had Toiſon d'Or, his King at Arms. The Scotch King had his King at Arms, ſtiled Lion; and they have commonly been about Princes in their Courts. It is noted by the Hiſtorian, as a ſtrange Piece of Negligence in King Lewis XI. of France, That he had oftentimes neither Officers of Arms, nor Trumpeters in his Court; and therefore (when he had Occaſion for an Herald) ſent a Varlet, or Yeoman, in a Coat of Arms, made of a Trumpet Banner, to King Edward IV.

THEY have been chiefly made uſe of in great Wars, between Princes in Hoſtility, for carrying Meſſages, Defiances, &c. Henry, King of Caſtile, ſent an Herald to the Black Prince, to know why he invaded his Kingdom.

Montjoy, King of Arms, was ſent from Roan from the French King, and Thirty-five of his Council, to aſſure King Henry V. he ſhould have Battle given him; and King Henry gave a great Reward, as well as a gallant Anſwer.

AGAIN, They ſent an Herald to the ſaid King, in a ſcoffing Way, to demand what Ranſom he was willing to give: To which he returned a ſtay'd and ſober Anſwer. This was before the Battle of Agincourt, Anno 1403.

AFTER they were broken and defeated, King Henry perceiving they began to rally, ſent an Herald to them, aſſuring them, That if they perſiſted, he would not only ſlay all the Priſoners already taken, but all ſuch as he ſhould take hereafter.

AFTER the Battle, Montjoy, and four other Heralds, came to know the Number of the Priſoners, and to deſire Burial of the Dead; and the King granted their Requeſt, and feaſted them.

MESSAGES previous to War, and Defiances, were uſed to be done by Heralds.

War denounced by Heralds. DENUNCIATION of War between Princes is by Heralds.

THE French King's Marſhal, Bonciquaut, by an Herald, denounced War againſt Pope Benedict XIII. upon his Refuſal to ſurrender the Popedom.

A French Herald at Arms, Anno 1635, ſent from Paris to Flanders, by ſound of Trumpet, denounced and proclaimed War againſt the King of Spain, and all his Dominions. This Herald fixed up, and left the Defiance in all the Towns as he paſſed.

Henry V. in the third of his Reign, ſent Antelope Purſuivant at Arms, from Southampton to the French King, to demand Reſtitution of what he detained wrongfully from him.

WINDSOR Herald was ſent, Anno 1418, to ſummon Roan.

Edward IV. ſent an Officer at Arms, a Norman born, to defy the French King, Lewis XI. Anno 1474.

THE Duke of Bedford, ſent Bedford, his Herald, to defy Charles VII. the French King: And Humphrey Duke of Gloceſter, by his Herald, defy'd the Duke of Burgudy, as before mentioned.

THE Emperor's Herald defy'd Francis I, King of France; and giving his Maſter all his Titles, of Caſtile, Leon, Arragon, Naples, &c. in a long Roll, King Francis commanded his Heralds to receive the Challenge, and repeat France as many Times as the other had Kingdoms, and petty Titles.

THE Earl of Surrey, 13 Henry VII. ſent Norroy King of Arms to the Captain of Hayton-Caſtle, (which was one of the ſtrongeſt Places between Berwick and Edinburgh) to deliver him the ſaid Caſtle, which he refuſed, affirming, he was aſſured of ready Succours.

WHILST the ſaid Earl lay at Hayton, the King of Scotland ſent to him Marchamont, and another Herald, with a Challenge either to Fight Army to Army, or Perſon to Perſon, upon certain Conditions; which Conditions were refuſed, upon diſcreet Conſiderations; and the Earl ſent back the Herald well rewarded.

THE Duke of Bedford, 1 Henry VII. marching againſt the Rebels, headed by the Lord Lovel, commanded the Heralds to make Proclamation, That if they would lay down their Arms, they ſhould have Pardon.

Heralds employed in, and after Battles. HERALDS alſo have been employed in, and after Battles fought; as in ſome Inſtances before. The Battle of Verneuil, Anno 1424, in the Reign of Henry VI. was ſo uncertain for a while, that no Herald could tell to which Party Fortune would be favourable. Afterwards, by Report of Montjoy, King of Arms for France, and the Engliſh Heralds there preſent, were ſlain of the French and Scots 9700, and of the Engliſh 2100.

In Combats. AS in publick Wars, ſo they have been concern'd about private Combats and Challenges. In the Year 1380, was a Combat between Sir John Anneſley and Thomas Katrington, who was accuſed by the ſaid Knight for betraying the Fortreſs of St. Saviour, in the Iſle of Conſtantine in Normandy. The Heralds in this Combat did their Duty, in calling the Combatants to the Performance thereof.

THE Heralds did the ſame likewiſe in the famous Combat intended between the Dukes of Hereford and Norfolk; which the King took up. The Ceremonial Circumſtances and Proceedings are well worthy the Reading.

IN a Combat, Anno 1467, between the Baſtard of Burgoine and the Lord Scales, the Advice of the Officers of Arms, as well as of the Conſtable and Marſhal, was asked and followed.

In Juſts. THEY have likewiſe been employ'd in Juſts and Turnaments.

Employed in Peace. NOR have they only been uſed in War, but in Peace alſo; as in Proclamations and Cavalcades, in attending Funerals, in giving Coats of Arms, and ſuch like.

WHEN Knights have been created, they have been proclaimed by the Voice of Heralds: So Camden ſhews in his learned Book, that Knights made in Scotland are proclaimed by the publick Voice of an Herald.

At Chriſtening of Princes. AT the Baptiſm of Madame Iſabelle of France, to whom our King Henry VIII. was Godfather, the Infant's Name was proclaimed by the Kings and Heralds of Arms, both of France and England, having their Coats of Arms adorned with the Arms of both Kings.

HERALDS attended at the Chriſtening of Queen Elizabeth and King Edward.

THE Proclamation of the Truce between King Henry II. of France, and Charles V. Emperor, with his Son Philip King of England, was performed by four Heralds.

WHEN

WHEN Pope Clement VII. was received at Marſeilles, three Heralds at Arms marched juſt after fifty Swiſſers richly apparell'd; the Heralds having their Coats of Arms blue, with Flowers-de-Liz of Gold.

AND when Ferdinand, Anno 1527, was to be made King of the Romans, before him went ten Troops, and an Herald at Arms, whom the Maſter of the Ceremonies with the Royal Banner followed.

WHEN Frederick Duke of Pruſſia was to be proclaimed King of that Country, the Grand Marſhal of the Court, and the Grand Marſhal of Pruſſia went at the Head of a great Number of Gentlemen, richly clad and well mounted. Then followed twelve Heralds at Arms, preceded by four and twenty Trumpets, and two Kettle-Drums, and followed by a Squadron of Dragoons. The Cavalcade having ſhewed itſelf in the principal Streets of the City of Coningsberg, the Heralds made Proclamation.

They marſhal Funerals.

THEY are alſo employed in attending at, and marſhalling the Funerals of the Nobility, which Part of their Office, they think unjuſtly invaded by Undertakers, and other Tradeſmen.

Mercator in Lorrain, ſhews how the Body of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, was by Boiſet, Herald of the Golden Fleece (at the Command of Charles V.) tranſported from Nantz to Bruges.

They take away, as well as give Coats of Arms.

AND as they give, ſo they ſometimes take away Coats of Arms.

Non ſolum Poteſtas conferendi nova Inſignia ſed Poteſtas augendi, mutandi, diminuendi Inſignia vetera, eſt penes Principem, & ejus Heraldos, i. e. It is in the Power of Princes and their Heralds not only to give new Arms, but to increaſe, change, and abate antient Coats.

Mackenzy ſaith, from Caſſanæus, that Heralds deviſed Godfrey of Boloin's Coat.

WHEN any Perſon is forfeited in Parliament in Scotland, Lion and his Brethren, Heralds, come in with their Coats and Formalities; and Lion doth publickly tear the Arms of the Party forfeited: And if he be a Cadet of a Family, he ſaith openly, The tearing of theſe Arms ſhall be without Prejudice to the Nobleman, or Chief, whoſe Arms theſe are. After which, he and his Brethren go to the Croſs, and there hang up the Shield reverſed, the Baſe or loweſt Point upward.

THE Eſteem and Value Princes have had for their Heralds, appears from hence; namely, how they have reſented Violences and Affronts uſed towards them. An Inſtance of this happened in the ſeventh of Richard II. Henry Spencer, the Warlike Biſhop of Norwich, undertaking Pope Urban's Quarrel againſt Pope Clement, raiſed 2000 Horſes and 15000 Foot, and landed at Calais; and performed great Feats of Arms in Flanders. At length a Flemiſh Army approaching, he ſent an Herald to know what Pope they adher'd to: But the Army being of Weſt Flanders (raiſed by themſelves) and not underſtanding the Law of Arms, ſlew the Herald. At which the Engliſh were ſo enraged, that joining Battle, 9000 Flemings were ſlain, according to Walſingham.

THEY have commonly had high Reſpects, and honourable Preſents from thoſe Princes to whom they have been ſent, whatever their Meſſages have been.

THE King of Scotland ſent an Herald to King Henry IV. to deliver up George of Dunbarre, Earl of March, who was fled into England. The Herald had an honeſt, honourable, and diſcreet, but negative, Anſwer.

WHEN the Duke of Gloceſter ſent his Herald Pembroke to the Duke of Burgundy, though it was to defy him, he was rewarded with a Cup, and Money.

King Henry VIII. Anno 1513, being at Tours, a King of Arms of Scotland, called Lion, with his Coat of Arms on, was by Garter, King of Arms, brought to the King's Preſence, and delivered a Letter to him from the Scotch King: And notwithſtanding the King was angry at ſome Words of the Herald, yet he commanded Garter to take him to his Tent and treat him. After this the Letters were read and anſwer'd, and an hundred Angels given to Lion at his Departure.

Rouge-Croſs, a Purſuivant at Arms in the Reign of King Henry VIII. was ſent to the Scotch King invading England, who detained him, and ſent one Hay, an Herald at Arms, to the Earl of Surrey, who hearing of his coming, ſent York Herald to accompany him, ſuch Reſpect in thoſe Days was paid to Heralds.

THEY have ſometimes been ſent upon Meſſages ſo unwelcome to them to whom they came, that they have been ſlain, and ſometimes ill treated, as the Flemings ſerved Henry Spencer's Herald, ſpoken of before.

Sabellicus, in his Hiſtory of the Venetians, mentioneth an Herald of theirs ſent to Francis Carrera, who cut off his Noſe and Ears.

Laurentius Valentius mentioneth an Herald belonging to the Earl of Urgelles, who carrying a Defiance to the Earl of Cordouna, was very ill treated by Ferdinand, King of Arragon.

IN Kett's Rebellion under King Edward VI. an Herald was ſent to proclaim a Pardon if the Rebels would lay down their Arms: To which a ſaucy Anſwer was returned by Kett, maintaining himſelf a true Subject, and that he needed no Pardon, being no Offender.

AFTER three Hours Fight, and a ſturdy one, Norroy King at Arms was ſent with a Trumpeter to 4000 or 5000, which were at Parkthorpe-Gate, to proclaim Pardon, if they would lay down their Arms. To which one Floteman, a bold Knave, gave as baſe an Anſwer as was given by Kett before.

AFTER the Earl of Warwick was come with a Reinforcement to the Army, Norroy was ſent to ſummon the Rebels to ſurrender the City; which was refuſed, and ſome told him, he was a counterfeit Herald, ſent to deceive them. This Norroy was employed often in this Rebellion, who was Gilbert Dethick, afterwards Garter, and Knighted, and was Great Grandfather to H. Dethick, not many Years ſince Richmond Herald. When ſome had told Norroy (as ſaid before) that he was a Counterfeit, others of Kett's Crew knew him, and averred that they had ſeen him in Scotland and Bologne, which ſomewhat pacify'd the reſt, and preſerved him from Outrage.

THE Scotch Rebels ſpoiled the King's Herald of his Coat and the Letters, when he was about to proclaim them Traitors.

John Cook, Lancaſter Herald, ſometime Servant to John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, (beheaded primo Mariæ) took upon him to beg the Head of his old Maſter, to be buried in the Tower of LONDON; which was granted with the whole Body, and performed accordingly. In Remembrance whereof the ſaid Cook did bear for his Creſt, a Bear's Head, Silver, crowned Gold, in Alluſion to the ſaid Duke's Badge, which was the Bear and ragged Staff.

A Purſuivant that brought News to Edward III. at Dover, of a Victory gained by Sir John Chandois againſt Charles de Blois, who invaded Britain, was made an Herald by the Name of Windſor.

Fox, in his Martyrology, tells us, that Caſper Sturme, the Emperor's Herald, was ſent to conduct Martin Luther from Wittenbergh to Wormes.

THE

THE Corpſe of King Richard III. after he was ſlain in Boſworth-Field, was ſtark naked, truſſed behind a Purſuivant, called Blanch Sanglier, i. e. White Boar, his Arms hanging on one Side the Horſe, and his Legs on the other, and in that Manner carried to Leiceſter to be buried.

Mr. Gybbon, the diligent Collector of theſe Hiſtorical Paſſages, concludes with the following Relation:

" Anno 1674, in the Month of February, at " the Counteſs of Devonſhire's famous Funeral, " I ſerved for Elias Aſhmole, Eſq; Windſor " Herald; and lying at Leiceſter, in our Way " to Derby, I had the Curioſity to go to an Inn, " and ſee the Stone Coffin, wherein once lay " the Body of the ſaid King Richard; which " at the Suppreſſion and Demolition of the Grey " Fryars in the ſaid Town of Leiceſter, was " digged up, and after turned to an Horſe-" Trough. At which Spectacle I could not but " be ſmitten with a melancholy Reflection, " and call to Mind the laſt Part of that known " Hexameter, mentioned by Wever, with a little " Variation to his Purpoſe, Sic tranſit Gloria Mundi.

IN Favour of the College, and alſo to preſerve the Honour of the Nobility and Gentry from Perſons of meaner Rank, intruding into their Families, and unjuſtly aſſuming their Arms, and for preventing falſe Blazonry, the late Queen Anne iſſued out her Command and Pleaſure in June, Anno Dom. 1707, confirming the following Order of the Deputy Earl Marſhal.

An Order of Lord Bindon, Deputy Earl Marſhal.

By her Majeſty's Command.

BINDON, M.

ON the 3d of March 1732, a Court of Honour, or High Court of Chivalry, was open'd in the Painted-Chamber, Weſtminſter, in the following Manner: About Twelve o'Clock the Right Hon. the Earl of Effingham came into Court, preceded by the Proctors, Doctors of the Civil Law and Officers of the Court in their Gowns, Purſuivants and Heralds of Arms in their Tabarts and Collars, and Garter and Norroy King of Arms, and follow'd by the Lords aftermentioned, who aſſiſted him upon this Occaſion, viz. the Dukes of Ancaſter and Mancheſter; the Earls of Strafford, Warwick, and Pomfret; the Lords Herbert, Haverſham, Foley, Onſlow, Howard, and others. The Court being ſet, and Proclamation made, the Duke of Norfolk's Patent, conſtituting him Hereditary Earl Marſhal of England, his Grace's Nomination of the Earl of Effingham, his Deputy, and his Majeſty's Approbation of him, were ſeverally read by the Regiſter, and then the Oaths of Allegiance, Abjuration, and Oath of Office, were adminiſter'd to his Lordſhip: The Patents of the ſeveral Officers of the Court were then read, and Petitions of Perſons to be admitted Proctors, who were ſworn accordingly, viz. Dr. Henchman, the King's Advocate; Mr. Mark Holman, Regiſter; Mr. Sandford Nevill, the Earl Marſhal's Proctor; and Mr. Greenley, Mr. Rawſon, Mr. Smith, Mr. Farrant, Mr. Cook, Mr. Shelton, Proctors of the Court of Arches, to be Proctors of the ſaid Court. The King's Advocate then exhibited a Complaint againſt one Mrs. Radburne, Relict of one Mr. Radburne, Merchant, for uſing divers Enſigns of Honour, not belonging to his Condition, at the Funeral of her ſaid Husband; and likewiſe certain Arms both at the ſaid Funeral, and likewiſe ſince upon her Coach, not being entitled thereto in her own or her Husband's Right, contrary to the Law of Arms; whereupon his Lordſhip was pleaſed to grant a Proceſs, and then adjourned the Court to the Hall in the College of Arms, on the 30th of the ſame Month.

PURSUANT to which Adjournment a Court was held at the College, by the Right Honourable the Earl of Effingham, aſſiſted by the Worſhipful Dr. Iſham, attended by the Kings and Purſuivants at Arms, dreſs'd in their reſpective Coats and Collars; when one Mr. John Phillips, was admitted a Proctor of the ſaid Court, and ſworn in accordingly.

AFTER which the Court was pleaſed to admit the exhibited Articles againſt Mr. Baynton, Executor of Mr. Ladbrook deceas'd, for uſing Arms, and other Diſtinctions of Honour, not belonging to his Family; when the Articles were admitted, two Witneſſes were produced, who were ſworn, and a Time appointed for their Examination.

THEN the Court proceeded againſt Sir John Blunt, Bart. and an Attachment was order'd againſt him for not appearing; but Dr. Andrews ſpeaking for him, and ſaying he had his Proxy, produced it; when Mr. Phillips appear'd as Proctor for him, and the Attachment did not go out, but he order'd to appear next Court. Dr. Andrews ſpoke mighty well on this Occaſion, ſaying, that Mr. Ladbrook's Executors could not be to blame; for they only gave the ſame Arms at the Funeral as they found in Mr. Ladbrook's Cuſtody, and which he always bore in his Lifetime unmoleſted; and that, as Viſitations had been diſcontinued ſo long, there was no Certainty in Arms; and that ſeveral Perſons who had a Right, might in Length of Time have loſt their Grants, or not regarded them; but yet if they were ſo loſt, that Loſs might be repair'd for Money, &c. and took Notice, that Arms were granted not long ſince to a Coffeeman on his paying for them; them: Then one of the Office anſwer'd, That ſeem'd to be levell'd at him for granting them; but he did it not alone, but with the Conſent and Approbation of his Brethren: He ſaid, That it was every where talked that the Court was held only to get Money; and he hoped that ſuch Perſons that ſhould be degraded might be debarr'd from ever having Arms granted them: Upon which Dr. Andrews replied, That was the Way to bring more Money in; for People fearing a Degradation might purchaſe Arms. Then were alſo Witneſſes produced to prove the Articles lately exhibited againſt Mrs. Radburne, Widow, who were ſworn, and a Time appointed for their Examination, and then the Court, which was the laſt that has been held on theſe Affairs, adjourned.

The COLLEGE of PHYSICIANS.

THIS College is a beautiful and magnificent Structure, ſituated on the Weſt Side, and near the North End of Warwick-Lane: It is built of Brick and Stone; of the latter whereof is a ſpacious Frontiſpiece towards Warwick-Lane, with a handſome Door-caſe, adorned with four Demy Columns, their Entablature and pitch'd Pediment of the Ionick Order, and here are Enrichments of Feſtoons; above this Portal it is adorned with Pilaſters and Entablament of the Corinthian Order, and upon the Entrance, before you come to the Quadrangular Court, is a lofty Cupulo erected on ſtrong Pillars (and covered with Slate) on the Top whereof is a large Piramid, and on its Vertex a Crown and gilded Ball.

ON the Weſt Side of the Court, the Front is very ornamental, built of Stone, adorned with eight Pilaſters below, and eight above them, with their proper Entablature, the former of the Ionick, the latter of the Corinthian Order, with a Triangular Pediment; and over the Door-caſe is the Figure of King Charles II. placed in a curious Nich, and between the Aperture and the lower Architrave theſe Words are done in Capital Gold Characters.

THE lower Intercolumns are 12 Windows enriched with Feſtoons, the Superior are ſix ſpacious arched Saſh'd Windows.

ON the Eaſt Side of the Court, upon the Weſt Side of the Theatre, appears finely done, the Statue, or Figure, of Sir John Cutler, under which are theſe Words done in Gold Characters.

OMNIS CUTLERI CEDAT LABOR
AMPHITHEATRO.

THE Inſide of this College, is as follows: Firſt, The Ground-Floor, at the Entrance of which is the Hall, where they uſed to give Advice to the Poor gratis; Northward from this is the Committee Room, where (on the South Side) are about 112 Folio Books, that were ſaved from the Fire in 1666; and Northward from this Room is the Library with neat Galleries, the Aſcent to it by a Stair-caſe finely wainſcotted: Here are a great Number of Books kept in good Order, with a Folio Catalogue thereof. Under the Gallery are five Claſſes, Ranges or Shelves, of large Folio's, one above another, extending round the Room, and ſeven ſuch Claſſes above the Gallery of Quarto's, Octavo's, &c. This Library was built at the College Charge, and ſtored with theſe Books by Sir Theodore Mayerne, the Marquis of Dorcheſter, who was admitted a Fellow, and other Benefactors ſince their Time.

ASCENDING up a Pair of ſpacious Half-pace-Stairs, at the South End of the Hall, you arrive at the Floor of the great Hall, where the Doctors meet on the firſt Friday of every Month, and dine once a Quarter. This Room is extremely ornamental, being wainſcorted with Oak up to the Coving of the Cieling, which is adorned with Fret-work. The Wainſcot with the Pilaſters and Entablament are of the Corinthian Order, enriched with Arms, Cupids, Feſtoons, &c. finely carved; at the upper End of the Room are the Pictures of Dr. Harvey, who firſt diſcover'd the Circulation of the Blood, and Sir Theodore Mayerne, one on each Side the Door, over which is the Buſto of Dr. Hamey. At the other End of the Room, on one Side the Door, is the Picture of Dr. Goodall, the late Preſident, and on the other, that of Sir Hans Sloane, the preſent worthy Preſident, both at full Length, the laſt painted by Murray in the Year 1724. Along the Eaſt Side of the Room between the Windows are the Pictures of Edmund Boulter, Eſq; King Henry VIII. Cardinal Wolſey, Sir Thomas Brown, and Dr. Walter Charlton.

NORTHWARD of this great Hall, and over the Library in the Cenſor's Room, where is Wainſcot and Fretwork as in the Hall, over the Chimney, is the Picture of Sir Thomas Millington, finely done at full Length, in his Habit of Scarlet: On each Side of him the Heads of Dr. Thomas Wharton and Dr. Henry Clark. In other Parts of the Room are the Pictures of Dr. Whiſtler, Sir John Micklethwaite, Dr. Gliſſon, Sir Edmund King, Dr. Joſias Clarke; and again, that of Dr. Hamey, with a Plan of ſome Lands in Eſſex, which he gave to the College.

THE ſecond Pair of Stairs are Geometrical Winding-Stairs, artfully contrived; theſe lead up to the Garret, where they uſed to dry their Herbs for the Diſpenſary, whilſt it was kept in the College; but that has been ſome Years laid aſide.

THE Theatre, under the Cupulo over the Entrance next the Street, is furniſhed with ſix Degrees of Circular Wainſcot Seats, one above another, where the Anatomy Lectures are performed; here being in the Pit a Table, alſo three Seats for the Preſident, one for the Operator, and the third for the Lecturer.

ALSO in the Preparing-Room are 13 Tables of the Muſcles in a human Body, as Fore-Side, Back-ſide, &c. each Muſcle in its proper Poſition.

THIS learned Society had, in antient Time, their College in Knight-Riders-Street, being the Gift of Dr. Linacre, Phyſician to King Hen. VIII. From which in ſucceeding Times they removed to Amen-Corner, where they had purchaſed an Houſe and Ground. Here Dr. Harvey, Anno 1652, built a Library and Publick Hall, which he granted for ever to the College, with his Library, and endowed it with his Eſtate, which he reſigned to them in his Life; Part of which he aſſigned for an Anniverſary Oration to commemorate all their Benefactors, and to exhort others to follow their good Examples; and for the providing a good Dinner for the Society.

THE Conflagration of LONDON, Anno 1666, conſuming this Houſe, and the Ground, being but a Leaſe, the Fellows of this College purchaſed, with their own Money, a large Piece of Ground in Warwick-Lane, whereon they erected the Building before deſcribed. At their firſt Inſtitution, there were but thirty Fellows of their Society; but King Charles II. upon their Requeſt augmented the Number to Forty; and King James II. considering the large Increaſe of this City in Buildings and Inhabitants, was pleaſed, in their new Charter, to increaſe the Number to Eighty, and not to exceed. Before this Charter none could be admitted a Fellow of the College, if he had not taken his Degree of Doctor in one of the Univerſities; but now all thoſe that have taken their Degree in any Foreign Univerſity are qualified to become Fellows.

But although, their Power is great to obſtruct the Practice in any one that is not of the College; yet, whether by Connivance or Favour, others practiſe Phyſick, viz. Empiricks, Mountebanks, pretended Chymiſts, Apothecaries, Surgeons, and even Women, which oft proves the Ruin of many Perſons: And yet by the Law of the Land, if any one that is not ſo qualified ſhall undertake a Cure, and his Patient die under his Hand, it is deemed Felony in him.

To this College belongs a Preſident, four Cenſors, and twelve Electors.

The Preſident is the principal Member, and is annually choſen out of the Society.

The four Cenſors have, by their Charter, Authority to ſurvey, correct, and govern all Phyſicians, or others, that ſhall practiſe within their Juriſdiction, viz. this City, and ſeven Miles round, and to Fine, and Impriſon, for Offences, as they ſhall ſee Cauſe. The following is

The College, or Corporation of Phyſicians, is eſtabliſhed by as great Authority as any Corporation whatſoever, and has certain Privileges granted to it; by which no Man, tho' a Graduate in Phyſick in either of the Univerſities, can, without a Licence under the Seal of the College, practiſe Phyſick within the City, or ſeven Miles about it; neither in any Part of the Kingdom, if he has not taken ſome Degree in one of the Univerſities.

By their Charter, likewiſe, they can adminiſter any Oath, impoſe a Fine or Impriſonment on the Offender, in that and ſome other Reſpects. They have Authority to ſearch and examine the Drugs and Compoſitions in any Apothecary's Shop, to ſee if they are good, and well made up. They can make Bye-Laws for their Government. They can purchaſe Lands or Houſes for the Society. They may uſe a Common Seal, &c. and by their Charter may practiſe Surgery, if they pleaſe. They are exempt from ſerving on Juries, or bearing any Pariſh-Office, or providing Arms or Ammunition.

Notwithstanding the Lives of Men, ſometimes the greateſt, even our Princes, are intruſted in the Hands of Phyſicians, yet was there no College of ſuch, directed by, and circumſcribed within Laws, till the Time of Henry VIII. before which, when Princes lay ill, their Privy Council made Choice of ſome to attend, out of the many Pretenders to the Science of Phyſick.

Thus when Henry VI. lay ſick, the Council aſſigned him three Phyſicians, namely John Arundel, John Saleby, and William Hatcliffe, and two Surgeons, named Marſhal and Warren, to adminiſter freely about his Perſon; and there is a Roll of that Tenor, mentioned by the Lord Coke in his Inſtitutes, Part IV. Page 251.

Phyſicians firſt incorporated by Henry VIII.

But in the 10th of Henry VIII. that King granted a Charter, dated the 23d of September at Weſtminſter, Weſtminſter, to incorporate certain Phyſicians in one Body, and perpetual Commonalty or Fellowſhip of the Faculty of Phyſick; and to have a perpetual Succeſſion, and a Common Seal, and to chooſe yearly a Preſident, to overſee, rule and govern the ſaid Fellowſhip in all Men of the ſame Faculty. By Virtue whereof, they were enabled to purchaſe and poſſeſs in Fee, and Perpetuity, Lands, Tenements, and Rents, and any other Poſſeſſion; that they might implead and be impleaded; that they might make Statutes and Ordinances for the wholſome Government and Correction of the College, and of all Perſons practiſing Phyſick within ſeven Miles of the City. And within that Compaſs, none to practiſe, as well as in the City, unleſs firſt allowed by the Preſident and Fellowſhip, upon Pain of Forfeiture of 100 s. for every Month; That four be choſen yearly by the Preſident and College, who ſhould have the Superviſing, Search, Examination, and Government of all the Phyſicians of the City, and Suburbs within ſeven Miles; and to puniſh them for their Offences, in not performing, making, and neglecting their Medicines and Receipts, and that by Fines, Amerciaments, and Impriſonments: That neither the Preſident, nor any of the Members of this College be ſummoned, or put in any Aſſizes, Juries, Inqueſts, &c.

AND that the firſt Movers and Procurers of ſo good a Fellowſhip, for the Safety of the Lives of Men, may be preſerved, and the Cauſes that moved the King to grant it may be known, they are both ſignified to us in the ſaid King's Letters Patent, where it appeareth, that the Suit was made by John Chambre, Thomas Linacre, and Fernandes de Victoria, all the King's Phyſicians, and three other Phyſicians, namely, Nic. Halliwel, John Francis, and Robert Yarly, and chiefly by the Interceſſion of Cardinal Wolſey, Lord Chancellor; and the Cauſes that inclined the King appeared in the Preamble to the ſaid Letters Patent; beginning thus,

Cum Regii Officiis noſtri munus arbitremur, Ditionis noſtræ Hominum felicitati omni ratione conſulere, id autem vel imprimis fore, ſi improborum Conatibus tempeſtivè occurramus, &c. That is, "Since we eſteem it a Part of our "Royal Office, by all Means to conſult the "Happineſs of ſuch as are under our Juriſdiction, "and that the Way to do it will eſpecially be, "if we ſeaſonably put a Stop to the Endeavours "of evil Men; We have thought it highly ne"ceſſary to reſtrain the Boldneſs of ſome wicked "People, who ſhall profeſs Phyſick more for "their own Covetouſneſs, than out of any good "Conſcience; whence many Inconveniences "may ariſe to the Ignorant, Credulous, and com"mon Sort: Therefore partly imitating the Ex"ample of well inſtituted Cities in Italy, and "in many other Nations; partly moved by "the Requeſt of certain grave Men, &c.

THIS Charter, they, who were the chief Procurers of it, got confirmed and ratified by Act of Parliament, Anno 14. Henry VIII. upon this Conſideration, as the Act ran; "For the making "the ſaid Corporation meritorious, and very "good for the Commonwealth of this Realm, it "was neceſſary to provide, that no Perſon of the "ſaid Politick Body and Commonalty, be ſuffered "to exerciſe Phyſick, but only thoſe Perſons that "be profound, ſad, and diſcreet, groundly learn"ed, and deeply ſtudied in Phyſick; and for the "enlarging of further Articles for the ſaid Com"monwealth to be had and made.

IN the 32d of Henry VIII. by another Act of Parliament, they were exempted from keeping Watch and Ward, and from being choſen Conſtables, or into other Offices within the City and Suburbs, as they had many Times before been compelled to their own Diſquiet, and to the Peril of their Patients. By the ſame Act four Phyſicians were to be choſen Yearly to ſearch the Apothecaries Wares, Drugs, and Stuff.

QUEEN Mary, Anno I. confirmed the College's Charter.

QUEEN Elizabeth gave them a Charter, dated at Weſtminſter, February 4, Anno Regni 7. to take Yearly for ever, one, two, three, or four Human Bodies, to diſſect or anatomize, having been condemned and dead.

THIS College of Phyſicians, in the Year 1575, that is, 158 Years ago, conſiſted of the following Members, a very few in Compariſon of the preſent Number.

THE College conſiſted, for the moſt Part about this Time, and before, of ſuch as were Favourers of Popery, and were guilty of divers Diſorders. This Account whereof was ſet up, viz.

THAT the Preſidents, Cenſors, Electors, and other their Officers, were not ſworn to the Queen's Majeſty, at their Admiſſion, as in other Corporations they were, whereby it came to paſs, that Papiſts continually had occupied the chief Rooms.

THAT Men, expelled their Univerſities for Religion, by this Means had from Time to Time been received into the College, and thereby advanced in their Credit.

THAT either they did wholly repel, or not without much Importunity, admit any whom they thought to be well affected towards the true Religion now received.

THAT ſuch as had gone beyond the Seas to take the Degree of a Doctor, becauſe they would avoid the Oath of the Supremacy (miniſtred according to the Statute of our Univerſities) had ſhortly upon their Return been admitted without any Oath miniſtred unto them.

THAT ſuch as had been impriſoned for Religion, or other great Matters, had kept themſelves in Office at their own Pleaſures, contrary to the College Statutes and their Oaths, and detained in their Hands the College Goods, diſdaining to make any Account of the ſame.

THAT ſome of the Electors, who had fled for Religion out of the Realm, had been kept in their their Offices, and ſtoutly defended, as chief Members of the College (being at Louvain) until they died; that other honeſt and true Subjects might be kept out of the ſame Rooms.

THAT they made private Conventicles of a few, to bring to paſs their Purpoſes and Elections, which ought, by the College Statutes, to be done on Quarter Days only, and the whole Company being thereunto called.

THAT the College Statutes were generally imperfect, and partly Popiſh.

THESE Things being declared, and complained of to the Council, by ſome well affected, in the Year 1575, Reformation of them was earneſtly deſired.

THE City would now and then (not taking Notice of their Cuſtoms and Privileges) lay common Burthens and Duties upon them, as upon other Inhabitants of the City. This made the College once Petition the Queen's Council, That according to their antient Cuſtoms and Privileges, they might be relieved from what was laid upon them. And upon their humble Petition, it was then ſignified to the Lord Mayor, and his Company, That the College ſhould be no more moleſted in the Premiſes; yet in the Year 1596, the like Moleſtation towards them was attempted again: And now they applied to the Privy Council again, That by their honourable Favours they might be protected; and that it might ſtand with their good Pleaſures, that it might be ſignified to the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, that as ever heretofore they had been diſcharged, ſo now at this preſent likewiſe, they, and the Society of the College of Phyſicians might be forborn. This was dated February 4, 1596. The Preſident and Society of the College of Phyſicians of LONDON.

KING James I. granted the College his Charter, dated October 8, Anno Regni 15.

AND King Charles II. granted them a Royal Charter, March 6, Anno Regni 15.

THIS College, according to the Power granted them by theſe and other Charters, have called before them, that is, the Preſident, or in his Abſence, the Vice-Preſident, and the Cenſor, the Surgeons, Apothecaries, and other Perſons, who have practiced Phyſick without their Allowance; and have ſometimes warned them to forbear, and ſometimes impoſed pecuniary Penalties, or Impriſonment upon them: For they may convent any Phyſician, or Practicer before them, and examine them concerning their Skill in the Faculty of Phyſick; and if they ſhall not appear to their Summons, or appearing, refuſe to anſwer, or to be examined, the College may aſſeſs a Penalty or Fine on them, for every Default of Appearance, or Refuſal to anſwer; The Time for one Default not exceeding 40 s. or if any adminiſter unwholſome, or noiſome Medicines, he may be fined according to their Diſcretions, not exceeding 10 l. or Impriſoned, not exceeding fourteen Days, unleſs for Non-payment of Fine, when it ſhall be lawful to detain them in Priſon till it be paid.

THERE have been ſeveral remarkable Suits commenced between the College, and other unlicenſed Practiſers of Phyſick; as by Edmund Gardiner, Dr. Bonham, one Butler, one Huybert, and others. The Pleadings whereof are to be found in a Book intitled, The Royal College of Phyſicians; and an Hiſtorical Account of the College's Proceedings, &c. publiſhed by Dr. Charles Goodall, Fellow of the ſaid College, Anno 1684.

UPON a Complaint made about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, by Jenkins and Read againſt the College, which had uſed ſome Puniſhment towards them for evil Practice of Phyſick, and exerciſing that Art without their Licence, after a long and careful Hearing on both Parts, Popham, Lord Chief Juſtice, in the Year 1602, gave his Judgment; the Sum of which was in theſe Particulars, 1. That there was no ſufficient Licenſe without the College Seal. 2. That no Surgeon, as ſuch, might Practice Phyſick; no, not for any Diſeaſe, tho' it were the Great Pox. 3. That the Authority of the College was ſtrong and ſufficient to commit to Priſon. 4. That the Cenſure of the College, riſing from leſs Mulcts to greater, was equal and reaſonable. 5. That it were fit to ſet to Phyſician's Bills the Day of the Month, and the Patient's Name. 6. That the Lord Chief Juſtice could not bail, or deliver, the College's Priſoner, but was obliged by Law to deliver him up to the College's Cenſure. 7. That a Freeman of LONDON might lawfully be impriſoned by the College. 8. That no Man, tho' never ſo learned a Phyſician, or Doctor, might practice in LONDON, or within ſeven Miles, without the College's Licence.

The Diſpenſary.

ALTHO' the College Diſpenſaries have for ſome Years been given over, yet it will not be amiſs in this Place to give ſome ſhort Account of them. This Charitable Undertaking was ſet on foot by ſome Members of the College, for the Benefit of the Sick Poor, after the Apothecaries had been ſollicited, in vain, to do the ſame Thing. And this they were moved unto, not only from a Principle of Charity, but by the Intreaty of a Committee of the Common-Council of LONDON; and to juſtify themſelves from a Slander caſt upon them by the Apothecaries, that they took no Care of the Poor. For when the Apothecaries were found Fault with for Practiſing, they uſed to alledge in their Juſtification, That the Poor having no more to give to a Phyſician, they would periſh for Want of being taken Care of, if they (the Apothecaries) did not look after them. This gave Occaſion to the Phyſicians to ſet their Care of the Poor in the View of the World, not only by giving their Advice Gratis, but alſo by helping them to Phyſick at very low Rates, which they did at the Diſpenſaries, ſet up, one in the College, where two Phyſicians ſat conſtantly every Wedneſday and Saturday; another in St. Martin's-Lane, near Charing-Croſs, where two alſo ſat to give their Advice on Mondays and Thurſdays; and a third in St. Peter's-Alley, Cornhill, where the like Attendance was given on Tueſdays and Fridays.

AT theſe Diſpenſaries, not a Dram of Phyſick was given out but by Bill from one or other of the Subſcribers to the Undertaking. Theſe Bills were always kept upon a File, and alſo tranſcribed into a Book; ſo that all the reſt of the Subſcribers, the Patient, or whoſoever elſe that was concerned, might at any Time be fully ſatisfied what was given. And here the Phyſician, having no other Intereſt or Deſign but to cure and oblige his Patient, preſcribed but few Things, and thoſe the moſt effectual he could think of: For, ſeeing he had no Profit by the Medicines, he had no Temptation to multiply them, nor to diſguiſe ordinary cheap Things, to obtain great Prices for them. Nor did the Apothecaries, who were employed herein, ever take the Liberty to put one Thing for another, a Cheap for a Dear, becauſe they would have got nothing by it, having a certain Salary, which was not affected by Profit or Loſs.

IN theſe Repoſitories there was the greateſt Aſſurance poſſible, that all the Drugs and Preparations were good; the Subſcribers by two and two taking their Turns to buy in the choiceſt Drugs they could meet withal. As to Simple and Compound Preparations, the Head Apothecary at the College perfectly underſtood them all, as well well Chymical as Galenical: And he with his Aſſiſtants prepared all the Store of Medicines, not only for the Diſpenſary there, but for the two others. They were conſtantly every Day from Morning till Night in this Buſineſs, and were always at Hand to make up the Subſcribers Bills as they came in. They neither fetch'd in the Bills nor carried out the Medicines, ſo that all the preſcribed Phyſick was diſpenſed with the utmoſt Diſpatch and Exactneſs. The Apothecaries being always on the Spot, no Patient ran the Risk of a Boy's Careleſneſs or Ignorance; and laſtly, Medicines were diſpenſed at a cheaper Rate, than even a Phyſician, who ſhould make and give out his own Phyſick apart, could poſſibly afford them; for every one muſt then keep one Servant at leaſt, and employ two Rooms for preparing and diſpenſing his Medicines; whereas four Apothecaries, and three Diſpenſaries ſerved all the Subſcribers, which did conſiderably contract the Charge: And this good Husbandry was wholly for the Benefit of the Patients; for the Subſcribers had not a Farthing Profit, the Price of the Phyſick being calculated, merely to defray the Servants Salaries and Houſe-Rent.

NOTWITHSTANDING the charitable Intention of this Undertaking, there were many of the College that did not ſubſcribe to the Diſpenſary: The following is a Liſt of the Names, and the Copy of an Inſtrument drawn up by thoſe who did;

CHAP. XIII.

Of GRAMMAR and CHARITY-SCHOOLS.

ALTHOUGH there had been three great Schools, belonging to the chief Churches in LONDON, in the Reign of King Stephen, as is before-mentioned in Chap. XI. yet groſs Ignorance and Want of Learning had ſo far prevailed, in the Time of King Henry VI. that they were quite neglected and gone to Decay: Wherefore, for the Reſtoring of Learning, four Clergymen, the Parſons of Pariſhes in the City, petitioned the Parliament ſitting in the 25th Year of that King's Reign, that they and their Succeſſors might be allowed to ſet up Schools in their four reſpective Churches, and appoint School-Maſters in them, viz, in Great Alhallows, St. Andrew's Holborn, St. Peter's in Cornhill, and St. Mary Colechurch.

THE Petition is now among the Records in the Tower, and ran in theſe Words:

NINE Years after, viz. 34 Henry VI. Five other Schools were ſet up in other Churches in LONDON, by the Care of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Biſhop of LONDON, confirmed by the King's Letters Patents; to wit, one within the Church-yard of St. Paul's, a Second at the Collegiate Church of St. Martin's Le Grand, another at St. Mary de Arcubus, that is, Bow-Church in Cheapſide, another at St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt, and the fifth at the Hoſpital of St. Anthony's.

THIS was done to check and ſuppreſs other ſmaller Schools ſet up by illiterate Men, who did the Youth more Harm than Good, as is hinted in the King's Letters Patent following:

Apud Weſtm. 6 Die Maii.

THERE was alſo an Act of Parliament to confirm this.

OF theſe old Schools, St. Anthony's ſtood the longeſt; but they have been all many Years diſſolved, not but that there are others and better in their Rooms. The Difference between theſe and the latter Schools is, that though theſe were Publick and Common Schools, yet they were not Free; only ſuch Boys as were hopeful, and their Parents poor, had their Schooling paid for by the voluntary Charity of Noblemen, Merchants, and Others: But the Schools which, of later Times, are called Free-Schools, do much exceed them, in that they are Houſes founded by pious Men, and a yearly competent Maintenance ſettled upon the Teachers, on Condition, that they teach freely a certain Number of the Children of the Pariſh where they are built, without taking any Salary or Reward from their Parents or Friends. But firſt of the old Schools.

St. ANTHONY's SCHOOL.

St. Anthony's School.

THAT of St. Anthony's, though it be now extinct, yet for the Antiquity and Fame of it, when it ſtood, we are bound to go and viſit even in the Ruins. It was ſituated in Broad-ſtreet-Ward, in the Pariſh of St. Bennet Fink, and near the Place where the French Church now ſtands in Treadneedle-ſtreet. This School was large, and (before St. Paul's School was founded) of the chief Account in LONDON; and many eminent Scholars were bred up in it, of which Sir Thomas More was one, whoſe Maſter was named Nicholas Holt, a Man of Fame and Learning in thoſe Days. The School was Part of an Hoſpital well endowed, dedicated to St. Anthony of Vienna, which at length Edward IV. annexed and appropriated to the Collegiate Church of Windſor, to enjoy the ſame with all the Eſtate thereunto belonging, to their proper Uſe, when it ſhould become void by Death, Reſignation, or otherwiſe. The Revenues of the School being at length embezzled, it is now come to nothing: Yet it was in Being in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Time, when one Hilton, a grave and good Man, was Maſter. But more of the Antiquities of this School may be read when we come to Broad-ſtreet-Ward.

St. PAUL's SCHOOL.

St. Paul's School.

THE next Foundation appointed for the Education of Youth, both for Antiquity and Repute, is St. Paul's School, built, and well endowed, by an excellent, pious, and learned Clergyman, Dr. John Colet, Dean of St. Paul's, the only ſurviving Son of Sir Henry Colet, Knt. Citizen, and Mercer of LONDON, and twice Lord Mayor of the ſaid City. This School was founded, and a Maſter for it provided in the Year 1509, for One hundred and fifty three Children to be taught freely: The Dean, perhaps, in that preciſe Number, having his Mind upon the like Number of great Fiſhes caught by St. Peter in that miraculous Draught, upon the Direction that Chriſt gave to caſt down the Net on the Right Side of the Ship, John xxi. 11. And ſuch was his generous and liberal Mind, that he ſettled his whole Patrimony upon it in his Life-time. The School-houſe is large and ſpacious, fronting the Street on the Eaſt of St. Paul's Cathedral. It conſiſteth of eight Claſſes, or Forms; in the firſt whereof Children learn their Rudiments; and ſo according to their Proficiency are advanced unto the other Forms till they riſe to the Eighth. Whence, being commonly made perfect Grammarians, good Orators and Poets, well inſtructed in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, and ſometimes in other Oriental Languages, they are removed to the Univerſities; and many of them enjoy Exhibitions, ſome of Ten Pounds a Year for Seven Years (if they tarry ſo long) towards their Maintenance there. The School is governed and taught by two Maſters, viz. an High Maſter and a Surmaſter, and a Chaplain: Whoſe cuſtomary Office was to read the Latin Prayers in the School (framed for the peculiar Uſe thereof) and to inſtruct the Children of the two firſt Forms of the Elements of the Latin Tongue, and alſo in the Catechiſm and Chriſtian Manners; for which there is a Room called the Veſtibulum, being the Anti-Room to the School, where the Youth are to be initiated into the Grounds and Principles of Chriſtian Knowledge, as a good and proper Introduction into other Human Learning. The pious Founder dedicated this School to the Child JESUS, (who ſat among the Doctors at twelve Years old) as the great and compaſſionate Patron of the Children here to be educated. This Part of the Founder's Epitaph ſhews:

Quique Scholam ſtruxit celebrem cognomine JESU.

So that the true Name of this School is Jeſus's School, rather than Paul's School; but the Saint hath robbed his Maſter of his Title.

THE Founder delighted in Inſcriptions and Mottos, which he appointed to be ſet up in ſeveral Parts and Places of the School, as ſhort and pithy Intimations of his Mind and Intentions, which were all there remaining before the great Fire. Over the Windows on the Outſide, toward the Street, were theſe Words engraven in great Capital Letters: SCHOLA CATECHIZATIONIS PUERORUM, IN CHRISTI OPT. MAX. FIDE ET BONIS LITERIS. Over the School-Door, INGREDERE UT PROFICIAS. Upon each Window on the Inſide were to be read theſe Words painted on the Glaſs: AUT DOCE, AUT DISCE, DISCE, AUT DISCEDE, ſuggeſting both to Scholar and Teacher their Duty or Doom.

In the Veſtibulum, which was the Anti-chamber to the School Room, was his Inſcription in Capitals upon the Walls, ſhewing for what End and Purpoſe this Apartment was intended. HOC VESTIBULO CATECHIZENTUR PUERI IN FIDE, MORIBUSQUE CHRISTIANIS, NEQUE NON PRIMIS GRAMMATICES RUDIMENTIS INSTITUANTUR, PRIUSQUAM AD PROXIMAM HUJUS SCHOLÆ CLASSEM ADMITTANTUR. In another Place of this Veſtibulum was engraven, PUERITIÆ CHRISTIANÆ JOH. COLET. DEC. Sti. PAULI HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT: Denoting how qualified, (viz. with Chriſtian Knowledge and Manners) it was the Founder's Will thoſe ſhould be, who were to be Scholars here. Over the Door going into the School Room, out of the Veſtibule, is this Verſe.

Mente { Velis / Poſſis / Adſis } hac Lege recludor.

In the School Room over the Door was this Inſcription: PUERI IN HAC SCHOLA GRATIS ERUDIENDI, C. L. III. TANTUM AD NUMERUM SEDIUM. Underneath which, ſince the re-building the School by the Mercers, for an ever-grateful Remembrance, theſe Lines were added:

Quod Fauſtum ſit & Felix.

" Ad ſeræ Poſteritatis Imitationem, Æternitatem Famæ ſuæ: Poſt luctuoſam Urbis Londinenſis deflagrationem cIↃ IↃc Lxvi, ampliſſima MERCERORUM Societas Fidem Fundatori MAKAPITHTΩ, datam ſanctiſſimè per ſolvens, Scholam hanc de integro extruendam inſtaurandamque, curavit: Perfecitq; Dno. RICHARDO FORD, Equite, Urbis Præfecto, Cuſtode vero, totiuſq; Negotii aſſiduo diligentiſſimoq; Procuratore, Dno. ROBERTO WARE.

Dignos laude Viros Muſa vetat mori.

At the upper End of the School, facing the Door, was a decent Cathedra, or Chair, placed, ſomewhat advanced, for the High Maſter to ſit in, when he pleaſed to teach and dictate there: And over it was a lively Effigies (and of exquiſite Art) of the Head of Dr. Colet, cut (as it ſeemed) either in Stone or Wood, and over Head in Capitals: DEO OPT. MAX. TRINO ET UNI JOHANNES COLETUS DEC. Sti. PAULI LONDIN. HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT. On which Figure an excellent Poet, and once a Scholar of this School, made theſe Verſes.

Eloquio juvenes ubi Lillius ille polivit,
In Statua Spiras, magne Colete tua,
Quam ſi Praxiteles, feciſſet magnus, & ille
Forſitan æquaſſet, non ſuperaſſet opus,
Hac Salva Statua, divina Forma Coleti
Temporibus longis non peritura, manet.

But this Figure was deſtroyed with the School in the great Fire, yet was afterwards found in the Rubbiſh by a curious Man, and Searcher into the City Antiquities, who obſerved, that it was caſt and hollow, by a curious Art now loſt.

As ſoon as Colet had built his School, he provided a Book for his young Scholars; which he called, An Introduction of the Parts of Speaking for Children and young Beginners, into Latin Speech: Which is the Ground and firſt Draught of the Book now called the Accidence. By this Introduction he put the firſt Rudiments into an eaſier and apter Method for Learning than any was before: And this he recommended in a Prefatory Epiſtle to William Lilly the Maſter, to teach it the Children; Dated the Calends of Auguſt 1509.

About this Time he procured from his Friend Eraſmus Roterodamus, another Book for his School, namely, that entitled, De Copia Verborum; for which he promiſed the ſaid Eraſmus (while he was once walking with him in his Garden) fifteen Angels, as a Gratuity: And no queſtion Eraſmus was well pleaſed to contribute ſomething to ſuch a Foundation, which he himſelf took Occaſion ſometimes to commend and extol, as he did in a Letter to Colet, Anno 1512, in theſe Words: Ludum literarium longe pulcherrimum ac magnificentiſſimum inſtituiſti, ubi ſub electiſſimis ac probatiſſimis præceptoribus Britannica Pubes rudibus ſtatim annis ſimul & Chriſtum & optimas imbiberet literas; i. e. " You have " erected a moſt beautiful and noble School, " where, under the choiceſt and moſt approved " Maſters, the Engliſh Youth, might ſoon after " their Childhood, imbibe both Chriſt and the " beſt Learning.

In the Year 1513, Colet ſent Lilly another Book for the School, of the Conſtruction of the Eight Parts of Speech, which was done by Eraſmus alſo, upon the earneſt Suggeſtion of Colet, being nothing but the Emendations of, and Additions to, ſuch a Work, firſt done by Lilly. This was the Grounds of our Latin Syntaxis.

This Book De Conſtructione went for ſome Time under Eraſmus's Name; yet Eraſmus declined to have it reckoned his, as being Lilly's Ground-work: And Lilly, on the other Hand, modeſtly refuſed to have himſelf made the Author, after ſuch conſiderable Changes and Improvements, made by Eraſmus; who in the Year 1515, wrote a Preface before this Book, now commonly called the Syntaxis, wherein he publickly diſowned it to be his, out of reſpect to Lilly; concluding with theſe Words, Verum hæc mihi præfari viſum eſt, ne poſt hac quiſquam, ut meum amplectatur; i. e. " But this I thought " good to preface, that none hereafter might take " the Book as mine.

Colet alſo framed a ſhort Catechiſm in Engliſh, for the Youth of his School, which he obliged all to learn, and was uſed in the Times of Popery to be bound up at the Beginning of the Accidence. It conſiſted of the Articles of the Chriſtian Faith; the Doctrine of the Seven Sacraments; and Explanation of the Love of God, of our own ſelves, and of our Neighbours; and laſtly, divers ſhort Precepts for a good Life. To which he joined in the Latin, the Apoſtle's Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ave Maria, and two ſhort Prayers; one to the Virgin Mary, and the other to Jesus, the Guardian of the School. And if the ſuperſtitious Parts of this Catechiſm had been laid aſide, and the reſt, which is very pious, had been retained for the Uſe of the School, it would have been well done, and the Founder's Will more complied with.

The primary Inſtitution, Ordinances, Appointments, and Documents of this School, may be gathered from an old Statute Book, wrote by the Founder's own Hand, and by him delivered to Lilly; which is thus inſcribed, Hunc libellum ego Joannes Colet tradidi manibus, magiſtri Lilii, xviii die Junii, Anno Dom. Mccccxviii. It begins, Johannis Coleti Fundatoris Scholæ manu ſua Propria prologus. " John Colet, Son " of Henry Colet, Dean of St. Paul's, deſiring

" nothing more than Education and bringing " up Children in good Manners and Literature, " in the Year of our Lord One thouſand five " hundred and twelve, built a School [not fully " finiſhed till that Year] at the Eaſt End of St. " Paul's Church, for an Hundred and fifty three " Boys, to be taught free in the ſame.

" And ordained there a Maſter, a Surmaſter, " and a Chaplain, with ſufficient and perpetual " Stipends ever to endure; and ſet Patrons, " Defenders, Governors and Rulers of the ſame " School, the moſt honeſt and faithful Fellow- " ſhip of the Mercers of LONDON.

" And, for becauſe nothing can continue long " and endure in good Order without Laws and " and Statutes, I, the ſaid John Colet, have " expreſſed my Mind, what I would ſhould be " truly and diligently obſerved, and kept of " the ſaid Maſter, Surmaſter, and Chaplain, " and of the Mercers, Governors of the School; " that in this Book may appear to what Intent " I founded this School.

THEN follow his Ordinances, " That he " founded the School in the Honour of Chriſt " Jeſu in pueritia, and of his bleſſed Mother " Mary. That the High Maſter ſhould be " choſen by the Wardens and Aſſiſtants of the " Mercers. That he be a Man whole in Body, " honeſt, virtuous, and learned in good and " clean Latin Literature, and alſo in Greek, " if ſuch might be gotten: A wedded Man, " a ſingle Man, or a Prieſt, that hath no Be- " nefice with Cure or Service. His Wages to " be a Mark a Week, and a Livery-Gown of " four Nobles, delivered in Cloth. His Lodg- " ings to be free: And to have the Tenement " of Stevenhith to reſort unto. That the Sur- " maſter be verſed in Learning and well Let- " ter'd, to teach under the Maſter; either " ſingle Man, Wedded, or Prieſt, that hath no " Benefice with Cure or Service: To be whole " in Body. The High Maſter to chooſe him, as " the Room ſhall be void; and to be confirmed " by the Surveyors of the School; Lodgings to " be aſſigned him in the Old-Change: His " Wages to be Six Shillings and Eight-Pence " per Week, and a Livery-Gown of Four No- " bles, delivered in Cloth. That there ſhall be " in the School a Prieſt daily, as he could, to " ſing Maſs in the Chapel of the School, and " to pray for the Children to proſper in good " Life and good Letters. That he was to be " ſome honeſt, good, and virtuous Man. To " be choſen by the Wardens and Aſſiſtants of " the Mercery. But now the Rents and Incomes of this School, by the good Husbandry and Faithfulneſs of the Company of Mercers, are greatly advanced: So that the Salaries of the Maſters are more than doubled, and many Exhibitions; ſome of Ten Pounds, and ſome of Six Pounds odd Money, are granted towards the Maintenance of the Scholars who go away from the School to the Univerſities, payable for ſeven Years, if they tarry ſo long there.

This School was burnt down in the Fire of London 1666; but built up much after the ſame Manner and Proportion that it was before; together with the Library, and an Houſe added at the South End for the Second Maſter, whoſe Dwelling before, from the firſt Foundation of the School, was in the Old Change: This Houſe hath a very handſome Front, anſwerable to the High Maſter's Houſe at the North End, on which is engraven, Ædes Præceptoris Grammatices.

Here follows a Catalogue of the Maſters of this School, from the firſt Foundation to the preſent Time.

Their Names.

A. D. 1512. William Lilly, High Maſter, placed by the Founder, of whom Eraſmus, in his Epiſtle before the Syntaxis, gave this Character, viz. Utriuſque Literaturæ haud vulgariter peritus & rectè inſtituendæ pubis Artifex. i. e. That he was a Man ſingularly ſkilled in both Kinds of Literature, [Latin and Greek] and an Artiſt in the right bringing up of Youth. Being a good Poet, he made the Latin Rules in our Grammar for the Genders of Nouns, and the Preterperfect Tenſes and Supines of Verbs, putting them into Hexameter Verſe, for Youth's eaſier learning and remembring. He compoſed alſo thoſe excellent Rules in Latin Verſe, called Qui mihi, for the Inſtruction of the Children, his Scholars, in good Manners. He bred up many great Scholars, and ſuch as afterward proved famous in their Times; as Lupſet, Sir Anthony Denny, Sir Edward North, Sir William Paget, Leland the Antiquary, who acknowledges it in one of his Epigrams: Inſtructor Lillius ille fuit. After ten Years, or more, he was ſucceeded by John Rightwiſe, or Ritwis (in Latin Juſtus) 1522. who had been Second Maſter before, and was Lilly's Son-in-Law, having married his Daughter Dionyſia. He was born in Norfolk, bred at Eaton School and King's College in Cambridge, where he was admitted in 1508, reputed an excellent Poet, and wrote theſe Verſes upon Lilly his Father-in-Law, and Predeceſſor:

Vivere perpetuis ſi poſſunt nomina Chartis,
Ac cineri quenquam eſt fas ſupereſſe ſuo;
Crede Tuo hoc, Lilli, Doctrinæ munere claro,
Dignus es æterna poſteritate frui.

Leland hath an Epigram to this Maſter intitled, Ad Juſtum Paulinæ Scholæ Moderatorem: Beginning,

Qui Linguas teneras Nova refingis
Quadam Dexteritate nec Ruinam
Muſarum Pateris Nitentium ullam;
Tu nunc, Juſte, meum Manu benigna
Carmen ſuſcipe ———————

This Rightwiſe made the Tragedy of Dido out of Virgil, and acted a Part in it with his Scholars before Cardinal Wolſey, with great Applauſe.

He reviſed and augmented Lilly's Propia quæ Maribus, and As in præſenti; and publiſhed them with an Interpretation of the Words in them. After ten Years Labour here, he alſo gave Place to Richard Jones: Next him ſucceeded 1532.

Thomas Freeman, who alſo ſpent ten Years in 1549.
the laborious Employment of the Education of Youth, and then came into his Province,

John Cook, M. A. admitted into King's Col- 1559.
lege Cambridge, Anno 1533. He ſeems to have been a Native of Lincolnſhire, and School-Fellow to the Lord Treaſurer Burleigh; as may be conjectured from a Letter of the ſaid Cook's to the ſaid Lord, thankfully acknowledging the obliging Reception that great Miniſter of State once gave him, after a long Abſence and Interminſion of Acquaintance. Cum Uſus aliquis (as the Letter ran) a primo pene Studiorum noſtrorum Curriculo, vix intereſſet; i. e. When there had ſcarce been any Converſation between them from the firſt Courſe of their Studies to that Time.

This Letter he began with a good Sentence, and a good Principle; which, to leave ſome Remembrance of the Man, is here ſet down. Equidem in communi Vita ac Societate Hominum interipſos, nihil prius neq; libero Homine dignius eſſe reor, quam Animo ut propenſo ſimus ad eos juvandos, qui Ope altera indigent, eo & enim Orti omne, editiq; in Lucem ſumus, bene ut mereamur alter de altero, præſertim in Amicorum Inopia ac Neceſſitudine.

He went from the School to a good Living in Somerſetſhire, called North Cadbury; which he obtained from the Patron, the Earl of Huntingdon, by the Interceſſion of his ſaid noble Friend the Lord Treaſurer.

There is a Copy of handſome Latin Verſes of this Cook's Compoſing, ſet before Dr. Thomas Wilſon's Book of Uſury. He that ſucceeded him was,

William Malim, of King's-College in Cam- 1573.
bridge, who afterwards lived at the Court; Son, perhaps, to John Malim, Phyſician, buried in St. Peter's Cornhill, LONDON, and that gave 40 l. to the Poor of that Pariſh. A good Scholar, writ writ a fine Hand, and Master of a very good Latin Stile; and had been a great Traveller, had seen Constantinople, Antioch, Jerusalem, and many other famous Cities in Asia; upon his Return he was presented to Secretary Cetyl, by Sir Ambrose Cave. The Secretary retained him at his Table; and he, with the great Earl of Leicester, recommended him to the Queen. Sir William Cecyl afterwards employed him to retrieve what he could of the Writings of Sir Thomas Chaloner, and he prepared and published his ingenious Work, De Repub. Anglerum, wrote in Latin Verse. He had two great Patrons, viz. the aforesaid Cecyl, afterwards Lord Treasurer, and the great Earl of Leicester. After he had been near seven Years Master of this School, he grew quite weary of his Work in Rolling of Sisyphus's Stone, as he called it, and applied himself to his great Patron, the Lord Treasurer, acquainting him with his Resolution of Resigning and Praying his Favour to provide him some other more agreeable, and more easy, and more profitable Employment. (For in those Times the Salary was not so weighty and encouraging, as since it hath been.) He complained to his aforesaid Patron, Me nimium Paupertate gravari, Libertate privari, conculcari Doctrinam, Spes meas Exinaniri. He desired not, he said, a Freedom from all Labours, but with Ovid;

Mitius Exilium, pauloque quietius opto.

He wished for a milder and a little more quiet Banishment; concluding his Letter with these Verses;

Adsis tu Cynosura mihi, ter Nobilis Heros,
Ne tenui in mensa desit mediocre salinum;
Ne nimium fractum me rodat tristis Egestas,
Neve ego perpetuo curis involvar acerbis,
Hæc mea vota precor supplex ne segnius hauri,
Candide Mæcenas, unus qui singula possis.
Sic tibi multiplices currant fæliciter anni,
Prospera magnanimi numeros & lustra Metelli.

He stayed about two Years after this Application to the Lord Treasurer, and then departed, and seems to have had a Prebend of Lincoln, and to have been afterwards one of the Masters of Eaton School.

1581. John Harrison, M. A. was also of King's-College, Cambridge; a great Antiquary for Coins, and English History. He had some Contest with the Company of Mercers, about the Augmentation of his Salary, which, by an Order, was considerably increased to him and his Successors. He continued Master of St. Paul's School, fifteen Years.

1596. Richard Mulcaster, M. A. of a good Family in Carlisle in Cumberland, was also bred in Eaton School, and chosen thence to King's College in Cambridge; thence elected Student of Christ's Church, Oxon, Anno 1555. He seems to have been the first Master of Merchant Taylor's School, in the Parish of St. Lawrence Pountney, LONDON: For he was chosen thither, Anno 1561, where, after he had spent 35 Years, he became Master of St. Paul's School. For the Use of this School he wrote a Catechism in Latin, in Hexameter and Pentameter Verses. He published two Books in English, while he was Master of Merchant Taylor's School, about the Instruction of Children, in 4to. The former he presumed to dedicate to the Queen, because it portended a common Good: For in it he laid down Positions for the training up of Children in Learning and Health. The latter, which he called, The Elementarie, teaching the right Writing of English, he dedicated to the Earl of Leicester.

He was a Man of great Account for his Learning in those Times: And for his Knowledge in the Oriental Languages, was valued by that great English Rabbi, Hugh Broughton. He had the Honour to be Master to Bishop Andrews, while he governed Merchant Taylor's School. He died Parson of Stanford Rivers in Essex, whither he retired two or three Years before his Death. Next him came,

Alexander Gill, born in Lincolnshire, M. A. of Corpus Christi College, Oxon. He wrote a Book intitled, Logonomia, for amending and rectifying the Writing of the English Language; and being a Divine, as well as a Critic, he wrote a Tract concerning the Trinity in Unity, against a certain Anabaptist: And another Book entitled, Sacred Philosophy of Holy Scripture. He was buried in Mercers Chapel. 1608.

Alexander Gill, D. D. Son of the said Alexander. He had been Second Master before, under his Father; he was esteemed one of the best Latin Poets in his Time; many Pieces of his Poetry are extant. He remained Master of this School the shortest Time of any Master before or since, being removed in the Year 1640, perhaps for his Severity, yet he had an Annuity of 25 l. allowed him. 1635.

John Langley, born near Banbury in Oxfordshire, of Magdalen Hall, Oxon, first Master of the College School in Gloucester, from thence chosen to St. Paul's. A general Scholar, and especially a great Antiquary in Matters of our own Country: Of the Stories and Curiosities whereof, he made a considerable Collection in his Travels. He was known and beloved by the learned Selden; he composed a short Rhetorick, and a compendious Prosodia, for the Use of his School, besides divers Amendments, Additions, and Explanations of the Latin and Greek Grammars used by his Scholars. He had a very awful Presence and Speech, that struck a mighty Respect and Fear into his Scholars, which however wore off after they were a little used to him; and his Management of himself towards them was such, that they both loved and feared him. He was a single Man, and died in the Year 1657, and was buried in Mercers Chapel, all the Scholars attending at his Funeral, walking before the Corpse (hung with Verses instead of Escutcheons) from the School through Cheapside, with White Gloves on. His Funeral Sermon was preached by one of his learned Friends, Dr. Edward Reynolds (afterwards Bishop of Norwich) upon this Text, Acts vii. And Moses was learned in all the Learning of the Egyptians; wherein both Learning and the learned Man deceased were much commended: And the Sermon was printed. 1640.

Samuel Cromleholme, or Cromlum, of Corpus Christi College, Oxon, who was also removed from the Government of Gloucester School hither, were he had once been Second Master. And such an Opinion had Mr. Langley of him, that on his Death-bed, he recommended him to the Mercers Company, as the fittest Man to succeed him. He was Πολυγλώττος one that understood a great many Languages, and exceeded his Predecessor in that Sort of Learning. In his Time St. Paul's School was burnt by the great Fire; and he lost an incomparable Library, for he was very curious in Books; but he lived to teach School there again, after the beautiful Rebuilding of it. He died a married Man, but without Issue. 1657.

Thomas Gale, D. D. a Yorkshireman, bred at Westminster School, Fellow of Trinity-College, Cambridge, an excellent Grecian and Antiquarian, especially for the History of this Kingdom. A married 1672.

married Man, and had Children: He reſigned, being made Dean of York. His eldeſt Son, Roger Gale, Eſq; is at this Time one of the Commiſſioners of Exciſe, a Fellow of the Royal Society, and Treaſurer thereof; a Gentleman of great Learning and Merit.

1697. John Poſtlethwait, born in Cumberland, bred in Merton College, Oxon; he was choſen from the Free-School, in St. Martin's in the Fields, founded by Dr. Thomas Teniſon, while he was Rector of the ſaid Pariſh, but afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who upon the Experience and thorough Knowledge he had of him, recommended him in the moſt ample Manner to the Mercers Company, by the following Teſtimonial.

The Character of a good School-Maſter.

"I HAVE known Mr. Poſtlethwait nigh "twenty Years. He hath been long "the Upper School-Maſter at St. Martin's; I "have never known him wilfully abſent for two "Hours on any Day in School-time. He is a "Man of great Abilities in Learning, and par- "ticularly in that which relates to Grammar, "in the Knowledge of the Hebrew, Greek, and "Latin Tongues. He is of a very even Tem- "per, and one who ſtudieth the Temper and "Genius of Youth. His Scholars are in Awe "of him, by Reaſon of his grave Deportment "and good Diſcipline, but he doth not terrify "them with Severity. He hath ſent forth di- "vers eminent Scholars; and I do believe, for "Inſtance Sake, that there are few in the Na- "tion equal (for their Time) to Wallis of Mag- "dalen College, Oxford, and Mr. Fawcet of "Bennet College in Cambridge, late his Scho- "lars. He is very careful of the Religion and "Manners of thoſe under his Care, and taketh "Pains with divers of them every Lord's-Day "before Church-time. His Converſation is ſe- "rious and diſcreet, and hath nothing of Pe- "dantry in it. I have ſaid very much of him, "and yet I cannot do him Juſtice in ſaying "leſs.

THO. CANTUAR.

UPON his Death, ſucceeded Philip Ayſcough, M. A.

AND to him Mr. Benjamin Moreland, the preſent High Maſter.

MR. James Greenwood is at this Time Surmaſter; and

MR. Timothy Crump, Chaplain, or Under Maſter.

FROM this School, by the Care and Diligence of theſe learned Men, have gone forth, from Time to Time, many who have proved able Stateſmen, Prelates, Divines, Phyſicians, Civilians; and others raiſed to great Honours. Among which Number were Sir Anthony Denny, Sir Edward North, Sir William Paget, Lupſet Leland, in antient Times; and in later Days, Whitaker, the learned Profeſſor of Divinity in Cambridge, and Diſputant againſt the Papiſts; Dr. Cumberland, Biſhop of Peterborough, that great Philoſopher and Mathematician, as well as Divine; Dr. Meggot, late Dean of Wincheſter; Samuel Pepys, Eſq; ſometime Secretary to the Admiralty; Dr. Benjamin Calamy; Sir Charles Scarborough, one of the moſt learned Phyſicians of his Time; the preſent Lord Wilmington; and, to conclude, the moſt victorious John, Duke of Marlborough, one of the greateſt Generals of any Age or any Country.

THE Reverend Founder of this School ſaw ſomething of the Succeſs of it in his own Time Sir Thomas More, who had a great Friendſhip for him, in a Letter he wrote to him, compared his School to the Trojan Horſe, out of which the Grecians iſſued to ſurprize the City. In the like Manner, ſaid he, Out of this, your School, many have come that have ſubverted and overthrown all Ignorance and Rudeneſs.

BESIDES the Founder, the School hath had other Benefactors.

THE Lady Camden, Wife to Sir Baptiſt Hickes, Lord Camden, ſometime a Mercer in Cheapſide, gave certain Exhibitions of 10*l. per Ann.* to ſuch of the Scholars as went thence to Trinity College in Cambridge, beſides other Exhibitions.

The SCHOOL at MERCERS CHAPEL.

Mercers Chapel School.

THE School at Mercers Chapel is the next to be mentioned, having the ſame Patrons and Governors with St. Paul's School, viz. the Company of Mercers, who pay the Maſter forty Pounds a Year, and allow him an Houſe, for which he is bound to teach twenty five Scholars. This School is of great Antiquity, and hath been under the Patronage of the Mercers ſo long, that the Founder is forgot; unleſs it was the ſame that founded St. Thomas of Acons, Thomas Fitzthebald, who married Thomas à Becket's Siſter; who, in the Reign of King Henry II. founded, in this Place, an Hoſpital for a Maſter and Brethren, Knights Hoſpitalers: Which upon the Surrender of it to King Henry VIII, Anno 1538, was purchaſed by the Mercers, who continued the School, whether by Contract, or voluntary good Will, is not certainly known; only, thus much appears, that when, by Act of Parliament, 25 Henry VI. four Grammar Schools were appointed to be opened in LONDON for the Education of the City Youth; one of theſe was to be kept in the Hoſpital of St. Thomas of Acons, or Colechurch adjoining to it; and the Maſter of the ſaid Houſe, or Parſon of the ſaid Pariſh, from Time to Time, to place a fit School-Maſter there.

MR. William Baxter, well known by his Edition of Horace, was many Years Maſter of this School: At his Death he was ſucceeded by the Reverend Mr. Swinburn; as he was by the preſent Maſter, the Reverend Mr. Morriſon.

THOUGH this School joins to Mercers Chapel, which is in Cheapſide, yet the Entrance into it is in the Old-Jury.

MERCHANT TAYLORS SCHOOL.

Merchant Taylors School.

ANOTHER School of great Fame and Reputation is, that ſituated in the Pariſh of St. Laurence Pountney, near Caning-ſtreet, and erected Anno 1561, 3 Elizabeth, by the Worſhipful Company of Merchant Taylors of LONDON; Emanuel Lucar being then Maſter of the ſaid Comp ny. Mr. Richard Hills, ſometime Maſter of the Company, gave 500*l.* toward the Purchaſe of the Place where the ſaid School ſtands, which was called, The Manor of the Roſe; an Houſe belonging to a Duke of Buckingham.

THIS School conſiſteth of ſix Forms, where near three hundred Boys have their Education; whereof by the Statutes of the School an hundred are taught Gratis, fifty at 2*s.* 6*d.* a Quarter, and an hundred at 5*s.* a Quarter. And for the due inſtructing of theſe, the School maintains a Maſter (whoſe Salary is 10*l.* a Year, but his Benefits otherwiſe very conſiderable) and three Uſhers. And for the better Inquiry into the Proficiency of all the Scholars, there is an Order appointed for the Probation of the School, to be made only by the Maſter and the three Uſhers. The firſt Probation to be on the eleventh Day of March; the Second on the eleventh of September; the Third on the eleventh of December; not being Sundays, and then upon the next Day following. And there are excellent Orders ſet down in the Regiſtry, (kept in the School-Library) to the Number of Thirteen, Directory of the Maſter in this Buſineſs, as to his Probation and Trial of the Abilities of all the Boys that learn there.

IN the Year 1645, the Company of Merchant Taylors appointed a fourth Probation, upon the Motion of Mr. Dugard, then Chief Maſter of this Grammar School, viz. that there ſhall be another private Probation of the Scholars, beſides theſe three which are already ſettled by the Orders of the School: And this is on the 15th Day of June Yearly. The preciſe Manner of this Examination is ſet down in the School Regiſter; and all the Orders thereof allowed and approved, under the Hands of ſome of the greateſt Scholars and Divines in thoſe Times viz. John Overal, D. D. Dean of St. Paul's; John Dove, D. D. John Spencer, D. D. Nic. Fenton, D. D. John Childerly, D. D.

IT was further thought fit afterwards, for the Satisfaction of the Maſter and Wardens, and Court of Aſſiſtants of the Merchant Taylors, as well for the true and faithful Performance of the Probation of the Maſter and the three Uſhers, as likewiſe to know what Boys profit moſt, and be the beſt and likelieſt Scholars, that the Probators themſelves ſhould have their Examination and Trial, to be done at two ſeveral Times every Year; and this Examination to be made by two judicious Men, well learned both in Greek and Latin, being by the Maſter and Wardens thereunto requeſted, two or three Days before. The Place of Examination to be in the South Part of the School, commonly called the Chapel: The Time to be between the 11th and 12th Days of the Months of March and September: And the whole Buſineſs to be ſo ordered, that the Examination be fully done between the Hours of ſix and eleven: The Maſter and Wardens, or two of them, to be at the School with two learned Men, at ſix o' the Clock in the Morning.

THE Maſters of this famous School, from the firſt Foundation of it to the preſent Time, are as follow:

A. D. 1561. Richard Mulcaſter, firſt Maſter. He was bred at Eaton School, and removed to King's College in Cambridge; afterwards became a Student of Chriſt Church, Oxon; noted for his excellent Skill in Grammar and Philological Learning; unanimouſly choſen the firſt Maſter of this School: Many Years after removed to St. Paul's. He became Parſon of Stamford Rivers in Eſſex, where he died Anno 1611.

1586. Henry Wilkinſon.

1592. Edmund Smith.

1649. John Stevens: Who left in the School Regiſtry this ſingle Memorial of himſelf, in regard of his ſhort Continuance here.

Res Deus noſtras celeri citatas Turbine verſat.
Joh. Stevens, Sept. 25. 1650.

THE Succeedings of theſe two laſt named were thus expreſſed in a Diſtick:

Dugardum ſequitur Stephanus, Stephanumque viciſſim
Dugardus: Sortes verſat utrinque Deus.

THIS Dugard was a very diligent, exact, and excellently learned Man in all Grammatical Learning, and under his Care and Influence the School greatly flouriſhed. He printed ſeveral Books for the Uſe of his School, and had a good Strain in Oratory and Poetry. A Stroke or two of his Poetry in Greek, we have of his own Hand extant in the School Regiſtry, where, by the way, we may ſee how he ſtood affected to the Mutations in the Age wherein he lived; firſt upon the Beheading of King Charles I.

Μάρτυς ὑπὲρ θείων πατρικάντε νόμων ὄχ' ἄριστος

Ἰλερμ|ῳ ὁ Δυγάρ|υ.

Martyr pro divinis patriiſque Legibus
Optimus Sceptriger Carolus ſceleratorum manibus cecidit.
Gulielmus Dugard.

For which Verſes perhaps, or for his Affection to that King, (for I find no other Cauſe) he might be diſcharged the School at that Time.

ANOTHER Greek Diſtick remaining in the ſaid Regiſtry under his Hand, is upon the Uſurper Oliver Cromwell's Mother, buried in Weſtminſter; which perhaps is the only Epitaph extant upon her:

Ἐπὶ τῆς μητέρ|ῳ τῦ Ὀλιβέρυ Κρομωέλλυ ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τῦ Ὠεσμοναστείυ κειμένης.

Μήτηρ τῆς τέκνυ καταράτυ ἔνθαδε κεῖται.

THIS Dugard, after he had been Maſter ſeven Years, was diſmiſs'd the School in the Year 1661, for breaking ſome Orders of the Company, having been publickly warned and admoniſhed of it before: And departing, he left this Verſe to his Succeſſor concerning the School Regiſtry, which hitherto he diligently had kept himſelf;

MR. Creech, the preſent Maſter.

MR. Brooker.
MR. Burn.

THE Library belonging to this School, was built at the Charge of the Company of Merchant Taylors, who have ſupported this School with a Maſter and three Uſhers above an hundred and ſeventy Years, at their own Coſt and Charges: And after the Fire, rebuilt it, with Houſes for the Maſter and Uſhers. It is a Brick Building; but has in the Front eight large Stone Pilaſters of the Ionick Order; the Place in which it is ſituated is called Suffolk-lane. There was before this, a new Court added to it by Archbiſhop Laud.

THERE are ſeveral Scholars elected out of this School, annually, to St. John's College in Oxford, where there are alſo forty ſix Fellowſhips belonging to them.

SIR Thomas White, who had been Lord-Mayor of LONDON, founded St. John's College, Anno 1557, and appointed this School as a Seminary or Nurſery for it.

THERE was a Feaſt began in the Year 1698, by the Gentlemen brought up in this School, which, it were to be wiſhed, had had a longer Continuance, the Deſign being ſo good; for the Collections then made were to be laid out upon Exhibitions, and to be allowed to ſuch of the Scholars as were ſuperannuated, and had loſt the Election.

RATCLIFF SCHOOL.

Ratcliff School.

IN Ratcliff, in the Pariſh of Stepney, is another Free-School, convenient for the Inhabitants of thoſe Parts of the City, founded in the Reign of King Henry VIII. by Nicholas Gibſon, Grocer, (and, in the Year 1538, one of the Sheriffs,) for Sixty poor Mens Children, to be there taught by a School-maſter, who was to have a Salary of 10*l.* a Year; and an Uſher, who was to have 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* This School is under the Care of the Company of Coopers, LONDON. Here the famous Biſhop Andrews was ſome Time a Scholar. Out of this School, of later Times, ſome of the Scholars yearly entertain the Natives of Stepney Pariſh with Speeches and Verſes in Latin and Greek, as they paſs by it, on the Day of their Anniverſary Feaſt. To this School is an Alms-houſe annexed for twenty poor People, by the ſame Founder.

THIS charitable Foundation in Ratcliff, (as to the State of it at preſent) conſiſts of an Hoſpital as well as of a School: To which belongs a Chapel, were Prayers are read to thoſe that belong to it. Thirty Boys are here taught free, beſides other Children that reſort thither for good Learning. The School-maſter's Salary is 36*l.* per Annum. To which belongeth alſo an Uſher, who teacheth Arithmetick and the Mathematicks. They want Exhibitions for the Encouragement of the Scholars, to fit themſelves to be ſent thence to the Univerſities. To this Foundation belong alſo twenty Penſioners, fourteen Women and ſix Men; the Former have 20*s.* a Quarter, the Latter twenty five Shillings. Each have a Room, a Cellar, and a Garden Plat. The Founder, Mr. Gibſon's Picture, is there remaining. This Houſe was once burnt down, but rebuilt by the Company of Coopers of LONDON, the preſent Patrons.

THE School-Maſter at this Time is Mr. Vere.

CHRIST-CHURCH SCHOOL.

ANOTHER of theſe famous Schools in LONDON, is that of Chriſt-Church Hoſpital; which, as well as the Hoſpital, is under the Patronage and Government of the City. Here are commonly very learned and able School-Maſters appointed from Time to Time, who formerly did not only inſtruct the poor Children of the Foundation, but many other Children of Citizens, ſent thither by their Parents, who paid for their Schooling. And here they arrived oftentimes to very good Skill in the Grounds of Latin and Greek Learning, as well as at the other Schools before-mentioned; but none now are allowed to be taught there but ſuch as are of the Foundation. Chriſt-Church School.

A laudable Cuſtom the Scholars of this School had, that begun in the Year 1554, which was, that on St. Bartholomew's Day publick Diſputations were held among them upon Points of Grammar, and what they had learned. And for the rendring it the more ſolemn, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, and the learned Council of the City would be preſent, as Judges of the Diſputation; who, after all was over, rewarded thoſe that acquitted themſelves beſt, with Pens of Gold and Silver, and gratified and encouraged the School-Maſters with Money. This was ſet on Foot by Sir William Cheſter in his Sherivalty. And Sir Martin Bows, a very wealthy, and as worthy a Citizen and Alderman, for the further Encouragement of this ingenious Emulation among the Youth, added, for another Reward to be beſtowed at theſe Diſputations, Bows (in Alluſion to his Name, and for a Remembrance of the Donor) and Arrows of Silver (in Memory of his Trade, being a Goldſmith) and a certain Sum of Money to the Maſters; and likewiſe to the Mayor and his Brethren (to encourage them to be preſent) a Banquet of Wine and Pears. It was continued throughout Queen Mary's Reign, but was laid aſide in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's. This, Cooper, in his Chronicle (who was once a a School-Maſter himſelf in Magdalen College, Oxon) took Notice of as a very good Practice, that was ſerviceable to the Children and the City.

THERE are at this Time One thouſand and ſixty ſeven Boys and Girls, belonging to this School, all maintained with Victuals, Drink, Lodging, decent Cloathing of Blue, and other Neceſſaries. They are inſtructed in Reading, Writing, Drawing, Arithmetick, Navigation, and thoſe whoſe Genius tend much to Claſſick Learning, are ſometimes ſent to the Univerſity; ſo that ſome of theſe Boys have attainded to be eminent Divines, Lawyers, Phyſicians, Commanders of Ships, Merchants, &c.

THE Maſter of the Grammar School is now Mr. Selby.

MR. Hetherly is Under Grammar Maſter.

THERE is alſo one at Ware, another at Hartford, who teach the Children out at Nurſe.

HERE is alſo a Royal Mathematical School, founded by King Charles II. Anno 1673. The Maſter whereof is Mr. Hodgſon, who is paid out of the Hopſital. His ſaid Majeſty gave 7000*l.* to build and finiſh the School; and alſo 370*l.* 10*s.* per Annum for ever, paid out of the Exchequer:

Exchequer: The ſaid 7000*l.* was paid by 1000*l. per Annum.*

A new Mathematical School was built, the Charge of which was defrayed out of the Revenues of the Hoſpital.

This Inſcription was here in Gold Characters.

This School was prepared and furniſhed for a Mathematical School, at the ſole Coſt and Charges of William Nicholſon, Eſq; one of the Governors.

OF this School Mr. Humphry Ditton was Maſter. It was ſet up in the Year 1706, about Chriſtmas; but is now joined to the other Royal School.

HERE is alſo a Writing School founded by Sir John Moore, Alderman of this City: It is ſaid to have coſt him about 4000*l.* Finiſhed Anno 1694. Mr. Dunford is the preſent Maſter, who is paid out of the Hoſpital Revenues. It is that ſtately Building elevated on Pillars fronting Town-Ditch, where, over an Archade, is the Effigies of the Founder.

In the Year 1705, was ſet up a Drawing School, an Art very uſeful to be learnt by all; but eſpecially thoſe who were afterwards to be inſtructed in the Mathematicks, or are to be put out to Mechanick Trades. The Charge of this is defrayed out of the Revenues of the Hoſpital. The preſent Maſter is Mr. Lens.

THE Muſick School is here kept for the Inſtruction of the Children in the harmonious Method of ſinging Pſalms, Hymns, Anthems, &c. which they often perform in Publick on ſolemn Occaſions. The Maſter of this School is Mr. Horwood.

MRS. Browne is School-Miſtreſs of the Girls.

IN the laſt Year, viz. 1732, there were put out Apprentices, and diſcharged from this School, One hundred and ſixty two Children; ten whereof being inſtructed in the Mathematicks and Navigation, were placed forth Apprentices to Commanders of Ships, out of the Mathematical School, founded, as before ſaid, by King Charles II.

The Method of Admiſſion of Children into this Hoſpital.

THE Day of Admiſſion being appointed (about ten Days, or a Fortnight before Eaſter) there are Liſts of thoſe qualified of the Governors, by their Turns, to chooſe that Year, printed and ſet up at the Compting-Houſe, and a Letter is ſent to each of thoſe Governors ſome Days before the Admiſſion, reminding him of the Day of chooſing, and how thoſe he preſents ſhould be qualified: Wherein is encloſed a Blank Certificate from the Miniſter and Church Wardens, a Blank Petition to the Preſident and Governors, and a Paper of the Rules and Qualifications of the Child to be preſented. Upon this the Governor having made Choice of a Child to preſent, the Friends of the ſaid Child come to the ſaid Compting-Houſe on the Admiſſion Day, bringing the ſaid Petition and Certificate, Rules, and Letter along with him, and on the Backſide of the ſaid Petition, the Governor, who preſents, endorſeth Words to this Effect:

I Preſent the Child mentioned in the Certificate on the other Side, and believe the ſame to be a true Certificate. Witneſs my Hand the Day of 173

Which the ſaid Governor ſigneth; upon which the Child is admitted, being thus qualified:

7. THAT no Child be admitted that hath a Brother or Siſter in the Hoſpital already.

8. To the end that no Children be admitted contrary to the Rules aboveſaid; when the General Court ſhall direct the taking in of any Children, they ſhall, before taken in, be preſented to a Committee, conſiſting of the Preſident, Treaſurer, or the Almoners, Rentors, Scrutenors, and Auditors, and all other Governors to be ſummoned at the firſt Time: And that they, or any 13, or more of them, whereof the Preſident or Treaſurer, for the Time being, to be one, who ſhall ſtrictly examine touching the Age, Birth, and Quality of ſuch Children, and of the Truth of the ſaid Certificates, and when ſuch Committee ſhall find Cauſe, they ſhall forbid or ſuſpend the taking in of any Child, until they receive full Satisfaction that ſuch Child or Children, is or are duly qualified, according to the Rules aboveſaid.

The Month and Year when they will be at his Majeſty's Diſpoſal: Alſo an Account of the Children annually enjoying the Benefit of this Mathematical Foundation, &c. ſetting forth their Names and Ages. The Number of theſe Boys is 40.

CHARTER-

CHARTER-HOUSE.

Charter-House School.

THERE is another famous School at the Hospital of the Charter-House near Smithfield, where 40 Boys are received, and have Allowance of Chamber, Lodging, Table, and Gowns, as well as Instruction: But to be admitted only such as the School-Master shall find and approve to be well entered in Learning, nor under the Age of ten Years, and not above fourteen or fifteen. The School-Master must be of a competent Age, that is, of 27 Years at least, and a Master of Arts, of good Reputation both for Life and Learning in the Latin and Greek Tongues. To the School also belongs an Usher, who must have taken the Degree of Batchelor of Arts two Years, at least, before his Election hither, and of the Age of four and twenty. To be read none but approved Authors Greek and Latin, as are read in the best Free-Schools. The Upper Form to be furnished with Greek Testaments, for their Use in the Chapel: Besides the Scholars Weekly Exercise, the Highest Form must every Sunday set up, in the Great Hall, four Greek and four Latin Verses a-piece, to be made upon any Part of the second Lesson appointed for that Day, for the Master of the Hospital, or any Stranger, to view and examine: As also two of them are appointed Weekly to read the Chapter, and say Grace at every Meal in both the Halls. The Master and Usher are to take Care to teach the Scholars to Cypher and Cast Accompts, especially those that are less capable of Learning, and fittest to be put to Trades. Not to take into their Tuition above 60 other Scholars, unless they entertain another Usher. To receive for Teaching those of the Foundation, no Fee or Wages from their Friends. To be careful to observe the Nature and Genius of their Scholars, and to instruct and correct them: In Correction to be moderate. These are the Statutes for the Teachers of the School.

Now as for the Scholars, tho' their Number at first was but forty, yet now four and forty are chosen and admitted; they are to continue in the House but eight Years at most; hence they are elected to either of the Universities, and to any College in either, according to their Friends Choice and Determination. Their Allowance there is 20 l. per Annum, paid Quarterly, without any Charge or Trouble: And they are not to be absent above two Months in the Year. Twenty-nine of these Scholars are sometimes maintained in the Universities together, by the said Exhibition, for eight Years. Others, who are superannuated, being unwilling or uncapable of Learning, are designed for Apprentices; and these are set apart for Writing and Cyphering, to qualify them for Trades, and have the Sum of 40 l. given with them. The Scholars all dine in the Hall in a Collegiate Manner, and wear Gowns with Sleeves: And (which is an other good Benefit of this School) as the House hath a great many Livings of Value in their Patronage, so they commonly bestow them on their own Scholars.

BESIDES these Schools of greater Fame, in and about LONDON, are divers other such Places for Education of Youth more lately founded. As that in Bunhillfields in St. Giles's Cripplegate Parish. Over the Door entring in, is signified in Writing whose Gift it was, viz. Mr. Throgmorton Trotman's Free-School. Upon the School-House is a Latin Inscription, importing, that it was finished at the Charge of the Haberdashers Company, Anno Dom. 1673, Richard Wynn, Esq; Master, Hugh Ratcliff, Philip Smith, Nicholas Smith, and John Freestons, Wardens: Richardo Houghton, A.M. Primario & primo Magistro; with the Arms of Trotman set there and painted. The Salary is 50 l. per Annum, for which thirty Boys of the said Parish of St. Giles's are to be taught free. Mr. Thomas Wright, M. A. is the present Master, who also hath a Dwelling-house there, appropriate to the School-Master.

THERE is another Free-School in Ploughyard in Sydon or Seething-Lane, in the Parish of Alhallows Barking, lately founded by one Hickson a Brewer, endowed with twenty Pounds a Year for one Master, to teach twenty poor Children, whereof fourteen to be of the said Parish of Barking, and six of an Hamlet in Wapping. This Master hath an House for himself where the said School is kept, and two Chaldron of Coals yearly allowed him. It is moreover endowed with eight Pounds a Year for a Writing-Master, to teach the Children Writing and Casting Accompts. The present Master is Mr. Grastie.

IN Whitechapel is another Free-School, founded by Mr. Davenant, late Rector of Whitechapel: The Salary is 20 l. per Annum, and is, or lately was, in the Hands of three Trustees. This School hath been considerably endowed, and the Number of Children to be taught enlarged, by the Gift of a Thousand Pounds, sent by some noble minded, but unknown, Lady; which hath been laid out by the Parishioners for the Purchase of Lands in Tilbury; the Rent whereof is for the yearly Maintenance of the School and Children.

ANOTHER Free-School is situated in St. James's Clerkenwell, in the Road going to Islington, founded by Mrs. Alice Owen, Widow first of Alderman Elkin, and afterwards of Judge Owen; endowed with 22 l. per Annum. To which is a Chapel and an Alms-house adjoined, given by the same charitatble Hand.

THERE are other Free-Schools in the Suburbs and Neighbourhood of LONDON: As that at Hackney, in the Church-yard, founded by Christopher Urswyke, some Time Rector there; with an House for the Master; on which is engraven toward the Street, these Words: Hackney School.

EXTRUCTA FUIT HÆC DOMUS ANNO DOM. 1519. CHRISTOPHORO URSWYKE, RECTORE.

And in another Place:

MEMORARE NOVISSIMA.

MRS. Margaret Awdley, some Time an Inhabitant of Hackney, (whose House was in Clapton) for the Encouragement of the School-Master, gave a Salary of 20 l. per Annum.

THAT belonging to Aske's Hospital at Hoxton, in which twenty Boys are educated, the Sons of decayed Freemen of the Haberdashers Company. Hoxton School.

ANOTHER at Rotherhith, founded by Bell and Rich, two Mariners, for eight Sons of Seamen, to which they gave three Pounds per Ann. and the School-House. Rotherhith School.

ON the other Side the Water, besides the last mentioned, are to be found two large Free-Schools in Southwark:

ONE in the Parish of St. Mary Overy's: It is a good Building of Brick, situated on the South Side of the Church, founded in the Fourth Year of Queen Elizabeth, Anno Dom. 1562, in the Place, as some say, where the Prior of the Priory of St. Mary Overy's House stood, which the Parishioners bought, and built the School there. This School, with the House for the Master, was burnt down in the Year 1676, but rebuilt St. Mary Overy's School.

rebuilt again very gracefully and conveniently. Over the Back-door is an old Stone preſerved from the Fire, with this Inſcription in Capitals:

LIBERA SCHOLA GRAMMATICALIS PAROCHIANORUM PAROCHIÆ SANCTI SALVATORIS IN SOUTHEWARKE IN COM. SURRIE, ANNO IV^to. REGINÆ ELIZABETHAE.

IT is governed by a Maſter, whoſe Salary is 30 l. per Annum, and an Uſher, whoſe Salary is 20 l. per Annum. It is free for ſuch poor Children as are born in the Pariſh. It hath at preſent, or lately had, about ſixty Scholars. It is taken Care of by ſix Governors, whoſe Qualifications muſt be, That they have been Upper Church-wardens, and have ſerved all the other Offices in the Pariſh. The Vacancies are filled by Election among themſelves, of ſome duly qualified Perſon or Perſons. There is alſo a Writing-School hard by, for the Conveniency of this School, for thirty Boys to learn to Write and Read; the Salary is 20 l. per Ann. which was given by one Mrs. Appleby.

St. Olave's School.

THE other Free-School in Southwark, is that ſituated in the Pariſh of St. Olave's. This School was firſt ſet on Foot by ſome of the Pariſhioners, who afterwards were made a Corporation, by Letters Patents from Queen Elizabeth: By Virtue whereof there are appointed over it ſixteen Governors, whereof the Rector is always one. They are to be Men of the beſt Quality and Reputation in the Pariſh; and when one dies, another is choſen by the Survivors to ſupply his room: In this Foundation are three Schools, namely, for Latin, Writing, and Reading: And for this Purpoſe it maintains a Maſter, and three Uſhers under him. The Latin Maſter, who is the Chief Maſter, his Salary is 60 l. per Annum, and hath an Uſher under him, who is called the Latin Uſher; his Salary is 30 l. per Annum. The Writing Maſter, or Uſher, hath 40 l. per Annum: And the Reading Maſter, or Uſher, hath 20 l. per Annum. There is an Houſe for the Chief Maſter, and another for the Reading Uſher. In this School are taught 300 Boys. It is well endowed with Rents from ſeveral Houſes and Lands in Horſlydown, in Southwark, Little Britain, &c.

Schools in Weſtminſter.

IN Weſtminſter alſo are ſeveral Free-Schools, beſides the King's School, which will be taken Notice of in the Deſcription of that City.

THERE are alſo many private Schools kept in and about LONDON, where the School-Maſters hire the School Rooms themſelves, and receive Salaries or Quarteridges for Teaching: Some for Teaching the learned Languages, Latin and Greek; ſome for Writing and Arithmetick, and Merchants Accompts; and ſome for Mathematicks, Geography, and Navigation; that ſo the Youth of the City may be brought up to be hereafter uſeful to the Publick; ſome in the Church, ſome in the State, ſome for the Sea and Travel abroad, ſome for Trade and Buſineſs at Home; and finally, that all the Members of this Metropolis might be able to get an honeſt Maintenance and be ſerviceable to the Crown, or otherwiſe, whenſoever there be Occaſion.

IN and about LONDON and Weſtminſter, and within 10 Miles of the ſame, are 131 Charity Schools; of which the following is an Alphabetical Liſt, and of the Children therein taught.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the HOSPITALS in and about LONDON.

MOST of the Hoſpitals in and about LONDON have been founded ſince the Reformation; and it was not till the Year 1557, that wholeſome and good Orders were made and agreed upon for the four Hoſpitals, by the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, Governors of the Poſſeſſions, Revenues, and Goods of the ſaid Hoſpitals; and were to be read in every the ſaid Hoſpitals at a full Court once every Quarter, either 14 Days before, or after the Quarter-Day; beginning with a Preface, giving Account therein of the Royal Founder, and unto whom they had committed the perpetual Care of them, and who by that Authority had made the ſaid Ordinances: Which Preface ran in this Tenor, viz.

" WHEREAS the moſt excellent and worthy " Princes, our late Sovereign Lords, King " Henry VIII. and King Edward VI. of their " bountiful Benignity, and charitable Devotion, " towards the Succour and Suſtentation of the " Poor in this City, have given and granted by " their Letters Patents, with Indentures of Co- " venants and Bonds, to the ſaid Princes and " their Succeſſors, by the City made for Per- " formation thereof, to the Mayor and Com- " monalty, Citizens of this ſaid City; as well " four ſeveral Hoſpitals (that is to ſay) by King " Henry VIII. one Hoſpital, called St. Bartho- " lomew the Little; and by King Edward VI. " three other Hoſpitals called Chriſt's Hoſpital, " Bridewell Place, and St. Thomas's Hoſpital; " as alſo certain Lands and Tenements, towards " the Relief and Maintenance of ſuch Poor as " there are relieved; and have alſo by their " Kingly Prerogative, granted unto the Mayor " and Commonalty, for the better Government " of the ſame, amongſt other Things in the ſame " Letters Patents, Authority, and Power, to " elect and chooſe Governors and Officers, and " alſo to make and conſtitute good and whol- " ſome Ordinances for godly Maintenance there- " of: By Virtue of the which Letters Patents, " We, the ſaid Mayor and Commonalty have " made and ordained theſe Rules and Ordi- " nances in Manner and Form following.

THEN follow Orders, how many Governors ſhall be elected; the Manner of their Election; and how they ſhall be divided, and of their Continuance; the Charge of every Governor in general; of General Courts, touching the Government of all the four Houſes, and what in them is to be done; of a full Court in Chriſt's Hoſpital for weighty Cauſes, and what is thereat to be done; what is to be done at Ordinary Courts, when two or more of the Governors are aſſembled, the Treaſurer being one; touching the Admitting of Children, and Granting of Penſions, to be either paid in this Houſe, or in Pariſhes; for the Putting out of Children to Service; for the Examination of ſingle Women, being got with Child, and the Perſons with whom they committed their Offence; Governors, viz. a Comptroller, and a Surveyor-General, a Preſident, a Treaſurer, three Almoners, two Scrutiners, a Renter, two Surveyors, with an Account of the reſpective Duties; the Officers, viz. the Clerk, the Matron, the Nurſes, and Keepers of Wards, the Steward, the Officer appointed to warn the Collectors and Church-Wardens, the Cook, the Butler, the Porter, the Shoemaker, the Chirurgeon, the Barber, the Beadles, with the Charges of each of theſe Officers.

THESE Orders were confirmed at a Court held on Wedneſday, 28 Sept. Ann. Ph. and Mar. 4 and 5.

BUT to take a View of theſe Hoſpitals diſtinctly.

CHRIST's HOSPITAL.

Chriſt's-Hoſpital

IS ſituated between Newgate-ſtreet, and St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital in Smithfield. Here was firſt, Anno 1325, founded a Houſe of Grey Fryars, which being ſurrender'd to Henry VIII. Anno 1538, he, in the laſt Year of his Reign, gave the Church, with the Edifices and Ground, to the City of LONDON; and in the Year 1553, the pious young King Edward VI. affected by a Sermon preached upon Charity, by the learned Dr. Ridley, Biſhop of LONDON, founded here an Hoſpital, to be called Chriſt's Hoſpital, endowing the ſame with Revenues, which he gave to the City of LONDON as Truſtees; and likewiſe Bridewell, and St. Thomas's Hoſpital, were all incorporated by the Name of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, Governors of the Poſſeſſions, Revenues, and Goods of the Hoſpitals of Edward King of England, the VIth. of Chriſt, Bridewell, and St. Thomas the Apoſtle, to whom the King gave 3266*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* per Annum.

Founded by Edward VI.

Who gave large Revenues to it.

HE granted alſo to this Hoſpital all the Church Linen, formerly uſed in the publick Religious Worſhip in the Churches of LONDON: For the King having appointed Commiſſioners to take a View of all the Goods belonging to the Churches in and about LONDON, great Quantities of Linen Veſtures, and Cloth were found in the ſame, and more a great deal than there was then Need of in the Celebration of the Reformed Divine Worſhip. Wherefore the King wrote to Ridley, Biſhop of LONDON, one of the ſaid Commiſſioners, " That towards the Relief of thoſe poor Or- " phans and others, charitably brought and " gathered together by his loving Subjects, the " Citizens, to his new Hoſpital of Chriſt Church, " the ſame Linnen ſhould be delivered to the " Governors for their Uſe, thinking, as he " added, that any Thing therein beſtowed, to " be to the Relief and Suſtentation of the Tem- " ple of God, who inhabited in thoſe poor Peo- " ple. Yet leaving to every Church neceſſary " Linen Veſtures, as ſhould ſerve to the pub- " lick Uſe and Miniſtry within the ſaid " Churches, according to the preſent Uſage.

And all the Linen uſed in Churches before the Reformation.

TO this Foundation many Additions were made by well-diſpoſed Perſons.

THE Honourable City of LONDON gave all the Duty paid for Lodging and Pitching the Cloth at Blackwell-Hall to this pious Uſe; which which is very conſiderable, every Piece of Cloth paying 1 d. Pitching, and a Half-penny per Week Reſting, Stockings and Blankets pay by the Pack. This Duty ſometimes amounts to 1100 l. a Year clear Money. There are ſeveral Statutes relating to the Regulation of this Market; which is under the Management and Inſpection of the Governors of Chriſt's Church Hoſpital.

Mr. Giles Ruſſel, of Clerkenwell, Brewer, gave 140 l. per Annum, and above 2000 l. in Money, for maintaining Children in this Hoſpital, by his Will, dated the 10th of October 1669.

Richard Caſtell, a Shoemaker, called the Cock of Weſtminſter, who by his Induſtry and Frugality had got 44 l. per Annum, left the ſame to theſe poor Orphans in Perpetuity; and there have been many other large Benefactions, as will hereafter be ſhewn. But to go back a little to the Time of the firſt Foundation:

After the King's Grant, it lay upon the City to eſtabliſh a ſtanding Proviſion here for the Poor; and accordingly ſome Part of the Site of the Grey Fryars they propoſed for a large Hoſpital for poor Fatherleſs Children, to be decently maintained and piouſly brought up, and fitted for Trades and Callings: But it was not till five or ſix Years after, viz. Anno 1552, that the Lord Mayor and Citizens began the Reparation and Fitting up the Friars, for the Reception of the Children, which they effected the ſame Year, and called it Chriſt's Church Hoſpital; ſo that in the Month of September they took in near 400 Orphans, and on the Chriſtmas Day following, in the Afternoon, while the Lord Mayor and Aldermen rode to St. Paul's, the Children of Chriſt's Hoſpital ſtood from St. Laurence-Lane in Cheapſide towards St. Paul's, all in one Livery of Ruſſet Cotton, 240 in Number; and at Eaſter following they were at the Spittle, cloathed in Blue Coats, as they have continued ever ſince; whence the Hoſpital is commonly called, The Blue-Coat-Hoſpital. Their Habit is now a long Coat of blue warm Cloth, cloſe to the Arms and Body, hanging looſe to their Heels, girt about their Waiſt with a red Leather Girdle buckled, a looſe Petticoat underneath of yellow Cloth, a round Thrum Cap tied with a red Band, yellow Stockings, and low heel'd Shoes, their Hair cut cloſe at Top, and their Locks ſhort.

This Hoſpital of Chriſt's Church, as alſo thoſe others founded for the Relief of poor Children, and other ſick and diſeaſed People of the City; gave Occaſion, not long after the Founding thereof, to Numbers of Poor, Lame, and Sick; and many of them, idle Perſons, Rogues, and Vagabonds, to flock into the City from all Parts, expecting preſent Relief and Entertainment here; which cauſed the Lord Mayor, Anno 1569, to iſſue out a ſtrict Order to forbid all ſuch Reſort, and ſuch Perſons to be taken up and brought to Ward; and Warning to be given, that none ſhould give them Harbour: The Order was as followeth:

An ORDER by the Lord Mayor, againſt Rogues, Vagabonds, and Maſterleſs Men, reſorting now, in great Numbers, to the City, upon Pretence to be relieved by the Alms of Chriſt's Church and Bridewell.

" Forasmuch as Experience of late hath " ſhewed, That the charitable Relief, given " as well by the Queen's Majeſty's Noble Proge- " nitors, as alſo the charitable Alms from Time " to Time collected within this City, and be- " ſtowed by the Citizens, as well upon the poor " and needy Citizens, being Sick, Impotent, and " Lame, as the poor Orphans and Fatherleſs " Children, born, or being, within this City, " not having wherewith to relieve themſelves, as " well in Chriſt's-Church and Bridewell, as in " others, the Hoſpitals founded for the Relief of " the Poor within the City of LONDON, hath " drawn unto the ſaid City great Numbers of " Vagabonds, Rogues, Maſterleſs Men, and idle " Perſons, and alſo poor, lame, and ſick Perſons, " dwelling in the outmoſt Parts of the Realm, ſo " as the City is thereby oppreſs'd, to the great " Prejudice of the ſaid City, and of the needy " Poor, inhabiting in the ſame; and that theſe " needy Beggars, and impotent Perſons coming " out of Foreign Parts of the Realm, and alſo " the Rogues and Vagabonds greatly diſliked the " Queen, &c. the Mayor and his Brethren, the " Aldermen, in her Majeſty's Behalf, ſtraitly " charge and command all and every Perſon, and " Perſons whatſoever, dwelling or inhabiting " within the ſaid City, and Liberties, and " Suburbs thereof, that they do not at any " Time hereafter give any Relief, Lodging, " Alms, or Maintenance to any Vagabonds, " Rogues, &c. or to any common or valiant Beg- " gar; but contrarywiſe to cauſe ſuch Beggars, " Rogues, Vagabonds, and Maſterleſs Men, to " be apprehended and brought to Ward; to the " End, that they might be examined and puniſh- " ed by ſuch as have Authority in that Behalf, " according to the Queen's Law, &c.

" And further the ſaid Mayor and Aldermen " ſtraitly charge and command, for the better " avoiding the ſaid common Beggars, &c. That " no manner of Perſon whatſoever ſhall let any " Tenement, Cottage, Chamber, or Room to " Farm, either by the Day, by the Week, by " the Month, by the Quarter, or by the Year, " or any other Time, to any common Beggar, or " Vagabond, &c.

The Mathematical Maſter.

The Mathematical Maſter at Chriſt's Hoſpital, by the Conſtitution of the Houſe, muſt be thus qualified; he muſt be a ſober, diſcreet and diligent Perſon, of good Life, a good Scholar, very well underſtanding the Latin and Greek Languages, a very good Mathematician, well knowing and ready in the Theory and Practice of all its Parts; to the End Boys may be furthered in the Latin Tongue, and the Maſter able to anſwer Strangers, if need be, and that they and others may find his Abilities to Satisfaction.

And by the Conſtitution, ten are to be put forth yearly Apprentices to Maſters of Ships, to the End they may be fit, in Time, to do Service in the Navy Royal, and ten more to be received into their Rooms. Theſe Youths who are choſen out of the reſt of the Blue-Coat-Boys, are to be the moſt acute and of the readieſt Wits, that they may be fit for Mathematical Studies. Theſe, as a Badge of Diſtinction, wear on their Breaſts faſtened to their Coats, a Plate of Silver, with ſome Figures engraven, the Dye whereof is kept in the Tower where they are all ſtamped. The Chief Figures are three of the liberal Sciences, viz. Arithmetick, with a Scroll of Accounts in one Hand, and laying her other Hand upon a Blue-Coat-Boy's Head, having his Cap under his Arm: The next Figure repreſenteth Geometry with a Triangle in her Hand. The Third, Aſtronomy, with a Quadrant in one Hand, and a Sphere in the other. There are alſo the Figure of a Ship or two under Sail, with a Wind from Heaven, blowing as it were upon it a proſperous Gale. There are alſo in the Clouds two Angels, one of them with Wings, and theſe Words wrote round, declaring the Royal Founder, and the Year when this School commenced, viz. Auſpicio Caroli Secundi Regis, 1673. This Badge they wear conſtantly, not only in the Hoſpital, and about the Town, but when they are put forth, which when ſeen ſecureth them from being preſſed: But they will ſometimes put it into their Pockets, not caring to own the Place of their Education, for which, when it is diſcovered, they are reprimanded.

The Occaſion of firſt ſetting up the Mathematical School.

AND here it muſt not be omitted for perpetual Memory, to remark the firſt Occaſion of inſtituting this moſt uſeful Mathematical School founded in this Hoſpital. It was accidental, and owing, in a great Meaſure, to Sir Robert Clayton, Knt. and Alderman, and ſome Time Lord Mayor of the City, who, as the ſetting up of ſuch a Diſcipline in this Hoſpital firſt came into his Mind, ſo he was very inſtrumental and active in bringing it to that Succeſs it afterwards came to, by his moving it ſo ſeaſonably to the Lord Clifford, then Lord High Treaſurer, who as effectually propounded it to the King. The following Relation of it Mr. Strype ſaith, he had from his own Mouth.

HE had been occaſionally reading (according to his Cuſtom at leiſure Times to divert himſelf with Books) of the French King's Government, and particularly how he had appointed, That Children in all his Maritime Towns ſhould be taught the Art of Navigation gratis, and had erected Schools for that Purpoſe, for the greater Increaſe of Seamen, and Benefit of Trade, and Service of his Fleets: Which good Policy rais'd ſome Thoughts in the ſaid Alderman's Mind; concluding how ſuch Education, at leaſt of ſome Part of that great Number of Boys, would tend more to the publick Good, if it were ſet up in Chriſt's Hoſpital, than the ordinary Courſe of Learning then taken with them. This grew warm upon him, and he began to frame a Project for the Setting up ſuch a School, which he communicated firſt to Sir Patience Ward, another Alderman, and they reſolved to take in a third Perſon, and with 1000*l.* a-piece Charge, to make a Proviſion, and Encouragement for a Mathematical Maſter, and to build him a Dwelling-Houſe near the Hoſpital, and to ſet up a School Room there for the teaching a competent Number of the Children.

WHILE this was in Conſultation, a favourable Opportunity offered itſelf, which was this: The ſaid Sir Robert Clayton, calling once at the Treaſury, (this Buſineſs requiring him often to have Recourſe thither) to ſpeak with Sir Robert Howard, then Secretary to the Treaſury; at his coming out, Mr. Parry, then Clerk of Chriſt's Hoſpital, met him, intreating him to ſpeak to Sir Robert Howard in Behalf of the ſaid Hoſpital, ſhewing him a Petition drawn up to the Lord Treaſurer Clifford, and deſiring him to procure the ſaid Howard to deliver it. The Occaſion of which Petition was this:

BEFORE the Revolution in the Year 1660, a private Citizen, who had a Debt of 7000*l.* charged upon Weavers Hall, (which according to ſome Methods in thoſe Times was ſecured to be paid out of a Fund in the King's Lands) gave by Will this 7000*l.* to Chriſt's Hoſpital, for the Maintaining 40 Children, who were to wear a particular Badge, or be cloathed as he particularly directed. Theſe Children were by this Requeſt maintained 'till the Reſtoration; at which Time the Crown Lands reverting to the King, the Hoſpital petition'd his Majeſty, That he would be pleaſed to pay them this 7000*l.* to continue the Maintenance of theſe 40 Children, according to the Requeſt of the Donor; whereupon the King granted them the ſaid Sum, to be paid out of the Arrears of the Exciſe, due at his Reſtoration: But there being many great Sums of Money charged to the Queen-Mother, and other Perſons of Quality, out of the ſaid Arrears, prior to this 7000*l.* it was not hitherto paid.

BUT after many Years the ſaid Clerk of the Hoſpital thought fit, by a new Petition, to put the Lord Treaſurer in Mind of the ſaid Grant of the King. This Petition, being brought as beforeſaid, Sir Robert Clayton took and went in with it to the Secretary of the Treaſury, who preſently, in Company with Sir Robert, carried it to the Lord Treaſurer, to whom it was read; but after reading it his Lordſhip acquainted Sir Robert Clayton what great Sums of Money were charged upon the ſaid Fund, prior to this, and that it was impoſſible for him to help the Hoſpital. Sir Robert, (like a good Advocate for the City's Poor) told him, That the Citizens of LONDON, he hoped, were as careful in managing their publick Charities, as their private Concerns, and that if his Lordſhip would place 7000*l.* upon a certain Fund to be paid by 500*l.* a Year, they would endeavour to maintain the Children with it, which the Lord Treaſurer evaded alſo: But the diligent Alderman finding him in a good Humour, proceeded further with him, telling him, That a poor Friend of his was upon ſuch an important Project in that Hoſpital, that would deſerve a better Founder, and ſo diſcourſed to him the Deſign he and Sir Patience Ward were contriving. It took with the Treaſurer, and it pleaſed him ſo well, that he charged Sir Robert to go and frame him a Petition upon that Subject he had diſcourſed to him of, and added, That he would deliver it that very Night to the King before he ſlept.

Sir Robert departed, and took the Clerk of the Hoſpital along with him in his Coach, and ſetting him down at the Hoſpital, order'd him immediately to bring him a Liſt of the Governors of that Houſe to Sir John Frederick's, then Preſident, which Liſt being brought and peruſed, they pitched upon Six to aſſiſt in this Matter, whereof Sir Patience Ward, and Sir Richard Ford, Aldermen, were two. While theſe were ſummoning, Sir Robert prepared a Petition. Theſe Governors now being aſſembled, he ſignified to them the preſent Advantage of the Hoſpital, and ſhewing them the Petition, required them to go up with him to deliver it; but they declined it, and left it upon Sir Robert, telling him, That he having begun it, was the fitteſt Perſon to carry it on.

HE was not diſcouraged in ſo good a Work, but that Night carried up the Petition himſelf, and delivered it into the Hands of the Lord Treaſurer, who appointed him to come to him the next Day, which he accordingly did, and found that the Treaſurer had ſhewn the King the Petition, and had a Reference made back to himſelf for the Payment of 1000*l.* a Year, until the 7000*l.* were paid, and the Hoſpital was to covenant to maintain ſo many Boys, and to teach them the Mathematicks.

THE Treaſurer then alſo gave an Order to Sir Heneage Finch, Attorney-General (afterwards Earl of Nottingham,) to prepare a Patent with all advantageous Clauſes accordingly, and commanded Sir Robert Clayton to attend Mr. Attorney with it. He was well known to him, and having acquainted him with this Affair, the Attorney was extremely well pleaſed with it, and deſired Sir Robert himſelf to give ſuch advantageous Clauſes as he could think of, to be inſerted in the Patent. He thereupon called together the Committee, to have their Aſſiſtance, and ſo they prepared the Heads of ſuch Clauſes as they could think of, which he gave to Mr. Attorney, who appointed Sir Robert to call upon him again at a ſet Time, and he would draw the Patent with his own Hand. He came according to the Time, and had a rough Draught given him to take what further Advice he ſhould think fit; which he ſhewed to the Committee or the Governors, vernors, and then returned it to the Attorney, by whom it was ſoon finiſhed, and had the Great Seal affixed to it; and Sir Robert paid the firſt 500 l. (it being to be paid half Yearly) to the Hoſpital, on Account of Rent which was due from him to the Crown.

THUS was this publick good Work, tending ſo much to the Honour both of the King and City of LONDON, brought to paſs from the Beginning to the End, by the prudent Contrivance and preſerving Induſtry of this Alderman. Sir Robert was then made a Governor of the ſaid Houſe, and Sir Jonas Moore, Samuel Pepys, Eſq; and ſeveral other Perſons, known to be Friends and Favourers of the Mathematicks, were called into the Government, for the better Managing and Settling this new Royal School.

King Charles II. the Royal Founder, was pleaſed to grant a further Sum, to place out 10 of the Mathematical Boys Apprentices to Maſters of Ships, reſerving the laſt Year of their Time to his Service, as has been ſaid before.

NEXT, as to the Building, and Apartments in this Hoſpital:

LEADING out of Newgate-ſtreet, and contiguous to Chriſt-Church, is an Entrance, at the South-Eaſt Angle of the Cloiſters, being a Brick Portal, adorned with four Pilaſters and a Triangular Pediment of the Ionick Order; over the Door is the Effigies of King Edward VI. with this Inſcription under it.

EDWARD the VIth. of famous Memory, King of ENGLAND, was the Founder of CHRIST's HOSPITAL; and Sir ROBERT CLAYTON, Knt. and Alderman, ſometime Lord Mayor of this City of LONDON, erected this Statue of King EDWARD, and built moſt Part of this Fabrick, An. Dom. 1682.

IN a Place ſtill called the Grey Fryars, leading alſo out of Newgate-ſtreet, is another Entrance into the Cloiſters, at the South-Weſt Angle, by an Archade; over which is the Effigies of King Charles II.

AT the North-Eaſt Angle of the Cloiſters, is a Piazza, or Colonnade, which ſerves for a Place of Recreation for the Boys, and is a Thorough-fare to St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital, and Smithfield. This was a Part of the old Priory; but being very much decayed, was repaired under the Direction of that great Architect, Sir Chriſtopher Wren.

ON the back of the Eaſt Cloiſter is another Effigy of King Edward the VIth, ſet up in a Nich, with this Inſcription:

King Edward the VI*th of famous Memory, in the* 16*th Year of his Age, founded this Hoſpital.*

OVER the Weſt Cloiſter is a ſpacious Hall, well wainſcotted, fitted with Tables for the Children to dine and ſup at. It was built after the Fire of LONDON by Sir John Frederick, Alderman, at the Expence of 5000 l. Near it is this Inſcription: This Hall being deſtroyed by the Fire, was rebuilt, as it now appears, at the ſole Coſt of Sir John Frederick, Preſident of this Hoſpital, in the Year 1672, having been many other Ways a bountiful Benefactor to the poor Children of this Houſe. In this Hall is a very magnificent Picture, repreſenting King James II. (but intended for King Charles II. had he lived but a little longer) with his Court, containing a vaſt Number of Figures, painted at full Length, extending from one End of the Hall to the other: There are likewiſe in it, ſome of the Governors, the Treaſurer, and Children, Boys and Girls, kneeling: At each End there are the Pictures of King Edward VI. and King Charles II. as Founders, drawn half Way, and painted as hanging up in the ſame Table, and alſo a Repreſentation of the Mathematical School: It was painted by Vario, and is reckoned very valuable.

IN this Hall is likewiſe a large Picture, more antient, of King Edward VI. delivering his Royal Charter for this Hoſpital to the Mayor, who kneeleth, with the Aldermen behind him, a Biſhop (ſuppoſed to be Ridley) with many other Figures ſtanding about; an antient and fine Piece.

THERE are the Pictures alſo of Sir John Moor, of William Garway, of the Rape of Arundel, in Suſſex, Eſq; of Sir Francis Child, and others, Benefactors to this Hoſpital.

IN this Hall is a good Organ, which oftentimes plays, when the Boys ſing their Pſalms, or Anthems, on Sundays, and other ſpecial Days.

THERE are nine Wards, where the Childrens Beds are, in each of which are harboured 50 odd Boys.

THE Girls have a Ward by themſelves, which is indeed the beſt and handſomeſt of them all. It was built at the Coſt of Mr. John Morice, and Sir Robert Clayton; the former giving 1000 l. the other much more. Mr. Thomas Firmin, Girdler, that charitable Citizen in his Time, took upon him the Care of the Building, and was ſupplied with Money from them; yet concealed their Names, according to their Deſire, mentioning no more concerning them in this good Work, but only that two charitable Citizens were at the Charge of it.

THE Occaſion of its being built was this: Sir Robert Clayton had had a very great Fit of Sickneſs, and being reſtored to his Health, thought within himſelf to make an Acknowledgement to GOD for his Mercy by ſome publick good Work; and conſulting with the ſaid Mr. Firmin upon that Subject, he propoſed ſomething ſhould be done for Chriſt's Hoſpital, which, ſince the great Fire, had been but little reſtored hitherto from its Ruins, and excited him particularly to build the Girls Ward there; the Doing of which was computed at 2000 l. Coſt. Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was contented to give one half thereof; and Mr. Firmin was employed in the Care and Management of it, with a ſtrict Injunction given him, that their Names ſhould not be diſcovered. This was not all that was intended: For Sir Robert then deſigned, that the Children of the Houſe ſhould be better fitted for common and ordinary Trades, than, by the Methods then taken, they were, and did project ſeveral Rooms under the Wards for ſeveral Trades; where the Children, not engaged in Mathematicks, ſhould ſpend ſome of their Time in honeſt Callings, that might be uſeful to the Houſe and the Publick too, according to ſome Models he had procured of Hoſpitals from abroad. While this Work was carrying on, it was found convenient to make this a double Ward, however at firſt deſigned only for a ſingle one; and the Stair-Caſe to be ſet within the Cloiſters to ſerve both. This augmented the Charge at firſt propoſed to near double the Sum; and Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was now dead, ſo that the whole Burthen lay on him. While this Work was in hand, having privately viewed it, he intended ſomething further, which would have coſt 500 l. more:

BUT it moſt unſeaſonably happened at this Time, that Feuds and Factions grew high among the Citizens, which ended at laſt in the depriving them of their Charter; and then was this moſt liberal and publick-ſpirited Citizen and Magiſtrate put out both of the Government of the City, and of this Hoſpital, with many other worthy Citizens, and ſo the good Work unhappily ſtopt: But Mr. Firmin ſoon took the Opportunity to let the remaining Governors underſtand what a Piece of Ingratitude this was, ſhewing them with ſome Warmth that he who was thus diſcharged, was the very Man that had highly deſerved of the Houſe in this expenſive Building, by whoſe ſole Charges it had, for divers Years, been carried on, whereby the Founder of this Ward came to be at length known, which otherwiſe might have been concealed to this Day.

ANOTHER Ward there is, being a convenient Ward apart by itſelf, for the Sick, where they that fall into any Diſtempers are removed, and due Care taken of them.

OVER the Eaſt Cloiſter, the Ward of Lodging for the Children was rebuilt, at the Expence of the worthy Preſident, Sir Francis Child, Father of Sir Francis, the preſent Preſident.

FARTHER Eaſtward, is a handſome Counting-Houſe, where the Charge is given to the Governors at their Admiſſion.

OVER the Counting Houſe is the Court-Room, curiouſly adorned with Pictures: Here you have that of King Edward the VIth (an Original) between thoſe of King Charles and James II. That of Sir Richard Dobbs, Lord Mayor, when this Hoſpital was founded, which has theſe bad Lines under it.

Chriſt Hoſpital erected was,
A paſſing Deed of Pity;
What Time Sir Richard Dobbs was Mayor
Of this moſt famous City,
Who careful was in Government,
And further'd much the ſame;
Alſo a Benefactor good,
And joyed to ſee it frame;
Whoſe Picture here his Friends have ſet,
To put each Wight in Mind,
To imitate his Virtuous Deeds,
As God hath us aſſign'd.

ALSO here are the Pictures of Mr. Thomas Strechly, Henry Stone, Eraſmus Smith, Thomas Barnes, Eſqrs; Sir John Leman, Sir Tho. Viner, Sir Chr. Cletherew, Sir John Moor, Sir John Frederick, Sir Wolſtan Dixey, Richard Young, Daniel Collwell, and of John Morice, Eſqrs; all bountiful Benefactors. Mr. Smith gave the Counting-Houſe Court-Room and Pile of Buildings, right againſt it, being ſeveral Wards, his Arms are over the Door, Gules on a Chevron between three Bezants, as many Croſs Creſſets Fitchee, Sable.

IN the South Cloiſter, within theſe few Years, has been ſet up a handſome Marble Monument to the Memory of Sir George Mertins, and his Lady, with this Inſcription:

In Hope of a Bleſſed Reſurrection,
Near this Place are depoſited
The venerable Remains Of
Sir GEORGE MERTINS, Knt.
And
Dame PHILADELPHIA his Wife;
Worthy Examples of conjugal Affection and paternal Tenderneſs,
Who were lovely and pleaſing in their Lives,
And in Death they are not divided.
He was Alderman, and ſometime Lord Mayor of LONDON,
For many Years Treaſurer, and before his Death, Preſident
Of this Hoſpital, which great Offices of Truſt and Power,
He diſcharg'd with Impartiality, Integrity, and Honour.
In Trade, he was without Extortion,
In the Exerciſe of Power without Oppreſſion,
In Offices of Friendſhip without Oſtentation,
In Acts of Piety without Diſſimulation,
And by his diſintereſted and diffuſive Merit in Publick
And Private Life, receiv'd univerſal and unenvied Applauſe.
She was a Lady of excellent Accompliſhments and diſtinguiſh'd Worth.

She died April the 24th, 1722, aged 49.
He died November the 3d, 1727, aged 63.
Their Bodies are buried in Peace,
And
Their Names will be remember'd with Honour.

IN the Eaſt Cloiſter is this remarkable Funeral Inſcription.

Near this Place lieth interred the Body of Mrs. Johanna Parry, who was born in the Year of our Lord God 1577. She lived twenty-five Years under the Reign of Queen Elizabeth; the Reign of King James I. the Reign of King Charles I. the Reign of King Charles II. and in the ſecond Year of the Reign of our preſent gracious Sovereign Lord King James II. On the 20th Day of February 1685, ſhe died in the one hundred and eighth Year of her Age.

NEXT for the Governors and Officers of this great Hoſpital.

THE Governors are many, and commonly Perſons who have been Maſters, or Wardens, of their Companies, or Men of Eſtates, or from whom there are Expectations of Charity. Out of theſe one is Preſident, and he commonly is ſome antient Alderman, that hath paſſed the Chair; and another is Treaſurer, who takes Care of the Affairs of the whole Houſe, and of the Revenues; and therefore is commonly Reſident, and hath a good Houſe to dwell in, but without any Salary: And ſuch an one is choſen by the Governors for this great Truſt, who is of Note for his Abilities, Integrity, and Charity; and according to the Repute he hath, ſo the Hoſpital uſually flouriſheth, and the Benefactions come in plentifully. Governors.

THE preſent Treaſurer is Richard Cheek, Eſq;

EVERY Governor when he is admitted into this Society, hath this Charge ſolemnly given him in the Preſence of the Preſident or Treaſurer, and other Governors aſſembled in Court.

Worſhipful!

" THE Cauſe of your Repair hither at this " preſent is, to give you Knowledge, that " you are elected and appointed, by the Lord " Mayor and Court of Aldermen, to the Office, " Charge, and Governance of Chriſt's Hoſpital.

" AND therefore this is to require you, and " every of you, That you endeavour yourſelves, " with all your Wiſdom and Power, faithfully " and diligently to ſerve in this Vocation and " and Calling; which is an Office of high Truſt " and Worſhip: For ye are called to be faith- " ful, Diſtributors and Diſpoſers of the Goods " of Almighty God to his poor and needy Mem- " bers. In which Office and Calling, if you " ſhall be found negligent and unfaithful, ye " ſhall not only declare yourſelves to be the moſt " unthankful and unworthy Servants of Al- " mighty God, being put in Truſt to ſee the " Relief and Succour of his poor and needy Flock, " but alſo ye ſhall ſhew yourſelves to be very " notable, and great Enemies to that Work, " which moſt highly doth advance and beautify " the Commonwealth of this Realm, and chiefly " of this City of LONDON.

" THESE

" Theſe are therefore to require you and every " of you, That ye here promiſe before God and " this Aſſembly of your Fellow Governors, faith- " fully to travel in this your Office and Calling, " that this Work may have its Perfection, and " that the needy Number committed to your " Charge be diligently and wholſomely provided " for, as you will anſwer before God at the " Hour and Time when you and we ſhall ſtand " before him, to render an Account of our Doings. " And promiſing this to do, you ſhall be now " admitted into this Company and Fellowſhip.

THERE are ſeveral hundred Governors, in which Number are always the Lord Mayor, and Court of Aldermen: Beſides which are the following Officers, the Preſident and Treaſurer, already mentioned,

THE Phyſician, Dr. Fullerton.
THE Surgeon, Mr. Green.
THE Apothecary, Mr. Maſſey.
THE Steward, Mr. Henchman.

A Regiſter, a Matron, a Nurſe and her Maid to every two Wards, a Cook, a Porter, and four Beadles.

THERE are alſo Clerks for Blackwell-Hall, and three Servants called Streetmen, who are to ſee to the well governing the Carts of LONDON.

FOR the Proviſion for this great Family, there are three Brewers, and three Bakers to ſupply it with Beer and Bread.

TWO of the Governors, who are called Almoners, for a Month or more, take Care to buy and lay in Butchers Meat, viz. Beef and Mutton; the Steward attends them.

THE Butcher receives about 40 l. every Month.

AND after this Manner the Children fare daily: They have every Morning for their Breakfaſt Bread and Beer, at half an Hour paſt Six in the Morning, in the Summer Time; and at half an Hour paſt Seven in the Winter. On Sundays, they have Boiled Beef and Pottage for their Dinners; and for their Suppers, Legs and Shoulders of Mutton.

ON Tueſdays and Thurſdays, the ſame Dinners as on Sundays; that is, Boiled Beef and Pottage. On the other Days, no Fleſh Meat: But on Mondays, Milk Pottage: On Wedneſdays, Furmity: On Fridays, old Peaſe and Pottage: Saturdays, Watergruel.

THEY have Roaſt Beef about twelve Days in the Year, by the Kindneſs of ſeveral Benefactors, who have left, ſome 3 l. ſome 50 s. per Ann. for that End and Purpoſe.

THEIR Supper is Bread and Cheeſe, or Butter for thoſe that cannot eat Cheeſe. Only Wedneſdays and Fridays, they have Pudding Pies for Supper.

THEIR Bread formerly was very coarſe and brown; but by the Care and Order of Mr. Breerwood, a late Treaſurer, it was changed, and is very good Wheaten Bread.

THE good Orders of this Houſe are highly commendable, and their Cuſtom on the Lord's Day bringeth Multitudes to ſee them.

AS ſoon as the Boys come from Church, in the Afternoon, they all repair to the Writing School: There all their Names are called over. Then the Chief Maſter catechiſeth them, that is, two Wards at a Time, and the Ward of the Girls. [Note, He catechiſeth three Times a Week, whereof Sunday is one.] Then he expoundeth upon the Catechiſm; and that holds till about half an Hour paſt five. After a little Reſpite, the Boys go into the Hall to Supper. All being come in, one Boy appointed goes up into a Pulpit there placed, and reads a Chapter, being the ſecond Leſſon for the Day. After that he reads likewiſe ſeveral good Collects, or ſhort Prayers, compoſed (or ordered to be compoſed) by the Right Reverend the Biſhop of LONDON; being all ſuitable to the Occaſion; as, for all States of Men, and Thanks to their Benefactors, and Prayers for their Foundation. At the End of every Prayer, all the Boys cry, AMEN.

THE Boy that reads is one of the Uppermoſt, and deſigned for the Univerſity. The Prayers being done, a Pſalm is named by the ſame Boy, and all Sing, with an Organ that is placed in the ſaid great Hall. That done, the ſaid Boy in the Pulpit craves a Bleſſing upon their Supper; and then all the Boys and Girls that were ſtanding round in their Order before, go quietly each to their Tables and take their Places, (which they know) without any Noiſe. Then certain of the Boys in their Turns; ſome bring Bread in their Baskets, ready cut in Pieces, others Trenchers, and others Small Beer; of which they have as much as they pleaſe. Then are brought in ſeveral Wooden Platters, Legs of Mutton, uſually cut out into reaſonable Pieces, and the Nurſes diſtribute them to each Boy. Supper being done (which is not long) the former Boy goes up into the Pulpit again, and gives Thanks; and then ſets a Pſalm, and all the Boys ſing with the Organ. This done, they all, in very quiet and good Order, retire from the Hall to their ſeveral Wards, the Nurſes of each Ward going before their reſpective Ward; and one of the Boys in each Ward carrying the Bread-Basket upon his Shoulder, another the Table-Cloth, and ſo the Hall is preſently clear'd: And the Nurſes and Boys as they paſs along by the Treaſurer, make their Obeiſance. When they are thus retired to their ſeveral Wards, the Nurſes hear them all read Chapters out of the Bible; and then they ſing ſome Pſalm again; and ſoon after they all go to Bed.

The Sick Ward.

AND that theſe poor Children may be taken Care of as well in Sickneſs as in Health, there is a convenient Apartment by itſelf for ſuch to be kept in, which contains a Room for the Lodging of the Sick; a Kitchen for dreſſing their Diet, and preparing ſuch Phyſick as is needful for them; and a Conſultation Chamber, where the Phyſician, Apothecary, or Surgeon meet, to confer upon the Patients Diſtempers and Cures. Theſe commonly come two or three Times a Week, or other, if there be Occaſion. The Phyſician is appointed by the College of Phyſicians. There is alſo a Nurſe propet to this Ward.

BESIDES the Children that are maintained within the Walls of this Hoſpital, there are conſiderable Numbers belonging to it, which are ſent out and provided for in the Country, viz. at Ware and Hertford in Hertfordſhire, and they are of the leaſt and youngeſt Sort, and afterwards brought home to LONDON. At each Place is a School-Maſter to teach the Children to read, with a Salary of 50 l. each.

AT Ware is a fine Building, like a College, making a large Quadrangle, for Boys, containing a School-Houſe and a Maſter's Houſe, and twenty Houſes for Nurſes to keep the Children. Sir Jonathan Raymond, Knt. ſometime Alderman of LONDON, bought and gave them a Field near adjoining, to recreate themſelves, and to play in.

AT Hertford is alſo a School-Houſe and a Maſter's Houſe, and thirteen Houſes more, each with two Rooms on a Floor, and Gardens belonging.

THIS Hoſpital expends twelve or thirteen hundred Pounds a Year in Salaries to Officers, Clerks, and Servants. And the Foundation had ſuch a Reputation, and the Eſtate belonging to it ſo well employed, and ſo juſtly managed and uſed to the real Intents of it, and the Government of it ſo good and regular, that many have been encouraged to be frank Benefactors to it; and ſeldom Men of Eſtate in the City die but they leave it very good Legacies, either in Sums of Money, in Houſes, or Lands: But ſome have been extraordinary in their Bounty, as Mr. Stone of Skillingthorp in Lincolnſhire, left an Eſtate there of about 500 l. a Year for the proper Uſe of this Place; yet leaving many Charities for the Hoſpital firſt to pay out.

Mr. Garraway left an Eſtate to it, near Arundel in Suſſex, of above 700 l. a Year.

ONE Mr. Bacon gave a conſiderable Sum in Reverſion, in caſe of the Death of two Relations.

SO that their yearly Revenue in Houſes and Lands, as it ought to be, to ſatisfy ſuch vaſt Charges, is conſiderably great; and by the Bounty of the City, to encreaſe the wealthy Eſtate thereof, it hath allowed this Houſe the Benefit of looking after and licenſing the Carts of LONDON, the whole Care and Ordering whereof belongs to it: There are 420 Carts allowed in the City, each of which pays a certain ſmall Sum for Sealing.

St. BARTHOLOMEW's HOSPITAL.

St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital.

THIS Hoſpital is incorporated by the Name of the Hoſpital of the Mayor, Commonalty and Citizens of LONDON, Governors for the Poor, called Little St. Bartholomew's near to Weſt-Smithfield. It was erected for ſick and maimed People, where great Care is taken of them, and all Neceſſaries for Food, Lodging, Attendance, Phyſick, and Medicaments, proper for their Cure adminiſtred; for they have good able Phyſicians and Surgeons provided, belonging to the Hoſpital, who give their conſtant Attendance as Occaſion requires; and they have Matrons and Nurſes to look to them, and to ſee that they have what is convenient.

THERE belongs alſo to the Hoſpital an Apothecary to provide and prepare what the Phyſicians direct. And the Diſeaſed are duly viſited by them, in their Wards, where they are lodged, every Morning and Evening, as there is Need; every one having a Bed to himſelf, and by the Care of the Matrons, the Wards are always kept clean and neat.

IT formerly belonged to the Priory of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, founded by one Rahere, an ingenious Gentleman, belonging to King Henry I. founding it about the Year 1102, and he was himſelf the firſt Prior.

IT was governed by a Maſter and eight Brethren, and four Siſters, to take Care of the Poor of the ſaid Hoſpital.

BOTH Priory and Hoſpital were diſſolved under King Henry VIII. who in the laſt Year of his Reign. founded the Hoſpital a-new, and gave 500 Marks per Annum towards its Maintenance.

KING Edward VI. was a chief Benefactor to it, as was ſhewn before.

BUT to give ſome more particular Account of the firſt State of this charitable Foundation, and afterwards of the more modern and preſent Condition of it: It was founded for the Relief of an hundred Poor and Sick of the City of LONDON, by the aforeſaid King Henry VIII. endowing it with the yearly Revenue of 500 Marks, conditionally, that the City alſo for their Part ſhould add other 500 Marks by the Year; which Thing with all due Thankfulneſs they received at his Majeſty's Hands, and embraced the Condition: But when the City took a Survey of what was given by the King for this yearly Sum, they found the Raiſing of this 500 Marks Rent, to lie only in certain Houſes, ſome in great Decay, and ſome rotten and ruinous, and ſome to whom better Tenants had happened, already leaſed out at Terms and Rent, ſcarce reaſonable for the Behoof of the Poor; ſo that to make them again worth the wonted Revenue, and then to continue in the ſame, was no ſmall Charge. Penſions alſo were iſſuing out of the 500 Marks, and granted by Letters Patents of that King to the Hoſpitaler there, and to other Miniſters of the ſame.

IN this Hoſpital itſelf, was found only ſo much Furniture towards the Succouring of theſe hundred Poor, as ſerved three or four Harlots, then lying in Childbed and no more: So much had the Godly Meaning of that King been abuſed in thoſe Days. The Citizens, nevertheleſs, were not diſcouraged with the evil Doings of others, and the great Fall of their Hopes, but provided with what Speed they could to the Redreſs of the Decays, Diſorders, and Defaults, and beſtowed thereabout not much leſs than a thouſand Pounds, whereby in King Edward's Time it came to ſuch a Point that it was fit to receive the Number, and to ſuccour them with all Neceſſaries requiſite, and accordingly received them and maintained them: But, within five Years after, the Citizens had the Care of this Hoſpital. They were, and even in Pulpits, exclaimed againſt, as if they had wrong'd this Charity, by this miſtaken Suppoſition, that this Hoſpital ſhould have made a general Sweep of all Poor and Afflicted, and ſo for their Care were rewarded with nothing but open Detraction.

IN this Seaſon notwithſtanding, were healed of the Pox, Fiſtula's, filthy Blains, and Sores, to the Number of 800, and thence ſafe delivered, that others having Need might enter in their Rooms, beſides eight Score and twelve that died there in their intolerable Miſeries, which might have died and ſtunk in the Noſes of the City.

UPON this Slander, ſo widely ſpread, it was thought good by the Lord Mayor, as chief Patron and Governor of this Hoſpital, in the Name of the City, to publiſh at that Time who were the Overſeers, and with the Orders by him appointed, and from Time to Time practiſed and uſed, by twelve of the Citizens moſt antient in their Courſes, for the Redreſs and Stay of ſuch Slanders, and that it might be an open Witneſs unto all Men, how well Things were adminiſtered there, and by whom, and likewiſe to excite all well-diſpoſed Perſons more and more to beſtow their Charity here.

AND becauſe theſe Men that thus ſpoke againſt the Management of this Hoſpital, endeavoured to ſtop any further Charities and Gifts towards it; ſuggeſting, that there was enough already for this Hundred of diſeaſed People, to be looked after, it was declared that the City, of their endleſs Good-Will towards this moſt neceſſary Succour of their poor Brethren in Chriſt, although at the firſt they ſeemed bound to the preciſe Number of an hundred and no more, wiſhed all Men to be moſt aſſuredly perſuaded, that if by by any Means poſſible they might, they deſired to enlarge the Benefit to a thouſand.

At the firſt Erection, the Hoſpital was taken Care of by two Ranks of Perſons, viz. Governors and Officers, which latter were hired for Wages, to have the neceſſary Doings in the Service of the Houſe.

I. The Governors. Among them the Lord Mayor was Chief Patron; the others were ſo changed, that the one half remained two Years in their Governance, and they were in Number twelve, who were placed there by the Lord Mayor, whereof four were Aldermen, the Reſidue, Commoners thus named,

The President, always a Senior Alderman

Surveyors four, two Aldermen and two Commoners.

Almoners four, one Alderman, and three Commoners.

The Treasurer, a Commoner.

Scrutiners two, both Commoners.

II. Officers continuable or removeable as the Governors ſhall find Cauſe, and were

I. The Hoſpitaler.
II. The Renter Clerk.
III. The Butler.
IV. The Porter.
V. The Matron.
VI. The Siſters, twelve.
VII. The Beadles, eight.

There were alſo three Surgeons in Wages of the Hoſpital, giving daily Attendance upon the Cures, and a Miniſter, who was the Viſitor of Newgate, according to his Office and Charge.

The Governors were always elected by the Lord Mayor and his Brethren, the other Governors; who yearly elected ſix, that is to ſay, two Aldermen and four Commoners, who were admitted into the Hoſpital after this Manner. The whole Company of the twelve old Governors ſitting in Aſſembly together, cauſe their Clerk to read unto the ſix, newly elected, their Charge. That done, and the new Elected conſenting and yielding themſelves to the Charge, the half of the Governors, that had fulfilled their two Years Governance ſtood apart, and the other half that remained, with the new Elected, took them by the Hands after their Degrees, and ſo admitted them, and before they parted all dined together, as well thoſe that came a-new, as thoſe that had governed their Time, and thoſe that remained, every Man at his own Coſt and Charge.

Now for the Charges of St. Bartholomew's, as it was in the Reign of King Edward VI. There were Certain Charges, and Uncertain. Under the Uncertain came the Monies laid out for Shirts, Smocks, and other Apparel for the Poor, for Sugar and Spices, for Caudles for the Sick, Flax for Shirts, and Weaving of the ſame Cloth for Winding-Sheets, Bowls, Brooms, Baskets, Incenſe, Juniper Aſhes to buck their Cloaths. Alſo Money given to them at their Departure, which is meaſured according to their Journey and Need: Which uncertain Charges amounted one Year to the Sum of ſixty Pounds.

The certain Charges roſe from the yearly Wages and Fees of Officers and Servants, and the Charges of Houſhold Reparations, &c.

The following is the Form of the Charge beforeſaid, that was uſed to be given to the new Governors when they were admitted, which the whole Company of the twelve old Governors ſitting in Aſſembly together, cauſed their Clerk to read unto the ſix newly elected.

"It

" IT may pleaſe you to underſtand, that ye " are here elected and choſen, as Fellow-" Governors of this Hoſpital, to continue by the " Space of two Years: By all which Time, ac-" cording to ſuch laudable Decrees and Ordi-" nances as have been, and ſhall be made, by " the Authority of the Lord Mayor, Chief Pa-" tron hereof, in the Name of the City, and the " Conſent of the Governors, for the Time be-" ing, all your other Buſineſs ſet a-part, as much " as you poſſibly may, ye ſhall endeavour your-" ſelves to attend only upon the needful Doings " of this Houſe, with ſuch a loving and careful " Diligence, as ſhall become the faithful Mini-" ſters of GOD, whom ye chiefly, in this Vo-" cation, are appointed to ſerve, and to whom, " for your Negligencies, or Defaults herein, ye " ſhall render an Account: For truly ye cannot " be Blameleſs before GOD, if, after you have " ſet your Hand to this good Plough, and pro-" miſed your Diligence to the Poor, ye ſhall con-" trarywiſe turn your Head backward, and not " perform the Succour that CHRIST looketh " for at your Hands, and hath witneſſed to be " done to himſelf, with theſe Words; What-" ſoever ye do to one of theſe needy Perſons for my " Name's Sake, the ſame ye do unto me: And " otherwiſe if ye neglect and deſpiſe them, ye de-" ſpiſe me.

" WE therefore require and deſire every of " you, on GOD's Behalf, and in his moſt Holy " Name, that ye endeavour yourſelves, to the " beſt of your Wit and Powers, ſo to Comfort, " Order, and Govern this Houſe, and the Poor " thereof, that at the laſt Day ye may appear be-" fore the Face of GOD, as true and faithful " Stewards and Diſpoſers of all ſuch Things, as " ſhall for the Comfort and Succour of them, " (during the Time of your Office) be commit-" ted to your Credit and Charge: And this we " do require you faithfully to promiſe in the " Sight of GOD, and Hearing of your Brethren; " and in ſo doing, we here admit you into our " Fellowſhip.

AND ſo likewiſe had all the Officers, Superior and Inferior, their reſpective Charges, in a certain Form of Words given them, but too long to be here ſet down.

THERE was alſo a pious Form of Thankſgiving, which the Diſeaſed, being cured, and to be diſcharged the Hoſpital, were to repeat upon their Knees, in the Hall, before the Hoſpitaler, and two Maſters of the Houſe, at the leaſt; having learned it without Book, according to the Hoſpitaler's Charge, which was as follows:

" WE magnify and praiſe thee, O Lord, " that ſo mercifully and favourably " haſt looked upon us, miſerable and wretched " Sinners, which have ſo highly offended thy " Divine Majeſty, that we are not worthy to be " numbered among thy Elect and choſen People. " Our Sins being great and grievous, are daily " before our Eyes. We lament and are ſorry for " them, and with ſorrowful Heart and la-" mentable Tears, we call and cry unto thee for " Mercy. Have Mercy upon us, O Lord, have " Mercy upon us, and according to thy great " Mercy wipe away the Multitude of our Sins: " And grant us now, O Lord, thy moſt holy " and working Spirit, that ſetting aſide all Vice " and Idleneſs, we may in thy Fear walk, and " go forward in all Virtue and Godlineſs.

" AND for that thou haſt moved, O Lord, " the Hearts of godly Men, and the Governors " of this Houſe, to ſhew their exceeding Chari-" ty towards us, in curing our Maladies and " Diſeaſes, we yield moſt humble and hearty " Thanks to thy Majeſty, and ſhall inceſſantly " laud and praiſe thy moſt holy and glorious " Name, beſeeching thee, moſt gracious and " merciful Lord, according to thy holy Word " and Promiſe, ſo to bleſs thine own Dwelling-" Houſe, and the faithful Miniſters thereof, " that there be here found no Lack, but that " their Riches and Subſtance may increaſe: " That thy holy Name may thereby be the more " praiſed and glorified: To whom be all " Laud, Honour, and Glory, World without " End. Amen.

ALTHOUGH the old Hoſpital then ſtanding wholly eſcaped the dreadful Fire in 1666, yet a great Part of its Revenues being in Houſes in LONDON, ſuffered much thereby. Notwithſtanding, ſuch hath been the Care of the Governors, the Diligence and Induſtry of the Phyſicians and Surgeons, and the Supplies of ſeveral good Benefactors, that there hath been yearly received in here many maimed and ſick Seamen and Soldiers, with other diſeaſed Perſons, from divers Parts of the King's Dominions, and ſome from Foreign Parts, and many cured, and relieved with Money, and other Neceſſaries, at their Departure; beſides their Diet and Lodging during their Cure.

THIS Hoſpital contains two ſpacious Courts for the Harbour of theſe poor ſick and maimed Perſons.

ON the Weſt Side of the firſt Court is this Inſcription:

Theſe Brick Buildings were erected at the Charges of St. BARTHOLOMEW's HOSPITAL, Sir ROBERT DUCIE, Knt. being Preſident, and MARTINE BOND, Eſq; Treaſurer. Anno Domini 1634.

And on the Eaſt Side the following:

This Building was erected Ann. Domini 1664. the Right Worſhipful Sir RICHARD CHIVERTON, Knt. Preſident, and RICHARD MILES, Eſq; Treaſurer.

THE grand Part of the Hoſpital, where are the Apartments for the Governors, the Preſident, the Phyſicians, &c. to meet in, is now rebuilding, and almoſt finiſhed, in a ſtrong and beautiful Manner of Stone, with a Balluſtrade all round the Top of it, adorn'd with Urns and Vaſſes. In this new Building is an Hall of an Hundred Feet long, and Thirty four Feet broad; the Fret-work on the Ceiling is exceeding curious, done in Stuco, of three different Colours.

THERE are two other Houſes, one at Kingsland, the other called the Lock in Southwark, both under the Charge of St. Bartholomew's Hoſpital: There are about Six hundred Patients, Men and Women, daily relieved with Lodging, Diet, Phyſick, Chirurgery, and all other Miniſtrations uſeful and neceſſary for reſtoring ſick and wounded Seamen, and others, to their Healths and Limbs. The ſaid Hoſpital is governed by a Preſident, Treaſurer, and ſeveral hundred Governors, out of which, annually, Committees are elected, for the good Ordering the Affairs of the Houſe, viz.

St. THOMAS's HOSPITAL.

St. Thomas's Hoſpital.

THIS Hoſpital is ſeated on the Eaſt Side of the Borough of Southwark, but in the City's Juriſdiction, and is properly ſubjoined to that of St. Bartholomew's, being alſo appropriated for the Cure of ſick and maimed poor People, which are ſent thither from the ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, by Certificates from the Church Wardens, and other ſubſtantial Inhabitants of the Pariſhes where they dwell; and are accordingly received and Care taken of them, as at St. Bartholomew's until cured, or reſtored to Health, if curable.

IT is under the ſame Government with the former, and was incorporated with Chriſt Church, by King Edward VI. It was reckoned above 100 Years ago, to maintain 300 poor Diſeaſed, with the Charge of about 2000 l. per Annum.

THIS Hoſpital eſcaped the furious Flames in the Year 1666, and moſt providentially thoſe about 10 Years afterward, when on the 26th of May 1676, a Fire happened in the Borough, which conſumed 500 Houſes; yet, as by the particular Will of Heaven, was extinguiſhed at this Place. The Structure being old, the Church was rebuilt, and moſt of the Hoſpital, in the Years 1701, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, in a very ſpacious and ornamental Manner.

THERE are three Quadrangular Courts, formed by ſeveral Piles of Building. The Fronts of that round the firſt Court are elevated on Columns of the Tuſcan Order. At the Entrance are three handſome Pair of Iron Gates. In the Middle of the Eaſt Side is a Door Caſe of Stone, adorned with Columns, Entablature, and Pediment of the ſame Order, enriched with the King's Arms in the Pediment, and higher with four Cripples in as many Niches, a fine Clock at Top, and under it the Figure of the Founder, with this Inſcription:

EDWARD the ſixth of moſt famous Memory, King of England, of his moſt Chriſtian Zeale, and gracious Bounty, in the Yeare of our Lord 1552, in the 16 Yeare of his Age, and 7*th of his Reign, was Founder of this Hoſpital of St.* Thomas, that of Chriſt Church, Bridewell, and was to them a moſt worthy and bountifull Benefactor.

THERE are likewiſe the two following Inſcriptions cut in Stone, on the North and South Sides.

THIS Building on the North Side of this Court, containing three Wards, was erected at the Charge of Thomas Guy, Eſq; Citizen and Stationer of LONDON, a worthy Governour, and bountifull Benefactor to this Hoſpital, An° 1707.

THIS Building on the South Side of this Court, containing three Wards, was erected at the Charge of Thomas Frederick, of LONDON, Eſq; a worthy Governour, and liberall Benefactor to this Hoſpital, An° 1708.

THE ſecond Court has, on the South Side, the Pariſh Church, adorned on the Front with Pilaſters of the Ionick Order. On the North Side is the Chapel of the Houſe, with ornamental Pilaſters of the Corinthian Order. The Eaſt Side is the Hall, elevated on Columns of the Tuſcan Order; and in this Court are the Miniſter's, Treaſurer's, Steward's, Cook's, and Butler's Houſes, with the Counting-Houſe.

THE third Court is called the Great Square, the Fronts of which are alſo built on Columns of the Tuſcan Order, and adorned above with Pilaſters of the Ionick.

IN the Center of this Court is the Figure of Sir Robert Clayton, carved in full Proportion, in the Habit of Lord Mayor, with a Charter in his Hand, and ſtanding on a Pedeſtal, about ſix Feet high, all neatly cut in Marble; the Pedeſtal is enriched with Sir Robert's Arms, ſupported with two Cupids, &c. and on the North Side of the Pedeſtal is this Inſcription.

ROBERTO CLAITONO, Equiti, in Agro Northamptonienſi nato, Civi Londinenſi, & Urbis Prætori, hujus Noſocomii Præſidi, novi Pauperum Ergaſtuli Vicepræſidi, & Fautori benefico. Quod in Magiſtratu ſemper æquus, Patriæ, Libertatis, & Fidei reformatæ Vindex fuit acerrimus: Quod præter alia Liberalitatis ſuæ erga egenos Monumenta Puellarum in Chriſti Orphanotrophio Cubiculum ſuis ſumptibus extrui curavit: Quod ad hanc Domum reſiciendam, Libras primum DC. erogavit vivus. Et inſuper MM CCC. Teſtamento legavit: Ob tanta viri Merita, hanc Statuam, quam Honoris Cauſa viventi poſuerant Noſocomii Curatores, Ann. Dom. M DCC I. in Memoriam Mortui decoraverunt, Ann. Dom. M DCC XIV.

ON the South Side of the Pedeſtal, is the ſame in Engliſh, viz.

" TO Sir Robert Clayton, Knight, born in " Northamptonſhire, Citizen and Lord Mayor of " LONDON, Preſident of this Hoſpital, " Vice-Preſident of the new Workhouſe, and a " bountiful Benefactor to it, a juſt Magiſtrate, " and brave Defender of the Liberty and Reli- " gion of his Country. Who (beſides many o- " ther Inſtances of his Charity to the Poor) " built the Girls Ward in Chriſt's Hoſpital, " gave firſt towards the rebuilding of this Houſe " 600 l, and left by his laſt Will 2300 l. to the " Poor of it. This Statue was erected in his " Life-time by the Governors, Ann. Dom. " MDCCI. as a Monument of their Eſteem of " ſo much Worth, and to preſerve his Memory " after Death, was by them beautified, Anno " Dom. MDCCXIV.

IN a little Court farther Eaſtward, are the Salivating Wards, viz. Lazarus's Ward, and Suſannah's Ward.

ALSO Cutting Ward, with ſeven Beds; and the Cutting Room is cloſe by it, where they cut for the Stone. In this Court alſo is the Surgery and Bagnio, the Theatre, and Dead-Houſe, where the Dead are put till ſuch Time as they are buried in a Church-yard near this Court.

IN the aforeſaid Hall are the Pictures of King Edward VI. Charles II. William and Mary, and that of Sir Robert Clayton, all curiouſly done at full Length. Here the Preſident's Seat is finely enrich'd with carved Fruit, Leaves, &c. done in Relievo: And in this Hall are put up the Arms of Sir Robert Clayton, Argent, a Croſs Sable, between tween four Augreſſes; and ſeveral large Tables of Benefactors.

THE Governors of this Hoſpital are the Lord Mayor, and ſixty other Gentlemen and ſubſtantial Citizens of LONDON.

SIR Gerard Conyers, Knight and Alderman, Preſident.

Charles Joy, Eſq; Treaſurer, who hath the executive Government of the Houſe, with a Committee of thirty Governors, (ſeven whereof are a Quorum) changed every three Years, ten going out Yearly, and as many elected in their Room, at the annual General Court, and with twelve Almoners choſen Quarterly, who Weekly take in the Sick and Wounded, and diſcharge ſuch as are Cured, or the Incurables.

TWO Chaplains.

Mr. Casberd, Curate of the Pariſh.

Dr. Plumtre, Dr. Wilmot, and Dr. Hall, Phyſicians.

Mr. Fern, Mr. Cheſelden, and Mr. Symonds, Surgeons.

Mr. Pierce, Apothecary.

Mr. Gale, Steward.

Mr. Mathews, Clerk and Regiſter.

ONE Cook; one Butler, who hath alſo the Care of the Brewhouſe; two Porters; four Beadles.

Mrs. Pierce, Matron, under whom are nineteen Siſters, who take Care of ſo many ſeveral Wards; with Nurſes, Watchers, &c. attending the Poor.

THE Governors ſet every Thurſday at the Hoſpital, to take in and diſcharge Patients.

AT this Hoſpital, the laſt Year, viz. 1732, were cured and diſcharged, of wounded, maimed, ſick, and diſeaſed Perſons, 4173.

MANY of whom have been relieved with Money and Neceſſaries at their Departure, to accommodate them in their Journies to their ſeveral Countries and Habitations.

BURIED from thence the ſame Year, after much Charge in their Sickneſs, 307.

REMAINING under Cure at the Charge of the ſaid Hoſpital, 593.

SO that there were, or had been, that Year, of poor miſerable Objects, under the Care of the ſaid Hoſpital, and deſtitute of other proper Cure, in all, 5073.

BRIDEWELL HOSPITAL.

Bridewell Hoſpital.

AFTER the three afore-mentioned great Hoſpitals had been founded, there being many other poor diſtreſſed Perſons in the City, who had neither Houſe nor Harbour, but were forced to lye abroad in the open Streets, many worthy Citizens were thereby much affected, and eſpecially Ridley, the good Biſhop of LONDON; who, conſidering that Bridewell, an old decayed Houſe of the King's, ſituated in the City, being very large and capacious, might be extreamly ſerviceable to this charitable Purpoſe, he endeavoured to find a way to beg it of the King, and had the better Opportunity at this Time, one being about buying it of the King to convert to his own Uſe. And to compaſs this Deſign, in the Month of May, in this charitable Year 1552, he wrote a very pathetic Letter to Sir William Cecyl, Knt. the King's Secretary, whom he knew to be of a pious Diſpoſition, and much about the King's Perſon. His Letter was as follows:

Biſhop Ridley's Letter to Cecyl to beg Bridewell.

"GOOD Mr. Cecyl, I muſt be a Suitor unto you in our Maſter Chriſt's Cauſe. "I beſeech you be good unto him. The Mat-"ter is, Sir: Alas! he hath lien too too long "abroad (as you do know) without Lodging, in "the Streets of LONDON, both Hungry, "Naked, and Cold. Now Thanks be unto "Almighty God, the Citizens are willing to "refreſh him, and to give him both Meat, "Drink, Cloathing, and Firing; but alas! Sir, "they lack Lodging for him. For in ſome one "Houſe, I dare ſay, they are fain to lodge "three Families under one Roof. Sir, there is "a wide, large, empty Houſe of the King's "Majeſty, called Bridewell, that would wonderfully well ſerve to lodge Chriſt in, if he "might find ſuch good Friends in the Court to "procure in his Cauſe. Surely I have ſuch a "good Opinion in the King's Majeſty, that if "Chriſt had ſuch faithful and hearty Friends, "that would heartily ſpeak for him, he ſhould, "undoubtedly, ſpeed at the King's Majeſty's "Hands. Sir, I have promiſed my Brethren, "the Citizens, to move you, becauſe I do take "you for one that feareth God, and would that "Chriſt ſhould lye no more abroad in the Street.

HE prayed him alſo for God's Sake, that he would ſtop the Sale of this Houſe, in caſe any were about buying of it, as he heard there was; and that he would ſpeak in our Maſter's Cauſe. The ſaid Biſhop wrote alſo to Sir John Gates, another great Man at Court, about this Buſineſs more at large: And he joyned, he ſaid, Cecyl with him, and all other that loved and looked for Chriſt's final Benediction on the latter Day; meaning that in the Goſpel, Come ye Bleſſed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the Beginning of the World. For I was an hungry, &c. He alſo ſent Inſtructions by the Bearer of this Letter, to confer further with Cecyl in this Affair. So that that holy Martyr Ridley's Name muſt not be forgotten, as a great Inſtrument in the Procurement of Bridewell to the City.

AFTERWARD this Houſe being obtained to the City, it was employed for the Correction and Puniſhment of idle, vagrant People, and Strumpets, and for ſetting them to Work, that they might in an honeſt Way take Pains to get their own Livelihood.

AND here muſt not be omitted the Names of two good Mayors of LONDON, Dobbs and Barnes; the Former a main Inſtrument in procuring the Foundation of this and other Hoſpitals: The Latter in furthering the good Eſtate of them, whom the good Biſhop of LONDON accoſted in this Manner, in one of the Letters he wrote out of Priſon, a little before his Death:

"O Dobbs, Dobbs, Alderman, and Knight, "thou in thy Year didſt win my Heart "for evermore, for that honourable Act, that "moſt bleſſed Work of God, of the Erection "and Setting up of Chriſt's holy Hoſpitals, and "truly religious Houſes, which by thee, and "through thee, were begun. For thou, like a "Man of God, when the Matter was moved, "[perhaps by himſelf, the Biſhop] for Chriſt's "poor ſilly Members, to be holpen from extream "Miſery, Hunger, and Famine, thy Heart, I ſay, "was moved with Pity; and as Chriſt's high "honourable Officer in that Cauſe, thou calledſt "together thy Brethren, the Aldermen of the "City, before whom thou brakeſt the Matter "for the Poor: Thou didſt plead their Cauſe: "Yea, and not only in thine own Perſon thou "didſt ſet forth Chriſt's Cauſe; but to further "the Matter, thou broughteſt me into the Council Chamber of the City before the Aldermen "alone, whom thou hadſt aſſembled there together to hear me ſpeak what I could ſay, as an "Advocate, by Office and Duty in the poor

"Man's

" Man's Cauſe. The Lord wrought with thee, " and gave thee the Conſent of thy Brethren, " whereby the Matter was brought to the Com- " mon Council, and ſo to the whole Body of " the City; by whom, with an uniform Con- " ſent, it was committed to be drawn, ordered " and deviſed, by a certain Number of the moſt " witty Citizens and politick; endued alſo with " Godlineſs, and with ready Hearts, to ſet for- " ward ſuch a noble Act, as could be choſen " in all the whole City. And they, like true and " faithful Miniſters, both to the City, and their " Maſter Chriſt, ſo ordered, deviſed, and brought " forth the Matter, that Thouſands of poor ſilly " Members of Chriſt, that elſe, for extream " Hunger and Miſery, ſhould have famiſhed and " periſhed, ſhall be relieved, holpen, and " brought up; and ſhall have Cauſe to bleſs the " Aldermen of that Time, the Common Coun- " cil, and the whole Body of the City; but eſ- " pecially thee, O Dobbs, and thoſe choſen " Men by whom this honourable Work of God " was begun and wrought.

" AND thou, O Sir George Barnes, thou " waſt in thy Year, not only a Furtherer and " Continuer of that which before thee, by thy " Predeceſſor, was well begun, but alſo thou " didſt labour ſo to have perfected the Work, " that it ſhould have been an abſolute Thing, " and a perfect Spectacle of true Charity and " Godlineſs unto all Chriſtendom. Thine En- " deavour was to have ſet up an Houſe of Oc- " cupations, both that all kind of Poverty " being able to work, ſhould not have lacked, " whereupon profitably they might have been " occupied to their own Relief, and to the Pro- " fit and Commodity of the Commonwealth of " the City; and alſo to have retired thither the " poor Babes brought up in the Hoſpitals, when " they had come to a certain Age and Strength; " and alſo all thoſe which in the Hoſpitals afore- " ſaid have been cured of their Diſeaſes. And " to have brought this to paſs, thou obtainedſt " (not without great Diligence and Labour, " both of thee and thy Brethren) of that Godly " King Edward, that Chriſtian and Peerleſs " Prince, the Princely Place of Bridewell, and " what other Things to the Performance of the " ſame, and under what Condition, it is not " unknown. That this thine Endeavour hath " not had like Succeſs, the Fault is not in thee, " but in the Condition and State of the Time.

AT the ſame Time that the Citizens were moved to theſe Charities, the King was excited to the ſame, by good Sermons preached before him: Such was that of Mr. Lever, a learned and pious Preacher in thoſe Days, and Maſter of St. John's College, Cambridge, who, in a Lent Sermon before the King, had theſe Words: " O merciful Lord, what a Number of poor, free- " ble, halt, blind, lame, ſickly, yea, with idle " Vagabonds and deſſembling Caitiffs mixt among " them, lye, and creep, begging in the Miry " Streets of LONDON and Weſtminſter? It " is too great Pity afore the World, and to " utter Damnation before God, to ſee theſe " Beggings as they uſe to do in the Streets. " For there is never a one of theſe, but he lack- " eth either thy charitable Alms to relieve his " Need, or elſe thy due Correction to puniſh " his Fault, &c. Theſe ſilly Souls have been " neglected throughout all England, and eſpecial- " ly in LONDON and Weſtminſter. But now " I truſt, that a good Overſeer, a godly Biſhop, " I mean, will ſee that they in theſe two Cities " ſhall have their Needs relieved, and their " Faults corrected, to the good Example of all " other Towns and Cities. Take heed that there " be ſuch Graſs to ſit down there, as ye [ſpeak- " ing to the King] command the People to ſit " down: That there be ſufficient Houſing, and " other Proviſion for the People there, as ye " command them to be quiet. The Men ſat " down about Five thouſand in Number: Which " was Part of the Goſpel for the Day, out of " which he took his Text.

AND Ridley, that zealous and charitable Prelate, and true Father of his Flock in LONDON, was ſeaſonably called alſo to preach before the King at Weſtminſter, where he ſo cloſely and affectionately preſs'd Perſons in high Place and Calling, to be Inſtruments in helping and ſuccouring the Poor, that the King was exceedingly moved with his Diſcourſe, and preſently ſent for him, taking Notice to him of his Sermon; and that he ſuppoſed he chiefly had him in his Eye, as being the higheſt of thoſe in great Place and Calling, that he the Biſhop ſpake to. Then the King aſſured him of his own Readineſs to promote ſuch good Purpoſes, deſiring him to direct him therein, and what he would adviſe him to do on that Part.

THE Biſhop hereupon referred the King to the City, and the King preſently cauſed a Letter to be wrote, and ſent to the Mayor and his Brethren, to enter into Conſultation about it: The Concluſion of which was, that as the City had appointed the Grey Fryars, now called Chriſt Church, for poor Children; St. Bartholomew's, and likewiſe St. Thomas's in Southwark, for the Maimed and Diſeaſed; and Bridewell for the Correction of Vagabonds, Strumpets, and idle Perſons, and for finding them Work; ſo they obtained of the King to grant the Governors of theſe Places to be a Corporation, and to have Authority convenient for the Governing thereof: And he conſtituted himſelf Founder, and Patron.

IN June an Indenture bore Date, and was made between the King, and the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, and their Succeſſors for ever, towards the Maintenance of poor and impotent People; granting all the Manor Houſe, and Place of Bridewell, with the Appurtenances, lying and being in the Pariſh of St. Bridget in Fleet-ſtreet, with other Lands, and with a Licenſe to purchaſe 4000 Mark Lands for the Uſe aboveſaid; beſides the Lands given them by his Majeſty in LONDON, and elſewhere; and to purchaſe ſo much Land, beſides Fees and Penſions granted to the Officers; and that the Lands given them by the King ſhould be quit and diſcharged of all Tenths and Firſt Fruits. That they might make godly and wholeſome Ordinances, Statutes and Rules, for the Government of the Poor. And that within the City of LONDON, and County of Middleſex, they might ſearch and examine all Manner of ſuſpicious Houſes, Taverns, Ale-houſes, &c. and other ſuſpected Places for Ruffians, Vagabonds, and idle Perſons. This Gift of the King was computed to the Yearly Value of Four hundred and fifty Pounds. King Edward's Grants.

AND moreover, out of his meer Grace and Chriſtian Charity, he gave out of the Hoſpital of the Savoy, now ſuppreſs'd for the aforeſaid Charitable Uſe, a great Part of the Revenue thereof, which was 700 Mark Lands, together with the Bedding and Furniture; though dying ſoon after, the Grant ſeemed not to be fully finiſhed: But for fear it ſhould not take Place, (ſo much it ran in the King's Mind) that in his laſt Will he cauſed this Clauſe to be inſerted; The Grant made to the Mayor and City of LONDON, touching the Savoy and Lands thereof, to be performed.

THO' this Houſe was granted in the Year 1553, yet it ſeems it was not till two Years after, that the City entered and took Poſſeſſion of it by Gerard Gerard their Mayor, having obtained Queen Mary's Confirmation.

In the Time of Queen Elizabeth, about the Year 1570 and odd, one John Pain, a Citizen, invented a Mill to grind Crown, which he got recommended to the Lord Mayor, for the Uſe of Bridewell. This Mill had two Conveniences; one was, that it would grind a greater Quantity conſiderably, than other Mills of that Sort could do; and the other (which would render it ſo uſeful to Bridewell) was, that the Lame, either in Arms or Legs, might work at it, if they had but Uſe of either: And accordingly theſe Mills were termed Hand Mills, or Foot Mills.

This Mill he ſhewed to the Lord Mayor, who ſaw it grind as much Corn with the Labour of two Men, as they did then at Bridewell, with ten: That is to ſay, two Men with Hands, two Buſhels the Hour; or two Men with Feet, two Buſhels the Hour. If they were lame in their Arms, then they might earn their Livings with their Legs: If lame in their Legs, then they might earn their Livings with their Arms.

One Mill would grind twenty Buſhels of Wheat in a Day: So that by Computation it was reckoned, that one of theſe would ſupply a thouſand Perſons.

Long after this Houſe of Bridewell was given to the City, there remained many old Records there, which had probably been there repoſited ever ſince the Kings of England made it their Reſidence. This, in the Days of Queen Elizabeth, was, by Somebody belonging to the Lord Treaſurer, diſcovered to him; informing him, That certain old Fines were kept there, in the Cuſtody of the Chirographer, i. e. The Officer in the Common-Pleas, that engroſſeth Fines, and that the ſaid Fines ought to be in the Keeping of the Lord Treaſurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer; and moved him to call the ſaid Chirographer before him, to know by what Right he kept the ſame, and thereupon to give Order for their removing.

One who lived in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſpeaking of the Hoſpitals, and particularly of this, applying himſelf to the Romaniſts, who boaſted of their Hoſpitality: "Look into LONDON, ſaid he, What Hoſ-"pitals are there founded in the Goſpel Time! "The Poor indeed relieved, Youth godly brought "up, and the Idle ſet to Work. Popery would "ſometime feed the Hungry, and ſeldom cor-"rect the unprofitable Drones, that ſucked the "Honey from the labouring Bees, nor bring up "Children in the Fear of God: But to fill the "Belly, and not to teach Virtue, is to increaſe "Vice. Well worth Bridewell therefore; for it "is a good School.

This a Right Reverend Biſhop of Durham ſpoke, to oppoſe his Popiſh Adverſary, before thoſe of the Goſpel, becauſe of the Hoſpitality of their Religious Houſes.

Another who wrote above an hundred Years after, giveth this Account of Bridewell: "That "in it were an hundred poor Children trained "up, beſides many other Perſons kept at Work.

This, and the three other Hoſpitals, were thought to ſpend, by charitable Gifts, upon the Poor, about 10,000 l. yearly.

In Bridewell, at the City's Charge, were built in thoſe Times, twelve new Granaries, ſufficient to contain ſix thouſand Quarters of Corn, and two Storehouſes, which would hold four thouſand Chaldron of Coals, for the Proviſion of the City, at the Charge of 3000 l. or thereabouts.

The Uſe of this Hoſpital, now, is for a Houſe of Correction, and to be a Place where all Strumpets, Night-walkers, Pick-pockets, vagrant and idle Perſons, that are taken up for their ill Lives, as alſo incorrigible and diſobedient Servants, are committed by the Mayor and Aldermen, who are Juſtices of the Peace in this City. And being ſo committed, are forced to beat Hemp in publick View, with due Correction of Whipping, according to their Offence, for ſuch a Time as the Preſident and Court ſhall ſee Cauſe. The Court Day being, generally, every Friday in the Forenoon.

And to this Hoſpital are ſent ſeveral Youths, as Apprentices to Glovers, Flaxdreſſers, Weavers, &c. who there reſide. And theſe are clad in blue Doublets and Breeches, with white Hats: Having faithfully ſerved their Time of ſeven Years, they have not only their Freedom, but alſo 10 l. each, toward carrying on their reſpective Trades, and many of them have, from Nothing, arrived to be Governors themſelves.

In the Year 1666, this Houſe was burnt, and all the Apartments belonging to it; as alſo all the Dwelling-Houſes in the Precinct of Bridewell, which was about two Thirds of the Revenue of the Houſe; but the Governors, till the Hoſpital could be rebuilt, made Proviſion for the ſeveral Arts-Maſters and their Apprentices, in Places remote from the City: And now the Chapel, Court-Houſe, Work-Houſes, and Dwelling Houſes, within the ſaid Hoſpital, by the Care and Pains of the worthy Governors at the Time of building them, are more convenient than ever. The Reparations, Rebuilding, and other incident Charges, occaſioned by the Fire, amounted to above 6000 l. Beſides the great Loſs that this Houſe ſuſtained by the Fire in 1666, their Revenue was much impaired by two other Fires that happened at Wapping; where a great many Tenements belonging to it were burnt; the one in June 1673; and the other in November 1682.

In the Court Room is a Chair for the Preſident, and convenient Seats for the Governors: It is adorned with Columns of the Compoſite Order, a Gallery, &c. but the moſt valuable Embelliſhments are the ſeveral handſome Tables, wherein the Names of the Benefactors are depencilled in Gold Letters.

Over the Door, at the Entrance is this Inſcripton:

THIS Chapel, Court-Room, and Parlour, were repaired and beautified in the Year 1706. Sir Thomas Rawlinſon, Lord Mayor, then Preſident; Thomas Gardiner, Eſq; Treaſurer.

And over the Gates going into the Chapel:

THESE Iron Gates, and the Marble Pavement, were the Gift of the Right Worſhipful Sir William Withers, Knight and Alderman, Preſident of this Hoſpital, Anno Dom. 1713.

The whole Management of the Affairs in this Hoſpital is by the Governors, who are above 300, beſides the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen; all Gentlemen of the greateſt Reputation and Subſtance in the City and elſewhere, and who are likewiſe Governors of the Hoſpital of Bethlem.

The Preſident is Humphrey Parſons, Eſq; Alderman.

The Treaſurer, Robert Alſop, Eſq; Alderman.

Court-Clerk, John Taylour, Eſq;

There are beſides, the following Officers; a Steward, a Porter, a Matron, and four Beadles; the youngeſt of whom is to give Correction to the Criminals.

In the laſt Year (1732) there were received into the Hoſpital of Bridewell, Vagrants, and other indigent and miſerable People, all which had Phyſick, and ſuch other Relief, at the Charge of the ſaid Houſe, as their Neceſſities required, 612.

MAINTAINED in the ſaid Hoſpital, and brought up in divers Arts and Trades, at the only Charge of the Houſe, as Apprentices, 102.

BETHLEM HOSPITAL; Or, BEDLAM.

Old Bethlem. THE Hoſpital of St. Mary of Bethlem, ſituated in Biſhopſgate Ward, without the City Wall, betwixt Biſhopſgate-ſtreet and Moorfields, was firſt founded by Simon Fitz-Mary, one of the Sheriffs of London, A. D. 1246. to be a Priory of Canons with Brethren and Siſters, and to wear a Star upon their Copes and Mantles, and to receive the Biſhop of Bethlehem, and the Canons or Meſſengers of the Church of Bethlehem, whenſoever they ſhould have Occaſion to travel hither.

KING Henry VIII. gave this Houſe to the City of LONDON. They converted it to a Houſe or Hoſpital, for the Cure of Lunaticks; but not without Charges, at ſo much per Week, for thoſe brought in, if they or their Relations were able; and if not, then at the Pariſh Charge, in which they were Inhabitants.

New Bethlem. THIS Hoſpital ſtood in an obſcure and cloſe Place, near many Common-Sewers, and alſo was too little to receive and entertain the great Number of diſtracted Perſons, both Men and Women: Therefore upon a charitable Conſideration of the ſame, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City of LONDON, did grant unto the Governors a ſufficient Piece of Ground againſt London-Wall, on the South Side of the lower Quarters of Moorfields: And in Purſuance thereof they did proceed to build a new Hoſpital, which is now a ſtately and magnificent Structure, containing in Length from Eaſt to Weſt 540 Feet, and in Breadth 40 Feet, beſides the Wall which incloſeth the Gardens before it, which is neatly ordered with Walks round about, and Graſs Plats, or Parterres, in the Middle; and beſides this Garden, there is, at each End, another for the Lunatick People, when they are a little well of their Diſtemper, to walk in for their Refreſhment; this Wall is in Length 680 Feet, being very high.

THIS large Fabrick is built of Brick and Free-ſtone: In the Front is a fine Stone Door-Caſe, adorned with four Pilaſters, a circular Pediment, and Entablature of the Corinthian Order, the King's Arms in the Pediment, and thoſe of Sir William Turner under it, who was Preſident when the Hoſpital was built, which was begun in April 1675, and finiſhed in July 1676.

AT the Entrance are handſome Iron Gates, where, on two Piers, each adorned with two Demy Columns of the Ionick Order, and Feſtoons, are placed the Figures of two Lunaticks, one raving, the other melancholy mad; they are eſteemed to be Pieces of exquiſite Sculpture, and were the Workmanſhip of Mr. Cibber, of Holſtein, who did the Baſſo Relievo on the Pedeſtal of the Monument on Fiſh-ſtreet Hill; and was Father to the preſent Poet-Laureat.

THE Charge of this Building was computed to amount to near 17000 l. where now, with ſome Additions lately made, there is an Accommodation for 170 Patients, whereas in the old Hoſpital there were commonly not above 50 or 60 at moſt.

THE Inſide conſiſts chiefly of two Galleries, one over the other, each 193 Yards long, 13 Feet high, and 16 Feet broad, not including the Cells for the Patients, which are 12 Feet deep. The ſaid Galleries are divided, in the Middle, by two Iron Grates: So that now all the Men are placed in one End of the Houſe, and all the Women at another, each having their proper Conveniences, as likewiſe a Stove-Room, where, in the Winter, they have a Fire to warm them: And in each Gallery Servants lie, to be ready at Hand on all Occaſions.

BESIDES, below Stairs there is made, of late, a Bathing-Place for the Patients, ſo contrived, as to be an Hot, or Cold Bath, as Occaſion requires.

IN the Middle of the Upper Gallery is a large ſpacious Room, where the Governors, and in the Lower, a leſſer, where the Weekly Committee meet, and the Phyſician preſcribes for Patients.

BESIDES, convenient Apartments for the Steward of the Houſe, for the Porter, Matron, Nurſe, and Servants; and below Stairs, all neceſſary Offices for keeping and dreſſing the Proviſions, for waſhing, and other Neceſſaries belonging to ſo large a Family.

OUT of the Committee appointed for Bethlem, there are ſix to meet Weekly, who on Saturday examine the Steward's Account of Expences, for the Week preceding, and after it is approved they ſign it. They are likewiſe to view the Proviſions, the Patients that are to be received, or diſcharged, and direct other Matters belonging to the ſaid Hoſpital.

IN the Governor's Room the following Orders are hung up in a Frame.

An Abſtract of ORDERS of Court made the 30th of March, 1677, for the good Government of the Hoſpital of BETHLEM.

I. THAT the Bell be rung at Sun-ſetting every Evening, Summer and Winter; and that then all Perſons do depart, and that afterwards no Perſons be admitted in, but Quality, or Governors.

II. THAT no Servant go out of the Hoſpital, till half an Hour after ringing the Bell, nor ſtay out after Eight from Michaelmas to Lady-Day, nor after Ten from Lady-Day to Michaelmas; and that but one half of them be out at one Time.

III. THAT the Back Gate at London-Wall ſhall always be ſhut, except on extraordinary Occaſions of bringing in Beer, &c. And that no Perſons ſhall come in to ſee the Lunaticks that Way.

IV. THAT no Perſon, except Governors, ſhall be permitted to ſee the Lunaticks on Sundays.

V. THAT no Perſon do give the Lunaticks Strong Drink, Wine, Tobacco, or Spirits, nor be permitted to ſell any ſuch Thing in the Hoſpital.

VI. THAT ſuch of the Lunaticks as are fit, be permitted to walk in the Yard till Dinner-time, and then be locked up in their Cells; and that no Lunatick that lies naked, or is in a Courſe of Phyſick, be ſeen by any Body, without Order of the Phyſician.

VII. THAT no Servant, or other Perſon whatſoever, ſhall take any Money given to the Lunaticks, to convert the ſame to their own Uſe, but the ſame to be kept for the Lunaticks till recovered, or laid out for them in the mean Time as the Committee ſhall think fit.

VIII. That no Officer or Servant ſhall beat or abuſe any Lunatick, nor offer any Force to them, but upon abſolute Neceſſity for the better Governing of them.

IX. THAT

IX. That no Perſon do preſume to ask any Perſon for Money, till ſuch Perſon's Charity be firſt put into the Poors Box; and that whatever afterwards ſhall be given to ſuch Servant, be put by him into the Servants Box, to be diſtributed among them, purſuant to an Order of Court for that Purpoſe.

X. That ſome of the Committee go weekly to the ſaid Hoſpital, to ſee the Proviſions weighed, and that the ſame be good and rightly expended. That the Men-Servants ſhall attend the Delivery of the Diet to the Lunatick Men, and the Women-Servants to the Lunatick Women.

And on the 11th of Auguſt 1699, it was ordered, That the Porter, Basket-Men, and all other Servants of the ſaid Hoſpital, take effectual Care, that no Perſon whatſoever, that they in the leaſt ſuſpect to be lewd or diſorderly Perſons, nor any Boys or Girls, that they think are Apprentices, and come there to idle away their Time, be, upon any Account, permitted to come into the ſaid Hoſpital; That the Steward of the ſaid Hoſpital for the Time being, be Superviſor over all the Servants thereto belonging, and if any of them be remiſs in their Duties, he to acquaint the Weekly Committee therewith.

The following Order is likewiſe for their Diet:

Sunday, Boil'd Beef and Broth, and Bread for Dinner; and a Meſs of hot Broth and Bread, for Supper.

Monday, Bread, Cheeſe and Butter for Dinner; Milk-Pottage, and other Pottage, with Bread, for Supper.

Tueſday, Boil'd Mutton, or Veal and Broth for Dinner; and hot Broth for Supper.

Wedneſday, Bread and Cheeſe, or Butter for Dinner; and a Meſs of Milk-Pottage for Supper.

Thurſday, Boil'd Beef, Broth and Bread for Dinner; and a Meſs of hot Broth and Bread for Supper.

Friday, Bread and Cheeſe, and Butter for Dinner; Milk-Pottage, or other Pottage for Supper.

Saturday, Peaſe-Pottage, Rice-Milk, and Furmity, or other Pottage for Dinner; and Bread and Cheeſe, and Butter for Supper; and ſuch Fruit is given them as is moſt ſeaſonable.

The Hoſpitals of Bridewell and Bethlem, being made one Corporation, they have the ſame Preſident, Treaſurer, Governors, Clerk, Phyſician, Surgeon, and Apothecary: But each Hoſpital has its proper Steward, and inferior Officers, and out of the Governors, a particular Committee is appointed for each.

The Officers at preſent are,

Apothecary,	Mr. Elderton.
Porter,	John Wood.
Matron,	Mrs. Wood.

Three Keepers, and one Nurſe.

The Governors of this Hoſpital, as alſo that of Bridewell, are chiefly Citizens, but yet ſome are Noblemen, and others Men of Faſhion.

The Preſident. The Preſident, who is Chief Governor, is uſually choſen out of ſuch Aldermen of the City as have paſs'd the Chair. He preſides over all, and is Preſident of Bridewell, as well as this Hoſpital. His Buſineſs is, on Court Days, at Bridewell to examine and judge the Priſoners ſent thither, and according to their Crimes, with Conſent of the Court, directs their Puniſhments, and there tranſacts other Buſineſs, relating to both Hoſpitals; he alſo ſigns Warrants for ſuch Patients as are to be ſent to this Hoſpital.

The Treaſurer. The Treaſurer is choſen out of the Governors; his Buſineſs is, particularly to take Care of the Revenues, to receive the Monies, and order the neceſſary Payments; and, in the Abſence of the Preſident, he takes the Chair at the Courts held at Bridewell, and likewiſe ſigns the Warrants for the Lunaticks to be ſent to Bethlem.

The Committee. And, for the greater Eaſe and Diſpatch in tranſacting the Affairs of Hoſpitals, there is Yearly appointed out of the Governors, a Committee for each Hoſpital. The Committee for Bethlem conſiſts uſually of 36 Perſons, of whom ſix are obliged to attend the Service of the Hoſpital for two Months, viz. ſix for January and July, the other ſix for February and Auguſt, and ſo on. The uſual Time of the Meeting of the ſix is on Saturdays, when they examine the Steward's Accounts for the Week preceding, which being approved, is tranſcribed into a Book, and ſigned by them. They likewiſe take Notice of the Proviſions, give Directions about Repairs, view the Patients to be admitted or diſcharged, and do other Matters that may come before them, as was hinted before: But if any Thing of greater Import happen, it is referred to a General Court: For, if they do not preſently determine the Matter, they appoint the ſame Committee, or a larger, to examine into it, and ſo make their Report to that Court.

The Clerk. The Office of Clerk is to enter the Names of the Lunaticks, to take the Securities of ſuch as are admitted for Cure, and to gather all the Rents.

They have a Miniſter alſo, to whom they allow 20 l. a Year, whoſe Office is to viſit the Lunaticks, and to inſtruct, and pray with ſuch of them as are capable of it, and to do other Spiritual Offices among them.

The Manner of admitting Patients. The Method of admitting Patients into the Hoſpital, is thus: The Patient being brought upon a Saturday, when the Committee meets, to be view'd by them and the Phyſician; if he be judged a fit Object for that Hoſpital, then a Warrant is drawn up by the Clerk of the Hoſpital, to be ſigned by the Preſident, or, in his Abſence, by the Treaſurer, for his Admittance. Thoſe who put the Patient in are obliged to give Bond to be ſigned by two Perſons, to take him away when diſcharged the Houſe; or if he dies to be at the Charge of burying him.

The Cure and Care of the Lunaticks. As to the Care and Cure of Patients, here is the greateſt Proviſion made for them of any publick Charity in the World; each having a convenient Room, where they are lock'd up at Nights; and in it a Place for a Bed; or if they are ſo ſenſeleſs as not fit to make Uſe of one, they are every Day provided with freſh and clean Straw. Thoſe who are fit for it, at convenient Hours, have Liberty to walk in the long Galleries, which are large and ſpacious. In the Heat of the Weather, the Bathing-Place, to cool and waſh them in, is of great Service in curing their Lunacy, and is eaſily made an Hot Bath for reſtoring their Limbs when numb'd, or cleaning and preſerving them from Scurvy, or other cutaneous Diſtempers.

Several who have come into the Hoſpital with Loſs of Limbs, and not able to go, have been recovered, and ſent out perfectly well; as others have, who have been, to the greateſt Degree, over-run with the Scurvy, with Ulcers in their Mouths, with Hydropical Swellings in their Limbs, with Mortifications in their Toes, large Blotches over their Bodies, and Variety of other Diſtempers, and ſuch as have been taken with the Small-Pox.

So

So that in 20 Years, from 1684, to 1703, during which Time the late learned Dr. Tyſon had been Phyſician there, as he informed Mr. Strype himſelf, there had been 1294 Patients, of which Number 893 had been cured and diſcharged, which is about Two Patients in Three; and after caſting up the Number of Men and Women Patients, ſome Years, he found them pretty equal.

WHEN a Patient is cured, and to be diſcharged, he is called before the Committee of the Governors and Phyſician, who examine him, and being found fit to be diſcharged, the Phyſician gives a Certificate of the ſame, and then the Steward of the Houſe takes Care to ſee him delivered to his Friends.

IN the laſt Year [1732] there were admitted into the Hoſpital of Bethlem, diſtracted Men and Women, 123.

CURED of their Lunacy, and diſcharged thence in the ſame Year, ſeveral of which were relieved with Cloathing and Money at their Departure, 100.

BURIED, 13.

REMAINING in the ſaid Hoſpital under Cure, and provided for with Phyſick, Diet, and other Relief, at the Charge of the Houſe, 168.

THE following Names of Benefactors are depencilled in ſeveral Tables, which hang up in divers Parts of the Hoſpital.

GUY's HOSPITAL.

THIS Hoſpital is ſituated on the Eaſt Side of the Borough of Southwark, on a Spot of Ground very near St. Thomas's Hoſpital. Guy's Hoſpital.

It is perhaps one of the greateſt private Charities that ever was heard of; its Founder, Thomas Guy, Eſq; was originally a Bookſeller in Lombard-Street, which Profeſſion, after having acquired an immenſe Fortune, he left off, and was choſen Member of Parliament for Tamworth in Staffordſhire. He began the Foundation of this Hoſpital, and ſaw it in great Forwardneſs in his own Life-time; and at his Death, which was in the Year 1724, he left about 200,000 l. to finiſh the ſame, and for the Endowment of it; but the Founder's Intention will beſt appear by the following Extract from his Will, wherein, after bequeathing many thouſand Pounds in Money, and Annuities to divers Relations and others; and likewiſe (which ſhould have been mentioned before) 400 Pounds a Year to Chriſt Church Hoſpital, on Condition that his Executors ſhould have the Power of putting four Children into the ſaid Hoſpital yearly; and to St. Thomas's Hoſpital, the annual Sum of 125 l. he goes on:

It is governed by Fifty-two Citizens; and the Lord Mayor, for the Time being, is always Preſident, and the Aldermen his Aſſiſtants. It is a Brick Edifice, 400 Feet in Length, conſiſting of ſeveral Work-Rooms, and Lodging-Rooms for the Vagrants and Pariſh-Children brought into it, who are employed in Spinning Wool and Flax, in Sewing, Knitting, or Winding Silk, and the like Employments, to inure them betimes to Labour. They are alſo taught to Read, and, ſuch as are capable, to Write and Caſt Accompts; and alſo the Catechiſm, to ground them in the Principles of Religion. The Vagrants, Men and Women, are employed in Sewing, beating Hemp, picking Okum, and raſping Logwood.

BUT nothing can give a more perfect Repreſentation of this Houſe than the following Paper, publiſhed ſome Years ago, by Order of the Governors, to promote the Charitable Gifts and Legacies of well-diſpoſed Perſons thereto.

A True Account of the Foundation, State, and Deſign of the WORKHOUSE for the POOR of the City of LONDON, Chriſtmas 1704.

"WHEREAS by an Act of Parliament "made in the 13th and 14th Years of "the Reign of our late Sovereign Lord "King Charles II. intituled, An Act for the "better Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom; It "is thereby enacted (amongſt other Things) "That from thenceforth there be, and ſhall be, "one or more Corporation, or Corporations, "Workhouſe, or Workhouſes, within the City "of LONDON, conſiſting of a Preſident, a "Deputy to the Preſident, and a Treaſurer; "and that the Lord Mayor of the City, for the "Time being, be Preſident of the ſaid Corporation, Workhouſe, or Workhouſes, within the "ſaid City, and the Aſſiſtants to be the Aldermen of the ſaid City of LONDON, for the "Time being, and Fifty-two other Citizens to "be choſen of the Common-Council of the ſaid "City: Which Preſident, Deputy-Preſident, and "Treaſurer for the Time being, reſpectively "ſhall for ever hereafter, in Name and Fact, Be "Bodies Politick and Corporate in Law, by the "Name of the Preſident and Governors of the "Poor for the ſaid City; and by that Name every "of the ſaid Corporations ſhall and may without "Licence in Mortmain, purchaſe, or receive any "Lands, Tenements or Hereditaments, not exceeding the yearly Value of 3000l. of the Gift, "Alienation, or Deviſe of any Perſon or Perſons, "who are thereby, without farther Licence, enabled to give the ſame and any Goods, Chattels, "or Sums of Money whatſoever, to the Uſes, Intents, and Purpoſes, in the ſaid Act mentioned, "(which by the Way is an evident Demonſtration "that the Parliament did expect that People "would be very liberal in their Charity to ſo good "a Work) and that the poor Inhabitants might "in Time be eaſed of the preſent Charge; and "each reſpective Corporation have thereby Authority, from Time to Time, to make and "appoint a Common Seal for the Uſe of the ſaid "Corporation, with Power for the Common-Council of the ſaid City, to raiſe any Sum or "Sums of Money on the Inhabitants thereof, not "exceeding one Year's Rate to the Poor in any "one Year, for carrying on the ſaid Work, as "by the ſaid Act (amongſt other Things therein "contained) relation being thereunto had, may "more at large appear.

"THAT at a Common-Council held at the "Guildhall of the City of LONDON, the "fourth Day of April, Anno Domini 1698; the "ſaid Common-Council did, by Virtue of the "ſaid Act, elect Fifty-two Citizens of the ſaid "City of LONDON, to be in Conjunction "with the ſaid Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the "ſaid City, for the Time being, a Corporation "for the Intents and Purpoſes in the ſaid recited "Act mentioned, who have ever ſince put the "ſaid Act in Execution, and taken a large Houſe "in Biſhopſgate-Street, and ſeveral other Houſes "contiguous thereto, and have laid out ſeveral "Sums of Money in purchaſing Ground, and "building thereon, and in ſeveral Alterations, in "making the Houſes aforeſaid fit for the Purpoſes aforeſaid; and the ſaid Common-Council "have, by Virtue of the Authority aforeſaid, "raiſed ſeveral Sums of Money on the Inhabitants of the City for the Purpoſes aforeſaid: "And the ſaid Preſident and Governors, and "ſeveral other Worthy and Charitable Perſons, "have largely contributed out of their own Eſtates "for the carrying on the ſaid Work, and for the "Eaſe of the meaner Sort of the Inhabitants "of the ſaid City; and the ſaid Preſident, "Treaſurer and Governors have made a good "Progreſs in the ſaid Work, and hope by the "Charity of ſuch Worthy Perſons as may be "Contributors thereto, to be enabled to purchaſe "ſome Eſtate for the Uſes aforeſaid (for there is "not as yet one Farthing of yearly Revenue ſettled on the Workhouſe) that ſo the Inhabitants "of this City, may, in ſome meaſure, be eaſed of "the annual Charge and Expence: And, therefore, the ſaid Preſident, Treaſurer, and Governors think it a Duty incumbent on them, and as "Part of the Truſt repoſed in them, to make a "Repreſentation of the Uſefulneſs and Benefit of "the ſaid Workhouſe, and how far it is for the "Honour and Advantage of this renowned City, "and her Majeſty's Subjects, and others of this "Nation, which is as follows, viz.

"THAT the Deſign and Intention of the Governors of the ſaid Workhouſe, is to employ all "the poor Children, Beggars, Vagrants, and "other idle and diſorderly Perſons, that are, or "can be found within the ſaid City of LONDON, and the Liberties thereof.

I. The poor Children are,

"1. SUCH for whom no Settlement can by "Law be provided.

"2. Such whoſe poor Friends being much oppreſſed by a great Charge of Children, or are "reduced by Misfortunes to ſuch Circumſtances, "that they cannot provide for them themſelves.

"3. SUCH who are the Children of Seamen "and Soldiers in the Queen's Service, many of "whom loſe their Lives therein, or are otherwiſe rendered incapable of providing for their "Wives, Children, and Families.

"4. SUCH, who are commonly known by the "Name of the Black-Guard, who too commonly "lived upon pilfering Sugar and Tobacco upon "the Keys, and afterwards become Pickpockets, "and Houſebreakers, many of whom, at laſt, "have received their due Rewards, and made "their Exits at the Gallows, which are now "kept to Work, and get their Livings honeſtly "in the ſaid Workhouſe.

"5. MANY Pariſh-Children.

" ALL theſe being taken into the ſaid Work-
" houſe, are here taught to Read and Write,
" and kept to Work until they are qualified to " be put out to be Apprentices, and for the Sea
" Services, or otherwiſe diſpoſed of.

" II. The Beggars and Vagrants. They are
" thoſe ſturdy and inſolent Men and Women,
" who live in the Skirts and Out-Parts of this " City, and Places contiguous thereto, and other
" Stragglers and Wanderers, who too frequently
" reſort to this City: Which when apprehended
" and taken, are in the ſaid Workhouſe kept to " hard Work and Labour, until they are by " Law diſcharged therefrom.

" III. The idle and diſorderly Perſons, are " thoſe Rogues and vagrant Men, which are
" there kept until they are put into the Queen's
" Service by Sea or Land; and thoſe ill Wo-
" men which are taken up in the Streets, de-
" bauching the Youth, and others of this City,
" many of which, rather than be continued to " Work and Labour, voluntarily tranſport them-
" ſelves to the Weſtern Plantations, whereby
" this City and Nation is rid of them.

" IN Building for theſe convenient Houſes,
" Work-Rooms, paying Officers and Servants,
" and in providing Meat, Drink, Waſhing,
" Lodging, Cloaths, and all other Neceſſaries,
" and to put them out Apprentices, great Sums
" of Money are yearly expended, beſides what " they ſeverally earn by their own Labour, and
" beſides what hath been already raiſed by the " Common-Council of this City.

" THE Conſideration whereof is earneſtly re" commended to all charitable Perſons, who are " Well-wiſhers to Honour, Virtue, and Mora" lity, that they will vouchſafe by their Wills, or
" otherwiſe, to give their Aid and Aſſiſtance for
" the Propagating and continuing this Great " Work of Charity, which the Governors of " the ſaid Corporation have, by their Care and " Diligence, already made ſo good a Proficiency
" in, and which may prevent the Ruin of many
" idle and diſorderly Perſons for the future.

" Note, There are in this Workhouſe ſeldom
" leſs than 150 Children at Work, beſides the " grown Beggars, Vagrants, and other idle and " diſorderly Perſons, who are there kept to hard " Labour.

IN this Houſe they Brew their own Drink, having a large convenient Brewhouſe erected for that Purpoſe; and over it a Malthouſe. They uſed alſo to kill their own Beef and Mutton; but find it better Husbandry to buy their Meat from the Butchers.

THEIR daily Food is plain, but wholeſome and ſufficient: They have Breakfaſts, Dinners, and Suppers, every Day in the Week, and a conſtant ſet Allowance each Day. Their Stint each Meal for Bread is four Ounces; for Cheeſe an Ounce and an half; for Butter an Ounce; for Small Beer what is ſufficient, not exceeding a Pint at a Time.

THEIR Breakfaſt on Sundays, Wedneſdays, Thurſdays, and Saturdays, is Bread and Cheeſe, and Bread and Butter, and Beer: On Mondays a Pint of Peaſe Pottage, with Bread and Beer: On Tueſdays a Plumb-Pudding-Pye of nine Ounces, and Beer: On Wedneſdays a Pint of Furmity: On Fridays a Pint of Barley-Broth, and Bread: On Saturdays a plain Flower Sewet Dumpling, with Beer.

THEIR Supper is always the ſame; to wit, each four Ounces of Bread, an Ounce and a half of Cheeſe, or an Ounce of Butter, and Beer ſufficient.

THE Habit of the Children is all the ſame, being made of Ruſſet Cloth, and a round Badge worn upon their Breaſts, repreſenting a poor Boy and a Sheep; the Motto, God's Providence is our Inheritance.

THEY have a handſome Chapel built at the upper End of the Yard belonging to the Houſe, where they go to Prayers twice a Day, viz. at ſix in the Morning, and at ſix at Night. On Sundays they all go to St. Helen's, where are convenient Seats for them.

THERE are alſo other Benefactors, not to be paſſed over without honourable Mention, as Mr. Abraham Chitty, who gave a Tun of Logwood, and Ralph Hartley, half a Tun. The Company of Apothecaries undertook to pay the whole Charge of the Phyſick for the Children and Servants of this Workhouſe for three Years, from the 29th of September, Anno 1701: And Dr. Frederick Slare, Dr. Richard Moreton, Dr. Joſhua Palmer, and Dr. Francis Upton, undertook, alternately, to viſit all the ſick Children and Servants, and preſcribe ſuch Medicines for them as they from Time to Time ſhould judge moſt proper; and this gratis: And Thomas Stanton, Surgeon, to ſerve the ſaid Children and Servants in Surgery for three Years gratis: And add to the reſt, that Anno 1703, Sir Edward Northey, Her Majeſty's Attorney-General, and Duncan Dee, Eſq; offered themſelves their ſtanding Council, and Nicholas Baker, their Attorney, without Fee or Reward.

OF this Charitable Undertaking the Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry, in a Sermon preached before the Governors of the Hoſpitals, on Eaſter-Monday, Anno 1702, hath theſe Words:

" I muſt not forget another publick Charity of " admirable Uſe; and which for that Reaſon de- " ſerveth the utmoſt Encouragement; I mean, " the Workhouſe, erected for employing poor " Children, and ſuch diſtreſſed Vagrant Children " as are found within the City and the Liberties " thereof. This by the Induſtry of the Preſidents " and Governors of the Poor of the City, hath " been carried ſo far, that 261 Children, of ſeveral " Pariſhes, remained in the Workhouſe this Year; " and 71 have ſince been received. Of Vagrants " there remained 71, and 89 have ſince been " taken in. All theſe, according to their Ages " and Conditions are cloathed, and fed and in- " ſtructed in the Principles of Religion, and in " honeſt Arts and Trades. They are inured to " Labour, kept cleanly, and diſpoſed to Honeſty, " by Encouragement and Diſcipline. I have not " Time to ſay of what wonderful Benefit theſe " Places are, and may be to the Publick, if they " can happily fall into the right Management of " them; where the Refuſe of Mankind, they " that would otherwiſe be the Bane and Scandal " of the Commonwealth, are reſcued from Per- " dition, and made uſeful Members of it. But " it is hardly poſſible for Men to be better em- " ployed than in this Work, or to be more cha- " ritable than in their Contributions towards it. " And may it pleaſe Almighty GOD to enable " thoſe that undertake it, to ſurmount all the " Difficulties that croſs their Deſigns. They " will then have (what one would wiſh to every " good and publick-ſpirited Man) the Comforts " of their Labours in this Life; and when that " is at an End, thoſe Labours will conduct them " to the Joys of that above; and that will for " ever remain.

ONE of theſe Boys was already ſo well diſciplined and improved in this Houſe, in the Year 1702, that the Governors ventured to let him make a Speech to Queen Anne, when ſhe came into the City, which we think may not be amiſs to be here inſerted.

The SPEECH of JOHN TRUSTY, aged eleven Years, a poor Boy, belonging to the Workhouſe of the Corporation for the Poor of the City of LONDON, to her late Majeſty Queen ANNE, upon her coming into the City, to dine at Guildhall, on Thurſday, October the 29th 1702, being the Lord Mayor's Day.

" MAY it pleaſe your excellent Majeſty, " To Pardon this great Preſumption " in Us, poor Children, who throw ourſelves " at your Royal Feet, among the reſt of your " glad Subjects, that here in Crowds appear to " behold your Sacred Majeſty.

" WE, Madam, have no Fathers, no Mo- " thers, no Friends; or (which is next to none) " thoſe, who, through their extreme Poverty, can- " not help us: God's Providence is our Inheri- The Motto on their Badge, which they wear at their Breaſts. " tance. All the Support we have is from the " unexhauſted Charities of your loyal Citizens of " LONDON, and other your good Subjects, " and the pious Care of our Governors, who are " now teaching our little Hands to work, and " our Fingers to ſpin.

" THESE Threads, Madam, are ſome of Holding ſome Yarn in their Hands. " the early Fruits of our Induſtry. We are all " daily employed on the Staple Manufacture of " England, learning betimes to be uſeful to the " World: And there ſeemed nothing wanting to " compleat our Happineſs, but the Opportunity " which this Day affords us, of being the Objects " of your tender Pity and Compaſſion; one gra- " cious Smile from your Majeſty, on this new " Foundation, will make us live----- and live " to call you Bleſſed.

" AND may GOD Almighty long pre- " ſerve your Majeſty, for the Good of theſe " your Kingdoms, and your Royal Conſort the " Prince; ſo pray we, your little Children, " and let all your People ſay, Amen.

THERE were diſcharged and put forth Apprentices, or to Service in good Families, in the laſt Year, 45 Children.

Dugdale, in his Monaſt. Angl. ſays, That Ralph, the Prior, with the Canons of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, did grant to Maud, Queen of England, Wife to King Stephen, a certain Parcel of Land, in the Soken, called Knightenguild, (now Portſoken Ward) whereon the ſaid Hoſpital of St. Catharine was founded, together with all the Mill there in the Shambles, in Lieu of ſix Yard Land in the Manor of Bracching in the County of Hertford.

QUEEN Eleanor, Widow to King Henry III. by her Charter, bearing Date, July 5, 1273, gave to this Hoſpital, and to Thomas de Lechlade, Quem (as are the Words of the ſaid Charter) in eodem Hoſpitali Magiſtrum & Cuſtodem, de Conceſſu venerabilis Patris Henrici LONDON. Epiſcopi præfecimus, &c. and to the Brethren, ſerving GOD there, and to their Succeſſors for ever, certain Lands in the Villages of Renham and Herclope in Kent, others in the Village of Roed (now Reed) in Hertfordſhire, and ſome in Eaſt-Smithfield, for the ſuſtaining of three Brother Prieſts, together with the Maſter of the ſaid Hoſpital, to celebrate Maſſes for the Soul of King Henry her Lord, for her own Soul, and the Souls of the Kings and Queens, her Predeceſſors and Succeſſors, as therein is directed; and, That every Day in the Year to the 16th of November, viz. the Day of St. Edmund the Archbiſhop and Confeſſor, there be given to 24 poor People (whereof ſix of them to be Scholars, who might aſſiſt the Chaplains in the Church in Divine Offices) the Sum of 12 d. and on the ſaid Day of St. Edmund the Confeſſor, viz. the Day of the Death of her ſaid Lord King Henry, there be given to a thouſand poor People, to every one of them, one Half-penny; by which Charter, ſhe reſerves Power to herſelf and the Queens of England, her Succeſſors, to conſtitute a Maſter, or Cuſtos of the ſaid Hoſpital, when, and as often as it ſhould happen to be void; and ordains, That the Queens of England, ſhould have the Right of Patronage of the ſaid Hoſpital from Time to Time for ever.

BUT tho' this Queen reſerved to herſelf and Succeſſors Queens of England, the Power to conſtitute a Maſter or Cuſtos, and the Right of Patronage of the ſaid Hoſpital, yet it appears by the Charter of King Henry III. whereby he confirms to the Prior and Canons of the Holy Trinity aforeſaid, all their Lands and Donations; that he grants and confirms to the ſaid Prior and Convent, the Guardianſhip, or Cuſtody, of this Hoſpital, as they had it by the Grant of King Stephen and Queen Maud his Wife.

QUEEN Eleanor, Wife to King Edward I. (a ſecond Foundreſs) appointed to be in this Hoſpital, one Maſter, three Brethren, Chaplains, and three Siſters, ten poor Women, called Bede's Women, (Speed ſays 18) and ſix poor Clerks. She gave to them the Manor of Clarton in Wiltſhire, and Upchurch in Kent.

QUEEN Philippa, Wife to King Edward III. Anno 1351, founded a Chantry here, and gave to this Hoſpital 10 l. in Land by the Year. It was of late Time called a Free Chapel, a College, and an Hoſpital for poor Siſters.

Thomas Beckington, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, in the Reign of King Henry VI. (once Maſter of this Hoſpital) gave many Veſtments to it, and 50 s. in Money.

John Holland, Duke of Exeter, by his laſt Will and Teſtament, dated July 16, 1447, ordered his Body to be buried in this Chapel of St. Catharine's Hoſpital, at the North End of the High Altar, in a Tomb ordained for him, with Anne his Wife, his Siſter Conſtance, and Anne his ſecond Wife, and founded there a Chantry for four Prieſts, each of which was to have twelve Marks per Ann. payable out of his Manor of Much-Gaddeſden in the County of Hertford, to pray for the Souls of himſelf, his two Wives, and his Siſter, who were all there buried according to his Will, and the Monuments, (tho' foully defaced) with the Figures of himſelf, and his ſaid Wives lying on it, ſtill remain on the North Side of the upper End of the Choir.

KING Edward III. gave Licence to Robert de Denton, to found an Hoſpital in the Pariſh of Alhallows Barking, for the Cure of mad People and an Oratory, and to endow the ſaid Hoſpital; but the ſaid Robert's Mind afterwards altering, King Richard II. at his Requeſt, gave him Leave to beſtow the ſaid Endowment upon this Hoſpital of St. Catharine's.

THE Choir, which of late Years, ſaith Stow, was not much inferior to that of St. Paul's, was diſſolved by Dr. Wilſon, a late Maſter there, the Brethren and Siſters remaining. This Houſe was valued, at the late general Suppreſſion, at 315 l. 14 s. 2 d.

BESIDES Tho. de Lechlade, Thomas Beckington, and Dr. Wilſon, Maſters of this Hoſpital abovenamed, it may not be improper to give an Account of ſuch Maſters of the ſame, as by the Help of Dr. Hutton's Collections, are ſince to be met with, which are as followeth:

Walter de Redings had the Cuſtody of this Hoſpital committed to him, void by the Reſignation of Tho. de Lechlade, to hold during his Life.

Joh. de Sandale was Maſter of this Hoſpital in 1315, and had granted to him and his Brethren, the Convent thereof, by John Crombwell and Idonea his Wife, the Advowſon of the Church of Winterſlow, by Virtue of the King's Licence, dated September 1, the ſame Year.

Adam de Egelsfeld, the King's Chaplain, had the Cuſtody and Government of this Hoſpitial given him by the King, December 14, 1317.

Will. de Killesby, or Kildesby, was Maſter of this Hoſpital Anno 1345.

Joh. de Hermeſthorp was Maſter of this Hoſpital, Dec. 26, 1368; but before this, Anno 1363, May 13, the King gave him (being then his Chaplain) the Prebendary which John de Blebury bury had in the Free Chapel of St. Stephen, Weſtminſter. On the 22d of January following, the King gave his Prebendary of St. Stephen, which he reſigned, to Richard de Ravenſore; for ſix Days before, viz. January 16, the King gave the ſaid John his Preſentation to the Church of St. Vedaſt, LONDON; and on the 7th of March following, the Archdeaconry of the Eaſt-Riding in the Dioceſe of York. In 1364, January 24, he gave him his Letters of Preſentation to the Church of Greyſtock in the Dioceſe of Carliſle: And in December 24, 1366, the King gave him again the Prebendary of St. Stephen, which the ſaid Ravenſore had. He was Maſter of this Hoſpital when it was viſited by the Lord Chancellor, and others, in the 3d of Richard II. Anno 1380, and perhaps he is the ſame Joh. de Hermeſthorp, who was Prebend of Weſt Thurrock in Eſſex, in the Collegiate Church of Haſtings, and preſented to that Vicarage in 1409. John Preſton was made Maſter in the Year 1511.

THE Maſters of this Hoſpital have, in old Times, been of the Clergy, and ſo the Foundation ſeems to require; but the conſiderable Benefit accruing to the Maſters, hath made it deſired and ſought for by Perſons of Quality of the Laity, and ſuch have of late Times enjoyed it.

SIR James Butler, who was Maſter in the Reign of King William III. made an Addition to the Building, which has this Inſcription on it.

Theſe new Houſes for a Siſter, and ſix Bedes Women were builded by Sir James Butler, Maſter of St. Katherines, at his own Coſt and Charges in the Yeare of our Lord 1695.

THE preſent Maſter is the Honourable George Berkeley, Eſq;

SUTTON's HOSPITAL,

COMMONLY CALLED

The CHARTER-HOUSE.

THIS Hoſpital is ſituated near St. John's-Street, a little without Smithfield-Bars: It is corruptly called Charter-Houſe, from Chartreuſe, having been a Monaſtery of Carthuſian Monks; and it may not be improper, in this Place, to ſay ſomething of that Order, concerning the Original of which it is related, That one Bruno, born at Cologne, of an antient and worthy Family, by his ſtudious Life and ſucceſsful Endeavours obtained ſo great Reputation among learned Men, that he was prevailed upon to viſit France, where he was choſen Philoſophy Profeſſor, and converted to his Religion, by a dreadful Prodigy, which happened in the Church of Notre-Dame at Paris. Whilſt he was preſent at the Funeral Solemnities of one of his dear Friends, whoſe Name was Diocre, a Man, as far as mortal Eye could diſcern, of a fair and untainted Reputation, when they came to repeat thoſe Words of the Office for the Dead, Reſponde mihi, the Corpſe began to move, and raiſe itſelf upon the Bier, and was heard at ſeveral Diſtances of Time to utter theſe lamentable Words:

The Original of the Carthuſian Monks.

I am arraigned at the Bar of GOD*'s Juſtice: My final Sentence is already paſt; and I am condemned to eternal Torments.*

THIS did (among others) ſo terrify Bruno, who was there preſent, that prevailing with ſix of his familiar Friends (whereof two were Laicks) to bid the World adieu; they ſet forward, and came to Hugh Biſhop of Grenoble, in France, who beſtowed on them a Place in the ſteep Mountains, called Chartreuſe, or Carthuſia in Dauphine, which gave Name to this famous Order, which S. Bruno founded there, where, tho' it be a moſt diſmal ſolitary Place, yet they began to inhabit about the Nativity of St. John Baptiſt, Anno 1084, or 1086.

BUT it is a Subject of Debate among the learned Roman Catholicks, whether the aforeſaid Prodigy was the Occaſion of Bruno's Retreat, as you may ſee in the Hiſtorical Dictionary, publiſhed by Mr. Collier, where we are likewiſe told, that Bruno was canoniz'd for a Saint, by Pope Leo X. Ann. 1514.

HOWEVER, This is certain, That Bruno founded this Order about the Time, and at the Place above-mentioned, to which Family the ſaid Biſhop Hugh, not long after, join'd himſelf.

THEN they built themſelves a Church, or rather a Monaſtery, upon the ſteepeſt Part of the Hill, which is now called B. Maria de Caſalibus, and alſo little Cells at a Fountain, which to this Day is called Bruno's Fountain, not far diſtant from the Church, but one ſeparated from the other, that the one might not diſquiet the Peace of the other: And in every one of theſe Cells two Brethren dwelt together, and like, the old Egyptian Monks, gave themſelves to Silence, Prayers, and Reading, and at certain Hours, they laboured with their Hands, eſpecially in Writing Books, as well as to provide for their Wants, as alſo that they might not give any Occaſion of ſlandering their Order, to ſuch as ſought for ſuch an Occaſion, as if they did beſtow no Pains for the Church of GOD, but laboured only for their own Ends.

AMONGST all the Monks, theſe obſerve the ſtricteſt Rule; for firſt their Inward Garment, is of Hair Cloth, their Outward is Black, and under it a white Robe; and a Cowl is the Cover of their Head. They never eat Fleſh all their Life long, not in their greateſt Weakneſs or Sickneſs; ſo that if any one will feed on Fleſh, he muſt not remain in their Cloiſter with the reſt any longer. They never buy any Fiſh, but if they be given they receive them: They uſe Bread made of Bran, and Wine allayed with Water. Many other Rules they have, which may be ſeen in Hoſpinian, ut ſupra. They propoſed to follow the Rule of St. Bennet, adding thereto ſeveral other great Auſterities.

Alexander III. confirmed their Order about the Year 1178 (ſome ſay 1174). At firſt they vow'd Poverty, but afterwards, and at this Day, they are equal to the greateſt Princes for Riches.

THEY came firſt into England about the Year 1180, and were then ſeated at Witham near Bath in Somerſetſhire.

The old Carthuſian Monaſtery.

THE diſſolved Monaſtery was founded by Sir Walter de Manny, Knight, a Stranger born, Lord of the Town of Manny, in the Dioceſe of Cambray, who for Service done to King Edward III. was made Knight of the Garter.

THIS Houſe he founded upon Occaſion of a great Peſtilence, which ſpread over all England, ſo waſting the People, that ſcarce a tenth Perſon was left alive, and Church-Yards were not ſufficient to receive the Dead, but Men were forced to chuſe certain Fields for Burials; whereupon Ralph Stratford, Biſhop of LONDON, Anno 1348, bought a Piece of Ground, called No Man's Land, which he incloſed with a Brick Wall, and dedicated it for the Burial of the Dead, and built thereupon a Chapel, which Stow tells us, was in his Time made a Dwelling-Houſe, and the Burial Plat was a Garden, called by the Name of Pardon Church-Yard.

ABOUT this Time the ſaid Sir Walter de Manny purchaſed a Piece of Ground adjoining to the ſaid No Man's Land, near St. John's-Street, called called Spittle Croft, without the Bars in Weſt-Smithfield, of the Maſter and Brethren of St. Bartholomew's-Spittle, containing 13 Acres and a Rod, cauſed the ſame to be incloſed for Burials, and conſecrated by the ſaid Ralph Stratford, Biſhop of LONDON, in which Place, in that Year, were more than 50,000 Perſons buried, as is affirmed by the King's Charter, and this following Inſcription, which Stow ſays he read upon a Stone Croſs, ſome Time ſtanding in the ſame Church-Yard, Anno Dom. MCCCXLIX.

Regnante magna Peſtilentia Conſecratum fuit hoc Cœmeterium, in quo, et infra Septa præſentis Monaſterii, ſepulta fuerunt Mortuorum Corpora plus quam Quinquaginta Millia; præter alia multa abhinc uſque ad præſens, Quorum Animabus propitietur Deus. Amen.

In Conſideration of the Number of Chriſtian People here buried, Sir Walter cauſed firſt a Chapel to be here built, where, for the Space of 23 Years, Offerings were made, and Maſſes ſaid for the Souls of ſo many Chriſtians departed; and it is to be noted, that above 100,000 Bodies of Chriſtian People, had, in that Church-Yard, been buried; for the ſaid Knight purchaſed that Place for the Burial of People, Travellers, and others that ſhould chance to die thereabouts.

BUT in the Year 1371, the ſaid Sir Walter de Manny, founded here a Houſe of Carthuſian Monks, which he built in Honour of the Salutation of the Mother of GOD, as may be ſeen at large in King Edward III. Letters Patent, and in the Bull of Pope Urbin V. by which Bull it appears, that Sir Walter de Manny firſt intended here only a College of 12 Chaplains, whereof one was to preſide, but afterwards, as it is therein expreſſed, "Bonæ Memoriæ Michael, Epiſcopus Londinenſis, & idem Miles, prædicto Collegio nondum inſtituto conventum duplicem Monachorum Ordinis Cartuſienſis in loco prædicto (mutato Propoſito dicti Militis) fundaverunt." Here it is to be noted, that this Bull, which was obtained of the Pope, at the Petition of the Prior and Convent of this Houſe, for the uniting ſome Eccleſiaſtical Benefices to it, to the Value of 200 l. per Ann. bore Date at Rome on the Day before the Ides of December, in the firſt Year of his Pontificate, which was in the Year 1362: So that tho' it be generally ſaid by Stow, and others, that have written of this Houſe, that it was founded by Sir Walter de Manny, in the Year 1371, it appears plainly by the ſaid Bull, that this Houſe of Carthuſians, was founded by Sir Walter de Manny, and Michael (de Northburg) Biſhop of LONDON, and not by the ſaid Walter alone; and that it was founded, and a Prior and Convent there ſettled before the Date of the ſaid Bull, which muſt be in, or before, the Year 1362, tho' the Letters Patent above-mention'd of Edward III. whereby he granted Licence to the ſaid Sir Walter de Manny, to found this Houſe of Carthuſian Monks, and to give and aſſign to the Prior and Monks there, 20 Acres of Land, &c. together with the Chapel and other Houſes built upon the ſame, bear Date in the 45th Year of his Reign on the 6th of February, which was in the Year 1371, from whence they have dated the Foundation of this Houſe.

Sir Walter de Manny, (who had Summons to Parliament, among the Barons of this Realm, from the 21ſt of Edward III. 'till the 44th of that King's Reign incluſive) by his Teſtament, bearing Date at LONDON, upon St. Andrew's Day, Anno. 1371. bequeathed his Body to be buried in the Midſt of the Choir of the Carthuſians, near Weſt-Smithfield, and ordained, That a Tomb of Alabaſter, with his Image, as a Knight, and his Arms thereon, ſhould be made for him like that of Sir John Beauchamp, in the Cathedral of St. Paul's, LONDON, as a Remembrance of him, and that Men might pray for his Soul; and (among other Legacies in his ſaid Will) he appointed an old Debt, which, the King owed him, by Bills of his Wardrobe, to be given to the Prior and Monks of this Houſe, if it could be had: And whereas there was due to him from the Prince, from the Time he had been Prince of Wales, the Sum of 100 Marks per Ann. for his Salary, as Governor of Hardelagh-Caſtle, he bequeathed the one Half thereof to the ſaid Prior and Monks of the Charter-Houſe, and departing this Life upon the Thurſday following the Feaſt of St. Hillary, in the 46th of Edward III. 1371, was buried here in his own Church, much lamented, (ſaith Weaver) by the King, the Nobility and Commons of England, and his Obſequies were performed with great Solemnity (notwithſtanding by his Will he had ordered his Burial to be without Pomp) King Edward III. himſelf and all his Children, with the greateſt Prelates, and Lord Barons of England, being preſent.

THIS Religious Houſe was ſuppeſſed in the Reign of King Henry VIII. at which Time it was valued at 642 l. 4 d. Half-penny per Ann. Dugd. 736 l. 2. s. 7 d. (Speed.)

THUS much for the old Foundation: Next to the preſent Hoſpital. After the Diſſolution of Abbies, &c. in the Reign of Henry VIII. this Monaſtery, and Duke's-Place, being given by the King to Sir Thomas Audley, the then Speaker of Parliament, he gave this Houſe, &c. in Marriage with his Daughter Margaret, unto Thomas Duke of Norfolk, from whom it deſcended to Thomas Earl of Suffolk, and was afterwards called Howard-Houſe, by which Name it was purchaſed of the Earl of Suffolk, by Thomas Sutton, Eſq; where he founded this Hoſpital. It conſiſted of four or five Courts, a Wilderneſs, Gardens, Orchards, and Walks, &c. This Hoſpital was firſt founded by Act of Parliament, for erecting and endowing an Hoſpital at Hallingbury Bouchers in the County of Eſſex, March 10, 1609, by the Name of The Hoſpital of King James, founded at Hallingbury in the County of Eſſex, at the humble Petition, and at the only Coſt and Charge of Thomas Sutton, Eſq; Purchaſed by Thomas Sutton, Eſq;

BUT Mr. Sutton altering his Mind, as to the Situation, he founded the ſame at Howard-Houſe, as is aforeſaid, for which Alteration he had the King's Letters Patent, dated June 1611, and for which Houſe, &c. he paid down 13000 l. May the 9th 1611; and this Charter of King James was confirmed by an Act of Parliament in the 3d of King Charles I.

THE principal Heads of the ſaid Patent for erecting Sutton's Hoſpital, were as follow:

GOVERNORS were incorporated with full Authority to Purchaſe, Receive, &c. There were 16 Governors in all, appointed by Name, and upon the Death of any, the ſaid Mr. Sutton to name others for his Life, to keep up the Number, and afterward the new Governors to be (as any Vacancy happens) nominated by the Majority of the Governors then living.

THE Maſter of the Charter-Houſe to be one of the Governors, who were to have a Common Seal.

THEY were not to let longer Leaſes than for 21 Years, nor to transfer the Land ſettled for this Purpoſe, to any other Uſe.

THE Election of a new Governor is to be within two Months after a Vacancy; or, in Default, the King to appoint a Governor.

THE

THE Number of the old Gentlemen and Boys to increaſe, according to the Increaſe of the Revenues.

THE Governors are empowered to make Statutes under the Common Seal, and to viſit or diſplace the Maſter, or any Officer of the Houſe; but the Miniſters are freed from the Viſitation of the Ordinary of the Dioceſe.

THERE are theſe Eccleſiaſtical Preferments in the Gift of the Governors of this Hoſpital:

Charter-Houſe, Dunsby,
Balſham, South-Minſter,
Caſtle Camp, Cold Norton, and Horſheath, Little Wigborow.
Hallingbury,

BUT by the Letters Patent, the Governors are charged to beſtow the ſame upon thoſe Scholars only who have been bred in this Houſe.

THIS Noble Founder lived not long to ſee the Hoſpital in all Things ſettled, but in 1614, October 3, (being 3 Years after Mr. Sutton's Death) it was opened by the Executors, when the Gentlemen, Scholars, and others enter'd this Houſe: And Anno 1627, theſe Orders were made at an Aſſembly June 21, ſigned by King Charles the Firſt's own Hand.

THE Hoſpital of King James, founded in the Charter-Houſe in the County of Middleſex, at the humble Petition and only Coſt and Charges of Thomas Sutton, Eſq; ſhall be the Stile to be inviolably obſerved and expreſſed, in the ſame formal Words, upon all Evidences, Conveyances, Leaſes, and Writings of Records.

THERE ſhall be an Anniverſary Commemoration of the Founder, kept every 12th of December, with ſolemn Service, a Sermon, and ſuch Increaſe of Commons, as we allow upon other Feſtival Days by our Eſtabliſhment.

THE Governors jointly taken, make the Head of this Body Corporate; the poor Brothers and Scholars, and ſuch others as are mentioned only in the King's Letters Patent, ſhall be ſtiled Members of the Foundation, and ſhall be choſen within two Months after a Vacancy, according to the expreſs Words of the Letters Patent.

ALL other Officers of the Revenue, or Houſhold, not particularly mentioned in the Letters Patent, ſhall be reputed and taken as Members of arbitrary Election; and it ſhall be in the Governors Power to make their Number more or leſs, and to chooſe ſooner or later, as to their Wiſdom ſhall ſeem beſt for the good of the Hoſpital.

THE Hoſpital ſhall be ſufficiently furniſh'd with Buckets, Fire-hooks, Ladders, Ropes, and other Neceſſaries againſt Fire.

WHAT other Order ſoever the major Part of the Governors ſhall make at an Aſſembly for the Good of the Hoſpital, and ſign them with their own Hands in the Aſſembly Book, ſhall ſtand in as full Force and Power, as if they had been inſerted with theſe, and ratified with the Common Seal.

ALL other Things ordered and enacted by the King's Letters Patent, for the Confirmation of this Hoſpital, as alſo all other Orders and Decrees of this Inſtrument, ratified by their Common Seal, ſhall be inevitably kept and obſerved.

AS to their Aſſemblies and Committees there are ſeveral Orders; as,

THOSE Orders, &c. ſhall only be in Force, which are made by the major Part of the Governors, and all Elections of ſuch as this Hoſpital conſiſts of, be in the Power of ſuch Governors only; but they ſhall not elect above 18 poor Men, or 18 poor Scholars, at one Aſſembly.

THERE are other Orders, which the poor Brothers may at any Time peruſe in a Book in the Veſtry.

Eighty poor Men in the Charter-Houſe

THE antient poor Men which this Houſe doth maintain, are 80 in Number; and they are choſen by each particular Governor, every one, in their Order, taking his Turn to put in his poor Man: The Sovereign only putteth in two, the reſt one a-piece in their reſpective Turns, as Places happen to be vacant: And this they do by a Warrant, ſent to the Maſter and Regiſter of the Houſe, under a Form thus ſuperſcribed: To my Loving Friends, the Maſter and Regiſter of Sutton's Hoſpital.

FROM 1614, to 1676, there had been admitted 554 poor Men, and there alſo ended their Days. By which it was computed, that out of 80 aged Men, there died but nine in a Year. Whence an Obſervation was made of the Healthfulneſs and Sweetneſs of the Place. To which another Obſervation may be made, of the Advantage of a regular, temperate Courſe for Length of Days.

FOR the Uſe of the Members of this Hoſpital, there are prepared very pious and well compoſed Prayers upon ſeveral Occaſions, ſuited for the private Devotion of the antient Gentlemen in this Houſe; as, upon their Admiſſion; on the Founder's Day; upon the Deceaſe of a Penſioner; in the Morning before he ſtirs abroad; in the Evening; a Prayer before the Sacrament; another after receiving; in Time of Sickneſs; and a Prayer to be ſaid by a young Scholar of the Houſe.

OF the School, we have treated in the laſt Chapter, but ſhall here add the Manner of getting the Children into it, which is thus; The Governors at an Aſſembly make a Liſt, and nominate a Lad, each of them, who being approved of, is certain to come into the Place, though it ſhould not fall till after the Death of the Governor who names him: And until the former Nomination and Warrant is ſerved, no other can have any Claim.

THE Houſe loſt near 8000 l. in the Time of Beaumont, Maſter, and Heyward, Regiſter, in the Years 1623 and 1624: And in the Year 1649, the Houſe was robbed of 1600 l. Set behind Hand again in the Time of Gerard, another Maſter; and yet, by GOD's Bleſſing, conſiderable Additions have been made to the Eſtate and Revenues of the charitable Foundation, ſince the Year 1614, when it was firſt filled: And ſoon after the Death of Mr. Sutton, received a dangerous Shock by the Means of a private Perſon, who endeavoured to ſwallow it up; for his only Siſter's Son, named Simon Baxter, attempted, as next Heir, to take Poſſeſſion of it, and the whole Eſtate annexed to it. This Man entered an Action of Treſpaſs againſt the Executors of Mr. Sutton, and the Governors, the laſt Day of Trinity Term, 10 Jac. in the King's Bench, for a violent Entry made by the ſaid Executors and Governors, May the 30th, the ſame Year. The Cauſe had in it divers Points of Law ſtarted to overthrow the Settlement, viz. Ten Points. On the Plaintiff's Side, was Sir Francis Bacon, Sollicitor-General, Mr. Gualter of the Temple, and Mr. Yelverton of Gray's-Inn. On the Defendants, Hubbart Attorney-General, Hutton, Serjeant at Law, and Coventry of the Inner-Temple. An Adjournment was made of the Cauſe, from the King's-Bench to the Exchequer Chamber, and there ſolemnly argued by the Judges. And at length it was here adjudged, with great Applauſe of all that heard it, for the Defendants, the Governors of the Hoſpital. The Plaintiff being but a Man of ordinary Quality, was judged to have Reaſon to be contented with a tolerable Proviſion that had been made for him, and ſuitable to his Degree; for he had allotted to him by Will, the Manor of Turback in Lancaſhire, conſiſting of a good antient Houſe, two Parks, and large Demeſnes, plentifully ſtored with Timber, valued at 350 l. per Ann.

BESIDES the Indefinite Sums before-mentioned.

THIS Will was dated the ſecond Day of November, A. D. 1611.

THIS worthy Founder is ſaid to have acquired this prodigious Eſtate very juſtly, but with much Care, Diligence and Frugality; yet was it ſtrongly reported, that he was the Subject of Ben. Johnſon's Mirth, and the Perſon he aimed at in the Character of Volpone, or the Fox; but this ſeems to be very unlikely, not only becauſe ſeveral others were pointed at, in thoſe Times as the Perſon intended by it, but as it would have been an Act of the higheſt Ingratitude in the Poet, who was allowed a conſtant Penſion by this very Gentleman, and he indeed wrote a Letter to our Founder to vindicate himſelf in this Matter.

The Founder of this Hoſpital, ſuppoſed by ſome to be the Perſon whom Ben. Johnſon calls Volpone in the Play.

THE Employments which Mr. Sutton had, were ſufficient to raiſe a great Fortune: He was Steward and Secretary to the Earls of Warwick and Leiceſter, then he farmed the Northern Coal-Mines, giving only his Word for a Security; then by Queen Elizabeth he was made Maſter of the Ordnance at Berwick, which he held 14 Years, in Token whereof are two Pieces of Ordnance, carved in Stone, placed over the Chimney in the great Hall at the Charter-Houſe; then he was made Pay-Maſter of the Northern Army; then a Commiſſioner for Sequeſtration of the Lands of the Northern Rebels; then Victualler to the Navy and ſome Garriſons in the Low Countries; then a Commiſſioner for Prizes under the Earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral of England, who gave him Letters of Mart againſt the Spaniards, from whom he took a Ship worth 20,000 l. and returning, ſettled at LONDON; he had Offices at Court, and in the Cuſtom-Houſe; he was made free of the Girdlers Company, and was reckoned a Money'd Man. His Wealth was greatly increaſed by good Bargains, Mortgages, and Merchandizing to Muſcovy, Hamburgh, &c. inſomuch that he had thirty Agents abroad.

WHEN he died, he was buried in the Chapel of his own Hoſpital, where is a Tomb with this Inſcription:

Sacred to the Glory of GOD, in grateful
Memory of Thomas Sutton, Eſq;

HERE lieth buried the Body of Thomas Sutton, late of Caſtle Camps in the County of Cam-

Cambridge, Esq; At whose only Costs and Charges this Hospital was founded, and endued with large Possessions, for the Relief of poor Men and Children. He was a Gentleman, born at Knaith, in the County of Lincoln, of worthy and honest Parentage. He lived to the Age of 79 Years, and deceased the 12th Day of December, Ann. Dom. 1611.

The SAVOY.

IN the Liberty of the Dutchy of Lancaster, situated in the Strand, stood another famous House of Charity, called the Savoy. It was antiently a very noble House, built and inhabited by Peter Duke of Savoy, Uncle to Queen Eleanor, King Henry the third's Queen. After him it came to the Duke of Lancaster, and was his Dwelling, being one of the most magnificent Buildings in the Nation. Afterwards being burnt down in Wat Tylar's Rebellion, Anno 1381, it lay long in Ashes and Rubbish, till King Henry VII. in the latter End of his Reign, rebuilt it, not for a Palace, but a charitable House to harbour an hundred poor People, sick or lame, or Travellers; to be furnished with Lodging, Food, Firing and Attendance, for a certain Time; dedicating it to St. John Baptist, and royally endowing it.

OVER the Gate were the King's Arms, and these two Lines engraven in old Characters:

King Henry VII. to his Merit and Honour,
This Hospital founded, poor People to succour.

TO this Hospital was afterwards added by the last Will of King Henry VII. a Master and four Chaplains, to pray for his and his Royal Consort's Souls.

FROM an Extract of that King's Will, there was,

"Item, Land assured for the Hospital of the "Savoy, and Provision of two hundred Beds, "and other Things for the Chapel there, 500 "Mark Land.

"Item, For Building and Finishing the said "Chapel and Hospital, Money delivered to the "Dean and Chapter of Paul's, 10,000 Marks "in Money.

IN Compliance wherewith, his Son, King Henry VIII. in the second Year of his Reign, granted this Place, or Piece of Ground, called the Savoy, to Richard Bishop of Winchester, Richard Bishop of LONDON, and divers others, Executors of King Henry the Seventh's Will, for founding an Hospital. And by another Deed, Anno Quarto, granted Licence to the said Executors to found such Hospital for five Secular Chaplains, one of which to be Master, to pray for the good Estate of him, and Catharine his Consort, and for the Soul of King Henry VII. and of Elizabeth his Consort, and Arthur Prince of Wales, and to be called, The Hospital of Henry VII. late King of England, at the Savoy; and to be a Body Corporate; and to have a Common Seal, and yearly Revenues to the Value of 500 Marks by the Year, for the Maintenance of the said Chaplains, and such other Works of Mercy and Piety, as by the said Executors should be appointed.

IN the 5th of Edward VI. a Commission was issued out by the King to Sir Roger Cholmley, Knight, Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and certain others, to visit this Hospital; who were to make particular Enquiry into these Articles:

I. How, and in what Sort the Foundation Statutes and Ordinances of the said Hospital were observed.

II. Wherein the same did agree with the common Orders and Proceedings of the Realm, in Causes of Religion.

III. How the Ministers, both Men and Women, gave Attendance, and did their Duties in their several Offices and Vocations.

IV. Of the State of the House, and Order of the Lands.

OF which last, this was the Sum of the Report given to the King and Council.

	l.	s.	d.
THE Value and Issues of the Lordships, Manors, Lands, &c. the last Year amounted to	541	05	5½
REPRISALS, Fees, Payments, Expences, Reparations, &c.	746	07	7
So that the Expences exceeded the Revenue by	205	02	1½

Numerus Pauperum Ægrotantium.

THE Number of the Poor refreshed within the said Hospital, from Michaelmas, Anno 4 Edward VI. to the 24th of September, Anno 5 Edward VI. of sick and impotent People, besides others Nightly lodged there, 8339.

THE yearly Fees and Salaries briefly stood thus:

	l.	s.	d.
To the Master of the Hospital	30	00	0
To the four Chaplains	16	00	0
Two Conducts	06	13	4
Thirteen Sisters	52	06	8
Ten Servants	22	06	8
Other Officers, as Physician, Surgeon, Auditor, and Steward	28	00	0
Expences upon the poor People	133	06	4½

So that besides the Damage this House received by the first Master, who totally consumed the Treasure appointed by Foundation and Statutes, the Savoy was now become ruinous, and in a very mean Condition, which inclined the King, upon a Motion made to him by the City of LONDON, to dissolve it; and accordingly this Hospital, (valued at 529 l. 5 s. 7 d. per Annum, saith Speed) was suppressed June 10, in the 7th of King Edward VI. A little before his Death, the Beds, Bedding, and other Furniture belonging thereunto, with 700 Marks of the said Lands, by the Year, he gave to the Citizens of LONDON, with his House of Bridewell, to the furnishing thereof, to be a Work-House for the poor and idle Persons, and towards the furnishing of the Hospital of St. Thomas in Southwark.

BUT this Hospital was again new founded, erected, and incorporated, by Queen Mary, November 3, in the 4th of her Reign, and one Jackson took Possession, and was made Master thereof in the same Month. The Ladies of the Court, and the Maids of Honour (a Thing not to be forgotten, saith Stow) stored the same anew with Beds, Bedding, and other Furniture, in very ample Manner; and it was by Patent confirmed at Westminster, May 9, in the 4th and 5th of Phil. and Mary.

IN the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth, the Chapel became a Church, for the Inhabitants in and about the Parts of the Strand next the Savoy, to resort to, to hear Divine Service and Sermons, and for the Administration of the Sacraments: And was so allowed by Grindal Bishop of LONDON, with the Consent of the Master, and the Parish of St. Clement's: And so the Savoy, which formerly stood within the Parishes of St. Clement's Danes, and St. Mary the Strand, was now become a Parish itself.

THE Savoy had the bad Fortune to meet with another ill Master, Thomas Thurland by Name; who came in about Queen Elizabeth's Access to to the Crown. He, beſides that he was a Papiſt, and of a ſcandalous Life, embezzelled the Goods and Revenues, and the Poor wanted Neceſſaries, and ran the Houſe above 2000 l. in Debt: So that in the Year 1570, it was viſited by Archbiſhop Grindal, with others, and the Maſter was deprived; but upon Promiſe and Oath of better Behaviour, was afterwards reſtored again about the Year 1575.

THIS Houſe, tho' founded for charitable Purpoſes, was much abuſed; ſo that in Queen Elizabeth's Time, a great many Rogues and Beggars ſheltered themſelves here, upon Pretence of being Needy, or Lame, or Sick, and to want Relief, according to the Order of the Foundation; which was, That the Maſter was ſworn to receive Claudicantes, Ægrotantes, & Peregrinantes: For Anno 1581, in the Month of January, a Search being made by the Recorder in LONDON, and the Suburbs, for Rogues, he ſent the Conſtables of the Dutchy to the Hoſpital of the Savoy, and they brought to him to Bridewell, ſix tall Fellows that were Draymen, belonging to Brewers, who were neither lame, ſick, nor travelling Perſons. The Conſtables, if they might have had their Wills, would have brought as many more: But the Maſter wrote a very courteous Letter to the Recorder, and the other Juſtices, to pardon them: But though he wrote thus charitably for them, they were all ſoundly whipped, and ſo ſent home to their Maſters: And it was obſerved, that the Savoy was a great Nurſery of theſe evil Perſons, and a Place, as it was then uſed, not converted to any good Uſe or Purpoſe.

THE more modern State of this Houſe is, That in the Reign of King Charles II. it was made Uſe of in good Part as a Garriſon; and there are at this Time conſtantly a Battalion of the Foot-Guards lodged here in Barracks. Part of it is alſo uſed as a Priſon for Soldiers, or for new raiſed, or impreſſed Men.

THE other Parts of the Hoſpital are now turned into divers Dwelling-Houſes, and granted away to private Perſons: Here is a French Church, which uſes the Liturgy, and conforms in all things to the Church of England; there are likewiſe two Chapels, one for German Lutherans, and the other for Dutch Calviniſts.

DULWICH COLLEGE.

AT Dulwich, in the County of Surrey, about four Miles from the Borough of Southwark, in the Year 1619, was erected a College, called God's-Gift, conſiſting of a Maſter, a Warden, and four Fellows; of which three are to be Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, and the fourth a skilful Organiſt; and of twelve poor aged People, and twelve poor Children. The Founder was Edward Alleyn, Eſq; a celebrated Actor in the Play-Houſe.

THE College is a ſtrong Gothick Building, the Front of Stone, and the Side Wings of Brick, which are the Houſes of the twelve poor People, ſix on one Side for the Men, and the ſame Number on the other Side for the Women. Over the Door of the Front, which ſtands to the North, is this Inſcription in Golden Letters:

THE Church-Wardens of the four Parishes above-mentioned, meet twice a Year, viz. on the 4th of March, and 4th of September, to look into the Affairs of the College, and have a Dinner provided for them. In the Room where they dine are several antient Pictures, particularly of the Founder, his Father, his Brother, his Wife, and his Mistress, who by this Picture was a most beautiful Woman; there is likewise a Picture of Prince Henry, eldest Son of King James I. and several old Heads of the Kings of England from William the Conqueror to Henry VIII; of the Apostles; and of the antient Sybills.

JOYNING to this Room is a Gallery, 80 Feet long and 15 broad, in which there are likewise some good Pictures, especially one of St. Jerome. This long Gallery, which is the whole Length of the West Wing of the House, over the Apartments of the six poor Women, is seldom made any Use of, but upon the Election of a Warden; and then there is commonly a Ball in it.

THE Master and Warden are both to be of the Founder's Name [Alleyn]. The Warden is elected, and whenever the Master dies, succeeds him.

THE Fellows are also elected, which is done by drawing Lots in this Manner; if there are more than two Candidates, the Master, Warden, and other Fellows, name the two who are to draw; and then two Papers, roll'd up alike, are put into a Bag, one of which has written in it, God's Gift, the other is Blank, and he who draws God's Gift is elected.

THE six Men, six Women, and twelve Boys, are all Cloathed with a dark grey Cloth, almost black.

THE Servants of the House, are a Caterer, a Gardener, a Butler, a Cook, and the Master's Man.

ONE of the six old Women is always Matron, to look to the Boys, and keep them clean.

ASKE's HOSPITAL.

THIS Hospital is situated at Hoxton, not far from the upper Part of Moorfields, and is so named from Mr. Robert Aske, an Haberdasher of LONDON, who dying in the Year 1681, was buried in Aldermanbury Church, in which Parish he lived, and was a Dealer in Raw Silk. By his last Will, he left 20,000 l. to the Company of Haberdashers, in Trust, to build and endow an Hospital for the Harbour and Relief of twenty poor decayed single Men of the Company: And then, after divers other Legacies and charitable Bequests, the whole Remainder of his Estate he left to the said Company, which, as it held out, he gave them in Trust, for twenty poor Boys, Sons of Haberdashers, to be likewise maintained, and have Learning in the aforesaid Foundation.

IN Consequence of this, some of the chief Members of the Company enter'd upon the Estate, which amounted to upwards of 30,000 l. and upon this Bottom, they resolved to erect a very handsome Structure, both for the Founder's Honour and their own. The Model of the Building was drawn by Dr. Hook, the learned Mathematician of Gresham College, and is a stately Edifice, built of Brick and Stone, with a Piazza in the Front, 340 Feet in Length, adorned with Stone Columns of the Tuscan Order, but the Middle Part with Columns, Entablature, and Pediment of the Ionick Order; under the Pediment is a Nich, wherein stands the Effigies of the Founder carved in full Proportion; his Gown on, and a Roll of Parchment in his Hand; underneath him is thus written:

ROBERTO ASKE, Armigero, hujus Hospitii Fundatori, Socie. Haberda. B. M. P. C.

AND on one Side of him this Inſcription:

Anno Chriſti MDCLXXXII.

Societas Haberdaſherorum de LONDON hoc Hoſpitium condiderunt, ex Legato & Teſtamento ROBERTI ASKE Armigeri, ejuſdem Societatis; ad viginti ſenum Alimenta, & totidem Puerorum Educationem.

ON the other Side this Inſcription:

The Worſhipful Company of Haberdaſhers built this Hoſpital, purſuant to the Gift and Truſt of R. ASKE, Eſq; a late worthy Member of it; for the Relief of twenty poor Members, and for the Education of twenty Boys, Sons of decayed Freemen of that Company.

HERE is alſo the Coat of Arms of Aske, viz. Or, three Bars Azure, and they are alſo impaled with the Haberdaſhers: And at the North End is an erect direct South Dial, with this Motto:

Cito pede præterit, 1695.

THE whole Building is 400 Feet in Length, and is ſaid to have coſt 13, or 14,000 l.

THE Maſter and Wardens of the ſaid Company, for the Time being, are Governors of this Hoſpital. Here is alſo one Maſter for the twenty Boys, who likewiſe reads Prayers in the Chapel of this Hoſpital, at eleven and three o' Clock daily, for which he has 40 l. per Annum, and a Houſe. Here are alſo a Clerk, a Butler, and a Porter. The ſaid twenty poor Men are all to be ſingle; they have each an Apartment of three Rooms, Food, a Gown once in two Years, and 3 l. per Annum in Money: The Boys have alſo a Ward to themſelves, and a Bed to each two, and they have all other Neceſſaries.

TRINITY COLLEGE, or HOSPITAL.

THIS is a handſome Structure of Brick and Stone near Mile-End, North of the High Road, with a graceful Entrance, conſiſting of two Rows of Building one Story high, fronting each other, the Length whereof on both Sides is paved with Free-ſtone; in the Middle a Graſs Plat, encloſed with Palliſadoes, and ſet with young Fir Trees; and at the further End Northward, ſtands a very comely Chapel, with a Clock, aſcending with divers Steps, where Prayers are read on Sundays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, which Chapel on each End, is contiguous to the two other Apartments.

IT was founded in the Year 1695, for ſuch decayed or antient Seamen as had been Maſters of Ships, or Pilots, or their Widows, and none other.

THERE are Pumps belonging to every two Houſes.

IT was built by the Trinity Houſe, upon a Piece of Ground given for that Uſe by a Sea Officer of note, named Captain Mudd of Ratcliff, ſometime an Elder Brother of the Company; his Widow contributing thereto.

THE Expences of this Building aroſe from the Money of the Ballaſt Office, belonging to the Trinity Houſe by Act of Parliament, with which that Houſe continually performs great Charities, and gives monthly Reliefs to poor needy Mariners, or their Widows, to the Number of two thouſand and more.

THIS Hoſpital contains twenty-eight Apartments, each conſiſting of two Rooms, one above another.

EVERY Perſon belonging to this Foundation, at firſt received in Money weekly, after this Proportion; ſome a Crown, ſome four Shillings, ſome three Shillings and Six-pence, according to the Need or Quality of the Perſon: But the Penſion is now ſettled at twelve Shillings, payable every firſt Monday in the Month.

CHELSEA COLLEGE, CALLED The ROYAL HOSPITAL.

OF this Houſe we have ſpoken before, as a Houſe founded for Divines; but we are now come to treat of it as an Hoſpital, which it is at the preſent, for the Entertainment of diſabled, or ſuperannuated Officers and Soldiers. For this Purpoſe it was founded by K. Charles II. carry'd on by his Brother King James II. and perfected by King William III. being a large and ſtately Edifice on the River Side. The Middle Building, facing the River, conſiſts of a very fine Hall on one Side, and a Chapel on the other, with a fine Pavillion between them: The Front is very lofty, being four Columns, Entablature, and Triangular Pediment of the Dorick Order, on each Side of which is a Piazza, adorned with Tuſcan Pillars, and a Balluſtrade on the Top. In the Cornice of this Piazza, is the following Inſcription in Capitals:

IN SUBSIDIUM ET LEVAMEN EMERITORUM SENIO BELLOQUE FRACTORUM CONDIDIT CAROLUS SECUNDUS.

AUXIT JACOBUS SECUNDUS; PERFECERE GULIELMUS ET MARIA REX ET REGINA, ANNO DOMINI, MDCXCII.

GREENWICH HOSPITAL.

AS the laſt mentioned Hoſpital is for the Relief and Support of decayed, aged, and maimed Soldiers, who have ſerved their King and Country in the Land Service, this we are now to ſpeak of, is for ſuch as have been reduced to the like Difficulties in the Sea Service in the Royal Navy. It is ſituated in Greenwich, on the Banks of the Thames, on the South Eaſt Side of LONDON, where formerly ſtood a Houſe of Pleaſure for our Kings, and where the ever-memorable and proſperous Queen Elizabeth was born.

THIS Hoſpital was founded by King William and Queen Mary, who, in the Year 1694, October the 25th, iſſued out their Letters Patent, wherein they gave and granted to Sir John Somers, Lord Keeper; Thomas, Duke of Leeds, Preſident of the Council; Thomas, Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Privy Seal; Charles Duke of Shrewsbury, one of the Principal Secretaries of State; Sidney Lord Godolphin, firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and divers others, their Heirs and Aſſigns, that Piece or Parcel of Ground, ſituated within the Pariſh of Eaſt Greenwich, being Part of their Majeſties Manor of Eaſt Greenwich, containing in the whole, eight Acres, two Roods, and thirty two Square Perches; and all that Capital Meſſuage, lately built, or in building, by King Charles II. and ſtill remaining unfiniſhed, commonly called the Palace at Greenwich, and ſeveral other Edifices and Buildings: To the Intent that every Part thereof ſhould be converted and employed unto, and for the Uſe of an Hoſpital, for the Relief of Seamen, their Widows and Children, and Encouragement of Navigation.

THE Year after, the King again (the Queen being dead) iſſued out his Letters Patent, dated the 12th of March 1695, and in the 7th Year of his Reign, for a Commiſſion for this Hoſpital. Wherein firſt, was ſet forth the Reaſon of his founding this Hoſpital; namely, that nothing would more effectually contribute to the Trade, Navigation, and Naval Strength of this Realm, than the endeavouring to increaſe the Number of Engliſh Seamen. And that the Seafaring Men of this Kingdom, had for a long Time diſtinguiſhed themſelves throughout the World, for their Induſtry and Skilfulneſs in their proper Employments, and by their Courage and Conſtancy, manifeſted in Engagements and Hazards for the Defence and Honour of their Native Country. And that nothing was more likely to continue their antient Reputation, and to have greater Numbers betake themſelves to the Sea, than by making ſome competent Proviſion, that Seamen, who, by Age, Wounds, or other Accidents, ſhould become diſabled for farther Service at Sea, and ſhould not be in a Condition to maintain themſelves comfortably, might not fall under Hardſhips and Miſeries, but might be ſupported at the publick Charge: And that the Children of ſuch diſabled Seamen, and the Widows and Children of ſuch Seamen as ſhould happen to be ſlain in the King's Service, might in ſome reaſonable Manner be provided for and educated. And that therefore, both he himſelf, and the Queen deceaſed, having frequently reflected upon the Premiſes, ſince their Acceſſion to the Crown, Crown, had determined to erect and eſtabliſh an Hoſpital for the Purpoſes aforeſaid.

In theſe Letters Patent he commiſſioned Prince George of Denmark, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury for the Time being, the Lord Chancellor, or Lord-keeper, for the Time being, alſo the Lord Preſident of the Council, the Lord-keeper of the Privy Seal, the Secretary of State for the Time being, and a great Number more of the Nobility, the Biſhops, Aldermen of the City, Commiſſioners of the Navy, Sea Captains, Trinity Houſe, and other Gentlemen, or ſome of them, to meet together, from Time to Time, for the executing this Commiſſion, and to conſider of proper Methods to be obſerved in executing the ſame, by empowering ſeven, or more, of them (whereof one, or more, to be of the Privy Council, of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, &c.) to call others to their Aid and Aſſiſtance, and to appoint and conſtitute Sub-Committees, and to call to them the King's Surveyor-General of the Works, and other Artiſts, to conſider what Part of the Structures and Buildings now ſtanding would be unfit, or not ſerviceable for the Hoſpital; and in what Manner ſuch of the preſent Structure, as ſhall be thought fit to ſtand, may be fitted and prepared for Uſe and Service: Likewiſe to prepare Models of the Building, with ſuch Schemes and Draughts as might beſt explain the ſame, and to preſent ſuch Models and Schemes to the King, for his Royal Approbation. Likewiſe to prepare a Charter, or Charters of Foundation; and alſo ſuch Statutes, Conſtitutions, and Orders, as may be proper for it, and to receive the King's Allowance towards this Building; and alſo all Gifts and Subſcriptions, Sums of Money, Goods, or Chattels, Manors, Lands, Rents, or other Matters, or Things whatſoever, that any other well-diſpoſed Perſons ſhould contribute towards it.

And that the King's Intentions in the Premiſes might be better known, the Commiſſioners were moreover to cauſe publick Notification of them to be made in their Places, or by ſuch Ways and Means as they ſhould think fit; and to certify to the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury, the Names of Perſons that ſhall ſubſcribe, or contribute, with the Sums of Money, Goods, Chattels, &c. ſo given.

John Evelyn, Senior, Eſq; was nominated and appointed in theſe Letters Patent, to be Treaſurer and Receiver-General, of all the Money, or other Profits ſubſcribed, or contributed for the Building, Furniſhing, or Endowing the ſaid Hoſpital; for which he was to have 200 l. yearly: And upon his Death, or Removal, the Commiſſioners to appoint one, or more, fit Perſon, or Perſons, for Treaſurer. And divers other particular Orders and Directions were given to the Commiſſioners, for the ſpeedier and more honeſt and effectual Execution and Eſtabliſhment of this charitable Work: For carrying on, and perfecting which, the King gave 2000 l. yearly, payable out of the Exchequer.

After this Commiſſion, the Parliament made an Act for the more effectual forwarding this Excellent and Royal Deſign, and bringing it to Perfection, and providing a ſufficient Endowment of it. The Sum of which Act was, "That every "able Mariner, Seaman, Waterman, Fiſherman, "Lighterman, Bargeman, Keelman, or Seafaring "Man, being above the Age of Eighteen, and "under the Age of Fifty, that ſhould be willing "to enter and regiſter himſelf, for the Service of "his Majeſty, his Heirs, and Succeſſors in the "Fleet, giving his Chriſtian and Sir-Name, Age, "and Place of Abode, unto an Officer appointed "by the King for the Regiſtering of Seamen at "the Navy Office in LONDON: And theſe, "ſo regiſtered, to be ready upon Orders, iſſuing "from the Lord High Admiral, from Time to "Time in each Year, for the Service of the Fleet: "That theſe thus entered, not being above the "Number of 30000, ſhould receive the Bounty "of 40 s. yearly, over and above their Pay; and "beſides many other Privileges and Benefits "there mentioned, granted to theſe regiſtered "Seamen, above others not regiſtered, ſhould "be admitted and placed in the ſaid Hoſpital, "and be provided each, during his Life, with "convenient Lodging, Meat, Drink, Cloathing, "and other Neceſſaries, upon a Certificate of "the Captain, Maſter, and Surgeon of the Ship, "under their Hands, of their being diſabled "for future Service, unto the Governor of the "Hoſpital: And the Widows of ſuch as ſhould "be ſlain or drowned in the Sea-Service, and "their Children, being not of Ability to provide "comfortably for themſelves, ſhould be received "into the Hoſpital, and there be provided for, "and the Children have Education, according as "the Hoſpital ſhould be capable to receive them, "and as the Revenues thereof would extend.

"And for the providing a ſufficient Revenue "for this Hoſpital, it was enacted in the ſame "Act, That every Seaman that ſhould ſerve his "Majeſty, his Heirs, and Succeſſors, in any of "his Ships, ſhould allow out of his Wages 6*d.* "per Menſem, for the better Support of the ſaid "Hoſpital, and to augment the Revenues thereof.

Again, by an Act the Year after, viz. 1697, it was declared and enacted, "That each Perſon "regiſtered ſhould enjoy the Benefit of Green-"wich Hoſpital, and be received into it in Suc-"ceſſion one after another, as the Perſon regi-"ſtered ſhall be and appear in Courſe and Order "of Time to be upon the Regiſter-Book; and "the Widows and Children of the Perſons longeſt "regiſtered, always to be preferred: And that "ſuch Seamen, who are 50 Years of Age, if "they have ſerved in any of his Majeſty's "Ships for ſeven Years before, might regiſter "themſelves.

That Part of the Building next the River, which is almoſt finiſhed, and is chiefly of Free Stone, is adorned with magnificent Pillars, Pilaſters, Entablatures and Pediments of the Compoſite Order. Of the main Building there is yet but one Side finiſhed, in which is a ſpacious Hall finely painted by Sir James Thornhill; in an Alcove at the upper End of it is repreſented the preſent Royal Family, viz. the late Princeſs Sophia, his late Majeſty King George I. their preſent Majeſties, the Queen of Pruſſia, the Prince of Wales, the Duke, and the five Princeſſes. On the Cieling, her late Majeſty Queen Anne, and Prince George of Denmark. On the Cieling of the Hall itſelf, King William and Queen Mary, with ſeveral Emblematical Figures; and, in one Corner, the late learned Mr. Flamſted, and his Diſciple Mr. Weſton, making their Aſtronomical Obſervations, with the Draught before them of the great Eclipſe that happened in the Year 1715; an Account of which was publiſhed long before, by the ſaid Mr. Flamſted.

Under the Cupola, at the firſt Entrance into the Hall, are the Names of, and the Sums given by the following Benefactors, in three Tables, carved in Letters and Figures of Gold.

MORDEN COLLEGE.

THIS College is ſituated not far from Greenwich, upon Blackheath, and is named after its generous, and truly Chriſtian Founder, Sir John Morden, of Wrickleſmarſh, in the Pariſh of Charlton, in the County of Kent, Baronet; a Citizen born, and a Turkey Merchant, in which Profeſſion he acquired a conſiderable Eſtate. Several Years before his Death, he erected this ſpacious Structure, in Form of a College, at his ſole Charge, in a Field called Great-Stone-Field, not far from his own Habitation, for the Reception and Harbour of poor, decayed, honeſt Merchants.

HE endowed it moſt amply and liberally, with his whole Real, Copyhold, and Perſonal Eſtate, after his Lady's Deceaſe, which may amount to about 1300 l. per Annum; and in his Life-time, placed twelve ſuch poor Merchants there: But by Reaſon of great Loſſes, they were reduced to four, in the Life-time of the Lady Morden, who was forced to retrench the Expences of the Houſe, on Account of the Share allotted to her by the laſt Will of her Husband. When ſhe died, and the whole Eſtate came to the College, the Number was increaſed again; and there are, at this Time, five and thirty poor Gentlemen in the Houſe. There is no ſettled Number of ſuch as are to be admitted; but it is to be augmented according as the Eſtate will bear, and the neceſſary Expences allow of: There is Room for the Harbour of 40.

SIR John Morden, by his Will, appointed his ſaid Lady his Executrix, and three others of good Rank and Integrity, all Turkey Merchants, to be both Truſtees of his Eſtate ſo ſettled, and likewiſe Viſitors of his College yearly or oftner, as they ſhould ſee Need or Occaſion; and due Proviſions to be made for them there when they come to viſit: And they to have the ſole Management of the Affairs thereof. Theſe firſt Truſtees upon the Deceaſe of any of them, to chooſe and nominate others, to the Number of ſeven, all to be Turkey Merchants; the Survivors of them to chooſe others of the ſaid Company, from Time to Time, to fill up the ſaid Number upon the Death of any of the former; or if at any Time hereafter, there ſhould chance to be a Failure in the Turkey Company, then the Election of the ſeven Truſtees to be made out of the Eaſt-India Company, of which Sir John Morden was alſo a Member; and in Caſe of a Failure in that Company, Proviſion was made, by the Will, for others.

TO this College belongs alſo a Treaſurer, whoſe Salary is 40 l. a Year; whoſe Office is to receive the Rent and Revenues, and to keep the Books of the Accompts and Diſburſements of the College, and to be accountable to the Viſitors.

AND alſo a Chaplain, who is to be in Holy Orders, and to read Prayers in the Chapel twice every Day, and to preach twice on the Lord's Day. His Salary at firſt was 30 l. a Year, but the Lady Morden, at her Death, doubled it. She was in other Things a Benefactor to the College, particularly, by making an Addition to the 10 l. appointed yearly for the Repairs, which was not ſufficient for the Purpoſe; for which Reaſon ſhe has her Statue in a Nich, joining to that of her Husband in another Nich, ſet over the Gate of the College.

THE Treaſurer, and Chaplain, with the poor Merchants, are to have a common Table in the Hall, to eat and drink together at Meals; and each their convenient Chambers and Apartments, with Cellars.

THE Penſion allowed to each Perſon admitted into this Houſe is 20 l. per Ann. for their Commons, Firing, and other Neceſſaries. They were, at firſt, to wear Gowns in the College, with the Founder's Badge; but that is left off. They ought, at their Admiſſion, to be 50 Years of Age at leaſt.

THE Chapel within the College, which is wainſcotted, and hath a coſtly Altar-Piece, was conſecrated by Dr. Sprat, Biſhop of Rocheſter, in whoſe Dioceſe the College ſtands; there were alſo preſent Dr. Teniſon, late Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Founder, and many others; when Dr. Freind preached the Dedication Sermon, an Anthem was ſung by the Singing Boys of the Collegiate Church of Weſtminſter, brought by the ſaid Biſhop, Dean alſo of that Church.

WHEN the Founder died, which was in the Year 1708, he was buried, according to his own Deſire, in a Vault under the Communion-Table of this Chapel.

There is likewiſe a Burying-Place adjoining to the College, conſecrated alſo by Biſhop Sprat, for ſuch of the College as die there.

THUS far Fitz-Stephen, as to the State of theſe Things in his Time. Whereunto may be added the preſent; by comparing whereof, the Alteration will eaſily appear.

STOW ſays, in his Time, Men of Trades, and Sellers of Wares in this City have oftentimes ſince changed their Places as they have found their beſt Advantage. For whereas Mercers and Haberdaſhers, ſaith he, uſed wholly then to keep their Shops in Weſt-cheap; of later Time, they held them on London-Bridge.

THE Goldſmiths of Gutheron's-Lane, and the Old Exchange, are now (for the moſt Part) removed into the South Side of Weſt-cheap.

THE Pepperers and Grocers of Soper's-Lane, are now in Bucklersbury, and other Places diſperſed.

THE Drapers of Lombard-Street, and of Cornhill, are ſeated in Candlewick-Street, and Watling-Street.

THE Skinners from St. Mary Pellipers, or at the Axe, into Budge-Row and Walbrook.

THE Stock Fiſhmongers in Thames-Street, Wet Fiſhmongers in Knight-Rider's-Street and Bridge-Street.

THE Ironmongers of Ironmonger-Lane and Old-Jury, into Thames-Street.

THE Vintners, from the Vinetree, into divers Places.

BUT the Brewers (for the moſt Part) remain near to the Friendly Water of Thames.

THE Butchers, in Eaſt-cheap, and St. Nicholas Shambles, and the Stocks-Market.

THE Hoſiers (of old Time) in Hoſier-Lane, near unto Smithfield, are ſince removed into Cordwainers-Street, the upper Part thereof by Bow-Church, and laſt of all into Burchover's-Lane by Cornhill.

THE Shoemakers and Curriers of Cordwainers-Street, removed, the one to St. Martin's-Le-Grand, the other to London-Wall, near to Moorgate.

THE Poulterers of late, removed out of the Poultry, betwixt the Stocks, and the great Conduit in Cheap, into Graſs-Street, and St. Nicholas Shambles.

Bowyers, from Bowyer-Row, by Ludgate, into divers Parts, and almoſt worn out with the Fletchers.

THE Pater-Noſter Bead-Makers, and Text-Writers, are gone out of Pater-Noſter-Row, and are called Stationers of Paul's Church-Yard.

THE Patten-Makers of St. Margaret-Pattens-Lane, clean worn out.

Labourers, every Work-Day, are to be found in Cheap, about Soper's-Lane End.

Horſe-Courſers, and Sellers of Oxen, Sheep, Swine, and ſuch like, remain in their old Market of Smithfield, &c.

THAT Merchants of all Nations had their Keys and Wharfs at this City, whereunto they brought their Merchandizes, before and in the Reign of Henry II, Fitz-Stephen wrote (of his own Knowledge) to be true, though for the Antiquity of the City he took the common Opinion.

ALSO that this City was (in his Time and before) divided into Wards, had yearly, Sheriffs and Aldermen, General Courts, and Aſſemblies, and ſuch like Notes by him ſet down, in Commendation of the Citizens (whereof there is no Queſtion) he wrote likewiſe of his own Experience, as being born and brought up amongſt them.

AND to confirm his Opinion, concerning Merchandizes, then hither tranſported, whereof haply may be ſome Argument, Thomas Clifford (before Fitz-Stephen's Time) writing of King Edward the Confeſſor, ſaith to this Effect, " King " Edward intending to make his Sepulchre at " Weſtminſter, for that it was near to the famous " City of LONDON, and the River Thames, " which brought in all Kinds of Merchandizes " from all Parts of the World, &c.

AND William of Malmsbury, that lived in the Reigns of William I, and II, Henry I, and King Stephen, calleth this a Noble City, full of wealthy Citizens, frequented with the Trade of Merchandizes from all Parts of the World.

IT is ſaid alſo in divers Records, That (in old Times) no Wood was ſtowed or harboured in this City, but all was preſently ſold in the Ships, except by Licence purchaſed of the Sheriffs, till of more later Time, to wit, in the Year 1236, Andrew Bokerell, being Mayor, by Aſſent of the Principal Citizens, the Merchants of Amiens, Nele, and Corby, purchaſed Letters, enſealed with the Common Seal of the City, That they, when they come, might harbour their Woods, and, therefore, ſhould give the Mayor, every Year, 50 Marks Sterling. And the ſame Year they gave 100 l. toward conveying of Water from Tyburn to this City.

ALSO the Merchants of Normandy made Fine for Licence to harbour their Woods, till it was otherwiſe provided, in the Year 1263, Thomas Fitz-Thomas, being Mayor, &c. which proveth, That then, as before, they were here, among other Nations, privileged.

IT followeth, in Fitz-Stephen, That the Plagues of LONDON (in that Time) were immoderate Quaffing among Fools, and often Caſualties by Fire.

AS for Prevention of Caſualties by Fire, the Houſes in this City being then builded all of Timber, and covered with Thatch of Straw or Reed, it was long ſince thought good Policy in our Fore-Fathers, wiſely to provide, namely, in the Year of Chriſt 1189, the firſt Year of Richard I, Henry Fitz-Alwin, being then Mayor, That all Men in this City ſhould build their Houſes of Stone, up to a certain Height, and to cover them with Slate, or Brick, or Tile, ſince which Time there hath not happened the like often conſuming Fires in this City, as before.

Coaches not known in England.

OF old Time, Coaches were not known in this Iſland, but Chariots, or Whirlicotes, then ſo called, and they only uſed by Princes, or Men of great Eſtates, ſuch as had their Footmen about them: And it is ſaid, That Richard II, being threatened by the Rebels of Kent, rode from the Tower of LONDON to the Mile's-End, and with him his Mother, becauſe ſhe was ſick and weak, in a Whirlicote, the Earls of Buckingham, Kent, Warwick, and Oxford, Sir Thomas Percie, Sir Robert Knowles, the Mayor of LONDON, Sir Aubery de Vere, that bare the King's Sword, with other Knights and Eſquires, attending on Horſeback. But in the Year next following, the ſaid Richard took to Wife, Anne, Daughter to the King of Bohemia, who firſt brought hither the Riding upon Side-Saddles, Riding upon Side-Saddles firſt uſed in England.

Saddles, and ſo was the Riding in thoſe Whirlicotes and Chariots forſaken, except at Coronations, and ſuch like Spectacles.

LAST of all, the ſame Author, in this Chapter, hath theſe Words, Moſt Part of the Biſhops, Abbots, and great Lords of the Land, as if they were Citizens and Freemen of LONDON, had many fair Houſes to reſort unto, and many rich and wealthy Gentlemen ſpent their Money there.

Noblemens Houſes in the City of LONDON.

TO mention here a few of theſe Noblemens Houſes, and the Street where they ſtood. In the Depoſitions in the great Cauſe of Arms between Reginald, Lord Grey of Ruthyn, and Sir Edward Haſtings, in the Time of Henry IV, it appears that John, the laſt Earl of Pembroke, who died at Woodſtock, had a Houſe, and lived in LONDON, in the Pariſh of ——— juſt by the Priory of St. Helens, and John, his Father, Earl of Pembroke, in a Houſe in the Pariſh of St. Mary Attehill (i. e. St. Mary Hill) and Reginald, Lord Grey of Ruthyn, his Manſion-Houſe was in the Pariſh of St. Andrew, by Eaſt-cheap, in the 10th Year of that King: And William Beauchamp had a Houſe and Chapel by Pater-Noſter-Row, LONDON; and in the Time of Richard II. Sir Harry Percy had a Houſe in Wood-ſtreet, of that Spaciouſneſs, that he was able there to entertain the King, two Dukes of Lancaſter and York, two Earls, Earl Marſhal, and his Father, the Earl of Northumberland, and divers others.

AND in another Place, he hath theſe Words: "Every Sunday in Lent, a freſh Company of "young Men come into the Fields on Horſeback, "and the beſt Horſemen conduct the reſt. "Then march forth the Citizens Sons, and other "young Men, with diſarmed Launces and Shields, "and practice Feats of War. Many Courtiers "likewiſe, and Attendants upon Noblemen, "repair to this Exerciſe; and whilſt the Hope of "Victory doth inflame their Minds, they do "ſhew good Proof, how ſerviceable they would "be in Martial Affairs, &c." Again, he ſaith, "This City, in the troubleſome Time of King "Stephen, ſhewed at a Muſter 20,000 armed "Horſemen, and 40,000 Footmen, ſerviceable "for the Wars, &c.

THUS much for the Earl of Lancaſter.

IN the 14th of the ſame Edward II, Hugh Spencer the Elder, condemned by the Commons, was baniſhed the Realm. At which Time it was found by Inquiſition, that the ſaid Spencer had in ſundry Shires 59 Manors: He had 28000 Sheep, 1000 Oxen and Steers, 1200 Kine with their Calves, 40 Mares with their Colts, 160 Drawing Horſes, 2000 Hogs, 300 Bullocks, 40 Tons of Wine, 600 Bacons, 80 Carcaſſes of Martilmas Beef, 600 Muttons in Larder, 10 Tons of Cyder. His Armour, Plate, Jewels, and ready Money, better than 10,000*l.* 36 Sacks of Wool, and a Library of Books. Thus much the Record.

Robert Fabian ſaith, in a Manuſcript Stow had read, that in the 36th of Henry VI. the greater Eſtates of the Realm being called to LONDON,

THE Earl of Salisbury came up to LONDON with 500 Men on Horſeback, and was lodged in the Herber.

Richard Duke of York, with 400 Men, lodged at Baynard's Caſtle.

THE Dukes of Exceſter and Somerſet with 800 Men.

THE

THE Earl of Northumberland, the Lord Egremont, and the Lord Clifford, with 1500 Men.

Richard Nevell, Earl of Warwick, with 600 Men, all in red Jackets, embroidered with ragged Staves before and behind, were all lodged in Warwick-Lane: In whoſe Houſe there was oftentimes ſix Oxen eaten at a Breakfaſt; and every Tavern was full of his Meat: For he that had any Acquaintance in that Houſe, might have there ſo much of ſodden and roaſt Meat, as he could prick and carry upon a long Dagger.

Richard Redman, Biſhop of Ely, Anno 1500, the 17th of Henry VII. beſides his great Family, Houſe-keeping, Alms-diſh, and Relief to the Poor whereſoever he was lodged; in his travelling, when at his coming or going to or from any Town, the Bells rung, and all the Poor would come together, to whom he gave every one Sixpence, at the leaſt.

Cardinal Woolſey's Houſe-keeping.

AND now, ſaith Stow, to note ſomewhat nearer our own Time, we muſt not omit in this Place Thomas Woolſey, Archbiſhop of York, and Cardinal: His Servants daily attending in his Houſe were about 400, omitting his Servants Servants, which were many. He had in his Hall continually three Tables, or Boards, kept with three Principal Officers; to wit, a Steward, who was always a Prieſt; a Treaſurer, a Knight; and a Comptroller, an Eſquire: Alſo a Cofferer, being a Doctor; three Marſhals; three Yeomen-Uſhers in the Hall; beſides two Grooms and Almoners: Then in the Hall-Kitchen, two Clerks of the Kitchen, a Clerk Comptroller, a Surveyor of the Dreſſer, a Clerk of the Spicery; all which together kept alſo a continual Meſs in the Hall. Alſo, in his Hall-Kitchen he had, of Maſter Cooks two, and of other Cooks, Labourers, and Children of the Kitchen, twelve Perſons; four Yeomen of the ordinary Scullery, two Yeomen of the Paſtry, with two other Paſtelers under the Yeomen.

IN the Privy-Kitchen, he had a Maſter Cook, who went daily in Velvet and Sattin, with a Chain of Gold about his Neck, and two other Yeomen, and a Groom. In the Scalding-houſe, a Yeoman and two Grooms. In the Pantry, two Yeomen. In the Buttery, two Yeomen, two Grooms, and two Pages. In the Chandery, two Yeomen. In the Wafery, two Yeomen. In the Wardrobe of Beds, the Maſter of the Wardrobe, and ten other Perſons attending. In the Laundery, a Yeoman, a Groom, thirty Pages, two Yeomen-Purveyors, and one Groom. In the Bake-houſe, a Yeoman and two Grooms. In the Wood-Yard, a Yeoman and a Groom. In the Barn, one. In the Garden, a Yeoman and two Grooms: A Yeoman of his Stage; a Maſter of his Horſe; a Clerk of the Stable; a Yeoman of the ſame; the Saddler; the Farrier; a Yeoman of his Chariot; a Sumpterman; a Yeoman of his Stirrup; a Muleter, and ſixteen Grooms of his Stable; every one of them keeping four Geldings; Porters at his Gate; two Yeomen, and two Grooms: In the Armoury, a Yeoman and a Groom.

IN his Chapel he had a Dean, a great Divine, and a Man of excellent Learning; a Sub-dean, a Repeater of the Choir, a Goſpeller, a Piſteler; of ſinging Prieſts, ten; a Maſter of the Children; twelve Seculars, being ſinging Men of the Chapel; ten ſinging Children, with a Servant to attend upon the Children. In the Reveſtry, a Yeoman and two Grooms, over and beſide divers Retainers, that came thither at principal Feaſts.

FOR the Furniture of his Chapel, it exceedeth my Capacity to declare, or to ſpeak of the Number of coſtly Ornaments and rich Jewels that were uſed in the ſame continually. There hath been ſeen in Proceſſion about the Hall, four and forty very rich Copes worn, all of one Suit, beſides the rich Croſſes and Candleſticks, and other Ornaments belonging to the Furniſhment of the ſame. He had two Croſs-Bearers, and two Pillar-Bearers in his great Chamber; and in his Privy-Chambers theſe Perſons; firſt, The Chief Chamberlain and Vice Chamberlain: Of Gentlemen Uſhers (beſide one in his Privy Chamber) he had twelve daily Waiters; and of Gentlemen Waiters, in his Privy Chamber, he had ſix; of Lords nine or ten, who had (each of them) two Men allowed to attend upon them, except the Earl of Derby, who always was allowed five Men. Then had he of Gentlemen Cup-bearers, Carvers, Sewers, both of the Privy Chamber, and of the great Chamber, with Gentlemen (daily Waiters there) 40 Perſons: Of Yeomen-Uſhers 6: Of Grooms in his Chamber 8: Of Yeomen in his Chamber 45 daily. He had alſo Alms-Men, ſometime more in Number than at other times.

THERE was attending on his Table, daily, of Doctors and Chaplains (beſides them of his Chapel) 16: A Clerk of his Cloſet, two Secretaries, two Clerks of his Signet, and four Counſellors learned in the Laws. And foraſmuch as it was neceſſary to have divers Officers of Chancery to attend upon him; that is to ſay, the Clerk of the Crown, a Riding Clerk, a Clerk of the Hamper, and a Clerk of the Wax; then a Clerk of the Check, as well upon the Chaplains, as on the Yeomen of his Chamber; he gave Allowance to them all. He had alſo four Footmen, who were cloathed in rich running Coats, whenſoever he rode on a Journey. Then had he a Herald at Arms, a Serjeant at Arms, a Phyſician, an Apothecary, four Minſtrels, a Keeper of his Tents, an Armourer, an Inſtructor of his Wards, two Yeomen of his Wardrobe and Robes, and a Keeper of his Chamber, continually in the Court.

HE had alſo in his Houſe, the Surveyor of York, and a Clerk of the Green Cloth. All theſe were daily attending, down-lying and upriſing, and at Meals. He kept in his great Chamber, a continual Table for the Chamberers and Gentlemen Officers; having with them a Meſs of young Lords, and another of Gentlemen. And beſides all theſe, there was not an Officer, Gentleman, or other Perſon of worth, but was allowed in the Houſe, ſome three, ſome two, and all other one at leaſt, which amounted to a great Number of Perſons; beſides Retainers, Suitors, and who moſt commonly dined in his Hall.

Nicholas Weſt, Biſhop of Ely, in the Year 1532, kept continually in his Houſe a hundred Servants, giving to the one half of them 53 s. 4 d. a-piece yearly; to the other half, each 40 s. a-piece; to every one for his Winter Gown, four Yards of Broad Cloth, and for his Summer Coat three Yards and an half. He daily gave at his Gates, beſides Bread and Drink, warm Meat to two hundred poor People.

THE Houſe-keeping of Edward Earl of Derby is not to be forgotten, who had 220 Men in Check Rolls; his feeding aged Perſons twice every Day, 60 and odd, beſides all Comers thrice a Week, appointed for his Dealing Days, and every Good Friday 2700 with Meat, Drink, and Money.

Thomas Audley, Lord Chancellor, his Family of Gentlemen before him, in Coats garded with Velvet, and Chains of Gold, his Yeomen after him, in the ſame Livery not garded.

William Powlet (or Pawlet) Lord Great Maſter, Marquis of Winchеſter, kept the like Number of Gentlemen and Yeomen, in a Livery of Reading Tawny; and great Relief at his Gate.

Thomas Lord Cromwell, Earl of Eſſex, kept the like, or greater Number, in a Livery of grey Marble, &c. the Gentlemen garded with Velvet, the Yeomen with the ſame Cloth.

THESE, as all other of thoſe Times, gave great Relief to the Poor: And Stow ſays, he had ſeen in that declining Time of Charity, as he calls it, at the Lord Cromwell's Gate at LONDON, more than 200 Perſons ſerved twice every Day with Bread, Meat, and Drink ſufficient.

Edward, Duke of Somerſet, was not inferior in keeping a Number of tall Gentlemen and Yeomen, though his Houſe was then in Building, and moſt of his Men were lodged Abroad.

THE Earl of Oxford, in thoſe Times, was wont to ride into this City, and ſo to his Houſe by London-Stone, with fourſcore Gentlemen, in a Livery of Reading Tawny, and Chains of Gold about their Necks, before him, and one hundred tall Yeomen, in the like Livery to follow him, without Chains, but all having his Cognizance of the blue Boar embroidered on their Left Shoulder.

THESE, and all other Men of Honour and Worſhip, then lodging in this City, or within the Liberties thereof, did, without grudging, bear their Part of Charges with the Citizens, according to the Value of their Eſtates, without which thoſe Muſters of old Time could not have been ſo great.

Of Charitable ALMS in Old Time given.

THESE Noblemen before-mentioned, obſerved that antient and charitable Cuſtom of liberal Relief of the Poor at their Gates: As all Prelates, Noblemen, or Men of Honour and Worſhip, their Predeceſſors, had done before them, whereof venerable Bede writeth, That Prelates of his Time, having, peradventure, but wooden Churches, had (notwithſtanding) on their Board at their Meals, one Alms-Diſh, into which was carved ſome good Portion of Meat, out of every other Diſh brought to their Table; all which was given to the Poor, beſides the Fragments left, inſomuch as in a hard Time, a poor Prelate wanting Victuals hath cauſed his Alms-Diſh, being Silver, to be divided amongſt the Poor, therewith to ſhift as they could, till GOD ſhould ſend him better Store.

SUCH a Prelate was Ethelwald, Biſhop of Wincheſter, in the Reign of King Edgar, about the Year of CHRIST 963: He, in a great Famine, ſold away all the ſacred Veſſels of his Church, to relieve the almoſt-ſtarved People, ſaying, That there was no Reaſon that the ſenſeleſs Temples of GOD ſhould abound in Riches, and the lively Temples of the HOLY GHOST to lack it.

Walter de Suffilde, Biſhop of Norwich, was of the like Mind: About the Year 1245, in a Time of great Dearth, he ſold all his Plate, and diſtributed it to the Poor, every Pennyworth.

Robert Winchelſea, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, about the Year 1093, beſides the daily Fragments of his Houſe, gave every Friday and Sunday, to every Beggar that came to his Gate, a Loaf of Bread ſufficient for that Day, and there were uſually every ſuch Alms-Day, in Time of Dearth, to the Number of 5000, and otherwiſe 4000, at the leaſt. Moreover, he uſed every Feſtival to give 150 Pence to ſo many poor People, and ſent daily, Meat, Bread, and Drink, to ſuch, as by Age, or Sickneſs, were not able to fetch his Alms, and did ſend Meat, Money, and Apparel, to ſuch as he thought needed it.

IN 1171, Henry II. after his Return into England, did Penance for the Slaughter of Thomas à Becket, by whom (a ſore Dearth then increaſing) ten Thouſand Perſons, from the firſt of April till new Corn was inned, were daily fed and ſuſtained.

MORE is recorded, That in the Year 1236, the 20th of Henry III. William de Haverhill, the King's Treaſurer, was commanded, that upon the Day of the Circumciſion of our Lord, 6000 poor People ſhould be fed at Weſtminſter, for the State of the King, Queen, and their Children. The like Commandment, the ſaid King Henry gave to Hugh Gyfford, and William Brown, that upon Friday next, after the Epiphany, they ſhould cauſe to be fed, in the great Hall at Windſor, at a good Fire, all the poor and needy Children that could be found, and the King's Children being weighed and meaſured, their Weight and Meaſure, to be diſtributed for their good Eſtates: Theſe few Examples, for Charity of Kings, may ſuffice.

IN the Reign of Edward III. Richard de Berry, Biſhop of Durham, did weekly beſtow, for Relief of the Poor, eight Quarters of Wheat, made into Bread, beſides his Alms-Diſh, Fragments of his Houſe, and great Sums of Money, given to the Poor, when he travelled; and that theſe Alms-Diſhes were as well uſed at the Tables of Noblemen, as of the Prelates, one Note may ſuffice.

IN the Year 1452, Richard Duke of York, then claiming the Crown, the Lord Rivers ſhould have gone beyond Sea about the King's Buſineſs; but ſtaying at Plymouth till his Money was ſpent, and then ſending for more, the Duke of Somerſet ſent him the Image of St. George, in Silver and Gold, to be ſold, with the Alms-Diſh of the Duke of Glocester, which was alſo of great Price, for Coin they had none.

BUT to return to the Houſe-Keeping in the City.

THE Expences of the Mayors and Sheriffs, and other publick Feaſting in the City on ſolemn Days, were ſo great in former Times, that an Act of Common Council was made, 1 and 2 of Philip and Mary, for retrenching them, and other Charges in Attendants and Liveries; and theſe Expences continuing to our Times, it was reprinted Anno 1680, and recommended to the preſent Obſervation.

THE Preamble ſets forth, the Reaſon that our antient wiſe Forefathers had many Times attempted the Redreſs and Amendment of the great Exceſs in Fare and other Things, in Mayors and Sheriffs Houſes, viz. the Dearth of Victuals, and the Charges of theſe Offices, which were ſo huge, that almoſt all good Citizens fled and refuſed to ſerve in this Honourable City; only becauſe of the great Exceſs, and chargeable Fare and Diet in the ſaid Offices. Hence it was enacted, That no Mayor or Sheriff ſhould have, at their Table, at Dinner or Supper, any more Courſes than one; and no more ſundry Diſhes at one Courſe, upon the Sunday, or other Feſtival Day, being a Fleſh Day, than ſix, whether the ſame be hot or cold. Every Holyday, being a Fiſh Day, ſeven Diſhes of Meat, and not above: And every working Day, being a Fleſh Day, five Diſhes: And Fiſh Days, ſix Diſhes of ſeveral Meats; provided, that neither Brawn, Collops with Eggs, Sallads, Pottage, Butter, Cheeſe, Eggs, Herrings, Sprats, Shrimps, or any Shell-fiſh, nor no Kind of Fruit unhaſhed, ſhall be accounted for any of the ſaid Number of Diſhes of Meat aboveſaid: And that the Mayor may, at his Pleaſure, have, at the ſaid one Courſe, one Diſh of Meat, either Fiſh or Fleſh, more than before limited.

THAT neither the Serjeants nor other Officers of the Lord Mayor's Houſe, nor the Serjeants Yeomen, or other Officers of the Sheriffs Houſes, ſhall have more ſundry Diſhes, either at Dinner or Supper, upon the Fleſh Days, than three, and upon Fiſh Days, than four.

NONE

NONE of the Aldermen, or Commoners of this City, to exceed or paſs the Number of Diſhes of Meat above limited, and appointed for the Sheriffs in their own proper Manſion-Houſes, Brawn, Sallads, and other Things, as aforeſaid, excepted.

NOR in any of the Halls, or Companies, at any Feaſt or Time; nor that there be any Swan, Crane, or Buſtard, which were wont to be called Head-Pools, to be ſpent at any Feaſt, in any of the Halls, or Companies, upon Pain of Forfeiture of 40 s. toties quoties.

AND for the Eaſe of the aged Perſons, and for the avoiding of great Uneaſineſs, that often happens at Feaſts, a certain convenient Number of the Cloathing, (i. e. Livery) as well of the principal Crafts, as of the meaner Companies, which were accuſtomed to dine at the Mayor's Feaſt, ſhall be abated: And ſuch a certain Number of Company, as hath been accuſtomed to dine at the ſaid Feaſt, the Number to be yearly appointed by the Lord Mayor and his Brethren, the Aldermen, and they to be ſerved but with one Courſe, and the ſame Number of Diſhes, viz. of ſix or ſeven.

PROVIDED, That when any Ambaſſador, or any of the Privy Council ſhall be at the ſaid Feaſt, then for their Board only to be amended and ordered by the Diſcretion of the ſaid Mayor and Sheriffs: And no Banquet after Dinner, except Ippocras and Wafers, as in Time paſt hath been uſed.

THE Feſtival Days that were wont to be kept by the Mayor and Sheriffs in their Houſes, that is to ſay, the three Holydays after Whitſunday, and the Dinners kept at Bartholomewtide, from henceforth to be left and laid down: And the Feaſts of Chriſtmas and Eaſter, with the Holydays next after, to be uſed and kept by the Mayor and Sheriffs, as heretofore hath been accuſtomed, and to keep the Order, as is aforeſaid.

THE Sheriffs of this City from henceforth ſhall have but fourteen Serjeants, and fourteen Yeomen, a-piece. The Sheriffs to give to every of their Serjeants and Yeomen, two Crowns at the Time accuſtomed, and no other Liveries, and to every other Clerks of the Compters, and ſuch as have been accuſtomed to have had Gowns at Chriſtmas, to have only one Livery-Gown, and no more.

THAT from henceforth there ſhall be no Wyth fetch'd home at the Mayor's or Sheriffs Houſes; neither ſhall they keep any Lord of Miſ-rule in any of their Houſes.

AND foraſmuch as the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, ſhortly after their Entrance into their ſeveral Offices and Rooms, be yearly at great and exceeding Expences, by reaſon of the ſumptuous Feaſts, which they, for the Honour and Renown of the ſame, do keep in Guildhall, called The Mayor and Sheriffs Feaſts, as to and for ſuch Noblemen of the King's and Queen's moſt Honourable Council, Ambaſſadors of Foreign Realms and Potentates, as are bidden and deſired to come unto the ſame, and alſo to and for the Aldermen and Worſhipful Commons and Citizens; therefore, it was ordained and enacted, That the ſaid Mayor and Sheriffs ſhould yearly thenceforth, at the Time of the making their ſaid Feaſts, have, of the free Gift of the City, out of the Chamber of the common Store and Treaſure of the City there, towards the Relief of their ſaid Charge and Expence, the Sum of 100 l. This preſent Act to be a ſufficient Warrant and Diſcharge unto the Chamberlain for the yearly Payment of the ſaid 100 l.

THIS Act of Common-Council was printed again in the Year 1680, with Reaſons added, as therein is ſhewed, that the fifth Part of the Charge of a Shrievalty is in Wine.

THE modern Feaſts at this Time, viz. the Exchequer and Spittal Feaſts, coſt in Wine, the firſt 80 l. and the latter, above 300 l. to each Sheriff.

SPORTS and PASTIMES of Old Time uſed in the City

"LET us come now (ſaith Fitz-Stephen) to "the Sports and Paſtimes, ſeeing it is fit that a "City ſhould not only be commodious and ſe- "rious, but alſo merry and ſportful. Whereupon, "in the Seals of the Popes, until the Time of "Pope Leo, on the one Side was St. Peter, "fiſhing with a Key over him, reached, as it "were, by the Hand of GOD out of Heaven, and "about it this Verſe:

Tu pro me Navem liquiſti, ſuſcipe Clavem.

You left the Ship for me, take you the Key.

"AND on the other Side was a City, and "this Inſcription on it, Aurea Roma; likewiſe "to the Praiſe of Auguſtus Cæſar, and the City, "in Reſpect of the Shews and Sports was "written,

Nocte pluit tota redeunt Spectacula mane, &c.

All Night it Rains, and Shows
At Morrow-Tide return again;
And Cæſar, with Almighty Jove,
Hath match'd an equal Reign.

"BUT LONDON, for the Shews upon "Theatres, and comical Paſtimes, hath holy "Plays, Repreſentations of Miracles, which holy "Confeſſors have wrought, or Repreſentations "of Torments, wherein the Conſtancy of Mar- "tyrs appeared.

"EVERY Year alſo, on Shrove-Tueſday, (that "we may begin with Childrens Sport, ſeeing we "all have been Children) the School-Boys do "bring Cocks of the Game to their Maſter, and "all the Forenoon, they delight themſelves in "Cock-Fighting; after Dinner all the Youths "go into the Fields to play at the Ball.

"THE Scholars of every School have their "Ball, or Baſtion, in their Hands. The antient "and wealthy Men of the City come forth on "Horſeback to ſee the Sport of the young Men, "and to take Part of the Pleaſure in beholding "their Agility.

"IN Eaſter Holydays, they fight Battles on the "Water. A Shield is hanged on a Pole, fixed "in the Midſt of the Stream, a Boat is prepared "without Oars, to be carried by Violence of "the Water, and in the fore Part thereof ſtand- "eth a young Man, ready to give Charge upon "the Shield with his Lance. If ſo be he break "his Lance againſt the Shield, and doth not fall, "he is thought to have performed a worthy Deed. "If ſo be without breaking his Lance, he runneth "ſtrongly againſt the Shield, down he falleth "into the Water, for the Boat is violently forced "with the Tide, but on each Side of the Shield "ride two Boats, furniſhed with young Men, "which recover him that falleth, as ſoon as they "can. Upon the Bridge, Wharfs, and Houſes, "by the River-Side, ſtand great Numbers to ſee "and laugh thereat.

"IN the Holydays, all the Summer, the "Youths are exerciſed in Leaping, Dancing, "Shooting, Wreſtling, Caſting the Stone, and "Practiſing their Shields. The Maidens trip "with their Timbrels, and dance as long as "they

" they can well ſee. In Winter, every Holy-
" day before Dinner, the Boars prepared for
" Brawn, are ſet to fight, or elſe Bulls or Bears
" are baited.

" WHEN the great Fen, or Moor, which wa-
" tereth the Walls of the City on the North " Side, is frozen, many young Men play upon
" the Ice; ſome ſtriding as wide as they may, do
" ſlide ſwiftly, others make themſelves Seats of " Ice, as great as Mill-ſtones: One ſits down,
" many, Hand in Hand, do draw him, and one
" ſlipping on a ſudden, all fall together. Some
" tie Bones to their Feet, and under their Heels,
" and ſhoving themſelves by a little picked Staff,
" do ſlide as ſwiftly as a Bird flieth in the Air, or " an Arrow out of a Croſs-Bow. Sometimes two
" run together with Poles, and one hitting the other,
" either one or both do fall, not without Hurt,
" ſome break their Arms, ſome their Legs; but
" Youth (deſirous of Glory) in this Sort, ex-
" erciſeth itſelf againſt the Time of War. Ma" ny of the Citizens do delight themſelves in " Hawks and Hounds; for they have Liberty of " Hunting in Middleſex, Hertfordſhire, all Chil-
" tron, and in Kent, to the Water of Cray.
Thus far Fitz-Stephen of Sports.

THESE and the like Exerciſes, ſaith Stow, have continued till our Time; and of Stage Plays, it is to be read, that Anno 1391, there was one played by the Pariſh Clerks in LONDON, at the Skinner's-Well beſide Smithfield, which continued three Days together, the King, Queen, and Nobles of the Realm being preſent: And of another played in the Year 1409, which laſted eight Days, and was of Matter from the Creation of the World. Whereat was preſent moſt Part of the Nobility and Gentry of England, &c.

OF later Time, inſtead of thoſe Stage Plays, have been uſed Comedies, Tragedies, Interludes, and Hiſtories, both true and feigned: For the acting whereof, certain publick Places, as the Theatre, the Curtein, &c. were erected. They played alſo in Inns, as the Croſs-Keys, the Bull, the Globe, &c.

BUT, ſaith Mr. Strype, this which was once a Recreation, and uſed therefore now and then occaſionally, afterwards, by Abuſe, became a Trade and Calling, and ſo remains to this Day. In thoſe former Days, ingenious Tradeſmen and Gentlemens Servants would ſometimes gather a Company of themſelves, and learn Interludes, to expoſe Vice, or to repreſent the noble Actions of our Anceſtors in former Times; and there they played at certain Feſtival Times, and in private Houſes at Weddings, or other ſplendid Entertainments, for their own Profit, acted before ſuch as were minded to divert themſelves with them: But in Proceſs of Time it became an Occupation, and many there were that followed it for a Livelihood; and which was worſe, it became the Occaſion of much Sin and Evil, great Multitudes of People, eſpecially Youth, in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, reſorting to theſe Plays, and being commonly acted on Sundays and Feſtivals, the Churches were forſaken, and the Playhouſes thronged; and great Diſorders and Inconvenience, were found to enſue to the City thereby: It occaſioned Frays and evil Practices of Incontinency. Great Inns were uſed for this Purpoſe, which had ſecret Chambers and Places, as well as open Stages and Galleries. Here Maids, eſpecially Orphans, and good Citizens Children, under Age, were inveigled and allured to privy and unmeet Contracts: Here was publiſhed, unchaſte, uncomely, and unſhamefaced Speeches, and Doings. There was an unthrifty Waſte of the Money of the Poor; ſundry Robberies, by picking and cutting Purſes; uttering of popular and ſeditious Matter; many Corruptions of Youth, and other Enormities; beſides ſundry Slaughters and Maimings of the Queen's Subjects, by falling of Scaffolds, Frames, and Stages, and by Engines, Weapons, and Powder, uſed in the Plays. And in the Time of GOD's Viſitation by the Plague, ſuch Aſſemblies of the People in Throngs and Preſſes, were very dangerous for ſpreading the Infection.

THE Conſideration of theſe Things occaſioned the expreſs Prohibition of Plays by the Queen and the Lord Mayor; and Sir John Hawes, Mayor, in the Year 1574, by an Act of Common Council, regulated theſe Plays, leſt the People, upon GOD's gracious withdrawing of the Sickneſs, ſhould, with ſudden forgetting of the Viſitation, without Fear of GOD's Wrath, and without ſome Reſpect of thoſe good and politick Means (as the Words of the Act ran) that he had ordained for the Preſervation of the Commonwealth and People, in Health and good Order, return to the undue Uſe of ſuch Enormities. Therefore, for the lawful, honeſt, comely Uſe of Plays, Paſtimes and Recreations in good Sort permitted, by the Authority of the Common Council, it was enacted, I. That no Play ſhould be openly played within the Liberty of the City, wherein ſhould be uttered any Words, Examples, or Doings of any Unchaſtity, Sedition, or ſuch like unfit and uncomely Matter, upon Pain of Impriſonment for the Space of 14 Days, and 5 l. for every ſuch Offence. II. That no Innkeeper, Tavernkeeper, or other Perſon whatſoever, within the Liberties of the City, ſhall ſhew or play, or cauſe to be ſhewed or played within his Houſe or Yard, any Play, which ſhall not firſt be peruſed and allowed by the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen's Order. III. No Perſon ſhall ſuffer any Plays to be played in his Houſe or Yard, whereof he then ſhall have Rule, but only ſuch Perſons, and in ſuch Places, as, upon good Conſideration, ſhall be thereunto permitted and allowed by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen. IV. Nor ſhall take and uſe any ſuch Benefit or Advantage of ſuch Permiſſion, until ſuch Perſon be bound to the Chamberlain of LONDON, in certain Sums, for the Keeping of good Order, and avoiding of Diſcords and Inconveniences. V. Neither ſhall uſe or exerciſe ſuch Licence or Permiſſion at any Time, in which the ſame ſhall be by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen reſtrained, or commanded to ſtay and ceaſe, in any uſual Time of Divine Service on the Sunday or Holyday, or receive any to that Purpoſe in Time of Service, to the ſame, upon Pain to forfeit for every Offence, 5 l. VI. And every Perſon to be licenſed, ſhall, during the Time of ſuch Continuance of ſuch Licenſe, pay to the Uſe of the Poor in Hoſpitals of the City, or of the Poor viſited with Sickneſs, ſuch Sums and Payments, as between the Mayor and Aldermen, and the Perſon to be licenſed, ſhall be agreed upon; upon Pain that on the Want of every ſuch Payment, ſuch Licenſe ſhall be utterly void. VII. All Sums and Forfeitures to be incurred for any Offence againſt this Act, and all Forfeitures of Bonds ſhall be employed to the Relief of the Poor of the Hoſpitals, or of the Poor infected or diſeaſed in the City: And the Chamberlain, in his own Name, ſhall have and recover the ſame, to the Purpoſes aforeſaid, in the Court of the utter Chamber of Guildhall, LONDON, called The Mayor's Court.

Plays regulated by Common Council.

PROVIDED, That this Act, ſhall not extend to Plays ſhew'd in private Houſes, Lodgings of a Nobleman, Citizen, or Gentleman, which ſhall have the ſame then played in his Preſence for the Feſtivity of any Marriage, Aſſembly of Friends, or other-like Cauſe, without publick, or common Collection of Money of the Auditors or Beholders.

BUT

BUT theſe good Laws and Orders, concerning Players, were not ſo well obſerved as they ſhould have been: For after this, the lewd Matters of Plays increaſed; and in the Hands of them were found many Dangers, for Religion, the State, Honeſty of Manners, Unthriftineſs of the Poor, for Infection, &c. And the Preachers daily exclaimed againſt them to the Mayor and Aldermen: Therefore in an Act of Common Council for Relief of the Poor, no Interludes were allowed in LONDON, in open Spectacle, but in private Houſes only, at Marriages, or ſuch like. And Suit was made, that they may be likewiſe baniſhed from all Places adjoining to the City.

SINCE which Time, and upon the Ruin at Paris Garden, Suit was made to the Lords to baniſh Plays wholly in the Places near LONDON; and Letters were obtained of the Lords, to baniſh them on the Sabbath Days.

UPON theſe Orders againſt the Players, the Queen's Players petitioned the Lords of the Council, that whereas the Time of their Service drew very near, ſo that of Neceſſity they muſt needs have Exerciſe, to enable them the better for the ſame, and alſo for their better Help and Relief in their poor Livings, the Seaſon of the Year being paſt to Play at any of the Houſes without the City; their humble Petition was, That the Lords would vouchſafe to read a few Articles annexed to their Supplication; and in Conſideration, the Matters contained the very Stay and State of their Living, to grant unto them the Confirmation of the ſame, or of as many as ſhould be to their Honours good Liking, and withal their favourable Letters to the Lord Mayor, to permit them to exerciſe within the City; and that their Letters might contain ſome Orders to the Juſtices of Middleſex in their Behalf: But there were ſome that preſently anſwered both their Supplication and Articles.

IN fine, the Buſineſs of the Players at laſt came to this Iſſue, and they were permitted on theſe Conditions; which were ſo many Remedies of their former Exorbitancies, viz. That they hold them content with playing in private Houſes, at Weddings, &c. without publick Aſſemblies. That if it were thought good they ſhould be tolerated, that then they be reſtrained to the Order in the Act of Common Council, made in the Time of Hawes, Mayor. That they play not openly till the whole Deaths have been, by twenty Days, under 50 a Week, nor longer than ſhall ſo continue. That no Plays be on the Sabbath. That no Plays be on Holydays, but after Evening Prayer; nor any received into the Auditory, till after Evening Prayer. That no Playing be in the Dark, nor continue any ſuch Time, but as any of the Auditors may return to their Dwellings in LONDON before Sun-ſet, or at leaſt before it be dark. That the Queen's Players only be tolerated; and of them their Number, and certain Names, to be notified in the Lord Treaſurer's Letters to the Lord Mayor, and to the Juſtices of Middleſex and Surrey; and thoſe her Players not to divide themſelves into ſeveral Companies: And that for Breaking any of theſe Orders their Toleration ceaſe.

Players often complained of, and reſtrained.

BUT all theſe Preſcriptions were not ſufficient to keep them within due Order; but their Plays, ſo abuſive oftentimes of Virtue, or particular Perſons, gave great Offence, and occaſioned Diſturbances: Whence they were now and then ſtopt and prohibited. So in the Year 1589, Hart, Mayor, Complaint was made of them to the Lord Treaſurer, who ſignified the ſame to the Mayor; and he ſent for all the Players in Town, (and there were ſome Companies of them; as one belonging to the Lord Admiral, and another to the Lord Strange) and charged them to forbear till further Order.

THE Collections concerning the State of Stage-Plays in former Times, may not be amiſs to be inſerted here.

IN ſhort, the Citizens of later Times ſeemed mightily to be delighted with Interludes and Plays, acted upon the Stage, repreſenting viſibly the Hiſtories of former Times, or the Manners of Men, ſo that as before Time, Stage-Players uſed to go about the Country to Noblemens Houſes, and at ſome ſet Times only, to act their Plays; now Houſes were built, or bought, or hired, and ſet a-part only for that Purpoſe: And no leſs than ſeventeen common Play Houſes were built in and about LONDON, within threeſcore Years, (as an Hiſtorian, that was alive about 1629, obſerved) the laſt whereof was built the ſaid Year near White-Fryars; five Inns, or common Oſteries, were turned to Play Houſes, one Cock-pit, St. Paul's Singing-School, the Globe on the Bank Side, the Fortune near Golden-Lane; one in Black-Fryars, one in White-Fryars, &c. beſides the new built Bear-Garden, built as well for Plays as Fencers, Prizes and Bull-baiting. Before the Space of the ſaid threeſcore Years, ſcarce any ſuch Theatres were heard of; but in the Reign of King James I, Stage-Plays ſeem to have been greatly encouraged, for in this King's Reign, we find the following Licenſe granted to Players. See Rymer's Fœdera, Tom. xvi. p. 505.

JAMES, by the Grace of GOD, &c. To all Juſtices, Mayors, Sheriffs, Conſtables, Headboroughs, and other our Officers and loving Subjects, Greeting: Know ye, that we of our ſpecial Grace, certain Knowledge, and mere Motion, have Licenſed and Authoriſed, and by theſe Preſents, do Licenſe and Authoriſe theſe our Servants,

In Witneſs whereof, &c.

Witneſs ourſelf at Weſtminſter, the nyntenth Day of Maye.

Per Breve de Privato Sigillo.

THAT the Citizens of LONDON never greatly approved of theſe Stage-Plays, ſeems very probable, not only from their former Act of Common Council, but the following Petition, occaſioned by a Play-Houſe ſet up in their Neighbourhood, in the Year 1729, which was deliver'd to the King by Sir Richard Brocas, Lord Mayor of LONDON, and the Court of Aldermen, who went up to St. James's, for that Purpoſe, on Tueſday the 28th of April 1730.

To the KING's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble Petition of the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of LONDON,

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT there having been lately erected, a Play-Houſe in a Place called Goodman's-Fields, near adjoining to the ſaid City, (but not within their Juriſdiction) and amidſt great Numbers of Perſons concerned in Trade, and particularly in the Silk, Woollen, and other Manufactures.

AND your Petitioners having Reaſon to be apprehenſive of very many ill Conſequences from the Continuance of the ſaid Play-Houſe, and the Repreſentations performed in the ſame, more eſpecially as affecting the Morals, leſſening the Induſtry, and loſing the Time of thoſe Perſons employ'd in the ſaid Manufactures, which if not prevented, may prove to be of very great Prejudice to the Trade of this City.

AND as the Actors of the ſaid Play-Houſe pretend to act by Authority;

YOUR Petitioners moſt humbly apply to your Majeſty (with a full Aſſurance of your moſt gracious Diſpoſition towards the Trade, Welfare, and Proſperity of this City) to give ſuch Orders for the ſuppreſſing an Evil of ſo dangerous a Conſequence, as to your Majeſty in your great Wiſdom ſhall ſeem meet.

Signed by Order of the ſaid Court.

JACKSON.

To this Petition, his Majeſty was pleaſed to give a moſt gracious Anſwer, viz.

YOUR Care and Concern for the Trade of the City and the Welfare of your Fellow Citizens, is very much to be commended; and you may depend upon my complying with what you, with ſo much Reaſon and Juſtice, deſire of me upon this Occaſion.

HIS Majeſty, or the Lord Chamberlain of his Houſhold, in his Name, ſent an Order a few Days after to forbid the Maſter of the Houſe Playing any more till the King's Pleaſure ſhould be known; this Order was complied with for a ſhort Time; but then the Play-Houſe was open'd again, as if nothing of this had happened. In the mean Time he got the following Petition deliver'd to his Majeſty, ſigned by a great Number of Inhabitants, near his Play-Houſe; but I am afraid not of the wiſer or graver Sort.

To the KING's moſt excellent Majeſty.

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT whereas the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of LONDON have preſented an humble Petition to your Majeſty, againſt a Play-Houſe erected in Goodman's-Fields (which they allow not to be within their Juriſdiction) ſetting forth the Apprehenſions they have of the ill Conſequences of the ſaid Play-Houſe, as affecting the Morals, leſſening the Induſtry, and loſing the Time of thoſe Perſons who are employed in the Silk, Woollen, and other Manufactures, and the Prejudice it may be to the Trade of the City, we, your Majeſty's Petitioners, the Inhabitants of Goodman's-Fields, and Parts adjacent, many of us concerned in the ſaid Manufactures, do moſt humbly beg your Majeſty's Permiſſion for the Continuance of the ſaid Play-Houſe, not apprehending any ſuch Dangers from it as are mentioned in the ſaid Petition, eſpecially while it is managed with that good Order, which has hitherto been obſerved by the preſent Governor of it, and all thoſe acting under him; and being moreover of Opinion, that there is no other Diverſion which our Children or Servants may give into, for Want of this, but is infinitely more capable of corrupting their Morals, leſſening their Induſtry, and loſing more of their Time, than that of Plays performed with good Decorum, which have been thought, by very wiſe Men in all Ages, and all civilized Nations, to produce Effects quite contrary to thoſe alledged in the Lord Mayor's Petition.

AND that we may not be deprived of the moſt rational of all Entertainments at this End of the Town, which is not denied to be juſt and lawful at the other, is the humble Petition of, &c.

I ſhall not, in this Place, pretend to decide a Queſtion, which has for a long Time employed the Pens of innumerable Writers, Whether Stage-Plays are capable of doing moſt Good or Hurt to Society? Or whether they ought to be tolerated?

Mr. Prynne, in his Hiſtriomaſtix, wrote about 1633, poſitively affirms, they are the very Pomps we renounce in our Baptiſm. Sir Richard Baker, the Author of the Engliſh Chronicle, wrote a Piece called The Theatre vindicated, in which he undertook to anſwer Prynne; but the Stage never had a more formidable Enemy than Mr. Jeremy Collier, who fell upon it with its own Weapons, Wit and Humour, as well as a great deal of ſound Reaſoning; however, this Gentleman was anſwered by a Multitude of Writers, and ſome of them Men of the firſt Rank in the World of Letters. It was not long ſince attack'd again by Mr. Laws, in a Piece called, The abſolute Unlawfulneſs of all Stage Entertainments; but not with the Wit, or Logick, of Mr. Collier. Mr. Dennis, a Veteran in the Service of the Stage, enter'd the Liſts againſt this Champion; and, indeed, ſeems as great an Enthuſiaſt on one Side the Queſtion, as Mr. Law is on the other.

AFTER all, if theſe Entertainments are to be allowed of, it is Pity they are not under ſome better Regulation, and that the Manners of the Players, who, as they pretend, are to teach Morality to others, ſhould not be more inſpected into; for it is notorious to all, and grievous to every ſober Man, who has the Misfortune of having any Dealings with them, that they are, for the moſt Part, not only the moſt profligate of Men, but that they even delight in boaſting of their Enormities.

Juſts and Turnaments.

JUSTS and Turnaments was a Court Recreation in former Days, at ſolemn Times, and laſted to the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign. In the Month of April 1560, were great Juſts at Weſtminſter, and running at the Tilt. There rode the Trumpeters, blowing their Trumpets, with Scarfs of white and black Sarſenet: Alſo the two Kings at Arms, and the Heralds, Somerſet, Lancaſter, Richmond, York, Rouge-Dragon, and and more of them, having Scarfs of white and black Sarſenet, about their Necks; and the Seven-night after were the like Juſtings at Court: The Earl of Suſſex, Lord Robert Dudley, and three more, againſt the Earl of Northumberland, the Lord Ambroſe Dudley, and the Lord Hunſdon, and Mr. Cornwallis. Many Staves were broken. There ſtood in the Standing, as Judges, Lord Marquis of Northampton, Lord Rutland, Lord Pembroke, and the French Ambaſſador: And by the Chance of the breaking of a Staff, a Piece flew up where the Judges ſat, and hit the Lord Pembroke.

ALSO Cocks of the Game are yet cheriſhed by divers Men for their Pleaſures, much Money being laid on their Heads when they fight in Pits, whereof ſome be coſtly made for that Purpoſe.

THE Ball is uſed by Noblemen and Gentlemen in Tennis Courts, and by People of meaner Sort in the open Fields and Streets.

THE Youths of this City, and other young Men, Time out of Mind, have left off to Practice the diſarmed Launce and Shield on Horſeback, in the Fields, Man againſt Man; but in the City they uſed on Horſeback to run at a dead Mark called a Quinten.

IN the Year of Chriſt 1253, the 38th of Henry III, the young Citizens, for an Exerciſe of their Activity, ſet forth a Time to run at the Quinten, and whoſoever did beſt, ſhould have a Peacock, which they had prepared as a Prize.

SOME of the King's Servants, the Court being then at Weſtminſter, came, as it were, in deſpite of the Citizens, to that Game, and giving reproachful Names to the Londoners, which for the Dignity of the City, and the antient Privilege which they ought to have enjoyed, were called Barons: The ſaid Londoners being wrongfully abuſed, fell upon the King's Servants, and beat them ſhrewdly; ſo that upon Complaint made to the King, he fined the City to pay a thouſand Marks. This Exerciſe of Running at the Quinten, was practiſed by the youthful Citizens, as well in Winter as in Summer; namely, in the Feaſt of Chriſtmas. I have ſeen, ſaith Stow, a Quinten ſet up on Cornhill near the Leaden-Hall, where the Attendants on the Lords of merry Diſports have run, and made great Paſtime; for he that hit not the broad End of the Quinten, was of all Men laughed to Scorn; and he that hit it full, if he rode not the faſter, had a ſound Blow in his Neck, with a Bag full of Sand, hanging on the other End.

THIS Sport was called alſo Quintane, or Quintain, from the Latin, Quintus, becauſe, as Minſhew fancies, it was one of the antient Sports uſed every fifth Year, among the Olympian Games,

IT was alſo corruptly called Whintane, or Quintal. It is ſuppoſed by ſome to be a Roman Exerciſe, and left here in this Iſland ever ſince their Time. The learned Dr. Kennet (late Lord Biſhop of Peterborough) in his Parochial Antiquities from Dr. Plot, deſcribes it thus: "That they ſet up a Poſt perpendicularly into "the Ground, and then placed a ſlender Piece "of Timber on the Top of it, on a Spindle, with "a Board nailed to it on one End, and a Bag of "Sand on the other. Againſt this Board they an-"tiently rode with Spears. Dr. Plot writes, That "he ſaw it at Deddington in Oxfordſhire, where "only long Staves were uſed, which violently "bringing about the Sand-bag, if they made "no good Speed away, it ſtruck them on the "Neck and Shoulders, and ſometimes, perhaps, "knocked them off their Horſes.

THE great Deſign of this Sport was to try the Agility both of Horſe and Man, and to break the Board; which whoſoever did, was for that Time accounted Princeps Juventutis, i. e. The Prince or Chief of the Youth. This Cuſtom is uſed to this Day at a Village called Blackthorn, which the ſaid Dr. Kennet concludes they had from the Romans (thro' which Village the Roman Way lay) being uſual at their Weddings, on the Common Green, with much Solemnity and Mirth.

Matthew Paris his Words, where he mentions this Exerciſe, are, Eo tempore juvenes Londinenſis, ſtatuto Pavone pro Bravio, ad ſtadium quod Quintena dicitur, Vires proprias et equorum Curſus ſunt experti.

WHEN Queen Elizabeth was at Kenelworth-Caſtle, in Warwickſhire, the Earl of Leiceſter's Seat, among other Sports for her Entertainment, was ſhewn a ſolemn Countty Bridal; when in the Caſtle Yard was pight a comely Quintane, for Feats of Arms; where, in a great Company of young Men and Laſſes, the Bridegroom had the firſt Courſe at the firſt Quintane, brake his Spear treſhardiment [very boldly;] but his Mare in his Manage did a little ſtumble, that much adoe had his Manhood to ſit in his Saddle: But after the Bridegroom had made his Courſe, the reſt of the Band ran awhile in ſome Order, but ſoon after Tag and Rag, Cut and Long-Tail; where the Speciality of the Sport was, to ſee how ſome for his Slackneſs had a good Bob with the Bag, and ſome for his Haſte to topple down right, and come tumbling to the Poſt. Some put forth with Spurs, would run his Race among the thickeſt of the Throng, and came down together Hand over Head. Another would run, and miſs the Quintane with his Staff, and hit the Board with his Head; as it is merrily related in a little Tract, by Way of Letter, giving a Relation of this Entertainment by the Earl of Leiceſter.

I have ſeen alſo, ſaith Stow, in the Summer Seaſon, ſome upon the River Thames, rowed in Wherries with Staves in their Hands, flat at the fore End, running one againſt another, and for the moſt Part either one or both overthrown, and well ducked.

On the Holydays in Summer, the Youths of this City have in the Field exerciſed themſelves, in Leaping, Dancing, Shooting, Wreſtling, Caſting of the Stone or Ball, &c.

THIS Shooting in the Long Bow, as it formerly was an Exerciſe of War, ſo afterwards it became an Exerciſe of Recreation alſo. And the Citizens uſed to go out into the Fields bordering upon the City, with their Bows, where divers Butts and Marks ſtood for the Purpoſe; and being ſo uſeful and healthful an Exerciſe, it had the Countenance and Encouragement of ſeveral Princes, viz. King Henry VIII, King James I, and King Charles I.

King Henry's Patent for a Fraternity of Archers.

King Henry VIII. Anno Regni 29, granted by Patent to Sir Chriſtopher Morris, Maſter of his Ordnance, Anthony Knevyt and Peter Mewtas, Gentlemen of his Privy Chamber (who were Overſeers of the Fraternity or Guild of St. George) that they ſhould be Overſeers of the Science of Artillery, that is, for Long Bows, Croſs Bows, and Hand Guns; and others were appointed to be Maſters and Rulers of the ſaid Science. And for the Continuance of the ſame, he granted that the ſaid Maſters and Rulers, and their Succeſſors, Maſters and Rulers, might begin, found, and eſtabliſh a perpetual Fraternity of St. George, and full Power to admit into the Fraternity all honeſt Perſons, whoſoever they were, and to be a Body Corporate. And for the better Increaſe and Maintenance of this Science, they might for their Diſport and Paſtime, from Time to Time, uſe and exerciſe Shooting at all Manner of Marks and Butts, and at the Game of the Propinjay, and other Games, as at Fowl and Fowls, as well in the City as Suburbs, and in in all other Places. And there was one remarkable Paſſage in this Charter, that in Caſe any Perſon were ſhot and ſlain in theſe Sports, by ſome Arrow ſhot by any of theſe Archers, he was not to be ſued nor moleſted, if he had immediately before he ſhot uſed that common Word, FAST.

KING James I. in the eighth of his Reign granted a Commiſſion to a great many Perſons of Quality, in Behalf of the Archers; mentioning divers good Statutes, Ordinances, Proviſions and Proclamations made by Kings on their Behalf. This Commiſſion was to ſtop a Practice then began to be uſed, of encloſing the Ground formerly uſed for this Exerciſe, by Making of Banks and Hedges in ſuch Fields and Cloſes, as Time out of Mind were allowed to be ſhot in, and by plucking up the old Marks of antient Standing in the ſaid Cloſes, or where the Banks and Hedges, being of indifferent Height, the Ditches were made ſo broad and deep, that, wanting Bridges, the Archers were much hindered thereby. The Commiſſioners therefore were empowered to go upon theſe Places, and to view and ſurvey in ſuch Grounds, next adjoining to the City of LONDON, and the Suburbs, within two Miles Compaſs: And the ſame to reduce in ſuch Order and State for the Archers, as they were in the Beginning of the Reign of King Henry VIII. and to cauſe the Banks, Ditches, and Quickleſs to be made plain and reformed.

THERE was alſo another Patent of King Charles I. to certain Commiſſioners concerning Archery, to the ſame Import with the former.

IN King Henry VIII's Time, the Citizens uſed to exerciſe their Sport of Shooting at Mile-End. The Chief of theſe Archers was called Prince Arthur, and the reſt of them his Knights: The Exerciſe whereof was ſo manly and uſeful, that as that King uſed it himſelf, ſo he diſdained not ſometimes to come to Mile-End, and ſee it.

AND another Time, at a Shooting Match at Windſor, the King was preſent; and the Game being well nigh finiſhed, and the Upſhot thought to be given, one Barlo, a Citizen and Inhabitant of Shoreditch, ſhot and won them all. Whereat the King greatly rejoiced, and told him he ſhould be named The Duke of Shoreditch. On which Account the Captain of the Company of Archers of LONDON, for a long Time after, was ſtiled by that Name.

The Captain of the LONDON Archers, called The Duke of Shoreditch.

IN the Year 1583, on the 17th of September, the Citizens ſet forth, at their great Charge, a Shooting Match with much State, the Duke of Shoreditch and all his Nobility and Officers marching through the City of LONDON to the Shooting Place. And firſt he gave a Summons to all his Marquiſſes, Earls and Barons, with all their Trains of Archery in and about the City of LONDON, to be in a Readineſs to accompany him into the Field, every one with a long Bow and four Shafts, on the aforeſaid Day, to meet him in Smithfield: And ſo they did. The Duke with his Company ſet forth from Merchant Taylors Hall. There repaired unto him all thoſe that were appointed for conducting of his Perſon to the Place of Meeting; as his Barons, and a Multitude of good Archers in their Habits, under his own Enſign: Who, with Sound of Trumpet, Drums, and other Inſtruments, paſt along Broad-ſtreet (where the Duke dwelt) through Moorfields to Finsbury, and from thence to Smithfield. There was alſo the Marquis Barlo, and the Marquis of Clerkenwell, with Hunters, who wound their Horn; and the Earl of Pancras, and the Marquis of Clerkenwell, with Hunters, who wound their Horn; and the Earl of Pancras, and the Marquis of Iſlington, and the Marquis of Hogſden, and the Marquis of Shakelwel, and other ſuch Nobility, with all their Trains, making a ſurprizing Shew. For they marched in very great Pomp, odly habited, through ſeveral Places and chief Streets of LONDON. The Number of Archers that now ſhot were 3000. The Number of them that accompanied the Archers, as Whifflers, and thoſe that guarded them with Bills, was 4000, beſides Pages and Henchmen. Their Attire was very gorgeous, a great many wearing Chains of Gold: The Number of theſe Chains were 942. But he that will have the Deſcription of the whole Shew, muſt read it in an old Book, intitled, The Bowman's Glory, reprinted 1682.

BUT tho' the Engliſh were ſuch Maſters in Archery, yet it was as much as ever Kings and Laws could do to make that Exerciſe prevail: For even in the Reign of King Edward III. who got ſuch Victories over France by his Bows, it grew much into Diſuſe, and in the Room thereof Hurling of Stones, and Wood and Iron, and Hand-Ball, Foot-Ball, Bandy-Ball, Cock-Fighting, and other Sports, came altogether into Requeſt; inſomuch that the ſaid King ſent a Command to the Sheriff of LONDON, to forbid the Citizens all other Sports but that and the like: Letters were ſent to all the Sheriffs of England. The Letter was to this Purpoſe:

"THE King to the Citizens of LONDON, "Greeting: Becauſe the People of our Realm, "as well of good Quality as mean, have com-"monly in their Sports, before theſe Times "exerciſed the Skill of Shooting Arrows, whence "it is well known that Honour and Profit "have accrued to our whole Realm, and to "us, by the Help of GOD, no ſmall Aſſiſt-"ance in our warlike Acts: And, now, the "ſaid Skill being, as it were, wholly laid aſide, "the ſame People pleaſing themſelves in Hurl-"ing of Stones, and Wood and Iron, and ſome "Hand-Ball, Foot-Ball, Bandy-Ball, and in "Lambuck and Cock-Fighting, and ſome alſo "apply themſelves to other diſhoneſt Games, "and leſs profitable, or uſeful, whereby the ſaid "Realm is likely, in a ſhort Time, to become "deſtitute of Archers.

"WE willing to apply a ſeaſonable Remedy "to this, command you, That in Places in the "aforeſaid City, as well within the Liberties as "without, where you ſhall ſee it expedient, you "cauſe publick Proclamation to be made, that "every one of the ſaid City, ſtrong in Body, at "leiſure Times on Holydays, uſe in their Re-"creations, Bows and Arrows, or Pellets or "Bolts, and learn and exerciſe the Art of Shoot-"ing, forbidding all and ſingular on our Behalf, "that they do not after any Manner apply them-"ſelves to the Throwing of Stones, Wood, Iron, "Hand-Ball, Foot-Ball, Bandy-Ball, Lambuck "or Cock-Fighting, or ſuch vain Plays, which "have no Profit in them, or concern themſelves "therein, under Pain of Impriſonment. Wit-"neſs the King at Weſtminſter, the 12th Day of "June.

THE like Letters were ſent to all the Sheriffs in England.

AND for Defence and Uſe of the Weapon, there was a ſpecial Profeſſion of Men that taught it. You may read in mine Annals, ſaith Stow, how that in the Year 1222, [and the 6th of King Henry III. on St. James's Day] the Citizens kept Games of Defence and Wreſtlings, near to the Hoſpital of Matilda, near St. Giles's in the Fields, where they challenged, and had the Maſtery of the Men in the Suburbs, and other Commoners, &c.

THE Bailiff of Weſtminſter reſolving to be revenged, proclaimed a Game to be at Weſtminſter upon Lammas-Day, to which the Citizens willingly repaired.

WHEN

When they had played a-while, the Bailiff, with the Men of the Suburbs harneſſed themſelves treacherouſly, and fell to ſuch Fighting that the Citizens (being ſorely wounded) were forced to run into the City, where they rung the common Bell, and aſſembled the Citizens in great Number; when the Matter was declared, every Man wiſhed to revenge the Fact, but the Lord Mayor of the City, being a wiſe and quiet Man, adviſed them firſt to move the Abbot of Weſtminſter in the Matter, and if he would promiſe to ſee Amends made, it was ſufficient: But a certain Citizen, named Conſtantine Fitz Arnulit, ſaid, That all the Houſes of the Abbot and Bailiff ſhould be pulled down; which deſperate Words were no ſooner ſpoken, but the common People (as unadviſedly) iſſued out of the City, without any Order, and fought a cruel Battle, Conſtantine pulling down divers Houſes, and the People (as praiſing Conſtantine) cried, The Joy of the Mountain, the Joy of the Mountain, God help and the Lord Lodowicke.

A few Days after this Tumult, the Abbot of Weſtminſter came to LONDON, to Philip Dawbeny, one of the King's Council, to complain of the Injuries done him. The Londoners perceiving it, beſet the Houſe about, and took by Violence twelve of the Abbot's Horſes away, cruelly beating his Men, &c.

But whilſt the ſaid Dawbeny laboured to pacify the Uproar, the Abbot got out at the Back-Door of the Houſe, and ſo, by a Boat on the Thames, hardly eſcaped, the Citizens throwing Stones after him in great Abundance.

These Things being thus done, Hubert de Burge, Chief Juſtice of England, with a great Army of Men, came to the Tower of LONDON, and ſent for the Mayor and Aldermen, of whom he required the principal Authors of this Faction; Conſtantine, being conſtant in the Sedition, affirmed, that he had done it, and that he had done much leſs than he meant to have done.

The Juſtice took him, and two others with him, and that Morning ſent him by Water, with a great Number of armed Men to the Gallows.

But when he ſaw the Rope about his Neck, he offered for his Life 15000 Marks, which would not ſave him, ſo he was hanged with Conſtantine his Nephew, and Galfrid, who read his Proclamation the 16th of Auguſt.

Also in the Year 1452, was a Tumult made againſt the Mayor, at the Wreſtling beſides Clerk's-Well, &c. which is ſufficient to prove that (of old Time) the Exerciſe of Wreſtling, and ſuch like, was much more uſed than of later Years.

The Youths of this City alſo uſed on Holy-days, after Evening Prayer, at their Maſters Doors, to exerciſe their Waſters and Bucklers, and the Maidens, one of them playing on a Timbrel, in Sight of their Maſters and Dames, to dance for Garlands hanged a-croſs the Streets, which open Paſtimes, being now ſuppreſſed, worſe Practices within Doors are to be feared.

Of triumphant Shews made by the Citizens of LONDON, you may read in the Year 1236, the 20th of Henry III. Andrew Bockrel then Mayor, how Eleanor, Daughter to Reymond Earl of Provence, riding through the City toward Weſtminſter, there to be crowned Queen of England; the City was adorned with Silks, and in the Night with Lamps, Creſſets, and other Lights, without Number, beſides many Pageants and ſtrange Devices there preſented. The Citizens alſo rode to meet the King and Queen, cloathed in long Garments, embroidered about with Gold, and Silks of divers Colours, and their Horſes in fine Trappings, to the Number of 360; every Man bearing a Cup of Gold or Silver in his Hand, and the King's Trumpeters before them. Theſe Citizens did ſerve Wine, as Butlers, which is their Service at the Coronation.

In the Year 1298, for Victory obtained by Edward I, againſt the Scots, every Citizen, according to their ſeveral Trades, made their ſeveral Shews, but eſpecially the Fiſhmongers, which in a ſolemn Proceſſion paſſed thorough the City; having, amongſt other Pageants and Shews, four Sturgeons gilt, carried on four Horſes; then four Salmons of Silver on four Horſes; and after them, ſix and forty armed Knights riding on Horſes, made like Sluices of the Sea; and then one repreſenting St. Magnus, becauſe it was upon St. Magnus's Day, with 1000 Horſemen, &c.

Of one other Shew you may read in the Year 1377, made by the Citizens for Diverſion of the young Prince Richard, Son to the Black Prince, in the Feaſt of Chriſtmas, and in this Manner:

On the Sunday before Candlemas, in the Night, 130 Citizens, diſguiſed and well mounted, with the Sound of Trumpets, Sackbuts, Cornets, Shalms, and other Inſtruments, and innumerable Torch-Lights of Wax, rode, in Mummery, from Newgate, through the City, over the Bridge, through Southwark, and ſo to Kennington, near Lambeth, where the young Prince then was with his Mother, and the Duke of Lancaſter, his Uncle, the Earls of Cambridge, Hertford, Warwick, Suffolk, with divers other Lords.

In the firſt Rank rode 48, in the Habits of Eſquires, two and two, cloathed in Red Coats and Gowns of Say or Sandal, with Vizors on their Faces.

After them came riding 48 Knights, in a Livery of the ſame Stuff and Colour.

Then followed one arrayed richly, like an Emperor; and after him one like a Pope, followed by twenty four Cardinals; and after them eight or ten in black Vizors, as Legates from ſome foreign Princes.

When theſe Maskers entered the Manor of Kennington, they alighted from their Horſes, and entered the Hall on Foot; which done, the Prince, his Mother, and the Lords, came out of the Chamber into the Hall, and were ſaluted by the Mummers, who, by a Pair of Dice on the Table, ſhewed their Deſire to play with the Prince; and they ſo managed it, that the Prince always won whenever he threw. They firſt ſet him a Bowl of Gold, then a Cup of Gold, and laſtly, a Gold Ring, all which he won at three Caſts.

Then they ſet the Prince's Mother, the Duke, the Earls, and other Lords, every one a Gold Ring, which they alſo won. After which, they were feaſted, and the Muſick playing, the Prince, Lords and Mummers all danced; which being over, they again drank, and departed in good Order as they came.

The like was in King Henry IV. his Reign, who keeping his Chriſtmas at Eltham, twelve Aldermen of LONDON, and their Sons rode thither a Mumming, and were well received.

There were other Sports and Paſtimes uſed yearly.

Firſt, In the Feaſt of Chriſtmas, there was in the King's Houſe, where-ever he was, a Lord of Miſ-rule, or Maſter of merry Sports; and the like was there in every Nobleman's Houſe, whether Lord Spiritual or Temporal. The Lord Mayor of LONDON, and the Sheriffs, had likewiſe each of them their Lord of Miſ-rule, ever contending, without Quarrel or Offence, who ſhould make the moſt Diverſion for the Beholders. Theſe Lords began their Rule at All-holland's Eve, and continued it till the Day after the Purification, or Candlemas Day.

Against the Feaſt of Chriſtmas, every Man's Houſe, as alſo the Pariſh-Churches, were decked decked with Holm, Ivy, Bays, and whatever the Seaſon afforded that was Green, as is uſed at this Time: Then alſo were Conduits and Standards garniſhed in the ſame Manner; and in the ſame Year 1444, a Standard being ſet up in Cornhill, near Leadenhall, nailed full of Holm and Ivy, it was, upon Candlemas-Day, towards the Morning, torn up, and all the Pavement about it, by a violent Tempeſt, which much affrighted the Citizens, who thought, as Stow ſaith, that it was done by the Malignant Spirit.

IN the Month before Eaſter, there uſed to be great Shews made, in fetching in a twiſted Tree, or Wyth, as it was termed, from the Woods to the King's Houſe, and alſo into the Houſes of other Perſons of Diſtinction.

King Henry VIII. goes a Maying.

IN the Month of May, on May-Day, there were uſed to be May Games; all the Citizens, who were able, going into the Woods and Meadows to divert themſelves: A notable Example of this is given by Edward Hall, who ſaith, That King Henry VIII, in the ſeventh Year of his Reign, on May-Day in the Morning, with Queen Catharine his Wife, accompanied by many Lords and Ladies, rode a Maying from Greenwich to the high Ground of Shooter's-Hill; where, as they paſſed along, they ſaw a Company of tall Yeomen, cloathed all in Green, with Green Hoods, and with Bows and Arrows, to the Number of 200: One, being their Chieftain, was called Robin Hood, who deſired the King, and all his Company to ſtay and ſee his Men ſhoot, which the King conſented to, and then Robin Hood whiſtling, all the 200 Archers ſhot off at once, and when he whiſtled again, they likewiſe ſhot again; their Arrows were ſo contrived in the Heads of them, that they all whiſtled when ſhot off; ſo that the Noiſe was ſtrange and loud, and greatly delighted the King, Queen, and their Company.

MOREOVER, this Robin Hood deſired the King and Queen, with their Retinue, to enter the Green Wood, where, in Arbors made with Boughs, and decked with Flowers, they were ſet and ſerved plentifully with Veniſon and Wine, by Robin Hood and his Men, to their great Satisfaction.

ABOUT two Years after this, an Accident happened, which occaſioned the Epithet of Evil to be added to this Day of Rejoicing, and that Day was afterwards noted by the Name of Evil May-Day. In the ninth Year of the Reign of King Henry VIII, a great Heart-burning, and malicious Grudge, grew amongſt the Engliſhmen of the City of LONDON, againſt Strangers; and namely, the Artificers found themſelves much aggrieved, becauſe ſuch Number of Strangers were permitted to reſort hither with their Wares, and to exerciſe Handicrafts, to the great Hindrance and Impoveriſhing of the King's Liege People: Which Malice grew to ſuch a Point, that one John Lincolne, a Broker, buſied himſelf ſo far in the Matter, that about Palm-Sunday, or the fifth of April, he came to one Dr. Standiſh, with theſe Words; "Sir, I under-"ſtand that you ſhall preach at the Spittal on Mon-"day in Eaſter Week, and ſo it is, that Engliſhmen, "both Merchants and others, are undone by "Strangers, who have more Liberty in this Land, "than they, which is againſt Reaſon, and alſo "againſt the Commonweal of this Realm. I be-"ſeech you therefore, to declare this in your "Sermon, and in ſo doing, you ſhall deſerve "great Thanks of my Lord Mayor, and of all "his Brethren". And herewith he offered unto the ſaid Doctor a Bill, containing the Matter more at large: But Doctor Standiſh, wiſely conſidering, that there might more Inconvenience ariſe from it, than he would wiſh, if he ſhould deal in ſuch Sort, both refuſed the Bill, and told Lincolne plainly, that he meant not to meddle with any ſuch Matter in his Sermon.

WHEREUPON the ſaid Lincolne, went unto one Dr. Bell, a Canon of the aforeſad Spittal, that was appointed likewiſe to preach upon Tueſday in Eaſter Week, at the ſame Spittal, whom he perſuaded to read his ſaid Bill in the Pulpit. Which Bill contained (in effect) the Grievances that many found from Strangers, for taking the Livings away from Artificers and the Intercourſe from Merchants, the Redreſs whereof muſt come from the Commons united together; for as the Hurt touched all Men, ſo muſt all ſet to their helping Hands: Which Letter he read, or the chief Part thereof, comprehending much ſeditious Matter, and then he began with this Sentence, Cœlum Cœli Domino, Terram autem dedit Filiis Hominum, i. e. The Heavens to the Lord of Heaven, but the Earth he hath given to the Children of Men: And upon this Text, he ſhewed how this Land was given to Engliſhmen, and as Birds defend their Neſts, ſo ought Engliſhmen to cheriſh and maintain themſelves, and to hurt and grieve Aliens for Reſpect of their Commonwealth: And on this Text, Pugna pro Patria, i. e. Fight for your Country, he brought in, how (by God's Law) it was lawful to fight for their Country, and thus he ſubtilly moved the People to oppoſe Strangers. By this Sermon, many a Light-headed Perſon took Courage, and ſpoke openly againſt them: And by chance there had been divers ill Things of late done by Strangers, in and about the City of LONDON, which kindled the Peoples Rancour the more furiouſly againſt them.

THE 28th Day of April, divers young Men of the City picked Quarrels with certain Strangers, as they paſſed along the Streets; ſome they ſmote and buffeted, and ſome they threw in the Channel, for which the Lord Mayor ſent ſome of the Engliſhmen to Priſon, as Stephen Studley, Skinner, Stevenſon, Betts, and others.

Evil May-Day

THEN ſuddenly roſe a ſecret Rumour, and no Man could tell how it began, that on May-Day, next following, the City would ſlay all the Aliens, inſomuch that divers Strangers fled out of the City.

THIS Rumour came to the Knowledge of the King's Council, whereupon the Lord Cardinal ſent for the Mayor, and other of the Council of the City, giving them to underſtand what he had heard.

THE Lord Mayor, as one ignorant of the Matter, told the Cardinal, that he doubted not ſo to govern the City, but that Peace ſhould be obtained.

THE Cardinal willed him ſo to do, and to take heed, that if any riotous Attempt were intended, he ſhould by good Policy prevent it.

THE Mayor coming from the Cardinal's Houſe, about Four o'Clock in the Afternoon, on May-Eve, ſent for his Brethren to the Guildhall, yet was it almoſt Seven o'Clock before the Aſſembly was ſet. Upon Conference had of the Matter, ſome thought it neceſſary, that a ſubſtantial Watch ſhould be ſet, of honeſt Citizens, which might withſtand the Evil-Doers, if they went about any Miſ-rule: Others were of contrary Opinion, as rather thinking it beſt, that every Man ſhould be commanded to ſhut up his Doors, and to keep his Servants within. Before Eight o'Clock, the Recorder was ſent to the Cardinal with theſe Opinions, who, hearing the ſame, allowed the latter: And then the Recorder, and Sir Thomas More, late Under-Sheriff of LONDON, and of the King's Council, came back again to the Guildhall, half an Hour before Nine o'Clock, and there ſhewed the Pleaſure of the King's Council; whereupon every Alderman ſent to his Ward, that no Man, after Nine o'Clock, ſhould ſtir out of his Houſe, but keep his his Doors ſhut, and his Servants within, until Nine o'Clock in the Morning.

After this Command was given in the Evening, as Sir John Mundy, Alderman, came from his Ward, he found two young Men in Cheap, playing at the Bucklers, and a great many young Men looking on them, for the Command ſeemed to be ſcarcely publiſhed, he ordered them to leave off; and becauſe one of them asked why? he would have them ſent to the Compter: But the Prentices reſiſted the Alderman, taking the young Man from him, and cried, Prentices, Prentices, Clubs, Clubs; then out of every Door came Clubs, and other Weapons, ſo that the Alderman was put to Flight. Then more People aroſe out of every Quarter, and forth came Serving-men, Watermen, Courtiers, and others, ſo that by Eleven o'Clock there were in Cheap, 6 or 700; and out of St. Paul's Church-Yard came about 300. From all Places they gathered together, and broke open the Compter, took out the Priſoners, committed thither by the Lord Mayor for hurting the Strangers; they went alſo to Newgate, and took out Studley and Bets, committed for the like Cauſe. The Mayor and Sheriffs were preſent, and made Proclamation in the King's Name, but were not obeyed.

Being thus gathered in Crowds, they ran thro' St. Nicholas Shambles; and at St. Martin's Gate, Sir Thomas More, and others, met them, deſiring them to return to their Homes, which they had almoſt perſuaded them to do, when ſome within St. Martin's, throwing Sticks and Stones, hurt ſeveral who were with Sir Thomas More, particularly one Nicholas Dennis, a Serjeant at Arms, who being much wounded, cried out, Down with them; and then all the unruly Perſons ran to the Doors and Windows of the Houſes within St. Martin's, and ſpoiled all they found. After that they ran into Cornhill, and ſo on to a Houſe Eaſt of Leadenhall, called the Green-Gate, where dwelt one Mewtas, a Piccard, or Frenchman, with whom dwelt ſeveral other Frenchmen. Theſe they plunder'd, and if they had found Mewtas, they would have ſtruck off his Head.

They ran to other Places, and broke open and plunder'd the Houſes of Strangers, and continued thus 'till Three o'Clock in the Morning, at which Time they began to withdraw; but by the Way they were taken by the Mayor and others, and ſent to the Tower, Newgate, and the Compters, to the Number of 300.

The Cardinal, being advertiſed of this by Sir Thomas Parre, ſent him immediately to inform the King of it at Richmond; and he forthwith ſent to learn what Condition the City was in. Sir Roger Cholmeley, Lieutenant of the Tower, during the Time of this Buſineſs, ſhot off certain Pieces of Ordnance againſt the City, but did no great Hurt. About Five o'Clock in the Morning, the Earls of Shrewsbury, and Surrey, Thomas Dockery, Lord Prior of St. John's, George Nevill, Lord Arbergavenny, and others, came to LONDON, with what Forces they could get together; ſo did the Inns of Court: But before they came the Buſineſs was all over.

Then were the Priſoners examined, and the Sermon of Doctor Bell called in Queſtion, and he ſent to the Tower. A Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer was directed to the Duke of Norfolk, and other Lords, for the Puniſhment of this Inſurrection. The ſecond of May, the Commiſſioners, with the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Juſtices, went to Guildhall, where many of the Offenders were indicted, whereupon they were arraigned, and pleaded Not Guilty, having one Day given them 'till the 4th of May.

On which Day, the Lord Mayor, the Duke of Norfolk, the Earl of Surrey, and others, came to ſit in the Guildhall. The Duke of Norfolk entered the City with 1300 Men, and the Priſoners were brought thro' the Streets tied with Ropes; ſome Men, ſome Lads but of 13 or 14 Years old, to the Number of 278 Perſons. That Day, John Lincolne, and divers others were indicted, and the next Day 13 were adjudged to be Drawn, Hanged and Quartered; for Execution whereof 10 Pair of Gallows were ſet up in divers Places of the City, as at Aldgate, Blanchapleton, Graſs-ſtreet, Leadenhall, before each of the Compters, at Newgate, St. Martin's, at Alderſgate, and Biſhopſgate: And theſe Gallows were ſet upon Wheels to be removed from Street to Street, and from Door to Door, as the Priſoners were to be executed.

On the 7th of May, John Lincolne, one Shirwin, and two Brothers, named Betts, with divers others, were adjudged to dye. They were drawn on Hurdles to the Standard in Cheap, and Lincolne, was firſt executed; and as the others had the Ropes about their Necks there came a Command from the King to reſpite the Execution; and then the Priſoners were again ſent to Priſon, and the armed Men out of the City.

On the 13th of May the King came to Weſtminſter-Hall, and with him the Lord Cardinal, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earls of Shrewsbury, Eſſex, Wiltſhire, and Surrey, with many Lords and others of the King's Council; the Lord Mayor of LONDON, Aldermen, and other chief Citizens, were then in their beſt Liveries, by Nine o'Clock in the Morning. Then came in the Priſoners bound with Ropes in a Rank, one after another, in their Shirts, and every one had a Halter about his Neck, being in Number 400 Men, and 11 Women.

When they were thus come into the King's Preſence, the Cardinal greatly blamed the Mayor and Aldermen, for their Negligence, and declared to the Priſoners how juſtly they had deſerved to dye. Upon which all the Priſoners cried to the King for Mercy; and the Lords who were there beſought his Favour to them, at whoſe Requeſt the King pardoned them all. This general Pardon being pronounced, all the Priſoners ſhouted at once, and flung their Halters towards the Roof of the Hall. The Priſoners being diſmiſſed, the Gallows were taken down, and the Citizens took more Care of their Servants for the future, keeping for a long Time after a Watch in Armour, of the firſt of May at Night, in Remembrance of this Evil May-Day.

These great Mayings and May-games, with the Triumphant ſetting up the great Shaft, a principal May-pole in Cornhill, before the Pariſh Church of St. Andrew, thence called Underſhaft, were not ſo commonly uſed after this Inſurrection on May-Day, 1517, as before.

Of WATCHES in the City.

Curfew Bell.

William the Conqueror commanded, that in every Town and Village, a Bell ſhould be Nightly rung at Eight o'Clock, and that all People ſhould put out their Fire and Candle, and take their Reſt. Which Order was obſerved thro' this Realm, during his Reign, and the Reign of William Rufus: But Henry I. reſtoring to his Subjects the Uſe of Fire or Lights, as before, it followeth (by Reaſon of Wars within the Realm) that many Men alſo gave themſelves to Robbery and Murders in the Night; whereof Roger Hoveden writeth thus:

"In the Year 1175, a Council was kept at "Nottingham. In Time of which Council, a "Brother of the Earl Ferrers, being in the Night "privily ſlain at LONDON, and thrown out "of

" of his Inn into the Street, when the King " underſtood thereof, he ſwore, that he would " be revenged on the Citizens. For it was then " a common Practice in this City, that a Hun- " dred or more in a Company, Young and Old, " would make nightly Invaſions upon Houſes " of the Wealthy, with Intent to rob them, and " if they found any Man ſtirring in the City " within the Night, that were not of their Crew, " they would preſently murder him: Inſomuch " that when Night was come, no Man durſt " venture to walk in the Streets. When this " had happened long, it fortuned, that a Crew " of young and wealthy Citizens, aſſembling to- " gether in the Night, aſſaulted a Stone Houſe " of a certain rich Man, and breaking through " the Wall, the good Man of the Houſe, having " prepared himſelf with others in a Corner, when " he perceived one of the Thieves, named Andrew " Bucquint, lead the Way, with a burning " Brand in one Hand, and a Pot of Coals in the " other, which he aſſayed to kindle with the " Brand, he flew upon him, and ſmote off his " right Hand, and then with a loud Voice, cried, " Thieves: At hearing whereof, the Thieves " took to Flight, all, ſave him, who had loſt his " Hand, whom the good Man delivered, the " next Morning, to Richard de Lucie, the " King's Juſtice. This Thief, upon Warrant " of his Life, impeached his Confederates, of " whom many were taken, and many fled. " Among the reſt that were apprehended, a " certain Citizen of great Countenance, Credit, " and Wealth, named John Senex, who, not " being able to acquit himſelf by the Water- " Doom, (as that Law was then termed,) offered " the King 500 Pounds of Silver for his Life: " But, foraſmuch, as he was condemned by Judg- " ment of the Water, the King would not " take the Offer, but commanded him to be " hanged on the Gallows, which was done, and " then the City became more quiet for a long " Time after.

The Judgment of Fire and Water, called Ordeal.

In the Beginning of King Edward III's Reign, a dangerous Inſurrection happened of the Bakers, Tavern-Keepers, Millers, Cooks, Poulterers, Fiſhmongers, Butchers, and of divers other Trades and Myſteries: For ſuppreſſing and puniſhing of whom, the King ſent his Letters to the Mayor and Sheriffs. In which Letters their Miſdemeanors are thus deſcribed: " That they went " through the City by Night and by Day, with " Swords and Bucklers, and other Arms, either " by the Inſtigation of others, or their own Ma- " lice; and ſome they beat and miſ-uſed, and " committed other Wickedneſſes, and manifold " Enormities againſt the King's Peace, to the " no ſmall Damage and Grievance of his faithful " Subjects.

For a full Remedy of the Enormities in the Night, Henry III. in the Year 1253, commanded Watches in Cities, and Borough Towns to be kept, for the better obſerving of Peace and Quietneſs among his People.

And further, by the Advice of ſome of Savoy, he ordained, That if any Man chanced to be robbed, or by any Means damnified, by any Thief or Robber, he to whom the Charge of keeping that Country, City, or Borough chiefly appertained, where the Robbery was done, ſhould competently reſtore the Loſs, which was after the Cuſtom of Savoy.

In the Months of June and July, on the Vigils of Feſtival Days, and on the ſame Feſtival Days in the Evenings, after the Sun-ſetting, there were uſually made Bonefires in the Streets, every Man beſtowing Wood or Labour towards them. The wealthier Sort alſo, before their Doors, near to the ſaid Bonefires, would ſet out Tables, on the Vigils, furniſhed with ſweet Bread, and good Drink; and on the Feſtival Days, with Meat and Drink plentifully; whereunto they would invite their Neighbours and Paſſengers alſo to ſit and be merry with them in great Familiarity, praiſing God for his Benefits beſtowed on them. Theſe were called Bonefires, as well of good Amity amongſt Neighbours, that being before at Controverſy, were there by the Labour of others reconciled, and made of bitter Enemies loving Friends; as alſo for the Virtue that a great Fire hath, to purge the Infection of the Air. On the Vigil of St. John Baptiſt, and on St. Peter and Paul the Apoſtles, every Man's Door, being ſhadowed with green Birch, long Fennel, St. John's Wort, Orpin, white Lillies, and ſuch like, garniſhed upon with beautiful Flowers, had alſo Lamps of Glaſs, with Oil burning in them all the Night. Some hung out Branches of Iron curiouſly wrought, containing hundreds of Lamps lighted at once, which made a great Shew, namely in new Fiſh-ſtreet, Thames-ſtreet, &c.

Besides the Standing Watches, all in bright Harneſs, in every Ward and Street in this City and Suburbs, there was alſo a Marching Watch, that paſſed through the principal Streets thereof; to wit, from the little Conduit by Paul's Gate, through Weſt-Cheap, by the Stocks, through Cornhill, by Leadenhall to Aldgate; then back down Fenchurch-ſtreet, by Graſs Church, about Graſs Church Conduit, and into Cornhill, then into Weſt-Cheap again, and ſo broke up. The whole Way ordered for this Marching Watch extended to 3200 Taylor's Yards. For the Furniture whereof with Lights, there were appointed 700 Creſſets, 500 of them being found by the Companies, the other two by the Chamber of LONDON. Beſides which Lights every Conſtable in LONDON, above 240 in Number, had his Creſſet; the Charge of every Creſſet in Light was two Shillings and four Pence, and every Creſſet had two Men, one to bear, or hold it, another to carry a Bag, and ſerve it: So that the poor Men pertaining to the Creſſets taking Wages, were almoſt 2000 in Number, who had each a Straw Hat, with a Badge painted, and a Breakfaſt in the Morning.

There were alſo divers Pageants, Morris-Dancers, Conſtables; the one half, which was 120, on St. John's Eve, the other half on St. Peter's Eve, in bright Harneſs, ſome gilt, and every one a Jornet of Scarlet thereupon, and a Chain of Gold, his Henchman following him, his Minſtrels before him, and his Creſſet Light paſſing by him; the Waits of the City, the Mayor's Officers for his Guard before him, all in a Livery of Worſted or Sea Jackets, party-colour'd; the Mayor himſelf well mounted on Horſeback, the Sword-Bearer before him in Armour, well mounted alſo; the Mayor's Footmen, and the like Torch-Bearers about him, and two Henchmen, upon great Horſes following him. The Sheriffs Watches came one after the other in like Order, but not ſo large in Number as the Mayor's: For where the Mayor had, beſides his Giants, three Pageants, each of the Sheriffs had beſides their Giants, but two Pageants, each their Morris-Dancer, and one Henchman, their Officers in Jackets of Worſted, or Sea party-coloured, differing from the Mayor's, and from each other, but having harneſſed Men a great many, &c.

This Midſummer Watch was thus accuſtomed yearly, Time out of Mind, until the Year 1539, the 31ſt of Henry VIII. in which Year, on the 8th of May, a great Muſter was made by the Citizens at the Mile's-End, all in bright Harneſs, with Coats of white Silk or Cloth, and Chains of Gold, in three great Battels to the Number of 15000, which paſſed through LONDON to

Weſtminſter,

Weſtminſter, and ſo through the Sanctuary, and round about the Park of St. James, and returned home through Holbourn.

KING Henry then conſidering the great Charges of the Citizens, for the Furniture of this unuſual Muſter, forbad the Marching Watch, provided for at Midſummer for that Year; which being once laid down, was not raiſed again 'till the Year 1548, the 2d of Edward VI, Sir John Greſham then being Mayor, who cauſed the Marching Watch, both on the Eve of St. John Baptiſt, and of St. Peter the Apoſtle, to be revived and ſet forth in as comely Order as it had been accuſtomed; which Watch was alſo beautified by the Number of more than 300 Demilances and light Horſemen, prepared by the Citizens, to be ſent into Scotland, for reſcuing the Town of Haddington.

THIS Watch affording a great Cavalcade and Shew, brought Abundance of all Degrees of People together, and among the reſt, Rogues, Pick-Pockets, Quarrellers, Whoremongers, and Drunkards, which was found to have much Inconvenience: Therefore in the Year 1569, Sir Thomas Row, Mayor, with the univerſal Conſent of the Aldermen, agreed to lay it aſide for that Year, at leaſt, and in the Room thereof, to have a ſubſtantial Standing Watch, for the Safety and Preſervation of the City. And that chiefly, as was pretended, to prevent the ſpreading of the Plague into the Country, which might happen, the City being at this Time not quite free from it; and the Mayor being alſo ſo weak, that he could not go in his own Perſon, the Recorder acquainted the Queen and Council with this Reſolution; but it was ſignified back, that the Queen diſliked it, and that it was her Pleaſure to have a Marching Watch: Whereupon the Mayor ſent the Recorder to Sir William Cecil, the Secretary, earneſtly deſiring his Intereſt with the Lords, that this Order might take Place, at leaſt for that Year, upon the weighty Reaſons aforeſaid; and from thenceforward, this Marching Watch was laid aſide, nor was ever after uſed in the City, tho' ſome Attempts were made to revive it, particularly in 1585, when a grave Citizen wrote a Book in Commendation of it, and dedicated it to Sir Thomas Pulliſon, then Lord Mayor.

CHAP. XVI.

A Recital of many Worthy ACTS of the City and Citizens of LONDON.

"THE City of LONDON, ſaith William Fitz-Stephen, hath bred ſome "who have ſubdued many Kingdoms, "and alſo the Roman Empire. It brought forth "that noble Emperor Conſtantine, who gave the "City of Rome, and all the Imperial Enſigns, "to GOD, St. Peter, and Pope Sylveſter, to "whom he performed the Office of a Soldier, "chooſing rather to be called a Defender of the "Church than an Emperor. And leſt the Peace "of the Pope might be violated, by Occaſion "of his Secular Preſence, he retired from Rome, "and built the City of Bizantium, called from "him, Conſtantinople.

LONDON hath alſo brought forth Kings, and other illuſtrious Perſons, among whom, Fitz-Stephen names St. Thomas, as he calls him, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, "That glorious Mar-"tyr of CHRIST, than whom, he ſays, there "was none more innocent, nor by whom any "could be more bound for all the good Things "of the whole Latin World". Such was the Language of a bigotted Monk, in Praiſe of Thomas à Becket, who died indeed a Martyr for Church Authority, but had certainly no true Religion, but was the greateſt Traitor, and moſt turbulent Prieſt that ever got into Power.

IN the Year 1197, Walter Brune, a Citizen of LONDON, and Roſia his Wife, founded the Hoſpital of our Lady, called Domus Dei, or St. Mary the Spital, without Biſhopſgate in LONDON, an Houſe of ſuch Relief to the Needy, that there were found ſtanding in it, at the Surrender thereof, nineſcore Beds, well furniſhed, for the Reception of poor People.

IN the Year 1216, the Londoners ſending out a Navy, took 95 Ships of Pirates and Sea Robbers, beſides innumerable others that they drowned, which uſed to rob upon the River Thames.

IN the Year 1247, Simon Fitz-Mary, one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, founded the Hoſpital of St. Mary, called Bethlem, alſo without Biſhopſgate.

IN the Year 1283, Henry Wallis, then Mayor, builded the Tun upon Cornhill, to be a Priſon for Night-Walkers; and a Market-Houſe, called the Stocks, both for Fiſh and Fleſh, ſtanding in the midſt of the City. He alſo builded divers Houſes on the Weſt and North Side of St. Paul's Church-Yard, the Profits of all which Buildings are to the Maintenance of London Bridge.

IN the Year 1332, William Elſing, Mercer of LONDON, founded Elſing Spital, within Cripplegate, for Suſtentation of an hundred poor blind Men; and became himſelf the firſt Prior of that Hoſpital.

SIR John Poultney, Draper, four Times Mayor, 1337, builded a Chapel in St. Paul's Church, wherein he was buried. He founded a College in the Pariſh Church of St. Laurence, called Poultney. He built the Church called Little Alhallows in Thames-ſtreet, and the Carmelite Fryars Church in Coventry; he gave Relief to Priſoners in Newgate, and the Fleet, and ten Shillings a Year to St. Giles's Hoſpital, by Holbourn, for ever.

King Edward III, requires the Citizens to take Knighthood.

THE Wealth of the Citizens had made them once like to have filled the City with Knights; King Edward III, Anno 1344, requiring all them who had 40 l. per Annum, to take Knighthood upon them, within about ſix Weeks after. And of this, publick Proclamation was made in LONDON by the Sheriffs, that ſuch as were concerned ſhould take Notice of it.

AND this the King required, either for the Honour of the City, or perhaps to get Money out of the wealthier Sort; who, as it appeared by the Sequel, had no Inclination to this Honour, nor the Conſequences of it.

THIS Command of the King was grounded upon a Statute made in the firſt Year of King Edward II, whereby it was ordered, That all ſuch as ought to be Knights, that is, that had 20 l. yearly in Fee, or for Term of Life, ſhould take the Arms of the Knight upon him.

THE ſaid King's Brief to the Sheriffs of LONDON, for this Purpoſe, was as followeth:

EDWARDUS, &c. Vicecomitibus, &c.

i. e. " EDWARD, &c. to the Sheriffs of " LONDON, Greeting.

" WE Command, firmly enjoining you, That " in the City aforeſaid, when you ſhall think con- " venient, ye cauſe it publickly to be proclaim- " ed, That all who have 40 l. of Land, or Rent, " as they have Revenue by Year, and have held " them for three whole Years, and are not " Knights, take upon them the Order of * Auguſt 10. " Knighthood, about the Feaſt of St. * Laurence " next, or at moſt on the Feaſt, upon Danger " which followeth. And that ye diligently en- " quire of the Names of thoſe who have 40 l. " of Land or Rents per Annum, in the ſaid Ci- " ty: And that ye certify Us of thoſe Names, " in our Chancery, before the foreſaid Feaſt. " And by no means omit ye this.

" Witneſs myſelf at Weſtminſter, the 30th " Day of June; in the Year of our Reign " over England the 18th; but of our Reign " over France, the 5th.

To which Brief, the Sheriffs returned this Anſwer.

Proclamari fecimus, &c.

i. e. " WE have cauſed to be proclaimed " throughout our whole Bailiffwick, all the Ar- " ticles contained in the Brief, as it is com- " manded in the ſame. We have cauſed alſo In- " quiſition to be made, by the Oath of honeſt " and lawful Men of our ſaid Bailiffwick, if any " have 40 l. of Land, or Rent, by Year, in our " ſaid Bailiffwick, and have held them for three " whole Years; and of thoſe that hold a Part in " our Bailiffwick, and a Part elſewhere, of the " ſaid Value: By whoſe Oath we find, that all " the Lands, and Rents, in the ſaid City, are " held of the Lord the King in Capite, as Free " Burgage in Fee Farm. Nor is there any that " hath 40 l. of Land, or Rent, in the ſame, by " the Year certain: Becauſe the Lands in the " ſaid City, ſome are Let for more, ſome for " leſs; and often ſtand empty, and are not Let: " Yet frequently have divers Burthens, and re- " quire Repairs and Amendments. And for " thoſe Cauſes, and the Burning of Houſes, and " divers other Dangers happening, the Certain- " ty of the true Value of them cannot be known. " And as to the Lands, and Rents, which the " Citizens have out of our Bailiffwick, the Sworn " Men ſay, That they know nothing of them by " the Year, nor can enquire.

THESE Diminutions and Abatements of the Eſtates of the Citizens, were given in (as it ſeems) with reſpect to the Exceptions in the aforeſaid Statute of 1 Edward II, wherein ſuch were excuſed from Knighthood, who had held their Lands but a ſmall Time, or who were bound in certain Debts to the Exchequer, to be paid yearly out of their Lands; and that held in Manors, in antient Demeſne of the Crown, as a Sokeman; and that muſt give Tallage, when the King's Demeſnes were tallied; and ſuch as held Burgage Lands, altho' they did amount to 20 l. yearly.

SUCH another Writ came from that King [*E.*III.] about twelve Years after, to the Sheriffs, Walter Forſter, and Thomas de Brandon, the firſt of Auguſt, the 30th of that King's Reign over England, but of France the 17th, and the Sheriffs Return was the ſame.

This moſt noble Citizen (ſaith Thomas Walſingham) that had travelled for the Commodity of the whole Realm, more than all other of his Time, had often relieved the King by lending him great Sums of Money, and others, deceaſed in the Year 1384, after he had aſſured Lands to the City, for the Relief of 13 poor People for ever.

IN the Year 1381, William Walworth, then Mayor, a moſt provident, valiant, and learned Citizen, did, by his Arreſt of Wat Tylar (a preſumptious Rebel, upon whom no Man durſt lay Hands) deliver the King and Kingdom from the Danger of moſt wicked Traitors, and was for his Service Knighted in the Field, as before hath been related.

Sir Thomas White, Lord Mayor of this Honourable City, Anno 1554, and a worthy Brother likewiſe of the Merchant-Taylors Society, being a Lover of Learning, and an earneſt Furtherer thereof, firſt purchaſed the Hall in Oxford, called Gloceſter Hall, for Scholars and Students to receive there the Benefits of Learning: But his private Thoughts very often ſolliciting him, That he ſhould (in Time) meet with a Place where two Elms grew, and that there his further Purpoſe ſhould take Effect; at length he found out the Place, where (at his own Coſt and Expences) he founded the famous College, called St. John Baptiſt College, and where theſe two Elms (it is ſaid) are yet ſtanding; endowing it with ſuch liberal Gifts, Lands, and Revenues, as would require too much Time here to be remembred or ſet down, Beside his Proviſion for Learning in this worthy Place, he erected other Schools, as at Briſtol, Reading, and a College at Higham Ferries: More, he gave to the City of Briſtol the Sum of 2000 l. to purchaſe Lands, amounting to the yearly Value of 120 l. The Mayor and Citizens paying therefore yearly 100 l. 800 l. to be lent to ſixteen poor Clothiers, 50 l. each Man, for the Space of ten Years, ſufficient Security being given by them for the ſame: Afterwards that 800 l. was to paſs to other ſixteen poor Clothiers, according to the Direction of them put in Truſt. 200 l. beſides, was reſerved for Proviſion, for Corn, and needful Occaſions for the Poor, in the Order and Care of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Then, according to his Will, (which remaineth yet to be ſeen) out of this bountiful Gift to Briſtol, theſe memorable Branches and Benevolences were (by himſelf) deviſed and thus ordered, beginning in the Year 1577, and ſo thence forward they went on according to his own Direction:

Then, on the Feaſt of St. Bartholomew, was brought to the Merchant-Taylors Hall 104 l. The 100 l. to be lent (for ten Years Space) to four poor young Men in the City of York, Freemen and Inhabitants, being Clothiers; and the 4 l. Overplus, to be employed about the Charges and Pains, that no Man (uſed in the Buſineſs) might receive Diſcontentment.

Then in 1578, the like Sum was to be delivered thence to Canterbury; and ſo, thence forward, the ſame Sums (yearly) to the Cities and Towns following, orderly, viz.

1579, To Reading,	1589, To Winchester.
1580, The Merchant Taylors themſelves.	1590, Oxford.
	1591, Hereford.
	1592, Cambridge.
1581, Gloceſter.	1593, Shrewsbury.
1582, Worceſter.	1594, Lynn.
1583, Exeter.	1595, Bath.
1584, Salisbury.	1596, Derby.
1585, Weſt Cheſter.	1597, Ipſwich.
1586, Norwich.	1598, Colcheſter.
1587, Southampton.	1599, Newcaſtle.
1588, Lincoln.

This Sum of 104 l. paſſing thus yearly to the afore-named Places, was order'd to take Beginning again at the City of York, and ſo ſucceſſively, for ever, to the Towns before-named; with great Care and Obſervance in them to whom it belongeth, that the Deed may not be abuſed, nor poor Mens Right injured.

He gave to the City of Coventry 1400 l. therewith to purchaſe Lands, to the annual Value of 70 l. Twelve aged, poor Inhabitants of that City, were to have, in free Alms, 24 l. each Man 40 s. yearly, on the 11th Day of March, or within ſix Days after. Four poor young Men alſo were to have 40 l. lent them, in free Loan, 10 l. to each Man, and for nine Years Space, upon ſufficient Security given: And their Turns being thus ſerved, then four other poor young Men were to have the like Sums, and for like Limitation: And ſo from nine Years to nine Years for ever.

Afterwards it was ordered, in free Loan, to two poor Men of the ſame City, and laſtly to one. In which Manner, according to the ſeveral Limitations, it doth yet, and doubtleſs will always continue.

Also the ſame Sum was appointed to one young Man in Northampton, for nine Years, in free Loan; next to one in the City of Leiceſter; thirdly, to one in Nottingham; fourthly, to one in Warwick; and for the like Time. Then returning again to Coventry for one Year, it re-paſſeth to the ſaid Towns again, each after the other, in like Manner for ever.

And leſt his worthy Intent ſhou'd fail in the Continuance, he enlarged his firſt Gift to Coventry, of 1400 l. to 2000 l. and 60 l. to be employed as hath been mentioned; 40 l. being yearly paid out of it to St. John Baptiſt College in Oxford; and Allowances alſo by himſelf given in each Place, that Bonds ſhould be made, without any Charge to the Receiver.

Edward Hall, Gentleman, of Gray's Inn, a Citizen by Birth and Office, as Common Serjeant of LONDON, and one of the Judges in the Sheriffs Court: He wrote and publiſhed a famous and eloquent Chronicle, entitled, The Uniting of the two Noble Families, Lancaſter and York.

Richard Hills, Merchant-Taylor, 1560, gave 500 l. towards the Purchaſe of an Houſe, called The Manor of the Roſe; wherein the Merchant-Taylors founded their Free School in LONDON. He alſo gave to the ſaid Merchant-Taylors, one Plat of Ground, with certain ſmall Cottages on the Tower-Hill, where he built Alms-Houſes for fourteen ſole Women.

About the ſame Time, Will. Lambert, Eſq; of the Worſhipful Company of Drapers, born in LONDON, a Juſtice of Peace in Kent, founded a College for the Poor in Eaſt Greenwich, which he named after Queen Elizabeth.

William Harper, Merchant-Taylor, Mayor 1562, founded a Free-School in the Town of Bedford, where he was born.

Sir Thomas Greſham, Mercer, 1566, built the Royal Exchange in LONDON; and by his Teſtament left his Dwelling-Houſe in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet for a College, as mentioned Chap. XI. allowing handſome Stipends to the Readers, and certain Alms-Houſes for the Poor.

This Gentleman's Name will always be remember'd with Honour, not only for the Uſe he made of his own great Riches, but for ſupporting the Honour and Credit of his Miſtreſs, Queen Elizabeth, to whom he was Agent, by the prudent Advice he gave her in her Negotiations with Merchants abroad. For when the Queen, and her Treaſurer, were in a great Plunge, owing much Money, and having Occaſion for more, and not knowing how to have it but from the rich Bankers of Antwerp; and all Correſpondence with that City being broke off, by the Duke D'Alva's Government of the Low Countries, and the Engliſh therefore carrying away their Effects and Trade to Hamburgh, Secretary Cecil, who then managed the Exchequer, very much feared that the Merchants would not have Money enough to carry on their Trade, as they would have had if all were open with Antwerp; and the Money which the Queen owed to the Merchants, and to her Creditors abroad, was to be repaid out of the Cuſtoms upon Cloth, which ſhe feared would fall ſhort if the Trade was removed to a new Place. Theſe Doubts the Secretary imparted to Sir Thomas Greſham, who knowing well the State of Trade, and of the Merchants, told the Secretary, that in his Opinion he need make no Difficulty of this Matter, viz. the Queen's paying her Creditors, for if ſhe ſaw her Merchants well paid in LONDON, their firſt Payment, which was half her Debt to them, by that Time the other Part was due they would have Plenty of Money, both at Hamburgh and here.

Theſe Doubts the Secretary imparted to Sir Thomas Greſham, who knowing well the State

William Patten, Gentleman, a Citizen by Birth, and Cuſtomer of LONDON Port Outward, Juſtice of Peace in Middleſex, repaired, or rather new built, the Pariſh Church of Stoken Wenton.

SIR Thomas Rowe, Knight, Lord Mayor of the City of LONDON, in 1568, a worthy Brother alſo of the Merchant-Taylors Company; beſide his charitable Coſt and Charges in building the new Church-Yard in Bethlem, containing near one Acre of Ground, and encloſed with a Wall of Brick; and a Sermon to be preached every Whit-Sunday in the Morning, in the Preſence of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen; as alſo giving 100 l. to be lent to eight poor Men; gave to the Merchant-Taylors, Lands, or Tenements, out of them to be given 40 l. yearly, to maintain ten poor Men for ever; ſuch as were not Brethren of his own Society, but choſen out of five ſeveral Companies, viz. Clothworkers, Armourers, Carpenters, Tylers, and Plaiſterers: As conſidering, that by over-toiling, Labour, Dangers, Falls, Bruiſes, and ſuch like Inconveniences, they were ſooneſt like to become Impotent, and unable to help or maintain themſelves. Therefore, to each of theſe 10 Men, he freely gave the Sum of 4 l. Quarterly to be paid them at Merchant-Taylors Hall, during their Lives: And then to ſucceed to other Men in the ſame Companies, according to the due Conſideration of juſt Cauſe, and moſt Neceſſity.

ABOUT the Year 1570, Margaret Dan, Widow of — Dan, late one of the Sheriffs of LONDON, gave by her Laſt Teſtament more than 2000 l. to Charitable Acts.

AND about the Year 1577, Dame Mary Ramſey, Wife to Sir Thomas Ramſey, being ſeized of Lands, in Fee Simple of her Inheritance, to the yearly Value of 243 l. by his Conſent, gave the ſame to Chriſt's Hoſpital, towards the Relief of the poor Children there, as appeareth by Monuments erected in Chriſt's Hoſpital: Which Gift ſhe afterwards, in her Widowhood, confirmed, and greatly augmented. A Particular of the Charities of theſe two laſt, ſhall be expreſſed more largely afterwards.

Ambroſe Nicholas, Salter, Mayor 1576, founded 12 Alms-Houſes in Monkſwell-Street, near Cripplegate, wherein he placed 12 poor People, having each of them 7 d. a Week, and once every Year, five Sacks of Coals, and one Quarter of a Hundred Faggots, all of his Gift for ever.

William Lamb, Eſq; (ſometime a Gentleman of the Chapel to King Henry VIII. and in great Favour with him) was alſo a free Brother of the worſhipful Company of Clothworkers, and a kind, loving Citizen to the City of LONDON.

OUT of his Love to Learning and Scholars, in the Town of Sutton Valens, in Kent, where he was born, at his own proper Coſt and Charges, he erected a Free Grammar-School for the Education and Inſtruction of Youth, in the Fear of GOD, good Manners, Knowledge and Underſtanding: Allowing yearly to the Maſter, 20 l. and 10 l. yearly to the Uſher from Time to Time, as either Place ſhall be ſupplied by Succeſſion, and for their yearly Stipends or perpetual Penſions.

IN the ſame Town of Sutton alſo, for the Relief of poor People, he cauſed to be built ſix Alms-Houſes, having an Orchard and Gardens, and the Sum of 10 l. yearly paid them.

AT Maidſtone likewiſe in Kent, he hath given 10 l. yearly to the Free School for ever, with this ſpecial Caution, That needy Mens Children be preferred only to the enjoying of this Benefit.

THE Gentleman foreſeeing in his Life-Time, the Decay of ſundry Trades and Occupations, to the utter Undoing of very many, eſpecially poor Clothiers, whoſe Impoveriſhing deſerved greatly to be pitied, freely gave to the poor Clothiers in Suffolk, in Bridgenorth, and in Ludlow in Shropſhire, 300 l. to de paid by even Portions. To each ſeveral Towns of the ſaid Counties, 100 l. a-piece, for their Support and Maintenance at their Work or Occupation.

AND as his Charity extended itſelf thus liberally abroad in the Country, ſo did the City of LONDON likewiſe taſte thereof, not ſparingly. For near unto Holbourn, he founded a Conduit, and a Standard with a Cock at Holbourn-Bridge, to convey thence the Waſte. Theſe were begun the 26th Day of March 1577, and the Water carried along in Pipes of Lead, more than 2000 Yards, all at his own Coſt and Charges, amounting to the Sum of 1500 l. and the Work fully finiſhed the 24th of Auguſt in the ſame Year.

MOREOVER, he gave to poor Women, ſuch as were willing to take Pains, 120 Pails, therewith to carry and ſerve Water.

BEING a Member (as already hath been ſaid) of the Clothworkers Company, and to ſhew that he was not unmindful of them, he gave them his Dwelling-Houſe in LONDON, with other Lands and Tenements, to the Value of 30 l. yearly, by them to be thus beſtowed, to wit, For the Hiring of a Miniſter to read Divine Service thrice every Week, as Sundays, Wedneſdays, and Fridays, throughout the Year in the Chapel, or Church belonging to his Houſe, called by the Name of St. James, in the Wall by Cripplegate, and for four Sermons there to be preached, a competent Allowance for each: And, alſo, out of the 30 l. yearly, it is provided, That a Deduction be made by the ſaid Clothworkers, for apparelling of 12 Men, and as many Women, in Form as followeth.

TO every of the 12 Men, a Frize Gown, one Lockram Shirt, and a good ſtrong Pair of Winter Shoes.

TO the 12 Women, likewiſe a Frize Gown, a Lockram Smock, and a good Pair of Winter Shoes, all ready made for their Wearing.

ALWAYS remembred, that they be Perſons, both poor and honeſt, to whom this charitable Deed is to be extended: And this is yearly done on the firſt of October.

TO the Pariſh Church of St. Giles without Cripplegate, he gave 15 l. towards the Bells and Chimes, intending a further Liberality thereto, if they had taken due Time.

TO the Worſhipful Company of Stationers, he gave a Legacy of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. for perpetual Relief of the Poor in the Pariſh Church of St. Faith, under Paul's, namely, To 12 poor People, Twelve-pence in Money among them, and Twelve-pence in Bread every Friday throughout the Year.

TO Chriſt's Hoſpital in LONDON, toward the bringing up of poor Mens Children, he hath given 6 l. yearly for ever; and 100 l. in ready Money together therewith to purchaſe Lands, that their Relief (by the Revenues of the ſame) might be perpetual.

TO St. Thomas's Spital, or Hoſpital, in Southwark, towards the Succour of the Sick and Diſeaſed, he gave 4 l. yearly for ever.

AN Hundred Pounds he intended to the Hoſpital called the Savoy, but by Reaſon that ſuch

Agreement

Agreement could not be made as he thought convenient, his Contribution that Way (much againſt his Mind) went not forward.

For the Relief of poor Priſoners in the two Compters, Newgate, Ludgate, the Marſhalſea, the King's-Bench, and the White Lion, he dealt very bountifully and diſcreetly, giving unto the two Compters 6*l.* a-piece, and to be paid unto them by 20*s.* each Month: To the other Priſons afore-mentioned, ſix Mattreſſes a-piece; the whole Number being two Dozen and a half.

He was not unmindful of poor Maids Marriages, and gave 20*l.* to be equally divided among forty, by equal Portions of 10*s.* a-piece; but with this Proviſo, that thoſe poor Maids to be married, ſhould be of good Name and Fame.

Sir Thomas Offley, Merchant-Taylor, Mayor, deceaſed 1580, appointed by his Teſtament the half of his Goods, and 200 l. deducted out of the other half, given to his Son Henry, to be given and beſtowed in Deeds of Charity by his Executors, according to his Confidence and Truſt in them.

In the Year 1581, Sir James Harvey was Mayor. In his Time were great Deceits, by reaſon of falſe Weights; and that not only within the City of LONDON, but in other Cities and Places within the Realm. The Reaſon whereof was, becauſe the true Standard, made according to the Statute for the Sizing of all Weights, could not be found. This was heretofore complained of to the Lord Treaſurer; who took ſome Care for the Reformation thereof: But yet the Abuſe continued. This Mayor therefore wrote to the ſaid Lord Treaſurer, to this Purport, "That, for that he was this Year "charged in Conſcience, by reaſon of his Office "and Oath taken, to ſee that Falſhood and "Deceit puniſhed, he thought it his Duty, "not only to remember his Lordſhip thereof, "but to beſeech him, that he would give him "his favourable Help and Advice, what Order, "or Courſe, to take in the City, for the Reformation thereof.

Sir Thomas Blanke, a Merchant, and Citizen born; Mayor the next Year, viz. 1582, which being a Year of Plague in the City, the Lord Treaſurer had ſent an Order to the ſaid Mayor, to make a Catalogue of all the Victualling Houſes in LONDON that were infected; which Catalogue was to be ſet up publickly to be read, to the End that all Strangers, that reſorted to LONDON about their Occaſions, might avoid Setting up, or Lodging at thoſe Houſes, to prevent their carrying Infection into the Country; and ſo to do it, from two Months to two Months. This Sir Thomas Blanke diligently did, and employing an expert Perſon to draw up this Catalogue, he had ſpecial Regard to two Things; the one, to give ſuch plain Deſcriptions and Notes of the Streets and Places as might ſerve for eaſy Notice to ſuch as repaired to the City; the other, the Liſt to be ſo brief and contracted as it might be brought into leſs than one Side of a Sheet, to be fixed in Places convenient.

The Mayor prayed the ſaid Lord, to conſider of the proper Places which he thought good to note, having Reſpect to Weſtminſter, and the Way thereto out of the Liberties, and the Entrance always into the City.

The Mayor put him alſo in Mind, How in Term Time, uſually, all the Houſes in Fleet-ſtreet, and the Streets and Lanes adjoining, as alſo without Temple-Bar, did uſe Lodging, Victualling and Letting out of Chambers: Leaving to his Lordſhip's Conſideration, Whether ſuch Houſes, tho' they were not Victuallers, ſhould not be likewiſe noted, if they had been infected within the Space of two Months.

Then he thanked his Lordſhip for his honourable and loving Care of the City, in the Matter of the Infection, and the Repair of the Queen's Subjects thither. And for his own Part, he promiſed, he would not fail in Diligence, according to his Direction.

And whereas upon a Lord's Day, a great Number of People, being met for Sport at Paris Garden, all the Scaffolds fell down at once, to the ſlaying and wounding of a great many People; this Mayor piouſly looked upon it as a Judgment of God, for Breach of the Lord's Day; and wrote to the Lord Treaſurer to this Tenor: "That it "gave great Occaſion to acknowledge the Hand "of God, for ſuch Abuſe of his Sabbath Day; "and moved him in Conſcience to beſeech his "Lordſhip, to give Order for Redreſs of ſuch "Contempt of God's Service. And that he had "for that End treated with ſome Juſtices of Peace "of that County, who ſhewed themſelves to "have very good Zeal, but alledged Want of "Commiſſion; which they humbly referred to his "Honourable Wiſdom.

In his Mayoralty, he, with his Brethren the Aldermen, and Common Council, entered upon the Buſineſs of eſtabliſhing Orders, for the true and upright Uſe of her Majeſty's Beam, with the Weights thereto belonging; which, upon Continuance, did daily wear, and needed to be renewed and ſeized from Time to Time: And for this End, they were humble Suitors to him, to have in Remembrance the great Want the City and the whole Realm found, for Lack of Order to ſize Weights, whereby the Commonweal, as he wrote, took Detriment, and private Men preſumed (without Order) to ſell and uſe unlawful Weights, both in the City and in the Country, that were accuſtomed to their Aſſizing from LONDON: And this Opportunity the ſaid Mayor took, becauſe the latter Verdict, touching Weights, was long ſince delivered before the Treaſurer, and the reſt of the Court of Exchequer.

IN the Year 1588, Sir Martin Calthorp was Mayor. Then the Queen had a Loan from the City, by reaſon of her extraordinary Charges ſhe had been at in Preparation againſt the Spaniard, who attempted the Invaſion of England this Year. Every Company was taxed new, by Way of Loan, to the Amount of 20,000 l. according to a Direction from the Lord Treaſurer to the Lord Mayor.

IN November was paid to the Lord Treaſurer hereupon, 17952 l. 10 s. But many of the Citizens wilfully abſented themſelves, and many had wholly left the City, and betaken themſelves into to the Country; whereby the Loan amounted not to the Sum of 20000 l. which the commendable Zeal of the Mayor for the Queen, and for the City's Credit, did endeavour to raiſe it unto. He, and Sir George Bond, Alderman, ſent the ſeveral Sums that each ſtood charged with unto the ſaid Loan, with their Names and Dwellings; and acquainted the Treaſurer how effectually this Buſineſs had been travailed in: And he wrote, That he was very ſorry that he ſhould be occaſioned, by the Backwardneſs of ſome, to give ſo hard an Information unto his Lordſhip, againſt any that would be accounted good Citizens: But in reſpect of his Duty, he ſaid, He could do no leſs, but to lay the Fault and Blame on ſuch as committed the ſame: And ſo left it to his Lordſhip, to take ſome Courſe with thoſe Citizens.

THE Queen had a Loan the ſame Year from the City, and chiefly from the Members of the 12 Companies, who raiſed 51900 l. Theſe following lowing lent 1000 l. a-piece, Sir Thomas Ramsey, Sir Wolstan Dixie, Thomas Smith, Customer, and John Spencer, Alderman; the rest subscribed, some 500 l. some 300, some 200, none under one hundred.

The next Year [1589] there was another Loan of 15000 l. for which the Queen paid 10 per Cent. And from these Supplies of Money afforded from the City, it seems to have truly the Denomination of the Chamber of the Kings of England: And thus, from its inexhaustible Wealth, and the good Service and Use her Princes have made of it, her Citizens have received great Honour.

One good Service of this City to their Princes, has been lending them Money upon extraordinary Emergencies, who had great and dangerous Enemies to encounter and watch against.

King Charles I. entertained by the City of LONDON.

In this Year [1641] on the 25th of November, the City gave a moſt ſplendid and magnificent Entertainment to King Charles I. upon his ſafe and happy Return from Scotland, when he dined at Guildhall: The Triumphant Manner and Order whereof, and the Lord Mayor's meeting and receiving his Majeſty, for an Honourable Remembrance of the City's Loyalty, was as follows:

The Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Sir Richard Gurney, and the reſt of the grave Senate of the City of LONDON, the Aldermen, his Brethren, being advertiſed that his Majeſty, in his happy Return from Scotland, would graciouſly condeſcend to paſs through the City, with his Royal Conſort, the Queen, the Prince, and other of the Princely Iſſue, at a Court amongſt themſelves, took into their Conſideration, how to give Entertainment fit for his Majeſty's gracious Acceptance; and thereupon they ſelected a Committee of ſix Aldermen, and 12 Commoners, who ſhould meet, conſult, and order what they in their Diſcretion ſhould think fit to conduce to the Honour of the City, and the Acceptance of his Majeſty. Yet, before theſe Committees ſhould effect any Thing, it was thought neceſſary to aſſemble a Common Council, as well to underſtand the Affection of the Commons, as to confirm thoſe Committees choſen.

The Matter being propounded there, was entertained with an unanimous Conſent, and general Approbation, and the above-mentioned Committees were by the Court confirmed, who thereupon met daily, bending all their Thoughts how to ſatisfy the Truſt repoſed in them, and calling before them the Officers of the City, and directed them what they ſhould do, charging them to leave nothing undone, which either Art, Labour, or Coſt, in ſo ſhort a Time could compaſs.

More particularly in the firſt Place their eſpecial Care was to give Order, as well to the Steward, Cook, Butler, and Confectioner, to make make ſpeedy Proviſion of all Things, fit for the Royal Feaſting of their Majeſties, and their Princely Train, as to the Officers of the City Works, that the Guildhall might be prepared, and made ready for the due and reſpectful receiving of them.

THE next was, that Precepts might be ſpeedily directed to the ſeveral Societies and Companies of the City, that againſt the Day their Majeſties ſhould come, there ſhould be ſome of the prime Men choſen out of the Liveries, that ſhould be in Readineſs to attend the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, in their beſt Array (either Velvet, Pluſh, or Sattin) and Chains of Gold, upon good Horſes, well appointed, and each Rider to have a Footman to attend him, to meet their Majeſties, and to conduct them firſt to Guildhall, and afterwards to his Majeſty's Royal Palace of Whitehall: As alſo, that out of the Reſidue of their Companies, ſome ſhould be appointed to wait in their ſeveral Standings in their Liveries, from their Majeſties Entrance into the City, to Temple-Bar. To which Purpoſe the Committee gave Orders and Directions, where every ſeveral Companies Standings ſhould be ſet up. And laſtly, That others ſhould be nominated to attend in the Guildhall upon their Majeſties in their Liveries and Foins likewiſe, from the Time of their coming thither, to their Departure thence.

ANOTHER Care of the Committee was, that (the Way from Kingsland to Shoreditch being impaſſable for their Majeſties, in Regard of the Depth and Foulneſs of it) a Way might be prepared from thence to that Place of the City, where their Majeſties ſhould enter, as might not only be fair and clean, but as pleaſant alſo, and delightful, as the Seaſon of the Year would permit; and that the Streets, all the Way they ſhould paſs, might be paved, where Need was, and made ſweet and clean.

AND becauſe ſome ſeditious Libels were at that Time diſperſed, (which bred a panick Fear in ſome) Order was likewiſe taken, that there ſhould be two Companies of the City's Train'd Bands, placed in ſeveral Parts of the City, upon that Day; as alſo, that at every Door, a Man ſhould be placed, ſufficiently appointed, to be ready upon all Occaſions, to appeaſe any Diſorders.

LASTLY, Out of the ſaid Committee, two of the City Captains were deſigned, as Chief Marſhals for the Day; to have the Command over the other three Marſhals, that were Officers of the Chamber; and to Order, Direct, and Marſhal the Horſemen. And alſo four other of the Committee were appointed, as Comptrollers of the Houſe, to whom all inferior Officers ſhould have Recourſe upon any Occaſion, and to direct and order the Liveries, which were to attend upon their Majeſties Service; and generally to diſpoſe all other Things conducing to the Entertainment.

NOW for the Entertainment itſelf. Upon Thurſday the ſaid 25th of Novemb. the Knights of the Grey Cloak, Mr. Recorder, and the reſt of the Aldermen, the City Council, and Chief Officers, as Town-Clerk, Common Serjeant, and Remembrancer, attended the Lord Mayor, at his Lordſhip's Houſe in the Old Jury, by Eight of the Clock in the Morning, from whence they advanced thro' the City to Moorgate, in this Manner.

THE Lord Mayor having the Sword-Bearer, and the two Mace-Bearers before him, on Horſeback, and on Foot-Cloths, and two Footmen in Black Velvet Coats, on each Side one, his Lordſhip wearing a Gown of Crimſon Velvet, and a Collar of SS, rode in the Front, the Knights aforenamed, Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen following, according to their Seniority, two by two in Scarlet Gowns, attended by two Footmen a-piece, ſuited in the City Colours, each of which Footmen being appointed to carry a Truncheon in his Hand, for the Forenoon, and two Torches for the Afternoon: Next to them followed the City Council and Chief Officers, in Black Gowns upon Foot-Cloths, each of them having a Footman going by them, ſuited and fitted as aforeſaid.

IN this Equipage they paſſed through the City, from his Lordſhip's Houſe to Moorfields, where there waited in a Readineſs to attend his Lordſhip and the Service, about five hundred Horſemen, ſelected out of the Liveries of the ſeveral Companies of the City, being Maſters, Wardens, and prime Men of each Company, in Velvet, or Pluſh Coats, and Suits, with Chains of Gold, being well Horſed, and gallantly furniſhed, every Company having a Horſeman in the Front, carrying a Pendant with that Company's Arms to which he did belong (for Diſtinction ſake) and a Footman to attend each Horſeman of the Livery, with Truncheons and Torches, as before: Both Horſemen with the Pendants, and Footmen being ſuited Cap-a-pee, with the Companies Colours on which they waited. There were alſo fourteen Trumpeters, with Trumpets, Banners, and Scarfs, who were placed two between every hundred of the Horſe, and four at the Head of the Troop.

THE Lord Mayor being thus attended, rode on with the Knights, Mr. Recorder, the Aldermen, City Council, and Chief Officers, as before; and after them five hundred Horſemen, according to the ſeveral Ranks of the Companies, the Lord Mayor's Company, viz. the Cloth-workers, being foremoſt; then the Mercers, and the reſt according to their Order.

THEY all advanced, in a handſome Manner, through the Fields, (the Banks being caſt down, and Bridges of fourteen Feet wide, being made over the Ditches, for better and more ſecure Paſſage) till they came beyond Baumes, (a retiring Houſe of Sir George Whitmore's) in the Fields next adjoining to Kingsland. The Night before being Rainy, and the Morning Gloomy and Cloudy, the Lord Mayor commanded his Tent to be pitched in the Field, where his Lordſhip, the Knights, Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen, were to attend their Majeſties. In the Tent were Seats and Forms, where his Lordſhip, and ſome of the Nobility repoſed themſelves till their Majeſties came.

IN the mean Time, the two Sheriffs of LONDON and Middleſex (George Garret, and George Clark) attended by ſeventy two Men in Scarlet Cloaks, trimmed with Silver Lace, (the Colours of the City) with Javelins and Feathers, and four Trumpeters, rode as far as Stamford-Hill, between Newington and Tottenham, (where their Majeſties lay the Night before) who, after they had done their reſpective Duties, and kiſſed their Majeſties Hands, conducted them to the Field, where the Lord Mayor, the Nobility, and Aldermen waited for them.

HIS Majeſty came into the Field about 10 o'Clock, in a Coach, he ſitting on the right Side of it, and her Majeſty on his right Hand, the Prince, the Duke of York, and the Princeſs Mary, being within the Coach, and the Prince Elector Palatine, and the Dutcheſs of Richmond, ſitting on the other Side; their Majeſties being attended by divers Lords and Ladies.

WHEN the Coach came againſt the Lord Mayor's Tent, his Majeſty cauſed it to ſtay, where divers of the Nobility that had attended his coming thither, preſented themſelves to his Majeſty, and joying in his ſafe Return, kiſſed both their Majeſties Hands.

AFTER

AFTER which the Lord Mayor, Knights, Mr. Recorder, and Aldermen, preſented themſelves likewiſe in humble Manner to his Majeſty. The Lord Mayor tendered the City Sword and Sceptre to him, who re-delivered them to his Lordſhip, where kneeling (together with Mr. Recorder) by the Coach-Side, Mr. Recorder made a grave, pithy, and ſhort Speech to his Majeſty, as followeth:

May it pleaſe your MAJESTY,

The Recorder's Speech to the King.

"THIS is a Day of exceeding great Joy to "your Citizens of LONDON. Joy "exalted to the higheſt Degree to ſee you return in "Safety, after a long Abſence, and to ſee this happy Meeting with your deareſt Conſort, our good "and gracious Queen, and with thoſe bleſſed "Children, that are the Fruit of your Loves, "and Pledges to us of a fruitful and hopeful Succeſſion.

"I can truly ſay this from the Repreſentative "Body of your City, from whence I have my "Warrant. They meet your Majeſty with as "much Love and Affection, as ever Citizens of "LONDON met with any of your Royal Progenitors, King or Queen of this Kingdom, and "with as hearty a Deſire to ſhew itſelf fully. "Pardon their Failures where you meet with "any.

"WE tender to you no ſmall Preſent: It "would but leſſen us, I am ſure, whatever it "were; it would be far ſhort of our Meaning.

"WE preſent to you our Hearts and Affections; Hearts of true Subjects, full of Loyalty "to you, our King and Sovereign.

"'TIS true, in this we offer your Majeſty but "your own. They were by juſt Right yours before: But upon this new Enlivening and Expreſſion be pleaſed to take them as a new Gift. "We offer them chearfully. Vouchſafe to accept them graciouſly, and with the Influence of "thoſe excellent and Princely Virtues, which we "know, by great Aſſurance, to be eminent in "your Royal Perſon, the Defence of our eſtabliſhed Religion, and the clear Current of your "Juſtice, from the Fountain through the Streams, "be pleaſed to cheriſh them.

"VOUCHSAFE likewiſe to uphold and countenance that antient Form and Frame of Government, which hath been long eſtabliſhed in "the City, that Power and Authority of yours, "which you have committed to your Lord Mayor, "your true and faithful Subject and Servant, and "the fit Reverence and Reſpect due to the Aldermen, his Brethren, who are to aſſiſt him in "his Government. We ſhall be thereby the "better enabled to ſerve your Majeſty, and conſtantly to render to you the Fruits of a true "Obedience, and (as our Duty binds us) we ſhall "never ceaſe to bleſs you, and pray for you, and "your deareſt Conſort, our gracious Queen, and "for this your Royal and Princely Offſpring, "for your Majeſty's long Life and proſperous "Reign over us, in Peace and Glory, and with "full Contentment, and I doubt not, but every "true Subject will join with us in this and ſay, "Amen.

"THESE Expreſſions of Love of Loyalty, and "theſe hearty Wiſhes and Deſires which I have "mentioned, I meet with every where from your "Citizens of LONDON. They are the ſoft "and ſtill Muſick prepared for your Majeſties "Welcome, the Entertainment this Day. The "joyful Acclamations of your People, upon the "Sight of your Royal Perſon, will make it "louder: And all chearfully bearing their agreeing Parts together, ſhall, I hope, this Day, "make up to your Majeſty a full and pleaſing "Harmony.

To which his Majeſty made this gracious Anſwer.

Maſter Recorder,

The King's Anſwer.

"I muſt deſire you (becauſe my Voice cannot "reach to all thoſe that I deſire ſhould hear "me) to give moſt hearty Thanks to all the good "Citizens of LONDON, for the hearty Expreſſions of their Love this Day to me: And "indeed I cannot expreſs the Contentment I "have received therein. For now I ſee that all "theſe former Tumults and Diſorders have only "riſen from the meaner Sort of People, and that "the Affections of the better and main Part of "the City, have been ever Loyal and Affectionate to my Perſon and Government.

"And likewiſe, it comforts me to ſee, that "all theſe Miſ-reports that have been made of "me in my Abſence, have not the leaſt Power "to do me Prejudice in your Opinions, as may "be eaſily ſeen by this Day's Expreſſion of Joy.

"AND now I think it fit for me to aſſure "you, that I am returned with as hearty and "kind Affection to my People in general, and to "this City in particular, as can be deſired by "loving Subjects. The firſt I ſhall expreſs, by "Governing you all according to the Laws of "this Kingdom, and in Maintaining you in your "full Liberties, but chiefly in Maintaining and "Protecting the true Proteſtant Religion, according as it hath been eſtabliſhed in my two "famous Predeceſſors Times, Queen Elizabeth, "and my Father: And this, I will do (if Need "be) to the Hazard of my Life, and all that is "dear unto me.

"AS for the City in particular, I ſhall ſtudy "by all means their Proſperity, and I aſſure you "I willingly grant thoſe few reaſonable Demands you have now made unto me, in the "Name of the City. Likewiſe I ſhall ſtudy to "re-eſtabliſh that flouriſhing Trade, which now "is in ſome Diſorder among you, which I doubt "not to effect, with the good Aſſiſtance of the "Parliament.

"ONE Thing I have thought of, as a particular Teſtimony of my Affection to you, which "is to give back unto you that Part of Londonderry, which heretofore was wreſted from you; "this, I confeſs, as that Kingdom is now, is no "great Gift. But I intend, firſt to recover it, "and then to give it you whole and entirely. "And for the legal Part of this, I command you, "Mr. Recorder, to wait upon me, to ſee it punctually performed.

"I will end as I began, to deſire you, Mr. "Recorder, to give all the City Thanks in better Expreſſions than I can make, tho' I muſt "tell you, it will be far ſhort of that real Contentment I find in my Heart, for this real and "ſeaſonable Demonſtration of their Affections "to me.

HIS Majeſty having ended his Speech, was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon the Lord Mayor and Mr. Recorder, with the City Sword: Both their Majeſties giving their Hands to them to kiſs, as alſo to the Knights, Aldermen, City Council, and Officers.

AFTER which, his Majeſty and the Prince alighted from the Coach, and took their Horſes; the Queen, the Duke of York, Princeſs Mary, Prince Elector, and the Dutcheſs of Richmond remaining in the Coach.

THEY all entered the City at Moorgate, where their Majeſties were welcomed with a Noiſe of Trumpets, appointed to attend there to that Purpoſe.

FROM which Place they proceeded to Biſhopſgate, and ſo through Cornhill, to St. Laurence-Lane End in Cheapſide.

THE Companies in Liveries ſtood on the Left Hand, as their Majeſties paſſed by: The Rails of the Standings being covered with Blue Cloth; and the Standings themſelves being richly adorned with Banners, Enſigns, and Pendants, of the Arms of each Company reſpectively: Nine Companies of the twelve ſtanding in the Morning: The Lord Mayor's Company beginning againſt St. Laurence-Lane End; and the other eight, in their Order, towards Biſhopſgate: The reſt of the Way where they left, to Moorgate, being ſupplied by ſome of the inferior Companies.

THE Outſide of the Houſes, all the Way their Majeſties paſſed, being beautified with rich Tapeſtry.

ON the North Side of the Street (four Feet diſtant from the Houſes) were Rails placed, to regulate and keep the People in good Order, from Biſhopſgate to Cornhill; and ſo to Temple-Bar: At the Beginning of which Rails, (viz. at Biſhopſgate) by the Diſcretion of the two Captains, and three Marſhals, the firſt Horſeman of the Liveries begun to make a Stand. The firſt Rank of them placing themſelves ſingle, faced to the Liveries that were in the Standings, and the reſt, paſſing along, placed themſelves in the ſame Order. The Trumpets and Pendants in each Company ſtanding in the Front, and then the Companies themſelves; the youngeſt being next to the Pendant, and ſo upwards by Seniority, to the Maſter of the Company, who took his Place laſt. Then began the Pendant, and youngeſt of the next Company, to make their Stand as the former, till they came to St. Laurence-Lane End. There being five Feet Diſtance from one Horſe to another; in which Space ſtood each Horſeman's Footman, with a Truncheon in his Hand, making, by this Means, a Guard for their Majeſties, and the reſt of their Train.

AND it fell out, that moſt of the Companies of Horſe were placed right againſt their own Companies in the Standings.

THE People that were Spectators in the Streets, were diſpoſed, Part behind the Horſe, and Part behind the Liveries.

AND by this good Order, their Majeſties, and the Train, paſſed quietly without Interruption.

THEIR Majeſties coming along Cornhill, ſeveral Trumpeters, that were placed in the Clock-Houſe of the Exchange, gave them their ſecond Welcome into the City; and as they went, the Conduit in Cornhill, and the great Conduit in Cheapſide, ran with Red Wine, to expreſs the Joy of the City that Day,

BEING come to St. Laurence-Lane End, the Paſſage being ſtrait, neither Horſe nor Foot could be planted there; ſo that only the Sheriffs Officers, the City Council, and Officers, the Sheriffs, Aldermen, and the Lord Mayor, conducted their Majeſties, and their Train, to Guildhall:

AT their Majeſties Entrance, were ſeveral Lords and Ladies, that had not given their Attendance Abroad, preſented themſelves to his Majeſty, and conducted him and the Queen up to the New and Old Council Chambers, being appointed for their Repoſe, till Dinner might be ſerved to the Table. The four Comptrollers for the Day, and about eighty grave Citizens, in Foins and Liveries, ſtanding and making a Lane on both Sides their Paſſage, to whom their Majeſties ſhewed gracious Reſpects; the Muſick of the City giving them their next Welcome.

THEIR Majeſties were no ſooner repoſed, but Word was given for ſerving up Dinner to their Table. The Place appointed for it was the Huſtings at the Eaſt End of the Hall, which was raiſed almoſt two Yards from the Ground, the Floor being covered with Turky Carpets; and all the Hall, as all the other Rooms of the Guildhall, was hanged and adorned with rich Tapeſtry.

IN the Middle of the Place where their Majeſties dined, was hung up a Cloth of State, and two Chairs of State were ſet under it: Before which was placed a Table of ſix Yards long. At the South End whereof (two Yards diſtant from the Table) was a Table of Garniſh of three Yards ſquare; and at the North End was a Room erected for Muſick of all Sorts, for the better Enter-

Entertainment and Delight of their Majeſties, while they ſhould be at Dinner.

And four or five Steps under the Place, where their Majeſties dined, was a Frame of Timber erected, and floored with Deals, a Yard from the Ground, which extended almoſt to the Hall Door, upon each Side whereof was a Table ſet from the upper to the lower End of it: At which two Tables, the Lords and Ladies that attended their Majeſties were to dine. Between which was a ſpacious Way left, covered with Green Bays, whereon their Majeſties were to paſs to the Place where they ſhould dine.

And in the Weſt Part of the Hall, below the Gate, on the South Side, was a long Table placed for his Majeſty's Penſioners: And in other Rooms that were not for their Majeſties Privacy, were likewiſe Tables prepared for ſeveral Sorts of their Majeſties Attendants.

The Dinner was ſerved up in this Manner:

From their Majeſties Table to the Dreſſer, which was at the Weſt End of the Hall, ſtood the Eighty Livery-Men before-mentioned, in two Ranks, about two Yards diſtant from each other, Face to Face, one Rank of them receiving from the Dreſſer the King's Meat, and the other the Prince's, at one and the ſame Time; they never ſtirring, or removing from their Places, but delivering Diſh after Diſh, from one to another, 'till it came to the Sewers, who placed it upon the Table.

Their Majeſties Meat was proportioned into four Services. The firſt conſiſting of 50 Diſhes of cold Meats, as Brawn, Fiſh, and cold baked Meats planted upon the Garniſh or Side-Table. The three other Services were of all Sorts of hot Fleſh and Fiſh, boiled, roaſted and baked; to the Number of 120 Diſhes. After which was ſerved up a curious and well ordered Deſert.

At the High Table dined his Majeſty, his Royal Conſort the Queen, the Prince, the Duke of York, the Princeſs Mary, and the Prince Elector Palatine, in this Order:

The King ſat under the Cloth of State, and her Majeſty cloſe to him, on his Left Hand: On his Majeſty's Right Hand (about a Yard diſtant) ſat the Prince; and about the ſame Diſtance from his Highneſs, ſat the Prince Elector.

At her Majeſty's Left Hand (about a Yard's Space from her) was placed the Princeſs Mary; and not far from her, the Duke of York.

The Service for the Tables of the Lords and Ladies was thus ordered:

The Liveries before-mentioned (after the Meat was placed on the High Table) ſerved up the Dinner to thoſe Tables, but in another Poſture; for whereas before they ſtood in two Ranks, Face to Face, they now turned Back to Back. The Reaſon was, becauſe (the Meat being ſerved up to both Tables together) the one Rank of them might face to one Table, and the other to the other.

To theſe two Tables were appointed ten Meſſes, conſiſting of 500 Diſhes.

These two Tables being likewiſe furniſhed, Care was taken for the reſt of the Train, that were thought fit to be entertained within the Hall, who were all ſerved ſo plentifully, that not a Man was heard to go diſcontented away.

And becauſe it was conceived before-hand by the Committees, that there might come more Company with their Majeſties, than could be conveniently provided for within the Hall, large Proviſion was made abroad for the Guard, Footmen, Coachmen, and the like, where there dined about 150 Perſons of all Sorts.

His Majeſty received ſuch Content, as well in the Freedom of the Entertainment, as in the well Ordering thereof, that he was pleaſed by Words to expreſs his Royal Thoughts, as well at Dinner as afterwards, (ſo did the Queen, Princes and Nobility) how great Content and Satisfaction he received from the City by it.

His Majeſty alſo, after Dinner, ſent for Mr. John Pettus, a Gentleman of an antient Family in the County of Suffolk, who had married the Lord Mayor's Daughter, and beſtowed the Honour of Knighthood upon him; knowing that whatſoever in this Kind he ſhould do to his Lordſhip, or his, muſt neceſſarily redound to the Honour of the City, and be an Expreſſion of his Grace and Favour to it.

Their Majeſties having repoſed themſelves a while after Dinner (the Days being ſhort) the Word was given for their Departure; and by this Time the three Companies of the Twelve, and the reſt of the inferior Companies, that had not waited in the Morning, had taken their Standings from St. Laurence-Lane End, Weſtward towards Temple-Bar.

The two Captains alſo, with the three Marſhals, had ordered the Horſemen after this Manner.

They firſt drew up the Sheriffs Men in the Front, by two and two; then they cauſed the Rear of the Horſemen, that had made the firſt Stand at Biſhopſgate in the Morning, to paſs thro' the reſt of the Companies, after the Sheriffs Men, and ſo the reſt according to their former Order, 'till the Number of 500 were ranked again, by two and two, as in the Morning, and ſo paſſed thro' Cheapſide, 'till the Rear of the firſt Company, which was the Lord Mayor's, came even with St. Laurence-Lane End; and in this Order they ſtaid 'till their Majeſties were ready to come out of Guildhall, which was about Four o'Clock in the Afternoon.

The Lord Mayor carrying the Sword before his Majeſty, as in the Morning, and the reſt that conducted him from Cheapſide to Guildhall, led his Majeſty thither again, where the Word was given for the Horſe to advance, which they did, and every one fell into the ſame Order, in which they were in the Morning; the greateſt Difference being, That whereas in the Forenoon the Footmen carried Truncheons in their Hands, they now went with lighted Torches, which gave ſo great a Light, as that the Night ſeemed to be turned to Day.

As their Majeſties paſſed along, the Trumpets and City Muſick were placed in ſeveral Parts ſounding and playing; which, together with the ſeveral continual and joyful Acclamations of the People, gave great Content to both their Majeſties.

The little Conduit in Cheapſide, and the Conduit in Fleet-ſtreet, running with Wine, as the other two Conduits had done in the Morning; and in their Paſſage by the South Door of St. Paul's Church, the Choir (with Sackbuts and Cornets joining with them) ſang an Anthem of Praiſe to God, and Prayers for their Majeſties long Lives, which pleaſed his Majeſty ſo well, that he gave them an extraordinary Reſpect.

And in their Paſſage to Temple-Bar, he made ſuch Expreſſions of his gracious Acceptance of the City's Love, that the People could not ſufficiently make manifeſt the Joy they conceived at it: So that by this Time, the whole Day ſeemed to be ſpent in a Kind of Emulation, as it were, between their Majeſties and the City; the Citizens bleſſing and praying for their Majeſties, and their Princely Iſſue; and their Majeſties returning the ſame Bleſſings upon the Heads of the Citizens, with innumerable Thanks added thereto; inſomuch, that it is hard to reſolve, whether the Citizens were more joyed with the gracious Acceptance of their weak, tho' hearty and loyal Endeavours, or their Majeſties, with the Performance of the Day's ſeaſonable Service.

vice. Both their Majeſties, and the Citizens, (ſeeming as it were) not well ſatisfied, to whom the Thanks of this Day's Work were properly due.

BUT to proceed:

WHEN the Sheriffs Men (who were in the Front) were come as far as the May-Pole in the Strand, they began to make a Stand, and ſingled themſelves by falling off at the Right Hand of the Street, their Company extending in Length as far as Exeter Houſe, and after them the Horſemen did the like, in the ſame Order, and Poſture, as they had done in the Morning; and ſo continued to the Tilt-Yard, over-againſt his Majeſty's Palace at Whitehall; to which Place the Lord Mayor, Knights, and Aldermen, conducted their Majeſties.

After the ENTERTAINMENT.

AND now by this Time, it might be conceived, that a Period might be ſet to this Relation; and that his Majeſty had given ample and ſufficient Teſtimony, of his gracious Acceptation of the City's Love, and loyal Affection, towards him. But Manet altâ mente repôſtum, in a better Senſe than the Poet ſpoke it. His Majeſty had taken ſo deep Impreſſion of his poor Subjects Love, that he thought he had not ſufficiently expreſſed himſelf by all that he had already ſo graciouſly been pleaſed to demonſtrate. And therefore, when the Lord Mayor had brought their Majeſties into Whitehall, and was taking his Leave in humble Manner, his Majeſty moſt graciouſly embraced and thanked him, and withal gave him in Charge, That in his Name the whole City might be thanked.

WHEREUPON, againſt Tueſday Morning following, being St. Andrew's Day, the Lord Mayor cauſed a Common Council to be warned, where Mr. Recorder, in an eloquent and pithy Speech, related the Charge and Command that his Majeſty (by the Lord Mayor) had impoſed upon him. And withal (as was thought fit) he read his Speech to his Majeſty, and his Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer, (both which are before ſet down) which ſo much revived and increaſed the Joy of all the Commons, that an Act was there made, and the Lord Mayor was intreated to appoint Mr. Recorder, and ſo many Aldermen and Commoners as his Lordſhip ſhould think fit, to attend his Majeſty, and to return their humble Thanks for all his great and Princely Favours to the City; and to prefer to his Majeſty ſuch other Deſires of the City, as ſhould be thought neceſſary and convenient.

IN the mean Time, his Majeſty (ſtudying, as it were, how to add more Honour to the Lord Mayor, and in his to the whole City) had ſent to his Lordſhip his gracious Letters Patents, whereby he created him a Baronet.

THE Lord Mayor, according to the Power given unto him, by the Act of Common Council, called a Committee to his Houſe, where he appointed how many Aldermen (beſides thoſe of the Committee for the Entertainment,) ſhould attend his Majeſty, with Mr. Recorder, in Purſuance of the ſaid Act; where it was concluded, what Deſires they ſhould humbly repreſent to his Majeſty, on the City's Behalf.

UPON Friday the 3d of December, Mr. Recorder, with theſe Aldermen, viz. Sir George Whitmore, Alderman Cordal, Alderman Soames, Alderman Gayer, Alderman Garrard, Alderman Wollaſton, and the two Sheriffs (being Aldermen likewiſe) with eight of the Commoners of the ſaid Committee, went by his Lordſhip's Appointment to Hampton-Court; where they were received by the Right Honourable the Earl of Dorſet, Lord Chamberlain to her Majeſty, Sir Peter Wyche, Comptroller of his Majeſty's Houſhold, and other Officers and Gentlemen of Quality, till they ſhould be admitted into his Majeſty's Preſence. And after ſome ſmall Stay, his Majeſty, with his Conſort the Queen, (attended by the Duke of Richmond, Marquis Hamilton, and the Earl of Dorſet) came into her Majeſty's Preſence Chamber; and ſoon after, Mr. Recorder, the Aldermen, and Commoners were called in, where, after their humble Duties tendered, Mr. Recorder, in an elegant Speech, preſented the loyal Affections, and humble Thanks of the City to their Majeſties, together with two humble Petitions, formerly agreed on to be preferred to his Majeſty, in Words to this Effect:

"THAT according to his Majeſty's Com-
"mandment, given to the Lord Mayor and him-
"ſelf, they had publiſhed that which his Majeſty
"had graciouſly expreſſed at his Entry into the "City, not only to particular Men thereof, but
"at a Common Council, which is the Repreſenta-
"tive Body of the City: And there made "known the moſt gracious Acceptance, by both
"their Majeſties, of the Endeavours of the Ci"tizens, for their Welcome and Entertainment
"that Day.

"THAT after the publiſhing of it, they all
"forthwith, with one Heart, and one Voice,
"earneſtly entreated, and preſſed the Lord
"Mayor, that by his Means, and in ſuch Way
"as he ſhould think fit, their moſt humble
"and hearty Thanks might be tendered and
"preſented to both their Majeſties, for that ſin-
"gular Honour they have done the City, in "vouchſafing their Preſence among them, and
"for thoſe real Teſtimonies his Majeſty had "given of his Princely Favour and Affection to"wards them, tending ſo much to their Profit
"and Advantage. And eſpecially for both their
"Majeſties gracious Acceptance of their poor,
"(tho' hearty) Endeavours: With theſe, and
"the like Expreſſions, which came from among "them; That if they had done a thouſand Times
"more, it had been but their Duty. That the "Memory of this Honour, and theſe Favours,
"ſhould ever live among them. That it ſhould
"be preſerved to Poſterity. That their Deſires
"and Studies ſhould be, as much as in them
"lay, that they might be thought worthy of "theſe Honours and Favours, and of ſo good
"and gracious a King and Queen.

"THUS the Lord Mayor had required us
"that were preſent, to attend their Majeſties
"with this Meſſage from the City; and to make
"this thankful Acknowledgment to them: Be"ſeeching their Majeſties (as an Addition to "their former Favours) to take it in good Part
"from them: And this was the firſt Part of "our Errand.

"THAT we had two humble Petitions to "prefer to both their Majeſties: And we had
"the Riſe and Encouragement to both, from
"that which his Majeſty was pleaſed to deliver
"to us.

"OUR firſt Petition was, That their Ma-
"jeſties would vouchſafe this Honour to the "City, (if it might ſtand with their good Plea-
"ſures) to make their Reſidence at this Sea-
"ſon of the Year, at the Palace at Whitehall.
"Their Preſence was very joyful to us; and his "Majeſty was pleaſed to tell us, That he would
"ſtudy our Proſperity, and reſtore the Trade of "the City, which of late had been in ſome Diſ-
"order. Their Reſidence there would give a "good Quickening to the Retailing Trade, and
"by Conſequence to the Merchant.

"OUR Second was, Whereas ſince his happy
"Return hither, there had been ſome late Diſ-
"orders about Weſtminſter, among ſome People
"that

" that met there, that their Majeſties would not " impute this to the Body of the City, or to " the better Sort of Citizens. We held it a " Misfortune and a Scandal upon us, that when " theſe Diſorders were mentioned, the City was " named with it; and that our Deſire was to " vindicate and redeem it, by ſome publick diſ- " avowing it; and we could not begin better, " than in the Preſence of their Majeſties, to " take it into their Conſiderations, that the " Skirts of the City, where the Lord Mayor, " and Magiſtrates of LONDON, have nei- " ther Power, nor Liberty, are more populous " than the City itſelf, and fuller of the meaner " Sort of People: And if any Dwellers in the " the City ſhould be Actors in it, (as, who can " deny, but among Millions of People ſome " there may be?) yet their Purpoſe was un- " known to us: And to give their Majeſties ſome " Aſſurance herein, there were ſome preſent " there among us; Men that had lived in the " City above forty Years together, that knew the " City, and the better Sort of Citzens, and were " at Weſtminſter, attending other Occaſions, " when thoſe People met there, and took a heed- " ful View of them: And they have affirmed, " that they knew not the Face of one Man a- " mong them.

Mr. Recorder having ended, his Majeſty preſently, and graciouſly gave Anſwer, thus, in Effect:

" THAT he was very well pleaſed with the " hearty and loyal Affections of the Citizens. " For which he gave them Thanks: And for the " firſt Petition, though he and her Majeſty had " before purpoſed to Winter at Hampton-Court; " yet being now fully perſuaded, that the Lord " Mayor and Aldermen, and the moſt conſidera- " ble Part of the Citizens of LONDON, had " not any Hand in the Diſorder mentioned by Mr. " Recorder, in his ſecond Petition, he intended " (and ſo he knew her Majeſty would) to alter " his Reſolution, and with all convenient Speed " repair to Whitehall, there to keep their Chriſt- " mas, and be ready to do any Thing elſe that " might promote the Trade of the City: De- " ſiring Mr. Recorder to join with him, in taking " ſome Courſe for Prevention of the like Diſor- " ders for the future.

AFTER his Majeſty had ended his Anſwer, and that Mr. Recorder, and Sir George Whitmore had kiſſed his Royal Hand, the next Alderman, in Seniority, kneeled down, to receive the like Princely Favour; when ſuddenly, and unexpectedly, his Majeſty drew a Sword, and inſtead of giving him his Hand to kiſs, he laid his Sword upon his Shoulder, and Knighted him: The like he did to all the other Aldermen, and the two Sheriffs, being in Number ſeven.

THIS done, their Majeſties gave them their Hands to kiſs: The like Princely Favour vouchſafed they to the Commoners of the Committee: And after many gracious Demonſtrations of Love to them, and the whole City, his Majeſty commanded that they ſhould dine before they left the Court.

HIS Majeſty's Command was fully and effectually performed; for as ſoon as they had, in moſt humble Manner, taken their Leaves of their Majeſties, they were brought by the Right Honourable the Earl of Dorſet, and by Mr. Comptroller, and other Officers of the Court, into a Room, where a Table was prepared for them, and no others, to dine at; where they were bountifully Feaſted, being honoured with the Preſence of the Earl of Dorſet, who vouchſafed to dine with them, and, in their Majeſties Name, gave them exceeding great Welcome, expreſſing to them that Love, which he ever had abundantly manifeſted to the City. Mr. Comptroller likewiſe dined with them, uſing them with very great Reſpect.

WHILE they were at Dinner, there came two Gentlemen to them, one from his Majeſty, the other from the Queen, to let them know, their Majeſties had remembred the Health of the Lord Mayor, and the whole City: Which they entertained with due Reſpect, returning humble Thanks, for their Majeſties extraordinary Favour.

DINNER being over, they took their Leaves of the Earl, and other Officers of Quality, and departed, returning to the Lord Mayor, to whom they gave a Relation of their Majeſties Grace and Favour to his Lordſhip, the whole City, and themſelves.

THUS have you ſeen the City's Love and Loyalty to King Charles I. And however afterwards, upon that unfortunate Monarch's being put to Death, they were forced to comply with the Government that was ſet up by a ſtrong Hand; yet, for a laſting Memorial of the City's Stedfaſtneſs to the antient Kingly Government, and Maintenance of Engliſh Freedom, we muſt relate how the Lord Mayor, and ſeveral of the Aldermen, utterly refuſed to publiſh an Act, made by the Commons, ſoon after the King was beheaded, intitled, An Act for the Exheredation of the Royal Line, the Aboliſhment of Monarchy in the Kingdom, and the ſetting up of a Commonwealth. Theſe that ſo refuſed, were Sir Abraham Reinardſon, Mayor; Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen: For which the Mayor was put out of his Mayoralty, and he, with thoſe Aldermen, committed to the Tower. In April following, the three Aldermen were to be brought to the Bar of the then Governing Lords; which they hearing of, bravely and ſtoutly, as good Citizens, and true Engliſhmen, refuſed their Authority, and ſignified to the Lieutenant of the Tower, that they would not obey his Order to bring them before the Bar of that Houſe, declaring their firm Reſolution to ſtand for the Defence of the eſtabliſhed Laws of the Land, and their Proteſtation againſt the Lords Juriſdiction over them, or any other Commoners in Criminal Caſes: With an Appeal from the ſaid Lords to their proper and competent Judges, i. e. a Jury of their Equals, and Judges ſworn to proceed according to the known Laws of England. All this may be ſeen by the Letter and the Petition following:

The Mayor and Aldermen in 1648, refuſed to proclaim an Act for a Commonwealth.

A Salva Libertate, ſent to Colonel Tichburn, Lieutenant of the Tower, on Sunday, April 23, by Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen of LONDON, now Priſoners in the Tower: Being occaſioned by the Receipt of a Paper ſent unto them by the ſaid Lieutenant; wherein the ſaid Lieutenant was ſeemingly authorized to carry them before the Lords on Tueſday the 25*th of* April.

To our Honoured Friend, Colonel Tichburn, Lieutenant of the Tower.

SIR,

" WE received a Paper from you, ſeeming " to authorize you to carry our Perſons " before the Lords, to anſwer to a Charge: We " are conſtrained to inform you hereby, That our " Perſons ought not to be hurried to and fro, or " diſturbed at the Pleaſure of any Man, neither " can we yield Obedience to the Commands of " any, which are not legal: And therefore in

" caſe you intend to diſturb us on Tueſday next, " we expect to ſee a legal Warrant from ſome " Perſon, or Court, which have Juriſdiction " over us, in caſe of a real or ſuppoſed Crime: " And we muſt acquaint you, That the Lords " have no legal Power to ſummon us to anſwer to " any Crime whereof we are accuſed or ſuſpected: " And therefore you muſt expect to anſwer for " whatſoever Injury you offer to our Perſons: " And know hereby, That we ſhall not voluntarily " go from hence to Weſtminſter, by Virtue of the " Paper received, but ſhall ſuffer you to carry " us, if you ſhall ſend Force which we cannot " reſiſt.

Your Friends and Servants,

From our Chambers in the Tower of LONDON, April the 23d, 1648.

Thomas Adams,
John Langham,
James Bunce.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Aſſembled in Parliament: The humble Petition of Thomas Adams, John Langham, and James Bunce, Aldermen of LONDON, &c.

SHEWETH,

" THAT if your Petitioners ſhall ſubmit to " your Lordſhips Juriſdiction over Com- " moners in thoſe Criminal Caſes, or Novaliſms " in Law, intitled, Articles of Impeachment of " High Treaſon, and other Miſdemeanors, they " ſhall not only be Feloes de ſe, but alſo ſhall " murther the Perſons, and ruin the Eſtates of " all the Free-born People of England; and that " which is more, they ſhall betray the Common " Law, which is the Supreme Authority (under " GOD) of the Nation, and the Inheritance of " every Freeman's Poſterity: And that which is " worſt of all, they ſhall be inſtrumental to " pull down all the Judicatories of the King- " dom, and re-edify an Arbitrary Government, " many Stories higher than ever the Star-Cham- " ber, High-Commiſſion, or Council-Table " were. And by the ſame Rule that your Lord- " ſhips have fined ſeveral Commoners 500 l. a " Man for not kneeling, or ſubmitting to your " Lordſhips Juriſdiction in Criminal Caſes, for " which there is no Law; nay, which is abſo- " ſolutely, and apparently, againſt the funda- " mental Laws of the Land, and the ordinary " Rule of your own Court of Judicature; uſual- " ly referring thoſe Cauſes which appertain to " the Common Law, to the other Courts of " Juſtice, eſpecially if the People deſire it; ſo " you may fine their Fellow Citizens, and " Commoners of England, as many Millions, " and take away the Lives and Eſtates of all, as " well as ſome, to the perpetual Deſtroying and " Enſlaving the whole Kingdom. By the 29th " Chapter of the great Charter, all Commoners " are to be tried by their Equals; and there are " thirty Seſſions of Parliament, which confirm " the great Charter, being a Statute Declarato- " ry of the Common Law; eſpecially thoſe emi- " nent Laws, wherein your Lordſhips had your " Shares in making them; viz. The Petition of " Right, 3 Caroli, and the Act for aboliſhing " the Star-Chamber, and regulating the Coun- " cil-Table, in the 17th Caroli, in which many " Statutes are enumerated; that Commoners " ought to be tried by their Equals, by Bill of " Indictment, or Writ Original, and by thoſe " of their Neighbourhood: And all Decrees and " Judgments made contrary thereto, are decla- " red thereby to be null and void in Law, which " bars all Precedents. And by ſeveral Decla- " rations and Ordinances your Lordſhips have " declared, That Ordinances are no Laws, but " Temporary, during the Wars, and the Caſe " of Neceſſity being taken away, your Lord- " ſhips have promiſed the Free People of Eng- " land, That they ſhall be governed according " to the known Laws of the Land, as it appears " in the Ordinance, dated the 15th of Janu- " ary 1647. And it is againſt the Law of GOD, " Nature, and Nations, that any Perſon, or " Perſons, ſhould be Judge and Parties, Exa- " miners, or Accuſers, in their own Cauſe; or " to be tried any otherwiſe than by a known " Law; for, where there is no Law there is no " Tranſgreſſion. It is declared by Sir Edward " Coke, That the Parliament cannnot make a " Law againſt the Law of Nature, which is " Cuſtom, according to Right and neceſſary Rea- " ſon. That Precedents are nothing in Com- " pariſon of the Common and Statute Laws. " Theſe being known Maxims in Law, A facto " ad Jus non valet Argumentum. Gubernandum " eſt Legibus non Exemplis. Articles are nothing " in Law, but meer Innovations, and Prerogatives " extrajudicial, eſpecially when ordinary Perſons " are in Queſtion. The old Maxim in Law is, " Non recurrendum eſt ad Extraordinaria quando " fieri poteſt per Ordinaria. And your Lord- " ſhips are not only Sworn, but have impoſed " ſeveral Oaths, as the Proteſtation, and ſo- " lemn League and Covenant, upon the Free " Commoners of England, to defend the Fun- " damental Laws of the Land: And they are " confident your Lordſhips will be very tender " of the Preſervation of the great Charter, in " which is wrapped up our Lives, Liberties, and " Eſtates. Your noble Predeceſſors being ſo " glorious and famous Inſtruments in aſſiſting " this People in purchaſing the ſame.

" CONCERNING the Point of Precedent, " which is all can be ſaid for your Lordſhips, we " ſhall give you the Anſwer:

" I. IT is obſervable, That all ſuch Commo- " ners, which have ſubmitted to your Lordſhips " Juriſdiction, were in the Time of the Civil " Wars, Flagrante Bello, not by Compulſion, " but by voluntary Petitions of the Commons, " in a ſummary Way to the King in Perſon.

" II. ONE Precedent againſt your Lord- " ſhips Juriſdiction, is of more Conſequence than " a thouſand for it. The Reaſon is plain; be- " cauſe all Courts of Judicature are bottomed " upon the Law of the Land, and it cannot be " ſuppoſed, that any Court can be miſcognizant " of its own Juriſdiction. Your Lordſhips have " confeſſed in Sir Simon de Benisford's Caſe, That " it is againſt the Law, for Peers to try Com- " moners; and your Predeceſſors have promiſed, " upon Record, that they will never do the like " again, though that Occaſion were ſuperlative. " Rot. 2. Rot. Parl. 5. Numb. 45.

" III. THE Corporation of Cambridge was ac- " cuſed before the King and Lords, for comply- " ing with the Rebels of Eſſex, Kent, and Hert- " ford; their Counſel pleaded againſt the Juriſ- " diction of the Lords Houſe, in the Point of " Treaſon, and the King and Lords allowed the " Plea.

" IV. As there are many Precedents, more " may be alledged, that Commoners have de- " nied your Lordſhips Juriſdiction, and that your " Lordſhips have tranſmitted ſuch Cauſes to " the Common Law, if deſired by the Free Peo- " ple, ſo there can no Precedent be ſhewn, that " Commoners, which have refuſed to be tried by " your Houſe, have been over-ruled by them in " Point of Juriſdiction.

" V. There was never any Precedent ſince " there were Parliaments in England, that the ſame

" Seſſion

" Seſſion of Parliament hath impriſoned, fined,
" or any otherwiſe diſſeized, or deſtroyed any " Man, for obeying or executing the Laws, Or" dinances, or Orders of the ſame Parliament:
" And there are many Ordinances in Force,
" which indemnify all thoſe which have acted by " the Authority of Parliament, viz. May 26,
" 1642. 1 P. Book Decl. P. 281, June 14,
" 1642, P. 377.

The Premiſes conſidered.

YOUR Petitioners being Free Commoners of England, according to the known Laws of the Land (de Jure) claim their Birthright, which is, To be tried by GOD and their Country, in his Majeſty's Court of Juſtice, by the ſworn Judges of the Law, and a Jury of their Equals, of their own Neighbourhood, where the pretended Fact was done: The Courts of Juſtice being open.

And your Petitioners ſhall pray.

AND how forward and inſtrumental the City was in bringing back King Charles II. after his long Baniſhment, and in reſtoring the antient Conſtitution of the Kingdom, after the Uſurpation, may appear by their promoting a Free Parliament, and other notable Things done by them, at a Common Council, December 29, 1659.

TO this Common Council was preſented a Report by Alderman Fowke, the Tenor whereof followeth:

At the Committee of Common Council, &c.

VOTED,

I. THAT this Committee conceive the City of LONDON is at this Time in imminent and extraordinary Danger.

II. THAT they judge it abſolutely neceſſary, at this Time, for the Court of Common Council to put this City forthwith in a Poſture of Defence.

III. AND in Order thereto, That the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, ſettle ſix Regiments of Train'd Bands, with their reſpective Commanders and Officers.

IV. THAT the Naming of thoſe Commanders and Officers be left to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council.

THAT the ſaid Commanders and Officers Commiſſions, ſhall be under the Common Seal of the City, to be Sealed in open Court, before the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council.

TOUCHING the Letters received from Portſmouth, and the Fleet, the Opinion of the Committee is,

THAT ſeveral Commiſſioners be forthwith appointed to confer with the Lord Fleetwood, with Sir Athur Haſlerig, Colonel Morley, and Colonel Walton, and with Vice-Admiral Lawſon, and other Officers of the Fleet, in order to the Safety of the City, and the Peace and Settlement of the Nation, and in due Time to give an Anſwer to General Monk's Letter.

THAT in order to the obtaining of that Peace and Safety, the Common Council do impower thoſe Commiſſioners to propound the Convening of a Free Parliament, according to a late Declaration of this Court.

Voted, That theſe Votes be reported to the Common Council by Alderman Fowke.

WHICH Report being read, and every Part thereof ſeverally debated, was by this Court confirmed and approved of, ſaving the Right of the Court of Aldermen.

Alderman Fowke, Mr. Richard Ford, Will. Bateman, Eſq; } Appointed Commiſſioners to confer with Vice-Admiral Lawſon.

Alderman Tompſon, Colonel Bromfield, Maximil. Beard, } Appointed Commiſſioners to confer with Sir Arthur Haſlerig, &c.

Alderman Bateman, Will. Vincent, Eſq: John Jolly, Eſq; } Appointed Commiſſioners to confer with the Lord Fleetwood, and the Speaker.

Inſtructions for the Commiſſioners.

TO acquaint them that this Court hath received their Letters, and do return Thanks for their good Expreſſions, touching the Peace and Welfare of the Nation.

TO acquaint them what the Court hath reſolved for the Peace and Safety of the City.

AND in Purſuance of the Declaration of December the 20th, to confer of the beſt Way to ſettle the Nation in a Way of Free Parliament, and to offer what they conceive conducing thereto, and to mediate Agreement and Peace between all Parties, in order to a Free Parliament.

AND the Commiſſioners impowered to confer with the reſpective Parties in any Place, or Places they ſhall ſee fit, and to report to this Court.

December the 24th, 1659, Ordered that the Chains and Poſts be ſet up.

Ald. Robinſon, Ald. Bateman, Ald. Laurence, Ald. King, Ald. Bolton, Ald. Wale, } Choſen the Colonels of the ſix Regiments of Train'd Bands to be raiſed by this City, called the Green, Red, White, Orange, Blue, and Yellow.

December the 27th 1659, Alderman Fowke, and Commiſſioners to Vice-Admiral Lawſon, made a Report of their Conference. A Committee appointed to attend the Parliament.

THE Council of State, (as the governing Party, then called themſelves) finding the City of LONDON thus generally inclined to bring in the King, and in order to that, ſtanding for a Free Parliament, and perceiving how ill they ſtood affected to the preſent Power, made ſome Reſolutions: And theſe Votes paſt February the 9th 1659.

THAT the Commiſſioners for Government of the Army do appoint Forces to be in LONDON, for preſerving the Peace thereof, and of the Commonwealth; and for reducing the City to the Obedience of the Parliament. And that the Commiſſioners take Care, that the Poſts and Chains in the ſaid City be taken away, and the Gates of the City forthwith deſtroyed: And theſe Reſolves of the Houſe were ſent to General Monk, and that he ſhould put the ſame in Execution; who, however diſſatisfied with the ungrateful Work, executed their Orders: And in the Sight of the Citizens, (to be puniſhed for their Loyalty) took down their Portcullices, and Gates, and took away their Poſts and Chains; and Monk and his Forces quartered in the City; where, notwithſtanding, he had many Viſitants of the chief Citizens, and of the ſecluded Members.

AND further, to prevent the City's good Intention for the Reſtoration of the King and antient Government, the Parliament finding the Common Council of LONDON to be againſt them, ordered, it ſhould be diſcontinued, and an Act brought in to conſtitute a new Common Council. Yet notwithſtanding the City brought their Councils to bear ſoon after: And a Free Parliament was proclaimed in LONDON, which which voted in the King. Wherein (as we ſee) the City had a prevailing Hand.

AND further, after the Reſtoration, the Citizens to ſhew their Abhorrence of the Arbitrary Doings of thoſe Times, formally made an Act of Common Council, Anno 1683, Sir William Pritchard, Mayor, for Repealing the treaſonable and diſloyal Acts and Proceedings of that Court in the Time of the late Rebellion, a certain Number of eminent Citizens, Aldermen, and Commoners, having been appointed diligently to look over all paſt Acts of Common Council, made in thoſe Times, and to report them; as appears more at large, by the ſaid Act of Common Council, viz.

THE 6th of June 1683, at a Common Council this Day, a Report was brought into this Court, by the Committee appointed to inſpect the Acts and Proceedings entered into the Journals of this Court, in the Times of Uſurpation, or at any Time before or ſince, that might be fit to be explained or repealed. The Tenor of which Report is as followeth; that is to ſay,

To the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of LONDON. "Whereas by a late Order of this Ho- "nourable Court, it was referred unto them, "whoſe Names are ſubſcribed, [theſe were Sir "William Turner, Sir James Edwards, Sir "John Moor, Sir Henry Tulſe, Sir Thomas "Langham, Francis Griffith, Nathaniel Hawes, "Henry Loads, Peter Ailworth, Nicholas Charl- "ton, and Thomas Vernon] to inſpect the Acts and "other Proceedings entered in the Journal of this "Court, in the Times of Uſurpation, or at any "Times, &c. that may be thought fit to be ex- "plained or repealed, they did humbly certify, "that in Purſuance of the ſaid Order, they had "peruſed and examined thoſe Journals, wherein "they found not only many Innovations and Ir- "regularities brought into that Court, and the "Government of the City, but alſo moſt perni- "cious and abominable Proceedings, in Abetting "and Carrying on thoſe wicked and unnatural "Diviſions then raiſed in the Kingdom, and "ſerving the Uſurpations of thoſe Times; all or "moſt of which, they perſuaded themſelves "could never have had Place in this Court, had "not Violence been offered to the Government "of the City. The Lord Mayor firſt arraigned, "and impriſoned, divers loyal Aldermen and "Commoners were, ſome impriſoned, others diſ- "placed, and all loyal Citizens generally diſ- "countenanced and diſcouraged; and others of "factious, unquiet, and turbulent Spirits got "themſelves into the Common Council, and "made up the greater Number therein. That "all theſe Actions and Proceedings might (as "they deſerved) be obliterated and wholly ex- "punged, that no Remembrance thereof might "be tranſmitted to Poſterity, to the Shame and "Diſhonour of this Court and City, but that "other Matters were therewith all intermixed, "which (for the Subſtance of them) were, in their "Opinion, inoffenſive, uſeful and fit to be conti- "nued. That ſeveral Committees had been ap- "pointed formerly by this Court, to obliterate "the ſaid unjuſt Proceedings, and there were "Lines croſſed over divers of them, which they "preſumed were made by the ſaid Committees. "But not being thereby obliterated, but ſtill re- "maining in the Books of the Acts and Proceed- "ings of this Court, and having never been par- "ticularly proclaimed, and repealed by any "Vote or Act of this Court, that they had ob- "ſerved, they thought it were fitting, that the "ſaid and all other like diſloyal and irregular "Proceedings, ſhould, by an expreſs Act of this "Council, be renonunced, repealed, and made "abſolutely null and void. Which Proceedings, "or the moſt of them, they ſet down and pre- "ſented to this Court for that Purpoſe: And de- "ſired that ſome few of them might be openly "read, to beget in this Court, as it had done in "them, a juſt Abhorrence and Deteſtation of "ſuch Proceedings.

AND then follow'd a Catalogue of them, from the Year 1641, and ſo yearly down to the Year 1657.

"ALL which Particulars (as the ſaid Com- "mittee did proceed) being highly diſloyal, "and favouring of the Faction and Uſurpation "of thoſe unhappy Times, they thought fit "ſhould by Act of this Court be diſclaimed, re- "voked, abrogated, and repealed to all Intents "and Purpoſes whatſoever: Both to demonſtrate "the Love to, and good Affection of the preſent "Members of this Court to his Majeſty, and the "eſtabliſh'd Government, and to vindicate them "from all Imputation of the like pernicious Prin- "ciples and Practices, and expreſs their Diſlike "of all factious Innovations. So alſo will it pre- "vent any ill Uſe that may be made in Time to "come of the ſaid irregular Actions.

AFTER the Reading of which Reports openly in the Court, they were approved of and agreed to and confirmed; and it was enacted by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons in that Common Council aſſembled, That all the ſeveral Acts, Orders, and Proceedings therein propounded ſhould be diſclaimed and repealed, and made void. And they, and every of them, were by the Authority of this Court diſclaimed, repealed and made null and void.

BUT to return to the Time of the Reſtoration. (The Triumphant Arches erected by the City of LONDON, in the Year 1661, when his Majeſty made his Cavalcade from the Tower to Weſtminſter, in order to his Coronation, have been already deſcribed in Chap. X.)

IN the Year 1664, the City of LONDON lent his Majeſty 100,000 l. towards carrying on the Dutch War; for which, at the Meeting of the Parliament, they were voted the Thanks of both Houſes.

IN the Year 1666, the Loyal London was launched at Deptford, a Ship carrying 100 Guns, built at the Charge of the City of LONDON, for the Service of his Majeſty; the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen, upon the London Frigate's being blown up in the Dutch War, having obtained Leave of his Majeſty to build this Ship, and to honour it with the Epithet of Loyal.

IN the Year 1671, the City of LONDON, having all its publick Buildings recovered out of the Ruins of the dreadful Fire, to a greater Splendor and Beauty than before, made an humble Invitation to his Majeſty to honour their Lord Mayor's Feaſt with his Preſence, which the King accepting of, was entertained accordingly in their Guildhall.

IN the Year 1674, his Majeſty having been pleaſed to honour the City again with his Preſence at an Entertainment in Guildhall, and to accept of his Freedom of the City, by the Hands of Sir Thomas Player, their Chamberlain; the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen waited upon him at Whitehall, and preſented him with the Copy of the Freedom of the City in a Box of Maſſive Gold, the Seal thereof hanging in a golden Box, ſet over with Diamonds of a conſiderable Value.

Sir Robert Viner, Lord Mayor in the Year 1675, erected at his own Charge, at Stocks-Market Conduit, upon a Pedeſtal, eighteen Feet high, an Equeſtrian Statue of King Charles II. repreſented trampling on an Enemy with his Horſe's Feet; on the Pedeſtal are his Arms, within a Compartment of Fiſhes.

THE

THE City, altho' thus Loyal to their Princes, has yet been jealous of the Invaſion of their Religion and Liberty; which was the Cauſe they ſo readily came into the Meaſures of the Revolution, in the Year 1688, as appears by their Addreſs to the Prince of Orange, which was to this Purpoſe:

To his Highneſs the Prince of ORANGE: The humble Addreſs of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of LONDON, in Common Council aſſembled.

May it pleaſe your Highneſs,

"WE taking into Conſideration your High-
" neſs's fervent Zeal for the Proteſ-
" tant Religion, manifeſted to the World in " your many and hazardous Enterprizes, in " which it hath pleaſed Almighty GOD to bleſs
" you with miraculous Succeſs: We render our " deepeſt Thanks to the Divine Majeſty for
" the ſame, and beg Leave to preſent our moſt
" humble Thanks to your Highneſs, particular" ly for your appearing in Arms in this Kingdom,
" to carry on and perfect your glorious Deſign,
" to reſcue England, Scotland, and Ireland,
" from Slavery and Popery; and in a Free Parlia" ment to eſtabliſh the Religion and Laws of " theſe Kingdoms, upon a ſure and laſting Foun-
" dation. We have hitherto looked for ſome
" Remedy, for the Oppreſſions and imminent
" Dangers we, together with our Proteſtant
" Fellow Subjects, laboured under, from his
" Majeſty's Conceſſions and Concurrences with " your Highneſs's juſt and pious Purpoſes, ex-
" preſs'd in your Gracious Declarations: But
" herein finding ourſelves finally diſappointed,
" by his Majeſty's withdrawing himſelf, we pre-
" ſume to make your Highneſs our Refuge; and
" do, in the Name of this Capital City, implore
" your Highneſs's Protection, and moſt humbly
" beſeech your Highneſs to vouchſafe to repair
" to this City, where your Highneſs will be re" ceived with univerſal Joy and Satisfaction.

IN the Year 1689, his Majeſty King William III. was made Free of the Grocers Company; and the ſame Year, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen publiſhed an Order, offering 500 l. to diſcover the Perſon who offered an Indignity to his Picture in Guildhall.

AFTER the Acceſſion of Queen Anne to the Throne, ſhe was entertained in a moſt ſplendid Manner by the City at Guildhall; and the City, to ſhew their Loyalty to that Princeſs, and their Regard to the glorious Actions of her renowned General John Duke of Marlborough, invited him to a publick Dinner, after his Return from the Battle of Ramellies; Sir Robert Bedingfield being Lord Mayor. The Entertainment was magnificent in every Reſpect; and an Ode was made on Purpoſe for the Occaſion, ſet to Muſick by Mr. Weldon, and performed in the Guildhall by Mr. Elford and Mr. Leveridge.

WERE we to mention all the Acts of Piety, Loyalty, and Munificence of the worthy Citizens of LONDON, that one Article would ſwell our Work to a Size far beyond what we propoſe; and having ſaid enough, as we think, of the City in general, we ſhall haſten to Particulars, and conclude this Firſt Book with a Liſt of Offices belonging to the City, which are great Marks of its Magnificence, they being ſo large a Number, and of ſo conſiderable a Value: To ſome of them are placed the Prices they have ſometimes been ſold at.

SURVEY

OF THE

City of LONDON, &c.

BOOK II.

Containing a Particular Inſpection into the Thirteen WARDS on the Eaſt Side of Walbrook.

CHAP. I.

The Diviſion of the CITY into Four Parts; and Twenty-ſix Wards, or Aldermanries, Within and Without the Walls.

HAVING thus in general treated of the City, the Walls, Gates, Rivers, and Conduits; the Bridges, Towers, and Caſtles; the Schools, Houſes of Learning, Inns of Courts, Colleges and Hoſpitals in and about LONDON; the antient Cuſtoms, Manners, Recreations, and memorable Acts of the Citizens; we are now to ſet down the Diſtribution of the City into Parts; and more eſpecially to ſhew the Antient and Modern State of every one of the ſame; and afterwards how both the Whole and the Parts have, from Time to Time, been ruled and governed.

THE City of LONDON, taking in that alſo of Weſtminſter, with the adjacent Parts, which begirt them, may not improperly be divided into four Parts. The Firſt is, the City of LONDON, within the Walls and Freedom, which is chiefly inhabited by wealthy Merchants and Tradeſmen, with a Mixture of Artificers, as depending on Trade and Manufactures. Secondly, The City, or Liberty, of Weſtminſter, and the adjacent Parts, which are taken up by the Court and Gentry, yet not without a Mixture of Tradeſmen and Artificers. Thirdly, That Part beyond the Tower, which compriſeth Part of St. Catharine's, Eaſt-Smithfield, Wapping, Shadwell, Ratcliff, Limehouſe, and ſo Eaſtward to Blackwall: This Part is principally inhabited by Seafaring Men, and thoſe, who by their Trades, or otherwiſe, have their Dependance thereon: And, Fourthly, Southwark, which, taking in all the Borough, almoſt as far as Newington, Southwards, to Rotherhith in the Eaſt, and to Lambeth in the Weſt, is generally inhabited by Tradeſmen, Artificers, Mariners, Mariners, Watermen, and ſuch as have their Subſiſtance by and on the Water.

BUT now, to ſhew how the Firſt Part, viz. LONDON, was antiently, and is, to this Day, divided:

THE antient Diviſion of this City, was into Wards or Aldermanries:

Wards in LONDON, 24. THE Number of theſe Wards in LONDON, were, both before, and in the Reign of Henry III. 24 in all; whereof 13 lay on the Eaſt Side of Walbrook, and 11 on the Weſt of the ſame. Notwithſtanding, theſe 11 grew much larger and bigger than thoſe on the Eaſt: And therefore, in the Year of Chriſt 1393, the 17th of Richard II. Faringdon Ward, which was then one entire Ward, but mightily increaſed in Buildings without the Gates, was, by Parliament, appointed to be divided into two, and to have two Aldermen; to wit, Faringdon Within, and Faringdon Without, which made up the Number of 12 Wards on the Weſt Side of Walbrook; and ſo came the whole Number of 25 on both Sides.

Wards in LONDON, 25. MOREOVER, in the Year 1550, the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of LONDON, purchaſing the Liberties of the Borough of Southwark, appointed the ſame to be a Ward of LONDON; and ſo became the Number of 13 Wards on the Eaſt, 12 on the Weſt, and one on the South of the River Thames, lying in the ſaid Borough of Southwark, in the County of Surrey; which, in all, ariſe to the Number of 26 Wards, and 26 Aldermen of LONDON to govern them.

Wards in LONDON and the Borough of Southwark, 26.

PORTSOKEN WARD.

Portſoken Ward.

THIS Portſoken, which ſignifieth a Franchiſe at the Gate, was ſome Time a Guild, and had its Beginning in the Reign of King Edgar, between ſeven and eight hundred Years ago, when thirteen Knights, well beloved of the King and Realm, for Services by them done, requeſted to have a certain Portion of Land on the Eaſt Part of the City, left deſolate and forſaken by the Inhabitants, by Reaſon of too much Servitude. They beſought the King to have this Land, with the Liberty of a Guild, for ever. The King granted their Requeſt on the following Conditions, to wit, That each of them ſhould victoriouſly accompliſh three Combats, One above the Ground, One under Ground, and the Third in the Water: And after this, at a certain Day, in Eaſt Smithfield, they ſhould run with Spears againſt all Comers; all which was gloriouſly performed: And the ſame Day the King named it, Knighten Guild, and ſo bounded it from Aldgate, to the Place where the Bars now are, toward the Eaſt, on both the Sides of the Street, and extended it towards the North, and the Gate, now ſince called Biſhopſgate, unto the Houſe then of William Presbyter, after of Jeffrey Tanner, and then of the Heirs of Colver; after that, of John Eaſeby; but ſince of the Lord Bouchier, &c. And again, towards the South, unto the River Thames, and ſo far into the Water as a Horſeman, entering the ſame, might ride at Low Water, and throw his Spear: So that all Eaſt-Smithfield, with the Right Part of the Street that goeth to Dodding Pond into the Thames; and alſo the Hoſpital of St. Catharine, with the Mills that were founded in King Stephen's Days, and the outward Stone Wall, and the new Ditch of the Tower, are of the ſaid Fee and Liberty: For the ſaid Wall and Ditch were made in the Time of King Richard I, when he was in the Holy Land, by William Longſhampe, Biſhop of Ely, as before has been noted.

Knighten Guild, or Portſoken Ward: Its Bounds.

THESE Knights had no other Charter all the Days of Edgar, Ethelred, and Canutus, until the Time of Edward the Confeſſor, whom the Heirs of thoſe Knights humbly beſought to confirm their Liberties, whereunto he graciouſly granted, and gave them a Deed thereof, as appeareth in the Book of the late Houſe of the Holy Trinity: The ſaid Charter was fairly written in the Saxon Letter and Tongue.

AFTER this, King William, the Son of William the Conqueror, made a Confirmation of the ſame Liberties, unto the Heirs of theſe Knights, in theſe Words.

"WILLIAM, King of England, to Mau-
"rice, Biſhop, and Godfry de Magnum, and Ri- "chard de Parre, and to his faithful People of "LONDON, Greeting: Know ye me to "have graunted to the Men of Knighten Guild,
"the Guild that belonged to them, and the Land
"that belonged thereunto, with all Cuſtomes,
"as they had the ſame in the Time of King
"Edward, and my Father. Witneſs, Hugh det
"Buche, at Rething.

AFTER him, King Henry I, confirmed the ſame by his Charter to the like Effect. After which Time the Church of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, being founded by Queen Matilda, Wife to the ſaid Henry, the Multitude of Brethren praiſing GOD Day and Night therein, in ſhort Time ſo increaſed, that all the City was delighted in beholding of them; inſomuch that in the Year 1115, certain Burgeſſes of LONDON, of the Progeny of thoſe Noble Engliſh Knights; to wit, Radulphus Fitzalgod, Wilmarde de Devereſhe, Orgare le Rude, Edward Hupcornehill, Blackſtanus, and Alwine his Kinſman, and Robert his Brother, the Sons of Leafſtanus the Goldſmith, Wizo his Son, Hugh Fitzvulgar, and Algare Secuſme, coming together into the Chapter-Houſe of the ſaid Church of the Holy Trinity, gave to the ſame Church and Canons, ſerving GOD therein, all the Lands and Soke, called in Engliſh, Knighten Guild, which lieth Knighten Guild given to the Canons of the Holy Trinity.

lieth to the Wall of the City without the ſame Gate, and ſtretcheth to the River Thames: They gave it (taking upon them the Brotherhood and Participation of the Benefits of that Houſe) by the Hands of Prior Norman.

And the better to confirm this their Grant, they offered upon the Altar there, the Charter of Edward, together with the other Charters which they had thereof; and afterward they did put the aforeſaid Prior in Seiſin thereof, by the Church of St. Botolph, which is built thereon, and is the Head of that Land. Theſe Things were thus done before Bernard, Prior of Dunſtable, John, Prior of Derland, Jeffrey Clinton, Chamberlain, and many other Clerks and Laymen, French and Engliſh. Orgare le Prude (one of their Company) was ſent to King Henry, beſeeching him to confirm their Gift, which the King gladly granted by this Deed following:

Henry, King of England, to R. Biſhop of LONDON, to the Sheriffs and Provoſt, and to all his Barons, and faithful People, French, and Engliſh, of LONDON and Middleſex, greeting: Know ye me to have granted and confirmed to the Church and Canons of the Holy Trinity of LONDON, the Soke of the Engliſh Knighten Guild, and the Land which pertaineth thereunto, and the Church of St. Botolph, as the Men of the ſame Guild have given and granted unto them: And I will and ſtraightly command, that they may hold the ſame well, and honourably and freely, with Sack and Soke, Toll and Thea, Infangtheſe, and all Cuſtomes belonging to it, as the Men of the ſame Guild in the beſt Sort had the ſame in the Time of King Edward; and as King William my Father, and Brother, did grant it to them by their Writs. Witneſs, A. the Queen, Jeffrey de Clinton, the Chancellor, and William of Clinton, at Woodſtock.

This Charter was afterwards confirmed by Gilbert, William, and Roger, Biſhops of LONDON, Then by St. Alphage, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Then by Alexander and Innocent, Popes. Innocent alſo granted to the Prior and Convent, that the aforeſaid Church and Pariſhioners of the ſame ſhould be ſerved by one of the Canons, to be removed at the Prior's Pleaſure.

The Prior of the Trinity, an Alderman of LONDON.

The Prior and Canons of the Holy Trinity being thus ſeized of the ſaid Land and Soke of Knighten Guild, a Part of the Suburb without the Wall, (but within the Liberties of the City) the ſame Prior was for him, and his Succeſſors, admitted, as one of the Aldermen of LONDON, to govern the ſame Land and Soke. According to the Cuſtoms of the City he ſat in Court, and rode with the Mayor, and his Brethren, the Aldermen, as one of them in Scarlet, or other Livery, as they uſed, until the Year 1531, at which Time the ſaid Priory, by the laſt Prior there, was ſurrendred to King Henry VIII, in the 23d of his Reign, who gave this Priory to Sir Thomas Audley, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England, and he pulled down the Church. Since which Diſſolution, the ſaid Ward of Portſoken hath been governed by a Temporal Perſon, one of the Aldermen of LONDON, elected by the Citizens, as the Aldermen of other Wards.

Thus much for the Out Bounds of Knighten Guild, or Portſoken Ward, and for the Antiquity and Government thereof. We are next to mention the Places therein, which are of ſpecial Note. Firſt, The Eaſt Part of the Tower ſtandeth in this Ward; and then the Hoſpital of St. Catharine, which is already ſpoken of [Book I. Chap. XIV.] This is a Collegiate Church, conſiſting of a Maſter, three Brethren, and three Siſters. The Maſter, who is generally a Layman, is ſome Perſon of Faſhion, and nominated by the Queen. The three Brethren are Clergymen, who officiate in their Turns, reading Prayers every Day at 11 o'Clock in the Morning, and preaching every Sunday.

There lie buried in this Church the Counteſs of Huntington, Counteſs of March in her Time, 1429. John Holland Duke of Exeter, and Earl of Huntington, 1447, and his two Wives in a Tomb on the North Side of the Choir, under a ſtately Arch.

Dame Margaret, Dutcheſs of Exeter, bequeathed her Body to be buried in the Chapel, within the Chancel of the College of St. Catharine's, beſide the Tower of LONDON, whoſe Will was proved Anno 1458.

The ſaid Duke of Exeter's Monument here is one of antienteſt remaining within, or without the City, excepting thoſe in the Temple Church: And for the preſerving of the Memory of this great Peer, there hath been hung up againſt a Pillar, hard by a Tablet, expreſſing his Titles, his Offices, and who his Wives were; done by Mr. John Gybbon, Blue-Mantle. The Effigies of him lying on the Right Hand, and his two Wives on his Left, are engraven in Stone, each with their Hands together in a praying Poſture. The Duke hath on his Right Hand three Rings, one on his Fore Finger, another on his Fourth Finger, both worn under the ſecond Joint, and a third on the Middle Finger, worn under the firſt Joint. His firſt Wife's Hands are broken. On the Fingers of his ſecond Wife appear likewiſe three Rings (which it ſeems to have been the Faſhion of the Nobility in thoſe Times) the Ring on the Fore Finger, and that on the Fourth being on the firſt Joint, that on the Middle Finger, worn under the Second, Coronets on all their Heads.

There are alſo in this Church buried Thomas Walſingham, Eſq; and Thomas Ballard, Eſq; by him, Ann. 1465, Thomas Flemming, Knt. 1466.

A Virgin above thoſe of her Age, comely, tall, agreeable, proportioned in her Limbs and Body, amiable in the Lovelineſs of her Face. This Jewel (ſo her Name ſignifieth) died November 25, 1683, in the Morning, being 16 Years and 8 Months old.

Dear was ſhe living, but being dead more dear,
The Grief of very many made this clear;
Thus we by Want, more than by Having, learn
The Worth of Things, in which we claim Concern.

Paſſenger ſtay, this richeſt Grave
A ſmall Delay, may juſtly crave.
Virtue adorned with Wit and Beauty,
Religious Love, Conjugal Duty,
In this ſmall Cabinet lies enſhrin'd,
While Glory gilds her purer Mind.
Both her Parents near her lye,
And bear her Relicks Company:
Kind Death which uſed Friends to part,
Joined theſe, who, living, had one Heart.
Renown'd Sir Julius Cæſar lent
Unto them all noble Deſcent;
Dying, ſhe did a Son bequeath,
In whom ſhe lives in ſpite of Death:
Thus, when the old Phœnix ſweetly dies,
The New does from her Aſhes riſe:
Her Husband's Love this Monument rears,
Her Siſter writes theſe Lines with Tears.

AT the Weſt End of the North Iſle is a Vault for the Family of the Mounts, over which was a Stone, placed when the laſt was buried there: Mr. Richard Mount, Citizen of LONDON, and Stationer, who departed this Life, the 29th of June 1722.

HERE is a good Organ, with two Bells; a Free School for 25 Boys, and 15 Girls, all cloathed, and taught Writing and Arithmetick; and put out Apprentices by Subſcription, and the Rent of four Houſes in Caſh-Court, and Charity Sermons, viz. 8 in the Year; alſo a Workhouſe for the Poor. The Veſtry is Select, conſiſting of thoſe who have paſſed the Office of Upper Overſeer. The Pariſh Officers are, two Overſeers, and four Sideſmen. The Peace Officers, two Conſtables, and four Headboroughs.

IN this Hoſpital Raimundus Lullius, the famous Hermetic Philoſopher, wrote his Teſtamentum Noviſſimum: As by the latter End of that Work appears. It may not be amiſs to add, for the Honour of this antient Houſe, that Richard Verſtegan, that wrote the Reſtitution of decayed Antiquities, was born in St. Catherine's. Whoſe Grandfather Theodore Rowland Verſtegan was of Guelderland, deſcended of an antient and worſhipful Family: And, by reaſon of the War, came into England the latter End of King Henry VII.

THIS Houſe was valued in the King's Books at 315*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.* It is now incloſed about with ſmall Tenements and homely Cottages, having more Inhabitants, Engliſh, and Strangers, than ſome Cities in England.

MANY of theſe Strangers had been Inhabitants of Calais, Hammes, and Guiſnes; which Places being loſt in the Reign of Queen Mary, the poor People, Tradeſmen, and others, were glad to fly over into England, where wanting Habitation, a Place belonging to St. Catharine's (now a Lane) was allowed them, which, from the Countries whence they came, was called Hammes and Guiſnes; and is the ſame with that Place, which at this Day, by a ſtrange Corruption, is called Hangman's Gains.

AMONG many Foreigners that lived here in St. Catharine's, was one Crokehay, a Man of Credit and Subſtance, who inhabited here in Queen Mary's Days, and his Wife Gertrude, being a Proteſtant, was troubled upon her Deathbed by Dr. Mallet, then Maſter of St. Catharine's, becauſe he could not perſuade her to receive the Unction, or the Sacrament; excuſing this laſt, in that ſhe was ſubject to vomit, and ſo was ſure, ſhe ſaid, to caſt up their God again: He therefore refuſed her Chriſtian Burial when ſhe was dead, and ſaid ſhe ſhould be buried in ſome Highway, and a Mark ſet upon her, in Token that ſhe was an Heretick; but her Husband, at laſt, obtained Leave to bury her in his Garden: For there were Gardens then in St. Catharine's. This Account is in Foxe's Martyrology.

BEHIND Hangman's Gains is the Flemiſh Church-yard, which was appropriated for the Burial of thoſe of Hammes and Guiſnes, and other poor Flemings, that came over afterwards under Queen Elizabeth; and is ſtill a Churchyard for the poorer Sort.

SOMEWHERE within the Liberties of the Tower, and as it ſeems in this Part of St. Catharine's, was a Place called Judaiſmus, the Jewry, which being a Place of Privilege, ſuch as were Jews (as well as others) reſorted thither for their Safety, who fell off from the Religion then profeſſed and practiſed; and particularly Prieſts that had taken Wives, and ſo eſteemed Apoſtates from the Unity of the Catholick Church. Among the Collections of the Tower Records, taken by Mr. Prynn, we have this:

"THAT Anno 1279, 8 Edward I, upon the "Archbiſhop's Requeſt, the King iſſued a Writ "to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LONDON,

"to

" to apprehend certain Apoſtates, qui receſſe-
" runt ab unitate Catholicæ Fidei: But they " were in Judaiſmo, i. e. the Jewry; and ſo
" out of the Power and Juriſdiction of the Ma-
" giſtrates of LONDON. Upon this the " Archbiſhop wrote to the Biſhop of Bath and
" Wells, who was Chancellor, ſignifying, that
" thoſe Enemies of the Faith were yet in Balli-
" va Majoris & Vicecom. Lond. ſed in Judaiſmo
" ſub Cuſtodia & Poteſtate Conſtabularii Turris,
" ubi ingredi non poſſunt, ut dicitur, ſine ſpeciali
" mandato". Some of theſe Enemies of the Faith, and Apoſtates from Catholick Unity, ſeem to be ſuch Prieſts as had Wives; for in the ſame Letter it is added, that he would take away that Word Dudum in his former Writ, Quoniam nunc ipſorum Uxores ſunt ſicut prius.

THE Circuit of this Hoſpital, or Free Chapel of St. Catharine, is as follows: From the Eaſt Gate of the Tower by the Thames, unto the Bank beyond St. Catharine's Dock Eaſtward; and from thence through all the Lane which leadeth from the ſaid Dock, and in and by every Part of the ſaid Lane, unto the King's Highway Northward; which Way lieth between the Abbey of Grace, and the ſaid Hoſpital, or Free Chapel, and leadeth from the City of LONDON unto Ratcliff: And alſo from the ſaid Way, againſt the ſame Lane, unto the Tower Ditch Weſtward, and from thence to the River Thames Southward.

THERE are ſeveral antient Records concerning this Knighten Guild, or Portſoken, that afterwards came into the Poſſeſſion of the Canons of Trinity Church, and likewiſe concerning the Hoſpital of St. Catharine; and many Charters of Kings of England, ſetting out the Liberties Extent, and Privileges of them; authentick Copies whereof are ſtill remaining in certain old written Books in the Guildhall of LONDON; among which is one, To prove that the Hoſpital of St. Catharine, with the Mills, and all that belong to it, together with the Tower Ditch, all Eaſt-Smithfield, without the Poſtern, before the Abbey of Grace, with the Right Hand Part of the Street leading along by Dudding's Pond, are, and Time out of Mind have been, within the Liberty of the City of LONDON; and Parcel of Portſoken Ward, without Aldgate, in the Suburbs.

THE Mayor and Commonalty of the City of LONDON affirm, that in the Time of the Conqueror, and long before, the ſaid Ward of Portſoken was called the Ward of Angliſh Knightgilden: And that afterwards, about the eighth of King Henry I, Ralph, the Son of Algode, Wolfard le Deveriſh, Orgar le Prude, with divers other ſubſtantial Citizens of LONDON, deſcended of the antient Race of the Engliſh Knights, being Lords of the Liberty of the ſaid Guild, in the Soken aforeſaid, and were ſeized of all the Lands in the ſaid Soken, (as by the Charter of the ſaid King Henry it appeareth) did bequeath the ſaid Soken and Lands unto the Church and Canons of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, LONDON; which Gift, the ſaid Henry, by his Charter (which the Mayor and Commonalty have here to ſhew) alſo confirmed. Upon Pretext of which Gift and Confirmation, Norman, at that Time Prior, and the Convent of the Church aforeſaid, as alſo their Succeſſors, ſtood a long Time poſſeſſed. Afterwards, among other Things, Ralph the Prior, with the Canons of the ſaid Church, did grant unto Maud, Queen of England, Wife to King Stephen, a certain Parcel of Land in the ſaid Soken, (the very ſame, namely, upon which the ſaid Hoſpital of St. Catharine is now founded) together with all the Mills there in the Shambles, in Lieu of ſix Yard Land in the Manor of Bracking, in the County of Hertford; as by two Patents of the ſaid King and Queen made upon that Occaſion, is manifeſtly declared. Moreover they affirm, That whereas the Lord Edward I, ſometime King of England, had not any Piece of Ground of his own proper Lands near enough to his Tower of LONDON; whereupon to build up his Wall, and to make his Ditch about the Tower, which he purpoſed to do anew, he purchaſed of the Maſter, Brethren, and Siſters of the Hoſpital of St. Catharine, by the Tower aforeſaid, a certain Plat of Ground, with the Appurtenances, in Eaſt-Smithfield, adjoining unto the Tower, both for the laying of the Sand, Gravel, and Marle, which ſhould be digged out of the Ditch, and that which ſhould ſerve for the repairing the Wall aforeſaid: And that he paid unto the Maſter, Brothers, and Siſters aforeſaid, five Marks, ſix Shillings, and nine Pence, both for the Purchaſe of the ſaid Plat, and the Recompence of their Loſs, long ſince ſuſtained by the Enlargement of the Ditch, and Reparation of the Wall aforeſaid; which he cauſed, for himſelf, and his Succeſſors, to be yearly payable out of the Exchequer; which five Marks, ſix Shillings and nine-pence, the Maſter, Brothers, and Siſters (for the Time being) of the ſaid Hoſpital, have ever ſince the ſaid Grant received, and do actually at this Time receive by Virtue of the ſaid Patent, which they now have by them, &c. The Copy whereof was entered upon Record in the Chamber of Guildhall; and acknowledged by them before Nicholas Brembre, then Mayor, and the Aldermen. They affirm alſo, that in the 14th Year of King Edward II. at ſuch Time as he held Aſſizes in the ſaid Tower, it was proved that the ſaid Ward of Portſoken (heretofore called Engliſh Knightgeld) was in, and of the Liberties of LONDON; and that, ſo often as any Tax was to be raiſed for the King, or to be aſſeſſed for the Commonalty of LONDON, upon the Commoners of the ſaid City, or that any other Aſſeſſment was to be made by the ſaid Commonalty, either for the raiſing of ſome Wall, making of any Encloſure, or for the Defence of the City, that all the People inhabiting the ſaid Ward, were accuſtomed to pay the ſaid Taxes, like other Freemen of the City; and the ſaid Aſſeſſments were wont to be levied upon them, as upon other Freemen of the City, as by the Tranſcript of the Rolls of the ſaid Aſſizes of the Kings, now remaining in the Treaſury of the Guildhall of the ſame City, moſt clearly appeareth.

THEY further affirm, that the Lord Edw. III. King of England, in the 17th Year of his Reign, directed by his Letter unto John Hamond, at that Time Mayor of his City of LONDON, and his Majeſty's Eſcheator in the ſame, in which Letters he made Rehearſal of all the former Buſineſs concerning the Wall and Ditch of the Tower, made in his Granfather's Time. He rehearſed alſo, how Ralph of Sandwich, and John de Weſton, Conſtables of the Tower, did let out the ſame Place by Parcels unto divers Men, without Leave or Licence had, either from the Kings, his Grandfather, Father, or himſelf, and that the ſaid Place was then built upon, and rented out for 40 s. a Year, and that himſelf had given out Commiſſions to enquire into the Reaſons, Manner, Right, and Value of every Thing, &c. And that the ſaid John Hammond, making Enquiry hereupon, made Return of all into the Chancery, &c.

THEY affirm moreover, that all the Lands and Tenements upon the aforeſaid Right Hand of the Way by Dudding's Pond, and about the ſaid Places of Eaſt-Smithfield, Tower-Hill, and Romeland, circularly ſituated, were, and have been, in in the Time of holding the Aſſizes of the ſaid King, impleaded and ſued within the ſaid City, and not elſewhere, as by the Evidences of the ſaid Lands and Tenements, upon Record enrolled in the Guildhall, &c. appeareth.

THEY further ſay, That in the Times of all the former Kings, and Aſſizes (Time out of Mind) ſo often as any Miſhap or Caſualty, ſuch as Murder, Drowning, or other indirect Death of any Perſon, in any of the ſaid Places aforementioned, hath fallen out, upon which there was any Enquiry to be taken, or any Summons, Attachment, or Execution to be made in any of the ſaid Places, yea, and which is more, even within the Tower itſelf, and at ſuch Time as the King (now and then) hath been preſent, have the Sheriffs, Coroners, and other Officers of the ſaid City of LONDON, for the Time being, and no other uſed to make ſuch Queſts of Enquiry, Summons, Attachments, and Executions and had Right ſo to do, as is it is moſt manifeſtly to be proved by divers Rolls of the Crown, and other Records of the Times aforeſaid, now in the ſaid Treaſury.

THEY ſay moreover, that amongſt other Liberties granted by the King's Predeceſſors unto the Citizens of LONDON, and ratified in divers Parliaments, this expreſly is one. "That no "Arreſt, Attachment, or Execution, be made by "any Officers of the King's within the ſaid Liber-"ty, either by Writ, or without Writ, but only "by the Officers of the City." By all which Charters, Letters, Patents, Bills, Acts of Aſſize, Writs, Inqueſts, Returns, Rolls of the Eſcheators, and Crown-Office, Aſſizes, Pleadings, Enrollments, Freedoms, and moſt plentiful other Kinds of Records, and Proofs, it may eaſily and undoubtedly be concluded, that the ſaid Hoſpital of St. Catharine's, with the Mills, and other its Appurtenances, as alſo the whole Tower-Ditch, with the Lands of Eaſt-Smithfield, without the Poſtern before the Abbey of Grace, together with the Right Side of the Street going by Dudding's Pond, as alſo the whole Ditch and Plain without the Tower, called Romeland, with all the Houſes and Gardens round about them, have all the Time aforeſaid been within the Compaſs of the Liberty of the City.

THE ſelf ſame Copy of what is laſt above, is ſomething differently recorded alſo in Book Dunthorn.

THAT the Hoſpital, Ditch, and the Tower-Hill, are of the Pariſh of St. Botolph Aldgate, and Part of Portſoken Ward. That another Part by Romeland, and the Thames, towards the Poſtern by St. Catharine's Hoſpital, were of the Pariſh of Allhallows-Barking, and of the Ward of the Tower of LONDON. That Queen Maud was the Foundreſs of Trinity Church within Aldgate; that the Ditch begun by the Citizens in Richard I's Time, was for the Defence of the City. That there is another Soken within the Walls of the City, called the Inner-Soken, which reacheth from Aldgate, even unto that Gate of the Tower called Cinigate, which Soken is within the Liberties of the City, as by ſome Records kept by the Prior doth appear. That the Inhabitants of Portſoken and the Tower, are to be impleaded only in the Courts of the City, for all Matters, Cauſes, and Contracts howſoever ariſing. That the Tower hath no proper Court of its own, but only the Court of the Baron, which is no Court of Record, as by Records exemplified in the King's-Bench appeareth. That when any Murder, or Drowning hath been within the ſaid Hoſpital, or Tower, the City Officers have attached the Malefactors within the Tower, and have carried the ſaid Men ſo arreſted into ſome of the King's Priſons within the City. That when the Juſtices Itinerant have uſed to come to keep Aſſizes in the Tower, the Officers of the City have had the keeping both of the Inner and Outer Gates of the ſaid Tower, which pertained to the Office of a Servant, but a Servant of the City. That the Sheriff of LONDON hath had the Charge of all the Priſons in the Tower, ſo often as the ſaid Juſtices Itinerant have come, as appears in many Rolls of the Crown, and of the ſaid Itinerant Juſtices.

ON the Eaſt, and by North of the Tower, lie Eaſt-Smithfield and Tower-Hill, two Plats of Ground ſo called, without the Wall of the City. And Eaſt from them both was ſometime a Monaſtry, called New Abbey, (and the Abbey of Graces) founded by King Edward III. in the Year 1359, upon Occaſion as followeth.

IN the Year 1348, 23 Edward III. the firſt great Peſtilence in his Time, began and increaſed ſo ſore, that for Want of Room in Church-yards, to bury the Dead of the City, and of the Suburbs, one John Corey, Clerk, procured of Nicholas, Prior of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, a Spot of Ground near Eaſt-Smithfield, for the Burial of them that died, with Condition that it might be called the Church-yard of the Holy Trinity; which Ground he cauſed, by the Aid of divers devout Citizens, to be incloſed with a Wall of Stone. Robert Elſing, Son of William Elſing, gave 5 l. thereunto, and the ſame was dedicated by Ralph Stratford, Biſhop of LONDON, where innumerable Bodies of the Dead were afterwards buried, and a Chapel built in the ſame Place, to the Honour of God. To which King Edward ſetting his Eye (having before, in a Tempeſt on the Sea, and Peril of drowning, made a Vow to build a Monaſtery, to the Honour of God, and our Lady of Grace, if God would grant him Grace to come ſafe to Land) built there a Monaſtery, placing an Abbot and Monks of the Ciſtercian, or White Order. The Bounds of this Plat of Ground, together with a Decree of Tithes thereof, are expreſſed in the Charter.

THIS Abbey of St. Mary of Graces, had a Charter from King Edward III. in the 25th of his Reign. Another Occaſion of the Foundation ſeems to appear thence:

Rex dilectis ſibi in Chriſto Abbati et Conventui de Bello loco Regis, Salutem. Quia ad invocationem, omnipotentis Dei et Domini Jeſu Chriſti ac glorioſiſſime matris ſuæ Marie pluries tam in terra quam in Mari, in bellis et in periculis aliis, ſenſimus nos adjutos, Volentes provide in memoriam Graciarum hujus modi, cultum ipſius Dei et genetricis ſuæ, &c. The Subſtance of which Record is, "That the King founded "this Houſe in Remembrance and Acknowledge-"ment of the Goodneſs of Almighty God, and "of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and of the Bleſſed "Virgin Mary, whom he had often called upon, "and found helpful to him, by Sea and by Land, "in Wars and other Perils, and therefore or-"der'd this Houſe to be called, The King's "Free Chapel of the Bleſſed Virgin of GRACES, "in memoriam Gratiarum, i. e. In Memory of "theſe Graces, or Favours, which he had re-"ceived from her." Therefore, the more amply to dilate the Worſhip of the ſaid God, and his Mother, he now began to found and endow this Free Chapel of the Ciſtercian Order, as a filial Houſe to be ſubject to the Monaſtery of Beaulieu, of the ſame King's founding, and appointed the Abbot and his Succeſſors yearly to viſit it, or as Need ſhould require, and duly to correct what ſhould require the Rod of Correction. He order'd the ſame Abbot to ſend ſome of his Fellow Monks of his Convent, to ſerve God and the Bleſſed Virgin, in the ſaid Chapel, under the regular Obſervance of the ſaid Order. And he appoointed Walter de Sta Cruce, i. e. Holy-Croſs, Croſs, to be the firſt Preſident of the ſaid Chapel, whom he enjoined kindly to receive and treat the ſaid Religious, who were to profeſs Religion at the ſaid Free Chapel.

By a Patent of 19 R. II, it appears, That there belonged to this Monaſtery of St. Mary de Graciis, the Manors of Graveſend, and ſeveral other Manors in Kent, alſo Rents in Woolwich, and the Manor of Poplar. And by a Patent 1 H. IV, it had divers Manors in the Counties of Devon, Cornwall, and Somerſet.

Joan Hull, Wife of Stephen Hull, Citizen and Pannarius [Draper] of LONDON, by her Will, dated January 1425, gave a Tenement called Blackleſte, in the Pariſh of St. Bennet Fink, LONDON, for ever, to John, Abbot of the Monaſtery of St. Mary de Graciis, of the Ciſtercian Order, and the Convent of the ſame, to pray for her Soul.

This Houſe at the general Suppreſſion, was valued at 546 l. 10 d. it was ſurrendered in the Year 1539, 30 Henry VIII, ſince which Time, the ſaid Monaſtery being cleaned, pulled down by Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt. and others of late Time, in the Place thereof is built a large Store-houſe for Victuals, and convenient Ovens are built there for baking of Bisket to ſerve his Majeſty's Ships; this is now called the Victualling Office, and is under the Management of Commiſſioners, appointed by the Treaſury, who, at preſent, are, Victualling Office.

They have alſo Agents at Portſmouth, Plymouth, Gibraltar, and other Places uſed as Harbours for the King's Ships.

The Grounds adjoining, and belonging to the ſaid Abbey, are employed in building of ſmall Tenements.

King Henry III. in the 13th of his Reign granted, That a Fair ſhould be held at Eaſt-Smithfield for 15 Days, viz. from the Eve of Pentecoſt to the Octaves of Trinity; and the ſaid King ſent his Briefs to the ſeveral Sheriffs of Lincoln, Gloceſter, Kent, Worceſter, York, Norfolk, and Suffolk, and to the Mayor and Sheriffs of LONDON to proclaim the ſame. Et idea tibi precipimus, quod predict feriam, &c. i. e. "And therefore we command you, that "you cauſe to be proclaim'd the beforeſaid "Fair throughout the whole Bailiwick, as is "aforeſaid, cauſing all Merchants of your "Bailiwick to know, that they may ſecurely "come to the Fair. Witneſs the King at "Weſtminſter the 8th Day of February.

And 30 Ewd. III. there was a Grant to the Maſter, Brethren, and Chaplains and Siſters of St. Catharine, that they for ever ſhall have one Fair upon Tower-Hill, [now called Little Tower-Hill] over-againſt the Abbey of St. Mary Graces. There was alſo a Charter for this 20 Henry VI.

For Tower-Hill, as the ſame greatly diminiſhed by building of Tenements and Garden Plats, ſo it was in the Year of Chriſt 1593, on the North Side thereof, and at the Weſt End of Hog-Street [or Hog-Lane] beautified by certain Alms-houſes there, ſtrongly built with Brick and Timber, and cover'd with Slate for the Poor, by the Merchant-Taylors of LONDON, in the Place of ſome Cottages, given to them, by Richard Hill, ſome time a Maſter of that Company. Certain Timber, for that Uſe, being alſo given by Anthony Radcliffe, of the ſame Society, Alderman.

In theſe Alms-houſes 14 charitable Brethren of the ſaid Merchant-Taylors, placed 14 poor ſole Women, which received each of them of their Founders 16 d. or better, weekly, beſide 8 l. 15 s. yearly, paid out of the common Treaſury of the ſame Corporation for Fuel.

Alms-houſes at Tower-Hill.

In this Hog-Lane, now mentioned, lying on the Back-ſide of Whitechapel, were eight Acres of Land, which about the Year 1574 were in the Poſſeſſion of one Benedict Spinola, a rich Italian Merchant; whereof he made twenty Tenter Yards and certain Gardens. Theſe, ſome pretended, were firſt incloſed by him, being before open and common. And hence it came to paſs, that in the Year 1584 it was preſented as an Annoyance to the Archers, and all the Queen's Liege People; and a Precept was awarded to the Tenants and Occupiers of the Premiſes to remove their Pales and Fences, and all Buildings made thereupon: For now many Clothiers dwelt here, who hereupon applied themſelves to the Lord Treaſurer of England, and brought Witneſs to the contrary, ſhewing, that the ſame Field, before it was ſo converted, as then it was, was a Piece of Ground ſeveral, not common, nor ever commonly uſed by any Archers, being very unfit for Archers to ſhoot in, by reaſon of ſtanding Puddles, moſt noiſome Lay-ſtalls, and filthy Ditches in and about the ſame. Alſo the Way called Hog-Lane was ſo foul and deep in the Winter-time, that no Man could paſs by the ſame. And in Summer-time Men would not paſs thereby for fear of Infection, by Means of the Filthineſs that lay there; ſo that the Preſenters were utterly deceived, and not well informed in their Preſentments.

Afterwards Benedict Spinola beſtowed great Coſt and Charges upon levelling and cleanſing the Premiſes, and made divers Tenter Yards, by means whereof the common Ways and Paſſages, about the ſaid Ground, were greatly amended and enlarged, and poor Clothworkers much relieved, becauſe ſeveral Tenter Yards in and about LONDON were decayed and pulled down, and the Ground converted to other Uſes; and becauſe Queen Elizabeth had juſt before reſtrained, by Proclamation, all future Buildings and Encloſures in the Suburbs.

From the Weſt Part of this Tower-Hill, towards Aldgate, being a long continued Street, among among other ſmaller Buildings in that Row, was ſome time an Abbey of Nuns of the Order of St. Clare, called the Minories, founded by Edmund, Earl of Lancaſter, Leiceſter, and Derby, Brother to King Edward I, in the Year 1293, the Length of which Abbey was 15 Perches and ſeven Feet, near the King's Highway, as appeareth by a Deed, dated 1303. A Plague, or Peſtilence, being in this City in the Year 1515, there died in this Houſe of Nuns profeſſed, to the Number of 27, beſides other Lay-People, Servants in the Houſe. This Houſe was ſurrender'd by Dame Elizabeth Salvage, the laſt Abbeſs there, to King Henry VIII, in the 30th Year of his Reign, and in the Year of Chriſt 1539.

THE Licence for Founding this Houſe, bore Date 21 Edward I, to the Abbeſs of St. Clare without Aldgate. There was a Charter granted, 9 Edward II, that the Siſters Minoreſſes, without Aldgate, ſint Quiete de Tillagie, &c. i. e. Be quit of Tallage on Account of their Lands and Tenements in the City of LONDON. In another Charter, 14 Edward II, it is called The Abbey of the Minoreſſes of St. Mary of the Order of St. Clare, without the Walls of the City: In which Charter are confirmed certain Meſſes of theirs in the Vintry, in Woodſtreet, Lad-Lane, Old Fiſh-ſtreet, and one Meſs and two Shops in Lombard-Street, Chriſt-Church-Lane, and Shirburgh-Lane; gotten of divers well-affected Perſons: What the Charters and Liberties of theſe Minoreſſes were, may be ſeen by the Confirmation thereof in 1 Henry V. alſo 16 and 25, and 2 Henry 4, which remain in the Tower Records. The Manor of Apeldercome was granted to the Prioreſs of the Minoreſſes without Aldgate, 1 Henry IV, and 22 Henry VI, a Meſs called the Herteſhorn, in the Pariſh of St. Mary Matfelon, was granted to them by Nicholas Walſhe, 7 Edward IV. To all the reſt let this be added, Theſe Nuns at firſt brought over by Blanch, Queen of Navarre.

THAT this Houſe was firſt erected to receive Nuns that were to be brought over by Blanch Queen of Navarre, Wife to the aboveſaid Earl Edmund: And they were profeſſed to ſerve GOD, the bleſſed Virgin, and St. Francis, as appears by this Charter of Licence, which the ſaid Edmund obtained of the King his Brother, the 21ſt of his Reign, viz.

Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Volentes Edmundo fratri noſtro gratiam facere ſpecialem, dedimus ei licentiam, &c. quod ipſe placeam quam habet ex dono Thomæ de Bredeſtrete in Parochia Sancti Botolphi extra Aldgate, dare poſſit, &c. Monialibus de Ordine Minorum quæ per Nobilem Dominam Blancam Reginam Navarre, conſortem ejuſdem Fratris noſtri in Angliam ſunt venturæ & merituræ, ac Deo & beate Marie ac beato Franciſco ſervituræ, ad quandam Domum ibidem conſtruendam, & habitandam, &c.

THIS diſſolved Monaſtery being a large old Meſſuage, became a Dwelling-Houſe for divers great Men ſucceſſively, whom the King pleaſed to allow to reſide there. One of theſe, and the firſt, was John Clark, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, who was buried in the Minories Church; and afterwards his Corpſe reſted in Aldgate Church, as an old Inſcription there in Braſs teſtified: Afterwards, ſome Officers of the Tower had their Dwelling there. In the Year 1552, it came to Henry Duke of Suffolk by Patent from King Edward VI, "Granting the chief Meſſuage, or "Manſion, called The Minory Houſe, within the "Precinct of the ſaid Monaſtery, called the Mi-"nories, without Aldgate, LONDON; and "divers Houſes in LONDON belonging to "the ſaid Monaſtery, which extend to the clear "Value of 36*l.* 11*s.* 5*d. ob.* to hold in free So-"cage; and the aforeſaid capital Houſe in Ca-"pite.

A perfect Account of the Monuments of ſuch Perſons of Quality as were buried in this Monaſtery, is wanting. One Matild Truſſell was here interred, and the Lady Elizabeth Keryel, who bequeathed her Body, by Will, Ann. 1419, to be buried in the Minories Church, LONDON, near the Tomb of her Mother, the aforeſaid Matild Truſſel: And Elizabeth, Dutcheſs of Norfolk, in the Year 1506, by her laſt Will, ordered her Body to be laid in the Nuns Choir, in the Minories without Aldgate, LONDON; nigh unto the Place where Anne Montgomery lay buried.

LADY Ellen, Minoriſſa Domus Sanctæ Claræ, Aldgate, Lond. Anno 1381, Siſter to Lord John de Nevyl, Lord of Raby.

IN the Place of this Houſe of Nuns is built ſeveral Storehouſes for Armour, and Warlike Proviſions, with divers Workhouſes to the ſame Purpoſe.

WHILE England was called a Commonwealth, in the Minories was a great Workhouſe ſet up, belonging to a Corporation for the Poor of the City of LONDON, and Liberties thereof; which had a Preſident and Governors: To which alſo belonged a ſmall Parcel of Ground, which the ſaid Preſident and Governors intended to improve by Building, for the Increaſe of the Revenue, to be employed for the Education of poor Children, and employing and relieving the Poor belonging to the ſaid Corporation: For the allowing of which there was a Proviſo in the Act, made Anno 1656, againſt multiplying Buildings in and about the Suburbs.

The TRINITY MINORIES.

Pariſh Church of St. Trinity.

HERE is a ſmall Pariſh Church for the Inhabitants of the Cloſe, or ſuch as dwell within the Precincts of the diſſolved Monaſtery, called St. Trinity. This Church being greatly decayed, was repaired at the Charge of the Pariſh ſeveral Times between the Years 1618, and again in 1636, as appears by a North Window. It eſcaped the Violence of the remarkable Fire in 1666, and being very old, was in the Year 1706 taken down, and rebuilt from the Ground, as is hereafter deſcribed. This new Church coſt re-erecting about 700*l.* towards which 200*l.* was given by Daniel King, Eſq; 100*l.* by the Lady Prichard, Widow of Sir William Prichard, Knt. Alderman and Lord Mayor, Anno 1683, and the other 400*l.* was raiſed by a Pound Rate, aſſeſſed on the Pariſhioners.

THE Walls of this new Church are Brick, the Roof flat, covered with plain Tile, the Floor is paved with Stone, and there are two Iſles.

AS to its Ornaments, the Church is new pewed with Oak, and there are Galleries on the South, and Part of the Weſt Sides. It is wainſcotted about ſix Feet high, and the Pulpit finnier'd. The Altar-Piece (which was erected Anno 1706) is adorned with four Pilaſters, their Entablature and Compaſs Pediment, under which is a Glory, in the Reſemblance of a Dove deſcending, the Rays, &c. carved; as is alſo a Lamp on the Pediment, between two others on the Cornice. The Intercolumns are the Commandments done in Black, on Gold, under a painted Glory; and the Pater-Noſter and Creed are Gold on Black, each under two carved Cherubims. The Communion Table is placed on a Foot-pace of White Marble, vein'd with Blue, which is incloſed with Rail and Balliſter.

THE Dimenſions of this little Church are in Length 63 Feet, Breadth 24, Altitude about 20, there is no Steeple built in Form of other Towers, but but this at the Weſt End is a little higher than the reſt of the Church, with a handſome Turret.

Monuments.

On the North Wall of the Chancel is a handſome Monument, with two Figures of a Man and Woman kneeling, and a Child behind the Man, thus inſcribed:

Death firſt did ſtrike Sir John, here tomb'd in Clay,
And then enforc'd his Son to follow faſt;
Of PELHAM's Line, this Knight was Chief and Stay:
By this, behold! all Fleſh muſt die at laſt.
But BLETSOW, Lord, thy Siſter moſt may moan;
Both Mate and Son hath left her here alone.

Sir John Pelham, died the 13th of October, 1580.
Oliver Pelham, his Son, died the 19th of January, 1584.

About a Marble Stone in the Chancel, cloſe by the Communion Table, were theſe Words (engraven in Braſs, moſt of which is now gone.)

Conſtantia Lucy, D. Thomæ Lucy, Junioris, Militis Aurati, &c. D. Conſtantia Uxoris [ſelectæ] Fœminæ Filia, natu maxima, Annum agens plus minus undecimum pridie Idus Februarii in Domino, quàm feliciſſime, hic poſita fato fungitur Anno Dom. 1596.

On the midſt of the Stone is the Effigy of a Woman in Braſs, praying, and theſe Verſes:

Naſcitur & Morimur: Non exorabile Fatum,
Vita fugax, fragilis, lubrica, vana, brevis.
Ocyus in Campis flos formoſiſſimus aret,
Optima prætereunt, deteriora manent.
Rapta immaturo fato CONSTANTIA LUCY,
Nunc jacet; & quondam lucida, Luca caret,
Ante Annos Conſtans, humilis, manſueta, modeſta,
Dixeris, & Paphia, membra polita manu.
In vere ætatis preſenſit frigora brumæ;
Sic, Sic præproperê præcoqua poma cadunt.

On another Stone, near the laſt is this Inſcription:

Hic jacet Corpus Francis Martuni, Generoſi, qui obiit 14 die Septembris, Anno Domini 1606.
Hæc Verba ſæpiſſime in ore illius viventis. O Domine, ſecundum merita mea, noli me, judicare. Deprecor Majeſtatem tuam ut miſericorditer deleat iniquitas meas.
Credo Videre bona Domini in Terra Viventium.

In the Body of the Church is a Monument with this Inſcription:

Vivere Cornices multos dicuntur in Annos:
Cur nos anguſtâ concidione ſumos?

The Figure of a Child.

Henricus Nowelus, filius D. Johannes Noweli Doctoris Medici, Optimæ Indolis puerulus, unicum patris ſolatium. Natus 23, Julii 1598. & mortus ex Atrophia 4 Auguſti, 1599. hic ſepultus jacet.

Melioribus utere Fatis.

On the North Side of the Chancel, alſo is a Monument in Memory of Colonel William Legge, eldeſt Son of ſix to Edward Legge and Mary Walſh, which Edward was only Son to William Legge, and Anne Bermingham, of the only noble and antient Family of the Bermingham's of Athenree in the Kingdom of Ireland. He was Groom of the Bedchamber, and Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance to King Charles I. and in the Civil War was Governor of Cheſter and Oxford, and, upon the happy Reſtauration of the Royal Family in 1660, was, in Conſideration of his untainted Fidelity to the King, and many and great Sufferings, reſtored to his Place of Lieutenant-General of the Ordnance, and Groom of his Majeſty's Bedchamber, by King Charles II; and as a farther Mark of his Royal Favour, Superintendent and Treaſurer to the Ordnance. He married Elizabeth, eldeſt Daughter to Sir William Waſhington, and Anne Villars, Daughter to Sir George Villars, and Siſter to the moſt noble Prince, George, Duke of Buckingham, by whom he had three Sons and two Daughters. He died October 13, 1672, in the 83d Year of his Age, and lieth in a Vault under this Place.

A little Weſtward of the laſt, is a handſome white and veined Marble Monument, adorned with a Cornice, Cartouch Pediment, and an Urn, under which is the following Inſcription:

To the Memory of the Right Honourable George Lord Dartmouth, diſtinguiſhed by his early and eminent Deſerts, and many high Marks of Royal Truſt and Favour; he was Governor of Portſmouth, Maſter of the Ordnance, Privy Counſellor and Cabinet to King Charles and King James II. and Maſter of the Horſe to King James. After many ſingular Proofs of his Courage, Conduct, and Affection to his Country, given in ſeveral Engagements at Sea; he commanded in chief, and carried the Flag, as Admiral of the whole Engliſh Fleet, in two ſolemn Expeditions.
He died October 25, 1691, in the 44*th Year of his Age, and lies interred near this Place.*
He married Barbara, Daughter and Coheir of Sir James Archbold in Staffordſhire, by whom he had Iſſue one Son and ſeven Daughters, two of which lie in the ſame Vault, as do alſo his Lordſhip's Father and Mother aforeſaid, and Philip, eldeſt Son of Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave, of Edral in Cumberland, who married Mary, the eldeſt Daughter, and deceaſed Auguſt 2, 1688.

The Incumbent or Curate of this Pariſh, (for it is neither Rectory nor Vicarage inſtitutive) holds the ſame by an Inſtrument of Donation under the Great Seal of England, but of late, ſaith Mr. Newcourt, in his Repertorium, theſe Curates have pretended Exemption from being ſubject to the Biſhop of LONDON, as Ordinary, on Purpoſe to defend their Marrying without Banns or Licence, notwithſtanding the Reſtoring the Place by the Letters Patents of King Edward VI. and Queen Mary.

The Miniſter hath 25 l. per Ann. collected by the Pariſh, beſides Surplice Fees, and there was formerly more paid by the Maſter of the Ordnance, which is loſt for want of being claimed.

The Curate is the Reverend Dr. Palmer, and here are two Lecturers, Mr. Lee, of St. Catharine's and Mr. Morris, Lecturer of St. Bartholomew's, near the Royal Exchange. Each of theſe Gentlemen are paid 20 s. for every Sermon, by a Subſcription, raiſed by Perſons who reſort to this Church. The Curate preaches a Preparation Sermon Gratis, every Friday at 5 o'Clock in the Afternoon, before the firſt Sunday in the Month.

Prayers are Wedneſdays, Fridays, and Holidays throughout the Year.

The Veſtry is general.

The

The Pariſh Officers are,

Two Church-Wardens,
One Overſeer of the Poor,
One Conſtable,
One Headborough, and
One Scavenger.

THE Bounds of this Pariſh are, on the Weſt Side, all within the Rails by the Great Minories, and from the South End of the Rails, Haydon-Yard, both Sides the Way, with the new Square, and Parker's-Garden, built into Warehouſes; and at the North End of the Rails, extend down the Little Minories to the Church, taking in all Yards, Courts, &c. comprizing in all 123 Houſes.

AT the Upper End of the Street called the Minories, Eaſt of Aldgate, lieth a large Street and Highway; on the North Side of which, the firſt Building was the Pariſh Church of St. Botolph, in a large Cemitery or Church-Yard.

The Pariſh Church of St. BOTOLPH ALDGATE.

St. Botolph's Aldgate.

IT is ſo called from being dedicated to St. Botolph the Briton.

IN this Church was founded a Fraternity, or Guild of the Holy Trinity, as before-mentioned, to which belonged a Meſſuage and Houſe, called Trinity-Hall, otherwiſe the Common Hall of the ſaid Fraternity; to which belonged eight Meſſuages, commonly called Trinity-Alley, ſold with other Things to Edward VI. for 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

THE Steeple is towered with Spires at each Corner, a Lanthorn ſtanding in the Middle: Into the Street a convenient Dial, for the Uſe of Paſſengers, extends itſelf from the Side of the ſaid Steeple.

WE may gather ſome Knowledge what this Church of St. Botolph was about 300 Years ago, and how enlarged, from an antient Will, bearing Date September 5, 1418, in the Regiſtry of the Biſhops of LONDON, viz. That there then was an Iſle added to it, called the new Iſle of St. Catharine's; and a new Chapel, dedicated to St. Mary, made equal and like to the ſaid St. Catharine's Iſle; and alſo a new Steeple. The Donor was Robert Burford, a Bell-Founder, a wealthy Man, as it ſeems of this Pariſh, and charitably diſpoſed, who, by Will, gave 40*l.* towards the building the new Iſle of St. Catharine, and towards the making and raiſing of St. Mary's Chapel to the ſame Height and Form of the new Iſle of St. Catharine, 40 Marks; and towards the building of a new Steeple 40*l.* more; and left it to his Executors, to ſee the whole Covering of the new Iſle of the Chapel of St. Catharine, in the ſaid Church, to be compleatly finiſhed, in the Carpentry, at his proper Coſt and Charges. All which appear by the Words of the Will.

THE Church was new built at the ſpecial Charges of the Priors of the Holy Trinity, Patrons thereof, as appeareth by the Arms of that Houſe, engraven on the Stone Work. It was repaired and beautified in the Year of our Lord 1621; and in the Year 1633 all the Ground thro' the Church was new laid and levelled. In doing of which, where before, from the lower End of the Church to the upper End, it was all but one even Floor, without any Aſcent or Riſing, they have made an eaſy Aſcent at the Beginning of the Chancel; and in that another at the Place where they give the Communion. Farther gracing and enriching it with a handſome new Table, and the whole Chancel with new Pews, very decently wrought and diſpoſed.

THERE are but few Monuments in this Church.

Henry Jordan founded a Chantry there. John Romany Ollarie, and Agnes, his Wife, were buried thereabout, Anno 1408. Richard Cheſter, Alderman, one of the Sheriffs, 1484. Thomas Lord Darcy of the North, Knight of the Garter, beheaded 1537. Sir Nicholas Carew of Bedington in Surrey, Knight of the Garter, beheaded 1538. Sir Arthur Darcy, youngeſt Son to Thomas Lord Darcy, deceas'd, at the new Abbey on Tower-Hill, were all buried here.

THERE is a Vault under Ground, purpoſely made (as appeareth) for the whole Family: Over which Vault (being in the Eaſt End of the Chancel, but leaning ſomewhat to the North) is an antient Tomb of Alabaſter, being the Figure of a Man, lying along, as in a Sleep, with a white Sheet wrapt about him, only the Face, Breaſt and Arms naked, having theſe Lines thereon.

Here lieth Thomas Lord Darcy of the North, and ſome Time of the Order of the Garter. Sir Nicholas Carew, Knt. ſome Time of the Garter. Lady Elizabeth Carew, Daughter to Sir Francis Brian, Knt. And Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt. younger Son to the above-named Lord Darcy. And Lady Mary his dear Wife, Daughter to Sir Nicholas Carew, Knt. who had ten Sons and five Daughters. Here lie Charles, William, and Philip, Mary and Urſula, Sons and Daughters to the ſaid Sir Arthur, and Mary his Wife, whoſe Souls GOD take to his infinite Mercy. Amen.

ON the North Side of this Tomb there is a ſmall Monument, fixed in the Wall, bearing this Inſcription.

Here lieth Sir Edward Darcy, Knt. third Son of Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt. of the Privy Chamber to the late Queen Elizabeth. He married the Daughter of Thomas Aſteley, Eſq; by whom he had fifteen Children. Sir Robert Darcy, Knt. his eldeſt Son, cauſed him to be buried in this Vault among his Anceſtors, according to his Deſire. He died at his Houſe called Dartford Place in Kent, Octob. 28, Anno Dom. 1612, he being 69 Years old.

THIS Thomas Lord Darcy, and Sir Nicholas Carew (who was Maſter of the King's Horſe) were both beheaded on the Tower-Hill: The former becauſe he was one (howſoever conſtrained thereto by the Rebels) of the Commotion in Yorkſhire; who oppoſed the Alienation of the Abbey Lands, by King Henry VIII. Ann. 1536. The Second for being of Council with Henry (Courtney) Marquis of Exeter, and Henry Poole, Lord Mountague, who were indicted and found guilty of High-Treaſon, for contriving to maintain, promote, and advance, one Reginald Poole, Dean of Exeter, a great Enemy to the King, then beyond the Sea, and to deprive the King, and ſet up the ſaid Poole in his Room, Anno 1539.

Sir Arthur Darcy, here mentioned, was firſt buried in the new Abbey of Eaſtminſter, where he he deceaſed ; for what reaſon he was removed is not related; moſt likely, on the Account of this being the Burial-Place of his Anceſtors. See Weaver's Antient Funeral Monuments, Printed in 1635, p. 426. See alſo Stow's Annals.

Fuller, in his Church Hiſtory, Book VI. p. 324. in order to vindicate the Name and Character of this Lord Darcy, from the Aſperſions caſt on him by King Henry VIII, as a Perſon of a mean Extraction, gives an honourable Account of the Family of the Darcys.

ANOTHER ſmaller Monument is alſo fixed in the ſame Wall, but ſomewhat more toward the South, having this Inſcription :

Here lieth buried the Corpſe of Robert Taylor, of Silverdale, in the Pariſh of Warton, in the County of Lancaſter, Gentleman, the Father of John Taylor, Citizen and Draper of LONDON, and of this Pariſh, Beer-Brewer. He departed this Life about the Age of 80 Years, Feb. 15, Anno Dom. 1577.

NEAR this is another ſmall Monument for Capt. Robert Silk.

UPON the Ground, under the Head of the Communion-Table, lieth an antient Stone, and theſe Lines engraven thereon in Braſs:

Hic jacet Johannes, Epiſc. Bathon. & Wellenſis, qui cum obiiſſet plures inſig. Legation. ——— tandem obiit ſummum in Legatione Clevenſis ——— Januar. M,CCCCC,XL. Cujus animæ propitietur Altiſſimus.

THERE is a Remark in Mr. Weaver's antient Funeral Monuments upon this John Clark, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, viz. That he was ſuppoſed to be poiſoned in Germany, when he went Ambaſſador to the Duke of Cleve, to render a Reaſon of the King's Divorce from the Lady Anne of Cleve. See Weaver, p. 426.

NEAR unto the Place where the Miniſter reads Divine Service, there is a ſmall Braſs Plate, fixed in the Wall, which contains theſe Lines following:

Here before this Pew lieth buried the Body of Robert Dow, Citizen and Merchant-Taylor of LONDON, with Lettice his Wife, and Thomas his Son ; which Robert deceaſed May 2, in the Year 1612, his Age was 89 Years ; who, amongſt other his Charities done in this City, and elſewhere ſundry Ways, as to ſeveral Hoſpitals abroad and at Home, Priſons, and to pay 19 poor Houſeholders of the Merchant-Taylors Company in perpetuum, gave to this Pariſh of St Botolph's without Aldgate (whereof he was a Member) the Nomination of two Alms-Women freely relieved, and twenty Pounds yearly, to be diſtributed to three-ſcore poor aged and impotent Men and Women, by Nobles a-piece upon every St. Thomas's Eve for ever. Ad Gloriam Dei.

Per Nepotem ac Hæredem Zachariam Dow, Poſthumum.

BUT the Merchant-Taylors honoured his Memory by a handſomer Monument upon a Pillar on the South Side of the Chancel, over-againſt the Pulpit, being the Figure of an antient Gentleman in his Gown and Cap, and a long forked Beard, reſting his Hand on a Death's Head:

A Memorial erected by the Right Worſhipful Company of Merchant-Taylors for Robert Dove, Eſq; Citizen and Merchant-Taylor of LONDON, Maſter of the ſame Company, and one of the Cuſtomers of the Port of LONDON.

HE gave in his Life-time 3528*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* to perform divers charitable Deeds for ever, to divers poor Brethren of the ſame Company, and other Uſes for the ſaid Company, viz.

TO Chriſt's Hoſpital, to St. Sepulchre's Pariſh, to the two Compters, to Ludgate and Newgate, to the Poor of this Pariſh, to St. John Baptiſt's College in Oxford, and to Queen Elizabeth's Hoſpital at Briſtol, 2958*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*

——— To the Company.

300*l.* to Chriſt-Church Hoſpital.

50*l.* to St. Sepulchre's.

100*l.* to St. John's College in Oxford.

100*l.* to the City of Briſtol.

HE lived virtuouſly all his Life-time, and died in the true Faith of our Lord Jeſus, on the 2d Day of May, Anno Domini 1612, being full of Days, at the Age of near 90 Years.

HIS Arms under him being 3 Doves, according to his Name.

BY his Arms, we may ſuppoſe, his real Name was Dove; but it is difficult to be certain whether That or Dow; for he is mentioned often by Stow, and ſometimes in the ſame Page, by both thoſe Names, as he is in two Parts of this Church.

HERE follows an Account of his Charity to this Pariſh. It is worthy to be obſerved, for the farther illuſtrating the Character of this worthy Citizen, what pious and prudent Care he had taken for the Choice of fit Perſons to receive ſuch his Charity. As particularly in his Directions to the Wardens and Antients, for the Choice of two Alms-Women, which he added to the Merchants-Taylors Alms-houſe on Little Tower-Hill, and left a competent Proviſion for their Maintenance, and in that other Direction for the Choice of the ſixty Poor.

AN Exhortation drawn up by himſelf, and by his particular Order, to be repeated to the Poor, who receive his Charity, at the Time of the Diſtribution of it, is full of Chriſtian Simplicity and Primitive Piety.

THERE are alſo two other Exhortations of his to be repeated to the condemned Priſoners in Newgate, which are to be found in Book I. Page 20 and 21.

At which Time the four Church- " Wardens, for the Time being, or three of " them at the leaſt, ſhall be yearly ready there " to receive the ſame Sum; and by them ſo " received, the Sum of 10*l.* Part thereof ſhall " be diſtributed to the Poor of the ſame Pariſh, " in Manner and Form following, viz. The " ſame Diſtribution is appointed to be always " made forthwith upon the Receipt thereof, be- " fore 12 o'Clock of the ſame Day, to 60 poor " People of the ſame Pariſh, by 3*s.* 4*d.* to " each of them: Of which Number 30 ſhall be " of the Ward, called the Upper End of the " Pariſh, and 30 of the Lower End, called the " Lordſhip of Eaſt-Smithfield.

" ALL the ſaid poor People ſhall be warned; " they of the Upper End by the Pariſh-Clerk, " and they of the Lower End by the Sexton, to " be at the Church before nine o'Clock of the " ſame Day: And if any of them, by Sickneſs, " or other great Lett, cannot come to the Church, " they ſhall deſire ſome known Neighbour to be " at the Church, and receive the ſame for him or " her. The Poor of the Upper End ſhall always " be firſt called; and as they anſwer to their " Names, they ſhall go up into the North Iſle of " the Choir, and ſhut the Partition Door to them, " and ſee that no other be amongſt them. Then " ſhall they of the Lower End be called; and as " they do anſwer, go up into the South Iſle, and " ſhut the like Partition Door to them, and re- " main as aforeſaid.

" IF any Perſon remain in the Church that " come to ask Alms, more than is appointed, the " Church-Wardens ſhall warn them all forth; and " being gone, lock all the Church Doors, that " they may the more quietly diſtribute the Cha- " rity. Then the Church-Wardens, being with- " in the Choir, ſhall diſtribute firſt to them of " the Upper End; and as they be paid, the Pa- " riſh-Clerk ſhall croſs their Names in the Book, " and they ſhall go down into the Body of the " Church, that they may not crowd the Choir: " And they of the Lower End being next paid, " and ſo croſſed, ſhall alſo go down into the " Body of the Church. This done, then the Pa- " riſh-Clerk ſhall call them up near the Choir " Door, and the Miniſter, in Preſence of the " Church-Wardens, ſhall exhort them to come " to the Church to ſerve GOD at the Time of " Common Prayers appointed, and eſpecially " upon Sundays and other Holidays not to fail: " And if any be found negligent of the ſame, or " be of any other Miſdemeanor, the Church- " Wardens in their Precinct ſhall exclude ſuch " Perſon, and beſtow ſuch Charity upon ſome " more worthy Perſon.

" THIS Exhortation being done, the ſaid " Poor ſhall all kneel down, and humbly, with " Heart and Hand lifted up to GOD, ſay, with " the Miniſter openly, the Lord's Prayer; and " laſtly, they ſhall ſay, God reward all good Be- " nefactors and bleſs the worſhipful Company of " Merchant-Taylors: Then ſhall the South " Church Door and Gate be ſet open, that they " may all go out quietly three and three toge- " ther.

" THE 6*s.* Reſidue of the 10*l.* 6*s.* ſhall be " diſpoſed of in this Manner. Firſt, To the " Company's Clerk, who bringeth the Money, " and payeth it, from the Merchant-Taylors " Hall, 8*d.* the Miniſter, or Curate, for his Pre- " ſence and good Exhortation to the Poor, ſhall " have 8*d.* the four Church-Wardens ſhall have " for their Pains, 8*d.* a-piece, amounting to " 2*s.* 8*d.* Whenſoever any of the Poor do de- " ceaſe, marry, or depart from the Pariſh, the " Pariſh-Clerk ſhall enter the Day of their Buri- " al, Marriage, or Departure upon their Names, " and ſhall yearly, eight or ten Days before St. " Thomas's Eve, ſhew the ſame to the Church- " Wardens, that they may yearly make up the " full Number of 60 Perſons; which being ſo " prefitted, the ſame Clerk ſhall enter them in " two Sides of this Book, as now it is begun: " And he ſhall keep the Book ſafe in the Veſtry, " and have for his ſo doing 12*d.* more. The ſaid " Clerk and Sexton for warning the ſaid Poor, " and Attendance at the Church at that Time, " ſhall have each of them 6*d.* which ſeveral " Sums amount to the ſaid 6*s.* And if the Mini- " ſter, or Curate be abſent, and does not give the " Exhortation after the Diſtribution, the Pariſh " Clerk ſhall do the ſame, and have the ſaid 8*d.* " for his Labour: And if any of the Church- " Wardens be abſent at the ſaid Diſtribution, " then his Part ſhall likewiſe be given to them " that be preſent. The poor Perſons now ſet " down, and hereafter to be choſen, ſhall re- " ceive the ſame Charity yearly, during their " Lives, except they marry, depart the Pariſh, " or ſome other lawful Impediment or Miſde- " meanor prevent it, or that they have ſuch bet- " ter Preferment, as the Church-Wardens ſhall " think it meet to beſtow it on other more needy: " And as any die, marry, or depart the Pariſh, " the Church-Wardens, in their Precinct, ſhall " appoint the moſt poor and honeſt Perſons to " this Charity, reſpecting and preferring aged " poor Widows before others.

THE Copy, verbatim, of this above-written, remains in the Merchant-Taylors Regiſter, with a Proviſo in the Contract, in theſe Words, or to this Effect:

" PROVIDED always, and it is ordained and " agreed by me the ſaid Robert Dow, That if " the Church-Wardens of the Pariſh of St. Bo- " tolph, aforeſaid, or their Succeſſors, Church- " Wardens for the Time being, ſhall be found " negligent in the due Paying of the ſaid Sum " of 10*l.* 6*s.* or in obſerving the Orders before- " mentioned, or if the poor Widows, the Com- " pany's Alms-women, ſhall not, or may not " quietly enjoy the Pews, which, at the Charges " of the Company, have been built for their Uſe, " within the ſaid Church, without being diſ- " placed or removed for the ſame; that then it " ſhall, and may be lawful, to the Maſter, War- " dens, and Aſſiſtants, of the Company of Mer- " chant-Taylors aboveſaid (upon due and con- " venient Warning, firſt given to the ſaid Church- " Wardens for the Time being, and the ſame " not reformed) to retain the ſaid 10*l.* 6*s.* and " to pay it no more unto them for their Poor; " but to give and beſtow the ſaid Charity, to, " and upon whom, and in what Order and Sort " they ſhall think moſt expedient, for ever.

" AND the Order of electing the ſaid poor " Alms-women is appointed by the Writing un- " der the Company's Common Seal, to be per- " formed in this Manner following, viz. The " Alderman's Deputy, and eight antient Pa- " riſhioners of the ſaid Pariſh, ſhall, for ever, " within four Days after the Deceaſe of ſuch " Widow, called Mr. Robert Dow his Alms- " woman, preſent to the Maſter, or one of the " Wardens of the ſaid Society of Merchant-Tay- " lors for the Time being, three antient poor " Widows inhabiting within that Part of the ſaid " Pariſh which lieth within the Freedom of " LONDON, being of honeſt Behaviour and " Converſation, and of the Age of 56 Years " at the leaſt; wherein they ſhall prefer the " Widows of Merchant-Taylors, if any ſuch

" ſhall

" ſhall be qualified as aforeſaid. Out of " which three Names ſo preſented as afore- " ſaid, the ſaid Maſter, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants, " ſhall elect one to ſupply the ſaid Room: " And from Time to Time, upon the Death " of every ſuch Widow, to be called Mr. " Robert Dow his Alms-Woman. This Order " and Courſe to be held and obſerved for ever.

" AND if within the ſaid Pariſh, there ſhall " not be ſuch poor Widows as aforeſaid, or if " the ſaid Alderman's Deputy and eight Anti- " ents, ſhall not within the ſaid four Days next " after the Deceaſe of every ſuch poor Widow, " preſent unto the ſaid Maſter and Wardens, the " Name or Names of ſuch poor Widow, or Wi- " dows, as aforeſaid; That then it ſhall, and " may be lawful to, and for the ſaid Maſter, " Wardens, and Aſſiſtants, at every ſuch Time " to prefer and elect ſuch poor aged Merchant- " Taylors Widows, of ſuch Age and Condition " as aforeſaid, as in their Wiſdoms ſhall be " thought fit, as in, and by the ſaid Writing " may appear. In Witneſs whereof, I the ſaid " Robert Dow, and the Curate, Church-War- " dens, and Veſtry-Men, hereunder-named, " have hereunto ſubſcribed our Names, in the " Veſtry-Houſe of the ſaid Pariſh, the Day and " Year above-written.

By me, Robert Dow,
Henry Rigges, Curate.

THE Church-Wardens, Common-Council, and Veſtry-Men, are ſubſcribed in Order.

THE aboveſaid Sum of 10*l.* 6*s*, was augmented in Mr. Dow's Life-time, to 20*l.* 10*s.* as the following Memorandum, ſigned by his own Hand, will farther ſhew.

MEMORANDUM. " That upon St. Tho- " mas's Eve, Anno 1609, this Benevolence of " Mr. Robert Dow's Gift was augmented, ſo " that every poor Body of the threeſcore receiveth " yearly 6*s.* 8*d.* And the former 6*s.* was then " increaſed to 10*s.* and given to the Bringers " of the Money, the Church-Wardens and others " attending there, ſigned in the Margin.

Robert Dow,
John Clerke, Pariſh-Clerk.

The EXHORTATION that is to be made to the threeſcore Poor by the Miniſter, and in his Abſence by the Pariſh Clerk, after the Charity of Mr. Dow is given, is either to be ſpoken or read to them in theſe Words, viz.

" GOOD People, mark what I ſay to you, the " Giver of this Charity, with the Advice of the " Church-Wardens, and other good Men of the " Pariſh, have thought you moſt worthy of the " ſame, where a great many other have need of " it. You are, therefore, to give GOD Thanks, " and to behave yourſelves in this Manner, that " is to ſay, you ſhall upon the Sundays come to " Church, to Morning and Evening Prayer, with- " out you have great Let, and upon other Holi- " days appointed for Prayer; and there you ſhall, " with all Reverence and Devotion, give your- " ſelves to hear the holy Prayers and Command- " ments of GOD, with other the Divine Scrip- " tures read unto you; and likewiſe to the holy " Word of GOD, when it is preached there. " You ſhall live in all Charitable and Chriſtian " Sort with your Neighbours, and be in Peace, " and Love-makers to your Power; conſidering " with yourſelves, that you be aged, and therefore " moſt meet for you to give good Example, and " be ready prepared to go hence, when GOD " ſhall call you. If you obſerve, and follow this " good Counſel, you ſhall all have this Penſion, " ſo long as you live and have Need of it: But if " you be found in any Default, this Charity, and " any other Charity given you in this Pariſh, " ſhall be taken from you for ever, and ſhall be " beſtowed upon more worthy Perſons: There- " fore ſee that you forget not this good Leſſon. " Now kneel you all down, and with all Humi- " lity and Reverence, lift up your Hearts and " Hands to GOD, and with loud Voices ſay, de- " voutly after me (Our Father which art in Hea- " ven, &c.) Now ſay you all, (GOD reward " all good Benefactors, and bleſs the Worſhipful " Company of Merchant-Taylors.) Riſe you all " now up in GOD's Name, and go you quietly " three and three together, till you be all out of " the Church Gate, and GOD bleſs you all, " and increaſe the Number of good and cha- " ritable Men.

IN the North Iſle of the Chancel, lieth a Stone with this Inſcription upon it, engraven in Braſs:

Other Funeral Inſcriptions.

" HERE lieth the Body of William Cowch, " one of the ordinary Yeomen of her Majeſty's " Chamber, Citizen, and Innholder of LON- " DON. He deceaſed the 13th Day of July, " Anno Dom. 1583, who hath given (after the " Deceaſe of Joan his Wife) the Houſe called " the Crown, being at the Eaſt End of this " Church, called St. Botolph without Aldgate, " unto Chriſt's Hoſpital forever. Out of the " which Houſe, after the Deceaſe of the ſaid " Joan his Wife, is to be paid by the Governors " of the ſaid Hoſpital, 5*l.* yearly for ever, to " the Poor of Portſoken Ward within the ſaid " Pariſh.

IN the Middle Iſle of the Church, before the Entrance into the Chancel, lieth a Grave Stone on the Ground, having this Inſcription engraven upon it in Braſs:

Dies mei ſicut umbra declinaverunt, & ego ſicut fœnum areſco.

" Here, under this Stone, lieth buried the " Body of Robert Cockes, late Citizen and Tal- " low-Chandler of LONDON, who, by his " Laſt Will and Teſtament, gave to this Ward " of Portſoken (wherein he dwelt) the Sum of " one hundred Pounds, to be employed for the " Uſe and Benefit of the Poor of the ſaid Ward. " He departed this mortal Life the 20th Day of " September, Anno Dom. 1609, and was here " interred the 3d Day of October next following. " Ætatis ſuæ LXVII.

Vixi dum volui, volui dum, Chriſte, volebas;

IN the ſame Iſle, but a little lower, lieth another Grave Stone, having (in a whiter Kind of Stone) a Coat of Arms upon it, and a Deſcription in well formed Letters, ſpeaking thus:

" HERE, underneath this Stone, lieth the " Body of Daniel Balgay, ſometime an Inhabi- " tant of this Pariſh, of good Account and Cre- " dit, being a Citizen of this honourable City " of LONDON, and Free of the worſhipful " Company of Mercers, who departed this mor- " tal Life the 25th Day of December, in the Year " of our Lord 1608, being the Day of the Na- " tivity of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Chriſtus mihi Vita.

IN the Chancel, at the South Eaſt Corner, near the Altar, is a Monument ſet up in Memory of Mr. Prat, a very diligent and well deſerving Curate of this Pariſh, with the following Inſcription:

" UNDER this Pavement lieth Benjamin " Prat, A. M. for above xvi Years late Curate " of this Church. He affected to end his Days " in Celibacy, and departed this Life the 3d " Day of March, A. D. 1715.

RESURGAM.

THESE few pious Words above, were all he deſired ſhould be here ſubſcribed: Yet it ought not to be concealed, that he bequeathed to the Right Reverend Father in GOD the Lord Biſhop of LONDON, for the Time being (only in Truſt) the perpetual Advowſon of the Rectory of the Pariſh and Pariſh Church of Greenſteed, juxta Chipping-Ongar, in the County of Eſſex; the firſt Preſentation to an intimate Friend, and after him to the immediate Reader, or moſt inferior Miniſter of this his Native Pariſh-Church for ever; and other Churches afterwards, which may hereafter be built in this Pariſh, as may be ſeen more at large in his Will.

HIS Soul was adorned with great Stedfaſtneſs to the moſt Orthodox Principles. He was a Perſon of great Piety, Lenity, and Charity, and in all his Actions conſtantly ſignalized himſelf in the ſeveral Offices of his Sacred Miniſtry. He continually endeavoured to illuſtrate his Veneration and Eſteem for the moſt Glorious and Adorable TRINITY, and his High-Calling of GOD in Chriſt Jeſus.

AND ſo he proceeded, till he was juſt arrived at the Prime of his Age, and then was taken from his Labours, to receive an exceeding great Reward.

THUS does he ſtill ſpeak, and yet propoſe an eminent and illuſtrious Example to all his ſucceeding Brethren.

Nunquamque Oblivioni traderentur.

A Grave-Stone at the Upper End of the North Iſle over Henrietta Caldecot, Daughter of Philip Caldecot, of this Pariſh, Eſq; She died November 2, 1714.

IN the Church-Yard, Southward, and towards the Street, ſtands a handſome Tomb, fenced over from the Weather, and a Grave-Stone upon it: Beneath, on the Outſide of the Tomb, are engraven the Arms belonging to the Vintners, and Barber Chirurgeons: Upon the Grave-Stone is a Plate of Braſs, with theſe Lines engraven on it.

" HERE, under this Stone, lieth the Body of " George Clarke, Citizen and Vintner of LON- " DON, who, by his laſt Will and Teſtament, " gave for divers good and charitable Uſes, theſe " Legacies hereafter following:

" Firſt, For a publick School in the Univerſity " of Oxford, the Sum of 200 l.

" To the Uſe of the Poor of the four Pre- " cincts of the Ward of Portſoken, being in the " Pariſh of St. Botolph's without Aldgate, the " Sum of 293 l. 6 s. 8 d.

" To the Pariſh of Whitechapel, for the Re- " lief of the Poor there, the Sum of 230 l.

" To the Company of the Vintners he gave " the Sum of 10 l.

" AND to the Poor of Chriſt's Hoſpital he " gave the Sum of 5 l.

" HE deceaſed the 19th Day of April, Anno " Dom. 1606, and was here buried the 24th " Day of the ſame next following. Ætatis " ſuæ 63.

" Coppedhall in Parochia Sancti Bothi' extra " Aldgate. An. 1413.

EAST of this Pariſh-Church, there were ſeveral Inns for the Reception of Travellers, up towards Hog-Lane End, ſomewhat within the Bars, and a Mark was there, ſhewing how far the Liberties of the City extend.

THIS Hog-Lane, now called Petticoat-Lane, and Artillery-Lane, ſtretcheth North to Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; in Mr. Stow's Time (about 1598) it had Rows of Elms on each Side, with Bridges and Stiles to paſs over into pleaſant Fields; but now is a continued Building from Hounſditch to Whitechapel, and farther.

THE South Side of the Highway from Aldgate, had then ſome few Tenements, thinly ſcattered here and there, with much void Space between them, up to the Bars: But now that Street is not only fully repleniſhed with Buildings outward, but alſo with Yards and Alleys behind, as far as Whitechapel alſo.

AMONGST the Buildings in Stow's Time, he ſaith, one memorable for the Commodity of that Eaſt Part of the City, was a Water Conduit, juſt without the Gate; for Building whereof, in the Year 1535, Sir John Allen, being Mayor, two Fifteens were granted by the Citizens, for making and laying Pipes to convey Water thither from Hackney.

IT was repaired, and much ornamental and uſeful Stone Work added to it, in the Year 1546.

Monday, in his Edition of Stow, ſaith, " That " altho' this Water Conduit was very beneficial " to the People inhabiting there round about, " yet in regard of the Situation, being upon the " Street's South Side, and immediately deſcend- " ing down many Steps, or Stairs of Stone, it " was troubleſome to the poor People fetching " Water there, in coming up laden with their " Tubs, Pails, and Tankards. Beſides, until " the Turn of each Party came by Order and " due Courſe, their Tankards, Tubs, and Pails, " did greatly peſter the Paſſage about, and tho- " rough the Gate, endangering divers perſonal " Harms, and other great Inconvenience; which " ſince then, at the taking down of the old Gate, " that a new might be built in the ſame Place, " is exceeding commendably amended, to the " City's Honour, their Credit that had Care for " the diſpoſing of the Work, and great Eaſe of " the poor Water Bearers, and all Paſſengers: " For now there is a ſpacious Court, wherein all " the Tankards, and other Veſſels, orderly " ſtand; without any Annoyance to the Street; " and the Deſcent to the Conduit is made very " convenient, free from offending one another in " their Labour, the Paſſage to and fro is ſo aptly ordered, and the Room ſo large for their " Attendance.

AS to the taking down the old Gate, and building that which is now ſtanding, it has been fully deſcribed, Book I. Page 16.

FROM Aldgate, North Eaſt to Biſhopſgate, lay the Ditch of the City, called Hounds-Ditch, becauſe that in old Time, when the ſame lay open, much Filth conveyed out of the City, eſpecially dead Dogs, was there laid or caſt.

INTO this filthy Ditch King Canutus commanded Edrick, a noble Saxon, who had baſely ſlain his King and Lord, Edmund Ironſide, to be drawn by the Heels from Baynard's Caſtle, through the City, and thrown in, after he had firſt been tormented to Death by lighted Torches:

OF later Time a Mud Wall; on the other Side of the Street, was a Field, ſome Time belonging to the Priory of the Trinity, and ſince, by Sir Thomas Audley, given to Magdalen College in Cambridge,

THIS

THIS Ground contained a Meſſuage, a Dove-Houſe, and a Garden of about ſeven Acres. There was alſo adjoining to this Garden, a great Gate, and a Building over it, and a Street or Lane leading from Houndſditch thither. For all this, Sir Thomas Audley obtained of King Henry, Special Letters Patents, dated March 23, in the 25th of his Reign, as belonging to the Priory, to this Tenor:

Henricus Octavus, Dei Gratia, &c. Omnibus ad Quos, &c. Sciatis quod Nos, &c. dedimus & conceſſimus, &c. i.e. "Know ye, that we have "given and granted to Sir Thomas Audley, one "Meſſuage, one Dove-coat, and one Garden, or "Parcel of Land, with the Appurtenance, con-"taining, by Eſtimation, ſeven Acres of Land, "whether more or leſs, as they lay, and are in "the Pariſh of St. Botolph without Aldgate, "LONDON, viz. between a certain Street "or Lane called Hog-Lane on one Part, and di-"vers Meſſuages by the King's Highway, called "Houndſditch, adjoining and built on the other "Part. He gave alſo and granted to the ſaid Sir "Thomas a certain great Gate, with an Edifice "built upon it, and adjacent; and a certain Street "or Lane, extending from the aforeſaid King's "Highway, called Houndſditch, to, in, and as "far as the ſaid Garden, or Parcel of Land, con-"taining ſeven Acres, with all Edifices, Walls, "Ditches, and Cloſes, in and about the ſaid "Garden, or Parcel of the Lands there being: "Which Meſſuage, Dove-coat, Garden-Gate, "Street, or Lane, and the other Premiſes with "their Appurtenances, lately belonged to the "Prior and Convent of the Monaſtery or Priory "of the Holy Trinity, LONDON, by the "Right of that Monaſtery, and which among "others, is come to our Hands by the Authority "of Parliament, as well on the Account of the "Gift of Nicholas Hancock, late Prior, as on "the Account of the Diſſolution of the ſaid Mo-"naſtery.

THE next Year, that is, the 26th of the King's Reign, the ſame Sir Thomas Audley obtained of the King other Letters Patents, dated December 29, wherein, among other Gifts, he granted him Licence to give and grant lawfully the ſaid Meſſuage, Dove-Houſe, and Garden to Henry Parker, Knt. Tho. Barnardiſton, Knt. John Chriſtmas, Eſq; Tho. Pope, Arthur Clerk, and Tho. Spilman, Gentlemen. Yet it ſeems theſe Perſons poſſeſſed not the Premiſes, at leaſt not the Garden of ſeven Acres, ſince Mr. Stow (as above) writeth that Sir Thomas Audley gave it to Magdalen College, of which he was Founder.

THIS Field (as all other about the City) was incloſed, reſerving an open Paſſage into it, for ſuch as were diſpoſed. Towards the Street were ſome ſmall Cottages of two Stories high, and little Garden-Plats backward for poor bed-ridden People, (for in that Street dwelt no other) built by ſome Prior of the Holy Trinity to whom that Ground belonged.

Mr. Stow ſaith, He remembers in his Youth, that devout People, as well Men as Women of this City, were accuſtomed oftentimes (eſpecially on Fridays weekly) to walk that Way purpoſely, and there to beſtow their charitable Alms, each poor Man or Woman lying in Bed within their Window, which was towards the Street open ſo low, that any one might ſee them, a clean Linen Cloth lying in their Window, and a Pair of Beads, to ſhew that there lay a bed-ridden Body, unable to do any thing but pray. This Street was firſt paved in the Year 1503.

ABOUT the latter End of the Reign of King Henry VIII, three Brethren that were Gun-Founders, Surnamed Owens, got Ground there to build upon, and to encloſe for Caſting of Braſs Ordnance; theſe occupied a good Part of the Street on the Field Side, and in ſhort Time, divers others alſo built there; ſo that all the poor bed-ridden People were worn out, and in Place of their homely Cottages, ſuch Houſes built as do rather want Room than Rent.

Pawnbrokers in Houndſditch.

THIS Street is very remarkable for having in it a great Number of Pawnbrokers, and ſeems to have been ſo a long Time; for Monday, in his Edition of Stow, publiſhed an hundred Years ago, viz. Anno 1633, hath theſe Words:

"THESE Men, or rather Monſters in the "Shape of Men, profeſs to live by lending, and "yet will lend nothing but upon Pawns; nei-"ther to any, but unto poor People only, and "for no leſs Gain than after fifty or threeſcore "Pounds in the Hundred. The Pawn of the "poor Borrower muſt needs be more than double "worth the Money lent upon it, and the Time "of Limitation is no longer than a Month; al-"beit they well know, that the Money need "not be repayed back until a Twelvemonth's "End: By which Time the Intereſt grows to be "ſo great, that the Pawn, which (at firſt) was "better than twice worth the Money borrowed "on it, doth not (in the End) prove to be va-"luable to the Debt, which muſt be payed be-"fore the poor Party can redeem it. By which "extorting Means of proceeding, the poor Bor-"rower is quite cheated of his Pawn, for leſs "than the third Part, which it was truly worth "indeed.

"IT is a great Error (in my poor Opinion) "that in ſo antient and famous a City, abound-"ing (otherwiſe) in moſt Chriſtian Alms and "Works of Mercy, that among ſo many worthy "Liberalities beſtowed on the Poor in divers and "diſtinct Pariſhes, no Order is taken for ſuch a "publick Stock for the truly Poor; that when "in their urgent Neceſſity, either by Want of "Means, Sickneſs, and other Hindrances, their "Pawns may not go to the Cut-throat Uſurer; "but remain to their own Good (living or dying) "or to theirs, without any other Benefit, than "that it may ſtill ſerve for the like Relief.

"AND let me not here be miſtaken, that I "condemn ſuch as live by honeſt buying and "ſelling, and make a good Conſcience of their "Dealing: No truly, I mean only the Judas "Broker, that lives by the Bag, and (except "GOD be more merciful to him) will follow him "that did bear the Bag.

THE Sum Total of the yearly Gifts belonging to the Pariſh of St. Botolph Aldgate, amounts to 151 l. 15 s. 8 d. as may be ſeen by a Table in one of the Pews of the ſaid Church.

THESE Gifts were partly for Sermons, partly for Coals and Firing, and partly for Bread, and partly in Money, to be diſtributed.

LECTURES given to this Pariſh, beſides what is already mentioned, with the Sums allowed for Preaching them.

Mr. John Dodſon,
Mr. Nath. Gale, and } Truſtees.
Mr. Edward Croofoot,

THERE is a Church-yard for the Burial of the Dead in this Pariſh, beſides that which joins to the Church; this is near Roſemary-Lane, and was conſecrated by Dr. King, Biſhop of LONDON, in the Year of our Lord 1615.

THERE are about 1300 Houſes in this Pariſh within the Freedom, and about 1200 without.

NOW concerning the Bounds and Limits both of the Pariſh and Ward, and how far they extend themſelves every Way; there can be no better Direction than following the Order of their own yearly Perambulation, which is thus:

WALKING down Houndſditch, Northward, they croſs the Way Eaſtward into Still and Hand-alley; paſſing on along by a Garden Wall, they proceed to Petticoat-lane, in the Middle of which is the Partition between the two Pariſhes of Whitechapel and St. Botolph: There they go on to the Bars in the common Street, and croſſing the Way Southward, go through a Tavern, ſome Time the Caſtle; and then turning Weſtward, paſs on to the Minories till they come to the Bars.

THERE, at the farther End, they turn down into an Alley, called Brown's-alley, and ſo as far as Goodman's Fields, then turn up the Street again and go down Red-Lion-alley, paſſing directly into Roſemary-lane, and thence down Nightingale-lane, on the Weſt Side to the Hermitage-Bridge, and ſo round St. Catharine's, and then paſs over Tower-Hill, and then go directly up the Minories Northward till they come under Aldgate.

IN this Ward the principal Streets and Places are Whitechapel, the Minories, and Houndſditch, together with the Weſt Side of Petticoat-lane; in which Streets are divers Alleys, Courts, &c. of which in their Order.

Whitechapel. Whitechapel is a ſpacious Street for Entrance into the City Eaſtward, and ſomewhat long, reckoning from the Lay-ſtall Eaſt unto the Bars Weſt, where the Ward ends. It is a great Thorough-fare, being the Eſſex Road, and well reſorted to, which occaſions it to be well inhabited, and accommodated with good Inns for the Reception of Travellers, Horſes, Coaches, Waggons, &c.

HERE on the South Side is a Hay-Market three Times a Week.

THE South Side within the Bars, as well as a little Way without, is taken up by a great many Butchers, who carry on a great Trade, and kill excellent Meat, lying ſo conveniently to have their Cattle from Rumford Market.

ON the North Side are divers conſiderable Inns, much reſorted to, as the Three Nuns, the Crown, the Black-Bull, the Blue-Boar; with ſeveral Shops which have great Trade out of the Country.

ABOUT the Bars, ply a great Number of Stage-Coaches, for the Conveniency of carrying Paſſengers to Stratford, Bow, Low-Layton, Layton-Stone, Weſt Ham, Eaſt Ham, Walthamſtow, Woodford, Wanſted, Barking, &c.

PLACES of Name in this Street within the Bars are as follow, beginning at St. Botolph's Church, and ſo Eaſtward.

Firſt, Hatchet-alley, pretty well built, but hath a narrow Entrance; White Bear-alley, hath a long, narrow, and dark Paſſage into it, but within are new Brick Buildings; Sun and Trumpet-alley, very ordinary; near unto this Alley is the Bell Brewhouſe, of a good Trade; and near unto the Blue-Boar-Inn, is the Boar's-Head Tavern, being a Houſe of a pretty good Trade; Red-croſs-court, well built, with new Brick Houſes, hath a pretty large Paſſage into Petticoat-lane; Anchor and Harp-alley, both narrow and ordinary. Harrow-alley, containing two large Courts, and a long Alley that leads into Goodman's Fields, and at the Upper End of this Alley, is a Place called the Blue Gate, all but indifferently built and inhabited; Chequer-yard, alſo but ordinary; and a new Street is now building, which leads alſo into Goodman's Fields, to be called Somerſet-ſtreet.

Houndſditch is now built into Houſes, and beſides the Street, which is taken up by Brokers, Joyners, Braſiers, Saleſmen, and ſuch as deal in old Cloathes, Linen and Upholſtery Ware, for which, at preſent, it is a Place of conſiderable Trade; here are a great many Courts and Alleys. We ſhall only take Notice of theſe in this Ward, beginning at Still-alley, the others which lie in Biſhopſgate Ward being there treated of. Houndſditch.

Still-alley, hath a narrow Entrance, but is very large, containing ſeveral Turnings to other Places, as, the Lower Ground, which hath a Paſſage into Gravel-lane, and Gutteridge Rents, which hath pretty good Buildings, and out of this Place is a Paſſage down Steps into a Court, which leads into Devonſhire-Square, treated of in Biſhopſgate Ward; Greyhound-alley, ſmall and ordinary; Flower-de-lis-court, a ſquare Place, with old decayed Buildings, ill inhabited; Wool-ſack-alley, leads into Gravel-lane, a large Place, with pretty good Buildings, and contains ſeveral Places, as Crab-court, where there is a large Brewhouſe, and over-againſt this Place is Pine-apple-court, which hath a Free-Stone Pavement, and contains four good Brick Houſes; here is alſo Star-court, with three or four indifferent Places without a Name; Hand-alley, ſmall and ordinary; Skinner's-alley, alſo ſmall and ordinary, with old Timber Houſes; Caſtle-yard, hath a long turning Paſſage with good Houſes, indifferently well inhabited; Ball and Shear-court, ſmall and mean, and adjoining to this is another ſmall Place without a Name; Angel-alley, long and narrow, falls into Gravel-lane; Fire-ball-alley, big, but ordinary; Fire-ball-court, a handſome open Place, well built and inhabited with a Paſſage into Gravel-lane; Cock and Hoop-yard, a large open Place, with Buildings fit for good Inhabitants; Red-lion-court, a ſquare Place, with indifferent good Buildings; Shepherd and Dog-alley, both ſmall and mean; Three Bowls-court, ſmall and ordinary; Walnut-tree-yard, but ſmall; Joiner's-court hath tolerable good Buildings with a Free-Stone Pavement; Harrow-alley, but ſmall; Cock and Wheat-ſheaf-alley, likewiſe ſmall and ſeparate each from the other by a Pale; Roſe and Crown-court, a neat Place with good Buildings, well inhabited, with a Free-Stone Pavement; Seven-ſtar-alley, indifferent good; and to ſome of theſe Houſes there are Gardens: Here is a Calender's, which is encloſed from the reſt by a great Gate.

Church-lane, very large and open, the North Side fronting St. Botolph's Church, and Church-yard, hath a Row of good Buildings, of which two are large, and at the Upper End is a Carpenter's Yard with Livery-Stables over-againſt it. Gun-yard, a very handſome ſquare Court, with good large Houſes very well inhabited with an Entrance wide enough for Coach or Cart.

Gravel-lane, very large, branching itſelf into ſeveral Parts, as Seven-ſtep-alley, Blackamore-court, which fall into Petticoat-lane, Srewsbury-court, a pretty handſome ſquare Place; Honey-lane, ſomewhat long, and falls into Petticoat-lane; Sutton's Rents, ſmall and ordinary; Wood Greens-court, a pretty handſome open ſquare Place indifferently well inhabited; Harrow-alley, long and narrow, falls into Petticoat-lane; Clark's court, pretty handſome; Hand and Crown-court, a good open Place; New George-court, hath indifferent good Brick Buildings with a Free-Stone Pavement; Vine-court, a handſome ſquare Place, with with new Brick Buildings, and a Free Stone Pavement; Peaſe-Porridge-alley, ſmall and ordinary; King's-Head-court, pretty large. Almoſt over-againſt this Court is Oliver's-court, ſmall and ordinary; Hand-alley, hath a Paſſage into Biſhopſgate-ſtreet. Petticoat-lane, formerly called Hog-lane, is near Whitechapel-Bars, and runs Northward towards St. Mary Spittle.

ON both Sides this Lane, in antient Times, were Hedge Rows and Elm Trees, with pleaſant Fields to walk in; inſomuch that Gentlemen uſed to have Houſes there for the Air; and Mr. Strype ſaith, when he was a Boy, There was one commonly called the Spaniſh Ambaſſador's Houſe, who, in King James I's Reign, dwelt there, and whom he takes to be the famous Count Gondamer: And a little Way off this, on the Eaſt Side the Way, down a paved Alley, now called Strype's Court, from his Father's inhabiting there, was a large Houſe with a good Garden before it, built and inhabited by Hans Jacobſon, the ſaid King James's Jeweller, wherein Mr. Strype was born.

BUT after, many French Proteſtants, who in the ſaid King's Reign, and before, fled their Country for their Religion, and planted themſelves here, viz. in that Part of the Lane near Spittle-Fields, to follow their Trade, being generally Broad Weavers of Silk, it ſoon became a contiguous Row of Buildings on both Sides of the Way.

SO that of later Years all is converted into Buildings, even all the Spittle-Fields, wherein are ſeveral Streets, with Courts and Alleys, repleniſhed with Inhabitants, eſpecially Silk Throwſters and Weavers, and Dependants on them; of which many are Walloons, and French Refugees. This Lane hath the Weſt Side in this Ward, the Eaſt being Part in the Pariſh of Whitechapel, and Part in the large Pariſh of Stepney. In this Petticoat-Lane are divers Courts and Alleys, moſt of which on the Weſt Side, which are in this Ward, have their Paſſage into, or out of Gravel-Lane; but thoſe that have not are five: Inkhorn Court, a pretty open Place, with indifferent Inhabitants. Near this Court is White-Hart Court, which is but indifferent. Bates's Yard, very mean; and Red Croſs Court, which hath a Paſſage into Whitechapel Street. This Part of the Lane coming out at the Bars, is not mighty well inhabited; thoſe of the moſt Account are Horners, who prepare Horns for other petty Manufacturers.

The Minories. THE Minories, of which there are the Great and the Little; the Great is a broad and ſpacious Street, the Entrance into which is out of Aldgate-Street, over-againſt St. Botolph's Church, and runneth Southward into Little-Tower-Hill; having on the Weſt Side London-Wall, where antiently the City Ditch went, as in Houndſditch, and was uſed to caſt Filth in, and ſo lay open; which being found inconvenient, noiſome, and dangerous, it was filled up, and the Ground converted to other Uſes; there being now a Row of Buildings next the Wall, and another on the back of the Minories, it is become a Street, and bears the Name of the Vineyard, and hath a broad Paſſage into it out of the Minories, which is chiefly noted for the Gunſmiths, who dwell there, and drive a conſiderable Trade.

THE Little Minories are the Buildings erected upon the Site of the Abbey of Nuns, called Minorites, containing two or three Courts, all pretty well inhabited: And here alſo is the Trinity Minories Church, which pretends to Privileges, as Marrying without Licence: Out of this Place is a Paſſage into Heydon Yard.

NEAR this Nunnery, or Little Minories, was a large Field and Farm, at which, Mr. Stow ſaith, He himſelf, when a Lad, fetch'd many a Half-penny worth of Milk, and had never leſs than three Pints in the Summer, nor leſs than a Quart in the Winter, for that Money. This was kept by one Goodman, whoſe Son afterwards let it out, and lived like a Gentleman upon the Rent of it. It ſtill retains the Name of Goodman's Fields, tho' it is now converted into Streets, with very good Brick Houſes, inhabited by ſeveral Merchants and Perſons of Repute, and of late has had a Theatre, or Play-Houſe in one of them, built in a pretty good Taſte; but the ſaid Goodman's Fields, not being in this Ward, does not properly come under our Cognizance in this Place.

Theatre in Goodman's Fields.

TO return therefore to this Street called the Minories: Therein are ſeveral Courts or Alleys; beginning towards Aldgate there is Black Boy Court, being long, narrow, and ordinary. Maidenhead Alley, ſmall, naſty, and beggarly. Three Kings Alley, pretty large, containing two Courts, one within another, and both indifferent good. Fountain Alley, very mean. Ship Yard, an indifferent large ſquare Court, but very mean, with old Houſes. Well Alley, but ſmall, with a long and narrow Paſſage to it. Shippey's Yard, indifferent large, and pretty good, eſpecially the upper Part. Heydon Yard, being broad enough for Coach or Cart; at the Upper End is a good large Square, or open Place railed about, with a Row of Trees, very ornamental in the Summer Seaſon, having on the Eaſt Side Coach Houſes and Stables, on the Weſt Side a very handſome Row of large Houſes, with Court Yards before them, and are inhabited by Merchants, and Perſons of Repute; on the North, a Square of good brick Houſes: Out of this Yard, on the Weſt, is a Paſſage into the Little Minories, on the Eaſt another into Goodman's Fields. Brown's Yard, indifferent good, with a Paſſage down Steps into ſome Part of it. Squirrel's Alley, pretty well built, with a narrow paved Paſſage that goes down Steps. Swan Alley, long, naſty, and narrow, hath a Paſſage into Manſel-Street. Goodman's Yard, very large, and leads into Goodman's Fields, almoſt over againſt Peaſcod-ſtreet, hath pretty good Buildings, and indifferently well inhabited. Red Lion Alley, long and narrow, with old built Houſes. Red Gate Court, but ſmall, with a Paſſage down Steps into Heathen's Court. Wheeler's Yard, a pretty open Place. Bullock's Court, a very handſome open Place, having at the Lower End a Timber-Yard. Hamerſmith Alley, very ordinary, with a Paſſage to it down Steps. Wall's Court, a handſome Place, with a Paſſage to it paved with Pebble Stones. Black Horſe Alley, containing two ſmall Courts, which are but ordinary. Eales's Court, pretty open, with a Paſſage for a Cart, and the Houſes are indifferently well inhabited. Weeden's Rents, with a deſcending ſteep Paſſage, very mean. Gooding's Yard, a handſome open Place, indifferently well built. Bellowes's Yard, indifferent, with a Paſſage to it down Steps. Star Alley, but ordinary; at the Lower End is another Court down Steps, alſo very mean. Three Crown Court, alſo but ordinary, both as to Houſes and Inhabitants.

THIS Portſoken Ward hath an Alderman and his Deputy, and ſix Common Council Men.

TO the Fifteen it is aſſeſſed 4*l.* 10*s.*

THERE are to Watch at the ſeveral Stands within this Ward, every Night, beſides a Conſtable and the Beadle, ſixty Watchmen.

THE Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inqueſt for this Ward, are to ſerve as Jurors in the ſeveral Courts of Guildhall in the Month of January.

THE Alderman of this Ward is Humphrey Parſons, Eſq;

CHAP. II.

TOWER-STREET WARD.

THE firſt Ward in the Eaſt Part of this City within the Wall, is called Tower-ſtreet Ward, and extendeth along the River Thames, from the ſaid Tower in the Eaſt, almoſt to Billingſgate in the Weſt; one half of the Tower, the Ditch on the Weſt Side, and Bulwarks adjoining, do ſtand within that Part where the Wall of the City of old Time went ſtrait from the Poſtern Gate, South to the River Thames, before the Tower was built. From and without the Tower-Ditch, Weſt and by North, is the ſaid Tower-Hill, upon which was uſed always to be ſtanding, (and made at the Charge of the City) a large Scaffold and Gallows of Timber, for the Execution of ſuch Traitors, or other Tranſgreſſors, as are delivered out of the Tower, or otherwiſe to the Sheriffs of LONDON, by Writ there to be executed. In the fifth of King Edward IV, a Scaffold and Gallows was there ſet up by other the King's Officers, and not at the City's Charge, whereupon the Mayor and his Brethren complained, but were anſwered by the King, That the Tower-Hill was of the Liberty of the City, and whatſoever was done in that Point, was not in Derogation of the City's Liberties, and therefore commanded Proclamation to be made, as well within the City as in the Suburbs, as followeth:

FORASMUCH as the ſeventh Day of this preſent Month of November, Gallows were erected and ſet beſides our Tower of LONDON, within the Liberties and Franchiſes of our City of LONDON, in Derogation and Prejudice of the Liberties and Franchiſes of this City, the King, our Sovereign Lord, would have it be certainly underſtood, that the Erection and ſetting up of the ſaid Gallows was not done by his Commandment: Wherefore the King our Sovereign Lord, willeth, That the Erection and Setting up of the ſaid Gallows be not any Precedent, or Example, thereby hereafter to be taken, in Hurt, Prejudice, or Derogation of the Franchiſes, Liberties, and Privileges of the City, which he at all Times hath had, and hath in his Benevolence, under Favour and good Grace, &c.

Apud Weſtminſt. nono die Novembris, Anno Regni noſtri quinto.

MANY Controverſies have been in Times paſt betwixt the Lord Mayor and Citizens of LONDON on the one Part, and the Lieutenant of the Tower of LONDON on the other Part, touching their Liberties; the Lieutenant uſurping divers Privileges, which were againſt the Laws of the Realm. As for Example:

IF A. B. were indebted to C. D. dwelling in the Precinct of the Tower, and would ſuffer himſelf to be arreſted and proſecuted by the ſaid C. D. in the Court held within the Tower, and there to have Judgment upon the ſaid Debt obtained againſt him: After which Judgment obtained, a Precept was awarded under the Seal of the Office of the Lieutenant, re-directed unto the Porter of the Tower, or to his Deputy, to take A. B. in Execution for the ſame Debt. And after that, A. B. is ſo taken in Execution, there is Return made of the Execution of the ſaid Precept, and thereupon the Lieutenant not only appointeth about a Dozen, or more, Keepers to the ſaid A. B. and ſuch as the ſaid A. B. will nominate, but alſo ſuffereth the ſaid A. B. to go at Liberty, giving unto him a Protection under the Seal of his Office, and thereby commandeth all Officers in any wiſe to forbear to arreſt or trouble the ſaid A. B. for the Space of one whole Year, being his Priſoner. Then if it ſhall happen that the ſaid A. B. ſhall be arreſted, being in the Cuſtody of any of his Keepers, and having the ſaid Protection to ſhew, if immediately upon the ſhewing of the ſame he be not ſet at Liberty again, in ſuch Caſe the Lieutenant pretendeth, that he hath Power to Arreſt the Body of any Perſon dwelling in ſuch City or County wherein the ſaid A. B. was ſo arreſted and troubled, if any ſuch Perſon can be found within the Liberties of the Tower; and the Body of the ſame Perſon to detain in ſafe Cuſtody, until ſuch Time as the ſaid A. B. ſhall be enlarged.

BY which Means the Execution of the Laws of the Realm is hindered, and the Subjects wronged.

The Form of a PRECEPT of the Lieutenant of the Tower, for the taking of one in Execution, with the Return of the ſame Precept.

Edward. Warner.

ALSO in the Year of our Lord 1585, Sir Owen Hopton, Knt. Lieutenant of the Tower of LONDON, by Colour of his Office, pretending Title to a Garden Plat near the Tower, cauſed his Servants forceably to take Poſſeſſion thereof, and bring the Perſons before him, who kept the ſame, whom he impriſoned in the Tower; whereupon a Writ of Habeas Corpus was ſued out of the King's-Bench, for removing the Body of Robert Shapely, one of the Priſoners, which Writ was brought and delivered unto the Lieutenant, by Robert Smith, then Sollicitor of the City of LONDON; but the Lieutenant would not receive nor obey the Writ, but would have compelled the ſaid Robert Smith to carry it back again with him, which he refuſing, the Lieutenant put the Writ in his Pocket, and abuſed and impriſoned alſo the ſaid Robert Smith in the Tower: For Redreſs of which Wrongs, and of many others, there was Complaint made to the Lords of the Privy-Council, who referred the Hearing of thoſe Controverſies, and the Examination of the Rights and Privileges, which the Lieutenant pretended to belong to his Office, to the Lord Chief Juſtices, and to the Maſter of the Rolls, who were to certify their Opinions thereof in Writing, as by the Letters of the Lords of the Council in that Behalf ſent, and directed to them, the following Tenor appeareth:

The Council's LETTER to the Lord Chief Juſtices, and to the Maſter of the Rolls.

" AFTER our very hearty Commendations, " &c. There hath been complaint made " unto us in the Behalf of the Lord Mayor and " Citizens of LONDON, againſt Sir Owen " Hopton, Knt. Lieutenant of the Tower, whom " they charge with ſome diſordered Dealing by " him uſed towards one Robert Smith, a Sollici- " tor for the City, ſent lately unto him with a " Writ of Habeas Corpus, out of the Court of " her Majeſty's Bench, for the removing of the " Body of one Robert Shapely, a Servant to one " William Wikins, a Citizen, impriſoned by the " Lieutenant upon ſome pretended Quarrel of " Privilege; the Manner whereof ſhall beſt ap- " pear unto you by the ſeveral Complaints and " Articles herein incloſed, exhibited unto us by " the ſaid Smith and Wikins.

" AND foraſmuch as the Mayor, Aldermen, " and Citizens of LONDON, have hereto- " fore oftentimes found themſelves grieved, with " ſundry Actions of unkind and violent Dealings, " offered by the ſaid Lieutenant and his Officers, " as they have informed us, to the Breach of their " Charters and Liberties, whereby there is grown " ſome Diviſion and Diſſenſion between them, " (which we deſire by all good Means to have " removed) and whereas the Lieutenant ſeemeth " to warrant his Doings by antient Privileges " and Cuſtoms of the Tower, whereunto the Ci- " tizens on their Parts, upon Opinion of the Va- " lidities of their Charters, refuſe to yield. We " conſidering what Inconvenience may enſue of " the private Diſſenſion between them, have " thought good to require you, calling Maſter " Lieutenant before you, and the Parties, whoſe " Complaints are herewith ſent unto you, with " ſuch Proofs and Witneſs as may be produced, " effectually to examine the Matters thereby in- " formed againſt him; and that you alſo take " Knowledge of ſuch other Complaints and Con- " troverſies, as the Recorder of LONDON " ſhall deliver unto you againſt the Lieutenant " of the Tower, concerning their former Debates " and Strifes, for Matters of Liberties, Preſcrip- " tions and Cuſtoms, and the like on the Behalf " of the Lieutenant againſt them, praying you to " take ſome Pains to hear the Matters at large " on both Sides, and to ſee upon what Privi- " leges, Cuſtoms, and Preſcriptions, their ſeve- " ral Claims are grounded and pretended; as " alſo to conſider of their Strength and Validity " in Law, wherein after you ſhall have ſpent " ſome Time, and heard and underſtood the " Matters at large, we require you then to make " Report unto us what you ſhall have found on " both Sides, as well touching the Complaints " of Smith and Wikins, as of the Lord Mayor " and Citizens, with your Opinions of their ſaid " Complaints and Controverſies, and what Courſe " were fitteſt to be taken between them; which " we pray you to do with as convenient Speed " as you may. And ſo bid you heartily Farewell.

Directed to the Lords Chief Juſtices, and to the Maſter of the Rolls.

UPON the Receipt of which Letters, the ſaid Lord Chief Juſtices and Maſter of the Rolls did at large hear the Allegations and Proofs of both Parties, and did accordingly certify their Opinions thereof to the Lords of the Privy Council in Manner following:

The

The CERTIFICATE touching as well the Articles and Complaints made to your Honours, by Robert Smith, and William Wikins, againſt Sir Owen Hopton, Knt. Lieutenant of the Tower, as the Controverſies between the Mayor and Citizens of LONDON, and the ſaid Lieutenant.

"FIRST, Upon Examination of the Matter "touching the ſaid Smith and Wikins, "mentioned in your Honours Letters, it ap- "peareth unto us, that (ſome Controverſy being "between the Mayor and Citizens, and the ſaid "Lieutenant, touching a Garden Plat near the "ſaid Tower) on Ralph Gasken, Servant to the "ſaid Lieutenant, violently did draw forth of the "ſaid Garden one Shapely, Servant to the ſaid "Wikins, then labouring there for his ſaid Maſ- "ter, in ſuch a violent Manner, as thereby "Blood was drawn of him, in ſeveral Places, and "carried him to the Tower, and there kept him in "Priſon eight Days; and that one Shaw, another "of the Lieutenant's Servants, was preſent with "the ſaid Gasken, aiding him, but that he did "not hurt the ſaid Shapeley; which Gasken and "Shaw did detain ſome of the Apparel of the "ſaid Shapeley, and yet do, for any Thing known "to us.

"AND that likewiſe one Payne was taken "forth of the ſaid Garden, and carried to the "Tower, and there impriſoned three Days, and "then delivered upon Bond to render his Body "to the Tower, when he ſhould be required, "and that Payne hath left a Pawn of the Value "of 10*s*. for his Meat and Drink.

"AND that her Majeſty's Writ of Habeas "Corpus for the Body of Shapeley, was ſued "forth of her Bench, directed to the Lieutenant "to make Allowance thereof, and paid him the "Fee due therefore. But forthwith he would "have forced the ſaid Smith to have the Money "again, and the Writ, which Smith refuſed to "do, praying him not to be offended for bring- "ing of her Majeſty's Proceſs.

"AND thereupon Maſter Lieutenant ſaid, he "would put his Writ in his Pocket, as he had "done many, and therewith rubbed Smith on "the Cheeks, and threatned to impriſon him, if "he would not carry back the Writ again and "the Money; whereupon the ſaid Lieutenant "impriſoned Smith, and detained him above "three Hours, until, upon a Bill of his Hand to "return to Priſon when the Lieutenant ſhould "ſend for him, he was delivered, which Matter "the Lieutenant confeſſeth to be true.

"AND touching ſuch Liberties as Maſter "Lieutenant claimeth to have been uſed for the "Officers and Attendants in the Tower, as not "to be arreſted by any Action in the City of "LONDON, and Protections to be granted "to them by Maſter Lieutenant, and not obey- "ing the Writs of Habeas Corpus, we think "ſuch Perſons as are daily Attendants in the "Tower, ſerving her Majeſty there, are to be "privileged, and not to be arreſted upon any "Plaint in LONDON. But for Writs of "Execution, or Capias ut ligatum, and ſuch "like, we think they ought to have no Privilege.

"MOREOVER, touching Protections granted "by Mr. Lieutenant, for ſuch as be condemned "in any Action in the Court kept in the Tower, "to go at large, and not to be arreſted by any "Proceſs out of the Queen's high Courts, or "elſewhere, or any other Protection to that Ef- "fect, for any privileged Perſon; we think the "ſame againſt her Majeſty's Laws and Dignity.

Item, That Mr. Lieutenant ought to return "every Habeas Corpus, out of any Court at "Weſtminſter, ſo as the Juſtices before whom it "ſhall be returned (as the Cauſe requires) may "either remand it with the Body, or retain the "Matter before them, and deliver the Body as "Juſtice ſhall require.

"As touching the Juriſdiction of the Court "in the Tower, and the Controverſies for certain "Liberties upon the Tower-Hill, and the Soil "there, and divers Places about the Tower, we are "not yet fully reſolved, but deſire your Lordſhips "to have ſome farther Time to conſider there- "upon. For, that there be many Matters al- "ledged, and to be ſhewed in Writing for the "ſame, as we are informed, which we have not "yet ſeen.

"Item, The ſaid Lieutenant doth claim a Li- "berty, that if any Perſon privileged in the "Tower, be arreſted in LONDON, that he "may take the Body of any Citizen that ſhall "come within the Liberties of the Tower, and "keep his Body there until the other be deliver- "ed; which we think altogether againſt the "Laws of this Realm.

AFTER the Lords of the Privy-Council had received the ſame Certificate, they thereupon made this final Order and Decree following, viz.

At Nonſuch, the 3*d Day of* October, 1585.

PRESENT,

Lord Treaſurer,	Maſter Treaſurer,
Lord Admiral,	and

"WHEREAS ſundry Variances and Con- "tentions have heretofore ariſen, and "have of late Years depended betwixt the Lord "Mayor and Commonalty of the City of LON- "DON, on the one Part, and the Lieutenant "of her Majeſty's Tower of LONDON, on "the other Part, touching Matters of Liberties, "Preſcriptions, Cuſtoms, and other Claims and "Pretences; by Reaſon whereof, and for Lack "of Order for Stay of thoſe Variances and Con- "tentions, divers Tumults have heretofore "grown, and her Majeſty's Peace hath many "Times been in Hazard to be dangerouſly "broken, whereupon ſeveral Complaints have "been heretofore exhibited to the Lords and "others of her Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy "Council, by the Lord Mayor and Commonal- "ty aforeſaid, againſt the ſaid Lieutenant, for "divers Injuries alledged to be offered on his "Part to the Citizens of LONDON, with "Order of Law or Equity: After Conſideration "had of which ſeveral Complaints, it pleaſed "their Lordſhips, (having Care to procure an "End of thoſe Controverſies, for avoiding of "Inconveniencies that might enſue) by their "honourable Letters, to give Order to Sir Chriſ- "topher Wray, Knt. Lord Chief Juſtice of Eng- "land; Sir Edmond Anderſon, Knt. Lord Chief "Juſtice of the Common-Pleas; and to Sir Gil- "bert Gerrard, Knt. Maſter of the Rolls, that "they (calling the ſaid Lieutenant and the Par- "ties Complainants before them) ſhould effec- "tually hear and examine the Controverſies (on "both Sides) and certify their Lordſhips what "they ſhould find, together with their Opinions "touching the ſame, who having called the Par- "ties accordingly before them, and adviſedly, "and with good Deliberation, ſundry Times "heard their Allegations and Anſwers, as well

"by

" by Writing as by Word, with Counſel learned " on all Parts, have ſignified their Opinions of " the ſaid Controverſies in Writing, as hereafter " followeth:

" Firſt, Touching ſuch Liberties as Maſter " Lieutenant claimeth to have been uſed for the " Officers and Attendants in the Tower, as not " to be arreſted by any Action in the City of " LONDON, and Protections to be granted " to them by Maſter Lieutenant, and not obeying " of Writs of we think ſuch Perſons as be " daily attendant in the Tower, ſerving her Ma- " jeſty there, are to be privileged, and not to " be arreſted upon any Plaint in LONDON, " but for Writs of Executions, or " and ſuch like, we think they ought to have no " Privilege.

" Secondly, Concerning Protections granted by " Maſter Lieutenant for ſuch as be condemned in " any Action in the Court, kept in the Tower, " to go at large, and not to be arreſted by any " Proceſs out of the Queen's High Courts, or " elſewhere, or any other Protection to that Effect " for any privileged Perſon, we think the ſame " againſt her Majeſty's Laws and Dignity.

Thirdly, That Maſter Lieutenant ought to re- " turn every Habeas Corpus out of any Court at " Weſtminſter, ſo as the Juſtices, before whom it " ſhall be returned (as the Cauſe ſhall require) " may either remand it with the Body, or retain " the Matter before them, and deliver the Body " as Juſtice ſhall require.

" Laſtly, Whereas the Lieutenant doth alſo " claim a Liberty, that if any Perſon privileged " in the Tower be arreſted in LONDON, he " may take the Body of any Citizen that ſhall " come within the Liberties of the Tower, and " keep his Body there until the other be deliver- " ed; we think the ſame to be altogether againſt " the Laws of the Realm.

" THE Lords therefore of her Majeſty's ſaid " Privy Council, upon grave and deliberate Con- " ſiderations had of the Certificate and Opinions " of the ſaid Lords Chief Juſtices and Maſter of " the Rolls, and to that Occaſions of Con- " tention, Trouble, and Diſorder, and the Dan- " ger of Breach of her Majeſty's Peace, which " have heretofore of late Years ariſen and grown " upon the Controverſies aforeſaid, may from " henceforth ceaſe, and be altogether removed " and taken away,

" IT was this Day, by their Lordſhips ordered " and decreed, betwixt the Lord Mayor, Com- " monalty and Citizens of LONDON, and " their Succeſſors, and the Lieutenant of her " Majeſty's ſaid Tower of LONDON, and " all other Lieutenants and Officers of the Tower " at any Time hereafter to ſucceed, That the " Matters, Points, and Articles, contained in " the Certificate of the ſaid Juſtices and Maſter " of the Rolls before-mentioned, wherein their " Reſolutions, Opinions, and Determinations, be " ſet down, declared, and ſignified, ſhall at all " Times from henceforth ſtand and remain for " Rules and Reſolutions and final Determination " and Deciſion: For ſo much and ſo many of the " Points of Controverſies as are contained in the " ſaid Certificate (whereof they have delivered " their Opinions) to be for ever hereafter duly " obſerved and kept; and that nothing be here- " after at any Time done, or attempted on either " Part, to the violating or interrupting of the " ſame.

THERE was a Place within the Liberties of the Tower, called the Jewry, becauſe it was inhabited by Jews, where there happened, 22 Henry III, to be a Robbery and a Murther committed by William Fitz-Bernard, and Richard, his Servant, who came to the Houſe of Joce, a Jew, and there ſlew him and his Wife Henna. The ſaid William was taken at St. Saviour's for ſtealing a certain Silver Cup, and was hanged. Richard was called for, and outlawed. One Miles le Eſpicer, who was with them, was wounded, and fled to a Church, and died in it. No Attachment was made by the Sheriffs, becauſe it happened in the Jewry; and ſo belonged not to the Sheriffs, but to the Conſtable of the Tower.

BUT now to come to the Pariſh Churches, and other Things worthy of Note in this Ward.

The Pariſh Church of ALHALLOWS-BARKING.

AT the Eaſt End, and on the North Side of Tower-ſtreet, is the Church of Alhallows-Barking, which ſtands in a large, but ſometime had a much larger, Cemitery, or Churchyard. It hath a handſome Dial extending over the Street from the Steeple. It was dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin Mary and All Saints. Alhallows-Barking.

THERE being many Churches in LONDON called Alhallows, we ſhall here give an Account of the Riſe of that Name and Feſtival, which is yearly celebrated on the Kalends, or Firſt of November, and happened on this Occaſion. The Meaning of Alhallows.

THE Emperor Phocas, at the Deſire of Pope Boniface IV, commanded, That on the old Temple, which was called Pantheon, formerly erected in Honour of all the Pagan Gods, by the Emperor Domitian, purging it from the Dregs of Idolatry, the Church of the Virgin Mary, and of All Martyrs ſhould be built; that where formerly the Worſhip, not of all Gods, but of all Devils, was celebrated; there afterwards ſhould be celebrated the Memory of All Saints; which from that Time was ſolemnized in Rome, Firſt, on the Kalends of November, which was about the Year of our Lord 608, afterwards about the Year 834, by the Perſuaſion of Pope Gregory IV, the moſt pious Emperor Ludovicus, ordained, with the Conſent of all the Biſhops of his Kingdom and Empire, that in France, the Feſtivity of All Saints ſhould yearly, on the ſaid Day, be ſolemnly celebrated for ever; which holy Conſtitution the whole Church with reverend Love embraced.

THE Church we are now to ſpeak of was, of old, in the Gift of the Abbeſs and Convent of Barking, in Eſſex, whence, for Diſtinction-ſake, from the other Churches in this City, which had the ſame Dedication, it was called Alhallows Barking, and the Rectory being in antient Time appropriated to that Monaſtery, here was a Vicarage thereupon ordained and endowed, which ſeems to be not long before the Year 1317.

THE Patronage of this Vicarage continued ever after in the ſaid Abbeſs and Convent 'till their Suppreſſion; upon which the Advowſon thereof (inter alia) was given and granted by King Henry VIII, in the 37th Year of his Reign, by Way of Exchange to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his Succeſſors, in whom it hath continued ever ſince, but is ſubject to the Archdeacon of LONDON, ſaving only as to Wills, and Adminiſtrations, which belong to the Commiſſary.

ON the North Side of this Church was antiently built a handſome Chapel, founded by King Richard I, confirmed and augmented by Edward I. King Edward IV, gave Licence to his Couſin, John Earl of Worceſter, to found there a Brotherhood for a Maſter and Brethren; and he gave to the Cuſtos of that Fraternity, which was Sir John Scott, Thomas Colt, John Tate, and John Crooke, the Priory o Totingbecke, and the the Advowſon of the Pariſh Church of Stretham, in the County of Surrey, with all the Members and Appurtenances, and a Part of the Priory of Okeburne, in Wiltſhire, both Priors Aliens, and appointed it to be called, the King's Chapel or Chantry, in Capella Beatæ Mariæ de Barking.

BUT what was moſt remarkable in the ſaid Chapel, was the Image of the Glorious Virgin, erected there by Edward I. The Story of which is among the Archives of the Biſhop of LONDON, in a large Inſtrument, the Purport whereof is as follows:

" IN the Chapel above-mentioned, King Ed-
" ward I, before the Death of King Henry III,
" his Father, being directed by a Viſion in his " Sleep, cauſed the Image of the Glorious Virgin
" to be erected, upon his Viſiting whereof five " Times every Year, when in England, and
" keeping the Chapel in Repair, he was aſſured
" by the ſaid Viſion, to be moſt victorious over " all Nations wherever he was; to be King of " England when his Father was dead; and to be " a Subduer of all the Welſh, and all Scotland.
" The like Succeſs was promiſed to every juſt
" Engliſh Monarch upon the like Performances.
" After this, the ſaid King Edward voluntarily
" making Oath before the Pope's Legate, that
" all Things ſhewn unto him in his Sleep, as
" aforeſaid, he had hitherto found to be moſt
" true; they thereupon, that the ſaid Chapel
" might with due Honour be frequented, re-
" leaſed 40 Days Penance to all true confeſſing
" Penitents, who out of Devotion ſhould come
" and contribute to the Lights, Repairs, and " Ornaments of the ſaid Chapel; and for the " Soul of King Richard, whoſe Heart lay buried
" there under the High Altar (cujus cor in eadem
" Capella ſub ſummo Altari requieſcit humatum,
" are the very Words in the Inſtrument) and for
" the Souls of all the Faithful deceaſed, ſhould
" ſay the Lord's-Prayer, with the Salutation in
" Engliſh, as often as they ſhould with a pious
" Mind ſay the ſame.

ONE Thing is very remarkable in this Inſtrument, and that is, the Intimation it gives that King Richard's Heart lay buried in this Chapel under the High Altar, becauſe the Generality and moſt Authentick of our Hiſtorians have written that King Richard's Heart was buried at Roan, according to his own Will and Command, at leaſt they do not contradict it. What Credit therefore may be given to the ſaid Paſſage, or indeed the whole Inſtrument, is left to the Reader's Judgment. However, this Image of our Lady of Barking, was of great Repute, and great Numbers of People came to her in Pilgrimage, till it was ſuppreſſed.

KING Richard III, new built this Chapel, and founded therein a College of Prieſts, conſiſting of a Dean and ſix Canons; all which that King placed there. The Deanry he gave to Edmund Chaderton, a great Favourite of his: The Canonries he diſpoſed, at the Time that Chaderton was made Dean, to theſe Perſons following, viz. Mr. Tho. Cowton, Richard Baldry, Mr. Jane, James Molineux, Richard Selſie, and Maculin Coſin. Hamond de Lega was buried in this Chapel. Robert Tate, Mayor of LONDON 1488, and others, were there buried.

THIS College was ſupppreſſed and pulled down in the Year 1548, the ſecond of King Edward VI. The Ground was employed as a Garden Plat during the Reigns of King Edward, Queen Mary, and Part of Queen Elizabeth, till at length a large ſtrong Frame of Timber and Brick was ſet thereon, and employed as a Storehouſe for Merchants Goods brought from Sea, by Sir William Winter, &c.

THIS Church had a Chapel alſo called St. Mary de Berkingſhaw, as appears by this antient Will, dated 1500 Jul. 26. Ego Dionyſius Spicer, Capellanus in Capella, B. Mariæ de Berkingſhare, juxta Turr. Lond. condo Teſtamentum meum. Imprimis, Lego animam meam Deo omnipotenti, &c. Corpuſque meum ſepeliendum in Capella prædict. ante introitum Chor. ejuſd. Capellæ. Item, Lego pro Lapide marmor. ad tegend. Corpus meum & pro pavimento ejuſd. 40 s. Item, Lego ad Conſtructuor. ejuſd. Capellæ, ſi ante 3 annos ad ejus reparationem vel confirmationem — Gardiani & Confratres 5 l. expendend. Si autem diſtulerint ulterius conſtruere, tunc volo dict. ſummam 5 l. expendend. in alios pios uſus juxta diſcretionem Executorum meorum.

BUT from this Barking Chapel we return to Barking Church, which was repaired and beautified in the Year of our Lord GOD 1613, and within ſome few Years before and after (in their ſeveral Times) other Wants were ſupplied and furniſhed; viz. a new Pulpit ſet up, many convenient Pews, a decent Communion Table, with other graceful Ornaments to it. This Table was the Gift of Mr. John Burnell; all the reſt at the Charge of the Pariſh. Alſo in the South Iſle, over the Entry into the Church, in the Year 1627, was a handſome Gallery erected at the Coſt and Charge of the Pariſh.

Thomas Covel, And John Shaw, } Church-wardens.

THE Steeple of Brick was erected and built from the Foundation, and a ſixth Bell added, and the Church new laid with Ten-Inch Tiles, and beautified at the Coſt of the Pariſhioners, and ſome others, (as appears in the Regiſter Book) 1659. And there is a Table in the Church, containing a Liſt of the Names of ſundry Pariſhioners, and others, that contributed toward building the Steeple, Anno 1659.

IT was again repaired in the Year 1701; an Account whereof is given in a Table hanging in the Veſtry; " This Church was new paved " with Purbeck Stone, and the two Portals there-
" of were erected at the Charge of the Pariſh,
" and voluntary Contribution of Dr. John Gas-
" karth, and other worthy Perſons, in the Year
" 1701.

William Alexander, And Stephen Slade, } Church-wardens.

Laſtly, It was again ſumptuouſly repaired, and new Pewed, in the Year 1704.

THE Pillars and Windows are moſtly of the modern Gothic Order, but ſome of the Pillars towards the Weſt and on the South Side, are of the Tuſcan, and very ſtrong.

ALL the Capitals are gilt with Gold. The Roof is neatly ceiled with Timber and Board, painted with various Figures, eſpecially that Part over the Middle Iſle. There is alſo an Organ Gallery at the Weſt End, and the Church is very regularly pewed with right Oak, and Part is finely carved; it is wainſcotted ſeven Feet high round the Church.

THERE is likewiſe a handſome Organ-Caſe, enriched with Fames, and the Figures (about ſix Feet high) of Time and Death, carved in Baſſo Relievo, and painted.

HERE are alſo two handſome ſpacious Wainſcot Door-caſes, adorned with fluted Pilaſters, Entablature, and Pediment of the Corinthian Order, and alſo three Braſs Branch-Candleſticks.

THE Altar-piece is moſtly carved, and neatly adorned with four Columns, and their Entablature blature of the Corinthian Order. The inner Columns are the Commandments, done in Gold, on Black, between Moſes and Aaron, finely painted, and without the Columns are the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer, done in Black on Gold, each under a Pediment, with a Dove deſcending. Over the two inner Columns are Acroters, and between them, an open Pediment, under which is a Glory painted on the expanſed Figure of a holy Lambskin (alluding to Leviticus vii, and viii, compared with Hebrews ix. 25, 26.) done in Baſſo Relievo, between two gilded Cherubims; over each of the outer Columns is a Lamp, and the whole has curious Enrichments of Cartouches, Leaves, Fruit, Palm-Branches, &c. Over this Carving is a Window with painted Glaſs, ſurrounded with a Crimſon Feſtoon Curtain, edged with Gold Fringe painted, and in the Upper Part three Cherubims. The Communion Table is neatly finnier'd, and the Frame carved and adorned with Eagles, &c. ſtanding on a Marble Foot-pace, enriched with Rails and Balliſters.

DIRECTLY Weſt from the Altar at the Weſt End of the Church is a Marble Font, whoſe Type or Cover has the Enrichments of Cherubs, Fruit Leaves, a Dove, with an Olive Branch in her Mouth, &c. round which are theſe Words done in Gold Letters, Suffer Little Children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of ſuch is the Kingdom of God. Mark x.

THE Dimenſions are 108 Feet long, broad 67 Feet, high 35 Feet, and the Altitude of the the Tower, (wherein are ſix Bells to ring in Peal, which chime at Four, Eight and Twelve, Daily) and of the Turret about 80 Foot.

MONUMENTS for the Dead are as follow:

Sir Thomas Studington, of Norwich, Knight, 1469.

Mr. Thomas Gilbert Draper, Merchant of the Staple, 1483.

Sir John Stile, Knight, Draper, 1500.

Mr. William Denham, one of the Sheriffs in 1534.

Mr. Humphrey Monmouth, Draper, one of the Sheriffs, 1535; was buried in the Church-Yard. He was a great Ornament, as well as Alderman of this City, being a Perſon as of good Wealth, ſo of great Charity, eſpecially towards the promoting of the Knowledge of the Goſpel. He harboured Tindal, and encouraged his Engliſh Tranſlation of the Teſtament, and contributed largely towards the Printing of it, and of other pious Books againſt the Errors of Rome: For which in the Year 1528 he was put to great Trouble by Sir Thomas Moore, then Lord Chancellor, and put into the Tower. He made his Will in the Year 1537, and therein appointed Biſhop Latimer, Dr. Barnes, Dr. Crome, and Mr. Taylor (all Goſpellers and famed Preachers) to preach in his Pariſh Church of Alhallows Barking, two Sermons a Week, 'till they had preached 30 Sermons, which he thought would do more good than ſaying ſo many Maſſes for his Soul: For which he allotted them a Legacy. In his ſaid Will he forbad the ordinary Superſtitions of Candles, and Singing Dirige, and Ringing of Bells at his Funeral. He ſeems to have been favoured by the Lord Cromwel, and Audley Lord Chancellor (Favourers of the Goſpel) to whom he gave Legacies.

Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, beheaded 1546.

Sir Richard Devereux, Son and Heir to the Lord Ferrers, of Chartley.

THERE are theſe memorable Monuments, Inſcriptions, and Arms following, beſides many others not remarkable.

AT the Eaſt End of the Church, a little Southerly from the Altar, is a white Marble Monument with Enrichments of Cherubims, Voluta's, Urns, &c. with this Inſcription:

Morte Tali Vitâ digna

BETWEEN the South-Eaſt Corner of the Chancel, an old Tomb with Figures in Plano, on a braſs Plate, but nothing remarkable appears thereon.

ON the South Side of the Church is a pretty ſmall white Marble Monument in Memory of Charles Beauvoir, Eſq; one of the Searchers of the Cuſtom-houſe, deſcended from a Family of that Name in the Iſland of Guernſey, &c. but not farther remarkable. A terrible Accident by Gunpowder.

OVER-AGAINST the Wall of Barking Church-yard, a ſad Accident befel by Gun-powder, in this Manner: One of the Houſes in this Place was a Ship-Chandler's, who, upon the 4th of January 1649, about ſeven of the Clock at Night, being barrelling up Gun-powder, it took Fire, and blew up not only that, but all the Houſes thereabouts, to the Number (towards the Street and in back Alleys) of 50 or 60. The Number of Perſons deſtroyed by this Blow could never be known, for the next Houſe but one was the Roſe Tavern, a Houſe, never (at that Time of Night) but full of Company; and that Day the Pariſh Dinner was in it: And for three or four Days after, digging, they continually found Heads, Arms, Legs, and half Bodies, miſerably torn and ſcorched, beſides many whole Bodies, not ſo much as their Cloaths ſinged. Among the reſt they found the Miſtreſs of the Roſe Tavern, ſitting in her Bar, and one of the Drawers ſtanding at the Bar's Side, with a Pot in his Hand, only ſtifled with Duſt and Smoak; their Bodies being preſerved whole, by means of great Pieces of Timber falling croſs one upon another. And another thing, hardly credible, was, that the next Morning there was found upon the upper Leads of Barking Church, a young Child lying in a Cradle, as newly laid in Bed, neither the Child, nor Cradle, having the leaſt Sign of Fire, or any Hurt about them. It was never known whoſe Child it was, but one in the Pariſh kept it for a Memorial; and Mr. Strype ſays, that in the Year 1666, he ſaw the Child, who was then a tall Maid, being 17 Years of Age, and came to the Man, who had kept her all that Time, where he was drinking with him at a Tavern, with other Company.

THIS Pariſh contains in Mark-lane ſix Houſes Northerly from the Dolphin Tavern, and eleven Houſes on the Eaſt Side of that Lane, and in Tower-ſtreet, from Mark-lane End to Tower-hill on the North Side, and from the Hill to Water-lane on the South Side. All the Eaſt Side of Water-lane, and fronting Tower-hill, it extends Northward from Tower-dock to Muſcovy-court by the Navy-Office, and that Court, and one Houſe more; five Houſes in Crutched-fryars, Mortimer's-yard, Brown's-court, Barking-alley, Seething-lane, Black-raven-court, Catharine's-court, which is new built with very handſome Houſes, having a fine Pair of Iron Gates at each End, one upon Tower-hill, and the other in Sydon, or Seething-lane; and other Courts in this Compaſs. Likewiſe Beer-lane, and in Thames-ſtreet, from Water-lane on the North Side, and Cuſtom-houſe-court on the North Side, it extendeth Eaſterly to Tower-dock, including the Cuſtom-houſe and Keys in that Compaſs.

THE Number of Houſes 319.

IN Sydon, or Seething-lane, as it is now corruptly called, are now, and were antiently, ſeveral large and handſome Houſes, particularly one built by Sir John Allen, ſometime Lord Mayor of LONDON, and of the Privy Council to King Henry VIII. in which dwelt Sir Francis Walſingham, Knight, Principal Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth; and alſo the Earl of Eſſex.

In Mincheon-lane, ſo called from certain Tenements there, ſometime belonging to the Minchuns, or Nuns of St. Helen's in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet; there dwelt, of old Time, divers Strangers, born at Genoa, and other Places, who were called Galley-Men, as Men that came up in the Gallies, brought up Wines and other Merchandizes, which they landed in Thames-ſtreet, at a Place called Galley-Key: They had a certain Coin of Silver among themſelves, which were Half-pence of Genoa, and were called Galley Half-pence. Theſe Half-pence were forbidden in the 13th Year of King Henry IV, and again by Parliament in the 4th of Henry V, by the Name of Half-pence of Genoa, forbidden to be taken as lawful Payment; and it was enacted, That if any Perſon brought into this Realm Galley Half-pence, Suskins, or Dodkins, he ſhould be puniſhed as a Thief; and he that took or paid ſuch Money, was to forfeit an hundred Shillings, one half to the King, and the other to him that would ſue.

At the Weſt End of Tower-ſtreet, and turning a little towards the North, in the Place where now ſtands Mr. Watts's Academy, was the Houſe of one Griſte, who, in the Year 1449, feaſted Jack Cade, Captain of the Rebels of Kent, who, like an unkind Gueſt, as ſoon as he had dined, robbed him of all that was in the ſaid Houſe worth carrying away.

In Water-lane is ſituated the Trinity-houſe, which belongs to an antient Corporation of Mariners, founded in King Henry VIII's Time, for the Regulation of Seamen, and Security and Convenience of Ships and Mariners on our Coaſts. The Trinity-Houſe.

In the ſaid King's Reign lived Sir Thomas Spert, Knight, Comptroller of the Navy to that King, who was the firſt Founder and Maſter of the ſaid Society of Trinity-houſe, and died Anno 1541, and was buried in the Chancel of Stepney Church. To whoſe Memory the ſaid Corporation, Anno 1622, ſet up a Monument there, eighty one Years after his Deceaſe: It is on the South Wall, over the Door, but the Inſcription is now almoſt worn out but it may be read in its proper Place. And by an Inſcription antienter than that ſet up by the ſaid Corporation, loſt long ſince in the Church, but preſerved by Norden *, we learn, that this Gentleman had three Wives, Dame Margery, Dame Anne, and Dame Mary, all lying in the Chancel there: And that his Coat of Arms was, Two Launces in Saltier, between four Hearts, on a Chief a Ship with the Sails furled. It is ſaid further of this Knight, that he was Commander of the biggeſt Ship then that the Sea bore, namely Henry Grace de Dieu, built by King Henry VIII, near the Beginning of his Reign.

Norden's Middleſex.

THIS Houſe, where the Corporation uſually meets, belonged to them before the great Fire, after which they took a long Leaſe, and rebuilt it, but pay a Ground Rent to William Ruſſel of Stubbers in Eſſex, Eſq; Son of Sir William Ruſſel, Knt. ſometime Alderman of LONDON. It was burnt down again and rebuilt by the Brotherhod, as appears by this Inſcription, on a Square Stone in the Front:

The TRINITY-HOUSE.

THIS Houſe was rebuilt after the Fire of LONDON: And rebuilt after the Fire in Thames-ſtreet, 1718.

THE Corporation, one of the moſt conſiderable in the Kingdom, is governed by a Maſter, four Wardens, eight Aſſiſtants, and the eldeſt Brothers of the Company, as they are called, one and thirty in all. The reſt of the Company are called Younger Brothers, without any fixed Number; for any Seafaring Men that will, are admitted into the Society under that Name; but they are not in the Government.

THEY meet to chuſe their Maſter commonly at Deptford Strond, but are not obliged to do it there; but the Houſe there being their antient Houſe, they meet in it by old Cuſtom.

THEIR Meetings are commonly on Wedneſdays and Saturdays, here at their Houſe in Water-lane, but their Courts are not fixed conſtantly to a ſet Time, but as Occaſion and Buſineſs require. Their Coat of Arms is, Between a Croſs-Gules, four Ships under Sail. The Creſt, a Demy Lion crowned, Or, with a Sword in his Right Paw. The Motto is, Trinitas in Unitate.

THEY are eſtabliſhed by many Charters of the Princes of this Land.

THEIR Service and Uſe is, That they appoint all Pilots: They ſet and place the Buoys and Sea-Marks for the ſafe Direction of Ships in their Sailing. For which they have certain Duties payable by Merchant-Men. They can Licence poor Seamen, antient and paſt going to Sea, to exerciſe the Calling of a Waterman upon the Thames, and take in Fares, tho' they have not been bound to any one Free of the Watermens Company. They do maintain in Penſions at this Time 2000 poor Seamen, or their Widows; every one of which have at leaſt Half-a-Crown paid them every firſt Monday in the Month, and ſome more, beſides accidental diſtreſſed Seamen.

THEY have three Hoſpitals, two at Deptford, and one at Mile-End, which have been already ſpoken of, in Book I. Chap. 14.

AND thus, as they do a great deal of Good, ſo they have large Revenues to do it with, which ariſe, partly from Sums of Money given and bequeathed unto them for charitable Uſes, partly from Houſes and Lands alſo given them, and particularly and chiefly from Ballaſt. For they only have, by Act of Parliament, the Benefit of providing Ballaſt for Ships in the Thames; and all Ships that take in Ballaſt pay them 12 d. a Tun at leaſt, and ſome more: For which it is brought to their Ship's Side, which the Seamen find a good Convenience in, and are very well contented to pay it. They have alſo certain Light-Houſes, as at Scilly and Dungeneſs in the Weſt, &c. To which Houſes all Ships pay one Half-penny a Tun.

IN their Hall there is an old Flag hanging up, which they ſay was taken from the Spaniards by Sir Francis Drake, whoſe Picture hangeth up there. There is alſo the exact Model of a Ship of a great Size rigged, encloſed in a Frame glazed round; the Gift of Sir Jeremy Smith: Likewiſe two large Globes encloſed, as was the Model of the Ship; the Gift of Sir Thomas Allen; both Admirals of the Navy under King Charles II. Divers Tables alſo hang up round this Hall, containing the Names of their Benefactors with the Mention of their reſpective Gifts; and in their Parlour are five large Pieces drawn curiouſly and exactly with a Pen, deſcribing certain Sea-Fights in King Charles II's Time. More will be ſaid of this Corporation, among the other Companies when we come to the Temporal Government of the City.

IN this Pariſh is Hart, or Harp-lane, as it is commonly called, which runs down to Thames-ſtreet, and in this Lane is Bakers Hall. The Room called the Hall is beautiful and pretty large, adorned with a fine Wainſcot Screen, having four Columns and two Pilaſters with Entablature of the Corinthian Order. Alſo at the other End the Picture of St. Clement, the Patron of this Company, and that of Juſtice, between which are their Arms very large and finely painted. Bakers Hall.

The CHURCH of St. DUNSTAN in the EAST.

THIS Church is ſituated about the Middle, between Tower-ſtreet, North, and Thames-ſtreet, South; and between Idle-lane Weſt, and St. Dunſtan's-hill, Eaſt. St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt.

IT is ſo called, being dedicated to St. Dunſtan. Fuller, in his Church-Hiſtory, ſaith, This Dunſtan was born at Glaſſenbury, about the Year of Chriſt 933, of noble Parentage; his Excellencies were Painting, Graving, Muſick, and an admirable Worker in Iron and Braſs: He was accuſed to King Athelſtane for a Magician, and that he made his Harp not only to have Motion, but make Muſick of itſelf.

St. Dunſtan's Harp faſt by the Wall
Upon a Pin did hang -a,
The Harp itſelf with Ly and all
Untouch'd by Hand, did twang-a.

AND being hereupon baniſhed the Court, he returned to Glaſſenbury, where he made himſelf a Cell: And (the Monks who wrote his Life have it) as he was making ſome Iron Trinkets the Devil appeared to him, in the Shape of a Woman; which St. Dunſtan perceiving, plucked his Tongs, glowing hot out of the Fire, and with them kept the Devil a long Time by the Noſe, roaring and bellowing. Theſe muſt be wonderful Tongs that could have ſuch Effect on a Spirit.

AFTER

AFTER Athelſtane's Death, Dunſtan was re-called to Court, but was by King Edmund ſoon re-baniſhed, and afterwards out of the Kingdom by King Edwyn; who dying, St. Dunſtan was again re-called by King Edgar, and made at once Biſhop of Worceſter and LONDON, and then Archbiſhop of Canterbury, where he died, and was buried under the High Altar, Anno 987.

WHEN this Church of St. Dunſtan in the Eaſt was firſt founded is uncertain, but it muſt have been within theſe 800 Years by the Dedication. It was repaired and ſo beautified in the Year 1633, that it amounted almoſt to a new Building, for it coſt 2400 l. to which many worthy Pariſhioners largely contributed. It was by the unhappy Flames of 1666 almoſt conſumed to Rubbiſh, only ſome of the Walls remained; and in the Year 1668, was in a great Meaſure re-edified, and for the moſt Part reſtored by the pious Beneficence of the Lady Williamſon, who laid out 4000 l. upon the ſame.

THE Steeple was erected, as it now appears, about the Year 1698, when the Church was new beautified, pew'd, and wainſcotted.

THE Windows and Steeple are a modern Gothic Building, very neat; but the Pillars and Arches within are of the Tuſcan Order, and the Roof within appears flat, which, and the Walls of the Nave, are Stone.

THE Roof is divided into Pannels or Quadrangles, with deep Mouldings; the Key-Stone of each Arch is adorned with Cartouches. Here is a very neat Organ Gallery, adorned with carved Cherubims.

IT is well pewed and wainſcotted nine Feet high: Here is likewiſe a handſome Pulpit, and two inner Door-Caſes, adorned with Pilaſters, Entablature and Pediment of the Corinthian Order, embelliſhed with Shields and their Compartments.

THE Altar-Piece is painted; in the Middle whereof are the Commandments, and between them the Lord's Prayer, and Creed, which are all done in Gold upon Black, with the Effigies of Moſes and Aaron. Over the Commandments is a Cornice, and upon that an open Cartouch Pediment, in the Middle of which is a gilded Shield, with its compartment, whereon is done the ſacred Word GOD in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and Engliſh Characters: The whole having an Enrichment of Flowers, Fruit, Leaves, &c. carved in Baſſo Relievo. The Foot-Pace under the Communion-Table is Black and White Marble, environed with Rail and Balliſter, and the Table is ſupported by four Angels, on whom are painted theſe Words: Glory be to the Father, to the Son, and to the Holy Ghoſt. Under the Portraiture of Moſes, theſe Words: The Law was given by Moſes. And under that of Aaron, theſe: But Grace and Truth came by Jeſus Chriſt.

UPON the Organ-Caſe are the King's Arms, and two carved Fames.

In this Street on the Thames Side, are divers large Landing Places, called Wharfs, or Keys, for Cranage up of Wares and Merchandize, as alſo for Shipping of Wares from thence to be exported.

Wharfs and Keys.

BY Occaſion of the defrauding of the Queen of her Cuſtoms for Goods and Merchandizes, brought in or carried out, by making Uſe of ſmall obſcure Creeks, or Places where no Cuſtom-houſe Officer was attending, or by the Corruption of thoſe Officers, or by other fraudulent and undue Practices, and ſo privately conveying them away, without paying the Cuſtom or Subſidy due, there was an Act made in the firſt Year of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1559, "That no Goods ſhould "be put aſhore at any Place in the Kingdom, but "where ſhe ſhould appoint and aſſign, by her "Commiſſion." In Purſuance of this Act, the Queen ordered her Lord Treaſurer, her Under Treaſurer, and Chancellor of her Exchequer, to ſet forth and publiſh her Pleaſure, for the divers Ports of her Kingdom. And for the Port of LONDON, the ſaid Commiſſioners drew up this Declaration, determining what particular Keys, Wharfs, and Stairs ſhould be for lading and diſcharging of all Manner of Merchandizes, and what particular Goods ſhould be landed at Billingſgate, the Three Cranes, the Bridge-houſe, and the Stil-yard. Where Newcaſtle Coals, Deal Boards, Ore, Corn, &c. ſhould be laid on Land; what Creeks, Wharfs, and Keys, from Graveſend to London-Bridge, ſhould be no more uſed as lading or diſcharging Places, but be debarred utterly from it for ever. And that no Stranger, whether Deniſon or not, ſhould henceforth inhabit upon any of the Wharfs allowed, except the Stil-yard only. Wincheſter,
Richard Sackvile,
Wa. Mildmay.

THESE Wharfs and Keys commonly bear the Names of their Owners, which are therefore variable. In the 26th of Henry VI, there was a Tenement in the Pariſh of St. Dunſtan in the Eaſt, called Paſſeke's Wharf, and another called Horner's-Key, in Thames-ſtreet, which were granted to William Harrington, Eſq; In the 6th of Richard II, John Churchman, Grocer, for the Quiet of Merchants, built a certain Houſe upon the Key, called Wool-Wharf, in the Tower-ſtreet Ward, in the Pariſh of Alhallows-Barking, betwixt the Tenement of Paul Salisbury on the Eaſt Part, and the Lane called the Water-Gate, on the Weſt, to ſerve for Troynage, or weighing of Wools in the Port of LONDON: Whereupon the King granted, That during the Life of the ſaid John, the aforeſaid Troynage ſhould be held and kept in the ſaid Houſe, with Eaſements there for the Ballances and Weights, and a Counting-Place for the Cuſtomer, Comptrollers, Clerks, and other Officers of the ſaid Troynage, together with Ingreſs and Regreſs to and from the ſame, even as we had in other Places, where the ſaid Troynage was wont to be kept, and that the King ſhould pay yearly to the ſaid John (during his Life) 40 s. at the Terms of St. Michael and Eaſter, by even Portions, by the Hands of his Cuſtomer, without any other Payment to the ſaid John, as in the Indenture thereof more at large appeareth.

Cuſtom-Houſe in Alhallows Barking Pariſh.

AND here at the Cuſtom-Houſe, it will be proper to ſhew ſome Things relating to its antient, as well as modern State.

ABOUT the Year 1554, or 1555, under Queen Mary I, a Commiſſion was given to certain Gentlemen for the aſſeſſing of the new Rates; whereof the Lord Paget, and Sir John Baker, were the Chief; the one Lord Privy Seal, and the other Chancellor of the Exchequer, who obſerved this Rule, to under-rate the moſt neceſſary Commodities that came into the Realm, to draw them hither; and to over-rate the ſuperfluous Commodities inward, to drive them away: And generally they did under-rate and under-prize all Foreign Commodities of that they were ordinarily current for, leſt a Glut here of any of thoſe Wares might bring them under their Rates; and that the Merchants might not ſay, they were valued to the utmoſt that before lacked a good Part of what they were then rated at: And ſo Peter Oſborn, Remembrancer to the Lord Treaſurer, divers Years after informed him.

There was alſo, long before this, a Book of Rates in King Henry VII's Time.

One Needham, about the Year 1570 and odd, wrote a Book ſhewing and correcting the Abuſes of Cuſtomers, of Shippers, of Merchants, &c. and ſent it privately to the Lord Treaſurer, with his Letter, to this Tenor, That he thought it his Duty juſtly and truly to open to his Honour ſuch Notes and Knowledge, as by his Service and Travel, he had gather'd in 10 or 12 Years, by ſearching how to reform ſuch Abuſes, Deceipts, and Diſorders, as were uſed, all England through, againſt the Queen's Majeſty, both by her Officers belonging to the Cuſtoms, as alſo by Merchants and Shippers; and how they might be redreſſed, and her Highneſs juſtly anſwered her Rights and Duties. And alſo, his farther Opinion how to reform ſuch Wrongs as the ſaid Officers and their Clerks, and their Clerks Clerks uſed againſt the Merchants and Shippers, by raiſing new Duties, delaying them from Bills, Cockets and other Writings, and not obſerving the Hours and Times appointed them to be at the Cuſtom-Houſe, and give Attendance to receive her Majeſty's Duties, and diſpatch the Merchants and Shippers. All which good Orders, that had been appointed both for the good Service of her Majeſty, the Merchants and Shippers, by the gentle and mild Nature of the late Lord Treaſurer, (Marquis of Wincheſter) deceas'd, all the Officers and Clerks were ſuffered to break, and in a Manner did what they would, without Comptrolment. And by long Sufferance, both they, the Merchants, Shippers, Key-Keepers, and other Watermen, are now neſtled, and grown into that diſordered Liberty, which had been, and was ſo profitable to them, that it would be hard to bring them to good Order again, without ſome Severity to be uſed.

THE Method of doing which, this Man, before the preſent Treaſurer the Lord Burleigh, in certain Articles, had offered himſelf to be employed in, having his Warrant from the ſaid Treaſurer, and he making it his own Device and Doing, ſo as it might not be known to come from him [this Propoſer] for his avoiding of further Diſpleaſure.

THIS Perſon the Queen put in Truſt to travel in theſe Matters of Cuſtoms; and he, according to his Oath and Duty, without reſpect of Favour or Malice to any Perſons, ſhewed his Opinion how to reform the Abuſes as well of the one as the other, as one deſirous to ſee her Majeſty, truly anſwered her Rights and Dues, and that honeſt Merchants, and Shippers, might be well uſed, and Offenders puniſhed.

IN the Year 1572, a Liſt was brought in to the Lord Treaſurer of the Queen's Yearly Cuſtoms, Subſidies, and Impoſts, ſince the Beginning of her Reign, to that Time; which ſtood thus:
